Furthermore the emperor insists that the wizard received more than $100,000 in fees during six months. This should make it evident that a not inconsiderable element of the people is still as 100 per cent American as it was in the days when the late Phineas T. Barnum was taking toll from the ones that are born every minute. If Emperor Simmons be right the $100,000 that accrued to Wizard Evans kame in the form of lagniappe as he was enjoying koncurrently a salary of $15,000 per annum and was charging to the Klan every solitary item of his living expenses including house rent, grocery bills, light and fuel bills and automobile maintenance. Surely is this a wizardy in self protection.

With the pickings so fat no wonder the words are so fiery as between the ins and the outs among the pickers. But the rank and file of the klan need not be disturbed further than to seek the means to make their kontributions. When klansmen fall out then is it certain that kourts will kollect their dues. Ko-operation, konfidence and komradeship may be burned away in the krucible of keen and kaustic comment, but the koin will always remain kool and kompanionable. So, therefore, let everyone from kligraph to kleegle kick in.

THE OATH OF THE KU KLUX KLAN

Read It Over And Ask Yourself Why The Opposition Has Not Published It In Full

Much has been said by the press and by persons opposed to the Ku Klux Klan about its members being oath bound to protect each other in the violations of the laws of the country. The opposition press all over the country, has published what they claim is a part of the oath of a Klansman as follows: "I swear that I will keep secure to myself a secret of a Klansman when same is committed to me in the sacred bond of Klansmanship, the crime of violating THIS solemn oath, treason against the United States of America, rape and malicious murder alone excepted."

This paragraph has been repeated by the opposition thousands of times as conclusive proof of their charge that Klansmen are bound to protect each other in the violation of any law except treason, rape and murder.

Great has been the cry that the Ku Klux Klan is a very dangerous organization; that its members are oath bound to perjure themselves if necessary to protect a brother Klansman in the violation of law and that this will thwart justice; make it impossible for the courts to convict criminals who are Klansmen and plunge the country into mob rule and anarchy.

Now, those who claim to be in possession of the Klan oath and claim that the paragraph quoted above is taken verbatum from the official oath of the Klan, are certainly in possession of the two paragraphs immediately following it and if they wanted to be fair would have given them also. Dr. G. C. Minor published these two paragraphs in his recent address in Plainview and we reproduce them here verbatum as he gave them:

"I most solemnly assert and affirm that to the government of the United States of America, and any state thereof of which I may become a resident, I sacredly swear and unqualified allegiance above any other and every kind of government in the whole world. I here and now pledge my life, my property, my vote and my sacred honor to uphold its flag, its constitution and constitutional laws, and will protect defend and enforce same unto death."

I swear that I will most zealously and vallantly shield and preserve, by any and all justificable means and methods, the sacred constitutional rights and privileges of free public schools, free speech, free press, separation of church and state, liberty, white supremacy, just laws and the pursuit of happiness, against any encrouchment of any nature, by any person or persons, political party or parties, religious sect or people native, naturalized or foreign, of any race, color, creed lineage or tongue whatsoever."

Stop and read the above paragraphs again and ask yourself why the opposition has not published them in connection with the one they have given so much publiciy to. The answer to your question is that they know it would destroy their argument. They know each Klansman is sworn to protect, defend and enforce laws of the country even unto death and that any Klansman who violates the laws of the country also violates his oath as a Klansman and that every other Klansman is sworn to prosecute him by all lawful methods for the violation of law, instead of protecting him.

If you will carefully study the above quotations you will see that the Ku Klux Klan is an organization of native born, gentile, white American men, who are sworn to uphold, defend and enforce the constitution and laws of the land against violations of the same by its own members or any other person. So we see the greatest alleged menace of the Ku Klux Klan vanishes like a fairies gift.

For the information of any who desire authentic information, the secret work of the Ku Klux Klan is recorded in the copyright office in Washington, D. C. and is open to the inspection of any person, attorney, district attorney, judge, governor or any other person interested in reading it.

An Impartial Threshing Out Of Misunderstandings Among Officials Results in Perfect Harmony

Telegrams Announcing the Settlement Received by Outside Officials and Laymen, Creates Intense Satisfaction

The American Farmer

There has never been a human organization on earth, that has not had its internecine troubles—differences of opinion, among its members. In many instances, these difficulties have caused the destruction, or serious injury to worthy propositions. But as a rule, when men are sane, fairminded, and reasonable, such interruptions have been beneficial, and the work went forward, to better, and grander results.

This happy ending followed, what the enemies of the Ku Klux Klan vainly hoped, would result in irreparable injury to that 100 per cent patriotic order—for every tiny wrinkle has been carefully, and harmoniously ironed out—and you have heard the last of it. 5-5-23. San Antonio

In an admirable, fair, and open manner, the affair has been gone over, by that peerless Klan paper—the Dallas American—and I want to compliment the management upon the favor it has conferred upon every loyal member of the organization, in giving them the opportunity to read, and understand the entire matter. It settles the question, and also puts the eternal muffler upon every meddlesome clacker, who would delight in anything, that would injure the organization.

No real red-blooded Klansman will fail to read every word of explanation, for it will encourage him to press onward, and upward, to nobler and grander achievements.

Colonel William Joseph Simmons and fifteen other men eight years ago petitioned the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, for a charter for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the Court thereafter issued the charter making the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan a legal entity. After the charter was issued these fifteen men met and elected themselves Imperial Officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, selecting Colonel William Joseph Simmons as Imperial Wizard and Emperor.

Later these same men drafted and caused to be printed in booklet form a constitution and by-laws governing the organization. This status remained until about seven months prior to November 27th, when Colonel Simmons' health became impaired and he was no longer able to transact the business of the Klan and he appointed E. Y. Clarke as Imperial Wizard PRO TEM Mr. Clark at once assumed the duties of Imperial Wizard and acted as such until the 10th day of November, 1922.

In the latter part of April or the first part of May, 1922, the Imperial Wizard issued a call for a delegated provisional Klonvokation which met on May 6th, 1922, in Atlanta, Ga., at which provisional Klonvokation committees were appointed for the setting up of a convention to be held sometime the latter part of 1922. Sometime during October, 1922, the Imperial Wizard issued a call for a delegated initial Klonvocation to be held November 27th to 30th, 1922. On November 27th, 1922, the delegates to said convention met in Atlanta on the University Grounds and Colonel William Joseph Simmons convenced the delegates, and after a lengthy speech, Colonel Simmons declared the convention open.

Many speeches were then made by delegates. On the second day of the convention Colonel Simmons again called the meeting to order and after a short talk stated that he had been occupying the office of Imperial Wizard and Emperor of the Knights of the Ku Kluz Klan and he thought it altogether fifting and proper that the two offices be seperated and that he would appreciate it if the delegates would elect him to the office of Emperor. This was accordingly done, and Colonel Simmons resigned from the office of Imperial Wizard and declared the office vacant.

When the time came for the election of Imperial Wizard Dr. H. W. Evans was nominated by Col. Wm. Joseph Simmons for this office. The motion was duly seconded by a number of Klansmen, but before the vote was taken Dr. H. W. Evans asked that his name be withdrawn. The name of E. Y. Clarke was put in nomination for Imperial Wizard, and Dr. H. W. Evans seconded this nomination. E. Y. Clarke was elected Imperial Wizard, but refused to accept the office, making a speech nominating Dr. H. W. Evans and declaring that Colonel Simmons wanted Dr. Evans elected. Dr. Evans was then elected by the unanimous vote of the Klonvokation.

Colonel Simmons thereafter installed Dr. Evans as Imperial Wizard and turned over to him as such the office of Imperial Wizard, formerly occupied by Colonel William Joseph Simmons, together with the superintending control and possession of the Imperial Palace and all personal property, records books, files and other properties, and Dr. Evans in turn accepted the office and took possession of these properties.

This was immediately after the adjournment of the Klonvokation, and he remained in full possession and control of all the properties, both real and personal, which belonged to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, including the records, books files, etc., until April 2nd, 1923.

The committee on constitution and by-laws appointed at the provisional Klonvokation held on May 6, 1922 prepared a draft of a new constitution and by-laws, and this was reduced to type and copies thereof were placed in the hands of all of the Cyclops of each Klan throughout the country in order that they might study it and be able to offer suggestions and comments when the delegated official Klonvokation was convened. When the convention met, copies of the proposed constitution and by-laws were distributed among the delegates in order that they might have opportunity to study them and make such amendments or corrections as they might think meet and proper.

After the election of Dr. H. W. Evans as Imperial Wizard, constitution and by-laws was submitted to the convention for its adoption or rejection and after it had been carefully considered it was unanimously adopted.

By reference to the constitution and by-laws it will be seen that the duties, powers and perogratives of the Emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are defined and also that the duties, powers and perogatives of the Imperial Wizard are defined.

Colonel Simmons was familiar with the terms of the constitution and by-laws, having studied same to his entire satisfaction, and they were accepted by him as being satisfactory. The Convention, among other things, by proper resolution, authorized and delegated the Imperial Wizard to select a committee, with E. Y. Clarke as chairman, to investigate the advisability of the organization of a Woman's Department of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and make its report to the Imperial Wizard or the Imperial Klonicilium on or before May 1st, 1923.

On February 27th, 1923, E. Y. Clarke convened this committee in Atlanta for the purpose of discussing the advisability of the organization of a Woman's Department of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. After much discussion the committee thought it wise and proper that such an organization should exist, but not having fully investigated the methds of the operation of such a department, adjourned to meet again in Atlanta March 25th, 1923.

At this date the committee further discussed a Woman's Department, but not having sufficient information and data adjourned to April 2nd, 1923, at which time the committee again convened for the further consideration of the Woman's division of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Thereupon Colonel William Joseph Simmons and certain of his supporters brought suit in the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, averring that the plaintiff was in full possession and control of all the properties of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, including the Imperial Palace, together with the records, books and files of said organization and had been since the charter of said Klan, and that the defendant H. W. Evans and his staff, were undertaking to molest and were molesting the plaintiff, Colonel William Joseph Simmons and the free management and control of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, plaintiff prayed that Dr. H. W. Evans and staff be enjoined and presented the petition to said Court and was heard in chambers ex-parte.

The court issued an order enjoining and restraining Dr. H. W. Evans and staff from interfering with the free management and control of the properties and affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux. The order referred to was placed in the hands of James I. Lowry, Sheriff of Fulton County, Georgia, for service and the Sheriff proceeded to the Imperial Palace or offices of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, situated on Peachtree Road, and ordered the employees and officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, who were in possession of the properties under the direction of the defendant, H. W. Evans, as Imperial Wizard, to vacate the premises.

He exceeded the authority vested in him under the order of the court, and ordered the officers and employees to surrender the possession of the Imperial Palace and the offices and other properties of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to Colonel William Joseph Simmons and associates.

At the time of rendering the order and the placing of it in the hands of the Sheriff and the service of the order upon the employees and officers of the Klan who were in control of the properties under the direction of H. W. Evans as Imperial Wizard, Dr. H. W. Evans and staff were in the City of Washington, D. C., and they returned to the city of Atlanta on the afternoon of April 3rd.

Finding what had transpired Dr. H. W. Evans and staff prepared an answer to the petition denying the averments therein contained and presented the facts in relation to the true status at the time of service of the order. They asked the Court to modify its order made on the previous day and place the property, etc., in the hands of the Sheriff of Fulton County until hearing could be had on the complaints and answer. This was accordingly done.

Thereafter, on April 7th, 1923, Judge E. D. Thomas of the Superior

Georgia

GEORGIA'S CONSCIENCE
HARTFORD CONN COURANT
JANUARY 6, 1923

Recently the attention of the country was called to the fact that only one state saw more lynching in 1922 than did Georgia and, for some time, the country has known that the headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan are in the same state. Now and then the country hears of tales not exactly to the credit of the commonwealth and Georgia has not gained in reputation thereby.

On Tuesday of this week the "Atlanta Constitution," speaking for the good of the order, called attention to a recent incident in Screven County. Therein lived an aged negro, decrepit but enjoying the confidence and respect of his white neighbors. Near the home in which he lay crippled by rheumatism an automobile occupied by two white men became mired. The men demanded that the negro should aid them in starting the car and when he refused because of his infirmities they killed him. They then hacked his body into fragments and mingled them with the mud in the road and went on their way as soon as they were able to move their car. No arrests were made.

The "Constitution" asks that the "trend toward barbarism" be checked and tells its readers to act before the state suffers further disgrace. At least one resident of Atlanta, John A. Manget, responded the next morning by offering a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of the Screven County murderers, adding that he hoped the governor of the state would offer an equal sum. He then told of an outrage at Marietta where a small Syrian colony is situated. Some of their neighbors recently dynamited the house in which one or more of the families lived and notice was served upon all of them to leave town. Mr. Manget offers $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of this outrage and expresses himself as follows:—

You write of our 'trend toward barbarism.' The outside world thinks Georgia has already 'arrived,' and if these two terrible crimes are passed up as was the crime of breaking into the state penitentiary and lynching a prisoner, and the brutes perpetrating them do not receive the penalty of the law, I shall feel as the outside world does, that Georgia has already arrived at the barbaric stage.

The language is not that of the various imperial wizards who occupy the imperial castle on Peachtree street, but it has the merit of being understood at a glance and upon reading it one has the right to be optimistic as to the future of Georgia. Its great newspaper has spoken in protest and it secures a prompt approval. We hope that the governor of the state will be heard from and, with that beginning, it should be possible to prove that Georgia is civilized.

LAW ENFORCEMENT URGED BY CIVITANS

Atlanta Constitution

"The ever-increasing disregard for law" was declared Georgia's greatest danger by John A. Manget, Atlanta capitalist, addressing the Civitan club Friday on "Lawlessness in Georgia." He assailed the Ku Klux Klan as being responsible, directly or indirectly, for many of the criminal activities throughout Georgia and the southern states.

1/13/23

Resolutions placing the Civitan club on record as being in favor of strict enforcement of every law on the statute books and in favor of revision of any laws that are shown to be bad, and commending Mr. Manget for his stand, were introduced by Norman C. Miller and adopted by the club.

"Disregard for Law."

"The outstanding danger to the future welfare of our great state is the ever-increasing disregard for the law," Mr. Manget declared. "Failure to enforce certain laws is breeding contempt for all law and we are speeding rapidly—yet almost unconsciously—toward anarchy."

Mr. Manget said that for a quarter of a century Georgia has led the world in lynching, and that until twelve months ago there had never been one effort to punish the perpetrators of the mob crimes. Since the organization of the inter-racial commission lynching has fallen off about 33 1-3 per cent, he said.

"I am not here to say anything to hurt any one's feelings, and yet if I were to remain silent on a most important matter I would be untrue to my subject," he said. "It is my opinion that the Ku Klux Klan is responsible, directly or indirectly, for many of the awful crimes that are disgracing Georgia and other southern states.

Attacks "Hooded Mob."

"Good men everywhere should rise up and demand that no hooded and disguised mob should be tolerated on the streets or roads of this state and that any violation should be justification for shooting to kill by any citizen whose person or property was imperiled. Georgia must no longer tolerate 'invisible government,' that proposes to take away from its citizens the right to worship God according to the dictates of one's own conscience, and the right to happiness and peace regardless of race or creed.

Lives Are Unsafe.

"There are whole groups of counties where the lives of negroes are unsafe even while passing through such sections, and it is as well known, though not muchly advertised fact, that the boll weevil is not all to blame for Georgia's cotton crop falling from 2,000,000 bales down to 800,000 bales, for thousands of negro cabins in Georgia are empty, and it is due to the fact that life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness' guaranteed by the constitution is, so far as the negroes of Georgia are concerned, a hollow mockery and a farce.

"Georgia is not giving the negro a fair deal. They are in a panic in many sections of the state, and therefore are fleeing constantly to places where they may live in peace. The negro is not the only part of Georgia's citizenship that is suffering from injustice and lack of law enforcement," he said.

"In Marietta, despite a great mass meeting last Sunday those foreigners are still unsettled and undecided as to whether or not their lives are safe, and they may yet flee to some city or refuge in another state. Not one arrest has been made."

IF YOU DON'T KNOW THE TRUTH, KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT.

Atlanta Constitution

We have just read an article in the Supreme Circle News, a weekly Negro publication in Albany, Georgia, in which the editor or associate editor undertook to defend the Ku Klux Klan. 1-18-23

The editor of this paper is Joe H. Watson, supreme ruler of the Supreme Circle, and the associate editor is J. H. Martin, a mail carrier in the Albany post office, and we want to say to these men, which ever one is guilty, and we rather think the defense is the mouthings of the associate editor, that if you do not want the public to know you are a fool, you had better keep your mouth shut; and when you do not know the truth, you had better keep your mouth shut; if you have a case, you had better study it before you go into court; that if you do not want to be made ashamed when you are trying to tell a story about which you know nothing, you had better let the story alone; that it is always better to tell the truth than it is to tell a lie; that no defense is better than a poor defense; that if you do not know anything about the Ku Klux Klan or any other organization, you had better let it alone; that it is always better to keep your mouth shut than to make a fool of yourself. The comparison between the Negroes and the K. K. K., undertaken by the Supreme Circle News is one of the most ridiculous pieces of cowardly truckling that we ever read.

In Albany the city government refused to let the K. K. K. use the city hall to hold one of its meetings, because it believed that their propaganda was a menace to the public safety and injurious to good government.

In the teeth of this a little Negro paper, edited very largely by a mail carrier, who has no right to engage in any work outside of his regular employment, comes out and makes a defense for the Klan; takes issue with the Albany Daily Herald which refuses to carry any matter for the Klan, because it believes that the intstitution was illadvised and a menace to good government. Now, here is a little Negro who is not a member of the Klan and says he does not know anything about it, who undertakes to make a defense by saying that the Negroes have been accused of many crimes of which they are not guilty, and in like manner, many things are charged to the Klan of which it is not guilty. In defending the Klan this little mail carrier says it is no more fair to let the hand of accusation fall upon the Klan without the proper exercise of legal judgment, than it is to lay everything that happens to be committed under the guise of a robe or mask to the Klan. And further remarks, "Let us be broad-minded towards our own selves, and in being fair and broad-minded toward our own selves, we will likewise be fair in our accusations, especially to the Negro and to the Klan."

Now, the race objects to Brother Martin linking it with the Klan. If he thinks it will help him with his job to distribute mail among the Ku Klux in Albany or elsewhere, that is all right; that is his personal right to have his belief, but the race needs no comparative defense along with the Klan. Our little brother must not be reading what is happening in a Louisiana Parish, what is happening in Texas, and the burning of Negro citizens of a Florida town. But possibly Brother Martin has his job in mind, and he is afraid if he does not defend something he does not know anything about, if he does not impress the white people he is a good Negro, he will be strung up to a limb or ordered to move.

But let us again admonish you, Brother Martin or Brother Watson, if Brother Martin is not guilty, it matters not which, that it is better not to talk about things you know nothing of, and that you make a fool of yourself every time you publicly state that you do not know anything about a subject and then proceed to discuss it. You say you know nothing about the Klan, and in the next breath you say there have been many things written and said about the Klan that are not true. If you have been employed by the Klan to defend it, we suggest that they get a better lawyer—one who will show intelligence and a knowledge of the law in the discussion of its case, rather than ignorance of the facts.

THIRD SUIT AGAINST CLARKE IS DISMISSED

1-20-23

Judge Sibley Sustains Motion That Non-Suit Be Declared.

Atlanta Constitution

Holding that the plaintiff had not made out a case, the $50,000 damage suit of Lloyd Hooper against E. Y. Clarke, former imperial wizard pro tem of the Ku Klux Klan and now imperial giant, was dismissed in United States district court Friday.

The suit was the last of three similar proceedings brought against Mr. Clarke by three former grand goblins of the Ku Klux Klan. The other two were dismissed Thursday at the request of counsel.

Counsel for defendant in the Hooper case moved that a non-suit be declared, and Judge Samuel H. Sibley sustained the motion.

A REMARKABLE DOCUMENT

Atlanta Independent

By reason of the mischief the document propagates, we received the most remarkable communication a few days ago our eyes ever fell upon. This document appears to be from the N. A. A. C. P., but gave as its signers: Harry H. Pace, G. W. Harris, et al. Atlanta Ga.

This communication was addressed to the Attorney General of the United States, and had for its purpose the prosecution and annihilation of Marcus Garvey and his followers. This communication is fraught with much danger and is calculated to stir up more strife and bitterness between the races than even the Ku Klux Klan. The document was sent to many Negro papers throughout the country, and marked "released February first."

The Independent refused to carry the communication; first, because of its dangerous and treasonable character; second, because it was libelous and criminal; third, because it was a piece of cowardly meanness; fourth, because it was a criminal attempt to prejudice public opinion against a man presumed to be innocent until convicted.

In this discussion, we do not wish to be understood as defending Garvey; but standing for the fundamental principle of fair play, giving every man an opportunity to be heard before a jury of his peers. We hold no brief for Garvey or his propaganda, and are making no defense for him, but are standing up for the principle of free speech and a free press as we have the light to see it.

These men ask the Attorney General to advance the case of Garvey in the court to try, convict and put him in the Federal Prison to get him out of their way. They do not ask for him a constitutional investigation, but a legalized lynching. They tell the white folk that Garvey is a dangerous negro and that he teaches negroes to hate white folk, and in consequence of which, he should be suppressed or exiled. They charge him with the death of J. W. H. Eason, who was assassinated in Louisiana a few weeks ago.

The plot of these Negro men resolves itself into a conspiracy to get rid of a man whom they cannot control or haven't sense enough to handle. We do not believe in Garvey or his propaganda, but are willing that he have an opportunity that the people may find out whether he is a statesman or a faker. If these men are afraid of Garvey, and he is not in their way, why call on a great government to supress him? If he is a humbug and a knave, why not give him rope and let him hang himself? Give the people time and they will take his measure, just like they will find out the animus of the men who are calling upon the great government to do what they find themselves unable to do. If the men who have failed in their fight to put Garvey down are so anxious that law and order should prevail, why not call on the Attorney General to suppress the Ku Klux Klan? Why not ask him to indict convict and hang the thousands of murders who constitute the mobs? Why are these men so much interested in the conviction of one Negro who has already been indicted for using the mails for fraudulent purposes, and so little concerned about the indictment, conviction and punishment of the lynchers throughout the country? No, these angels of peace present a striking example of the white folk "nigger" trying to get the white folks to run a decent and manly Negro man out of the community, because they can not control him.

We do not know whether the N. A. A. C. P. is responsible for this dangerous document supposed to be issued from 2305 Seventh Avenue, New York, but it bears the earmarks of its propaganda, and is supposed to be signed by four of the active members and supporters of this organization. And we are loath to believe that sane business men like Harry Pace, Robert Abbott, John Nail and George Harris, would be parties to so foolish and mischief making document as the one in question. These Negroes address the Attorney General as the chief law enforcement officer, to suppress a menace to harmonious race relations, and in the light of all the mobs, Klu Klux Klan, night riders and lawless gangs who spare neither life nor property, these angels of peace could not point out to the Honorable Attorney General but one menace—Marcus Garvey. They love law and order so much they could not see the Klu Klux Klan, the Tulsa, Florida or Indiana outrages, where bands of Negro families were expelled from the towns and their homes burned and property confiscated.

The N. A. A. C. P. was organized for the purpose of advancing the cause of freedom and to establish equal opportunity to all men and to guarantee free speech and free press. The Institution was organized to suppress mob law and to put down lawlessness, not to instigate mob violence and to encourage lawlessness. If the U. N. I. A. or the Negro can help solve our problems, why not accept their good offices? Why try to put the white folk against the Garveyites by raising the cry of race hatred? Why turn "white folks nigger" or adopt the propaganda of traitors, in order to best your competitor in open combat? If your cause is right and Garvey's is wrong, your cause will live and Garvey's will die, and you will not need the assistance of the white folk or the federal courts to put your program over.

Truth is eternal and error is short lived. Stand your cause upon its merits and it will live because of its merits, or die for the lack of merit. There could be nothing meaner or so far reaching in mischief than for any set of Negro men in the teeth of the strained race relations, to array white folks against black folks, by telling the white folk that a certain group of Negroes hated all white folks and were teaching all Negroes to hate all white folks. Such conduct is race treason, race treachery and is fulminated only by cowards, who find themselves unable to meet their opponents in equal combat.

But we are not willing to believe that Harry Pace, John Nail, George Harris and Robert Abbott are responsible for this cowardly appeal to the Attorney General to destroy Garvey until they admit it.

TRIED IN VAIN TO BAN ATLANTA KLAN PARADE

Louisville Courier Journal, Louisville, Ky.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 8.—(Crusader Service) John A. Manget disclosed today his unavailing efforts to persuade Mayor Sims to ccancel per- which marched through the streets last Wednesday. 2/10/23

"This cowardly aggregation hid behind masks," Mr. Manget said, in giving out his correspondence, "and were advertised as Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which organization was born in this city of dreamers and grafters. At the haed of this bunch of Invisible Empire champions, who hide their names and faces, rode mounted police of our visible city government by order of the Mayor."

Klan Posts Warning on 7 Churches

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 19.—In an effort to intimidate voters of our Race who rallied to the support of Judge Paul E. Seabrook, mayoralty candidate, a skull and crossbones, crudely drawn in ink, was posted on the door of every church and lodge hall in the city. Under the picture were the words:

"This is a white man's fight. Keep away."

In some cases the words were lettered by hand. In others they were stenciled. Large churches were placarded with two signs.

Members of the Race considered it as an unwarrantable attempt to frighten them away from the polls and retarding them from exercising their constitutional right of franchise, while others considered it a threat of violence coming from the headquarters of the local Ku Klux Klan.

The warning only served to consolidate the Race in throwing their full support to Judge Seabrook. He was elected by an overwhelming majority.

In addition to the posters, warnings in the form of a slip of paper were found under the doors of individual citizens bearing the words: "Cast your ballot right—for Stewart— by order of——" Below these words a picture of the Ku Klux Klan was pinned. Churches on which the warnings were placed are as follows:

Zion Baptist church, West Broad street.

St. Phillip's church, Charles and West Broad street.

Masonic temple, West Gwinnett street.

St. Phillip's Monumental church, New street.

Bryan Baptist church, Bryan street, west.

First African Baptist church, Franklin square.

Bethel A. M. E. church, East Broad street.

Ezra Presbyterian church, East Broad street.

The signs were on heavy beaver board and are being preserved by Mayor Seabrook.

KU KLUX PARADE

Atlanta Constitution

Klan's Drum Corps to Head Procession.

Several thousand Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will parade through the streets of Atlanta tonight at 8 o'clock, according to information from that organization, the occasion marking initiation of a large class of new members. Atlanta Ga.

According to the statement, the parade will be headed by the big drum and bugle corps of the klan. Those in the parade, it is understood, will be attired in the full regalia of their organization.

Klan Headquarters Will Now Direct Propagation Work

Atlanta Constitution 2-24-23

Fred L. Savage, imperial klailiff of the Ku Klux Klan, Friday announced that E. Y. Clarke, imperial giant, has formally turned over to the imperial headquarters of the klan the propagation department of the order.

It was announced last November by Mr. Clarke that he was preparing to relinquish control of the propagation work of the klan.

The statement given out by Mr. Savage and signed by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, was as follows:

"In conformity with general plans announced to the press in November last year, Edward Young Clarke today formally turned over to imperial headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan the entire machinery and control of the propagation department of the order, which department he organized and of which he has been head. Effective today, all propagation activities of the Ku Klux Klan will be under the guidance and direction of imperial headquaters."

Klansmen Gather On Mountain Top For Ceremonial

About Ten Thousand Members of Order Convene Here For Annual Exercises.

Approximately ten thousand Klansmen, members of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, last night made their annual pilgrimage to Stone Mountain where, at the hour of midnight, under the light of the fiery cross, rededicated themselves to the obligations they have taken.

The Atlanta Constitution 5-7-23

The annual celebration this year, on the seventh anniversary of the founding of the order, was much smaller than in several years, because settlement of the recent internal litigation came too late for the consummation of the elaborate program originally planned

Because of the anniversary coming on Sunday the usual parade of Klansmen through the principal streets of Atlanta clad in their white robes and helmets was dispensed with, as were other regular entertainment features.

Leave for Stone Mountain.

The advance guard of the Klansmen left the Auditorium-Armory about 8:30 o'clock at night for Stone mountain. Arriving there they stationed a cordon of Klavaliers around the base, while others searched the mountain for any Sunday excursionists who might have delayed their departure in an effort to be present at the ceremony.

The main body of Klansmen left the Auditorium in automobiles shortly after 9 o'clock, arriving at the mountain about 10:30 o'clock. They immediately began the long ascent, guided up the treacherous paths by flaming torches held by Klavaliers.

Completing the ascent in less than an hour, the Klansmen spent the remaining time before midnight in silent prayer.

Promptly at midnight the enormous fiery cross which had been erected on the pinnacle of the mountain burst into flames, revealing an American flag floating in the breeze nearby. As "Old Glory" burst into view the tune "America" was softly sung by the Klansmen.

Lead in Prayers.

After the song, imperial officers of the klan, standing beneath the fiery cross, led the Klansmen in a series of prayers, in which thanks to God for the many blessings bestowed was given, and supplications for a continuance of these blessings.

After the settlement of the internal litigation about ten days ago, a proclamation was sent out by Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, in which he gave instructions to the klans to meet on the anniversary night in their own klaverns, and there to give thanks to God for the amicable settlement of all differences among the leaders of the organization.

Many Klansmen from all sections of the nation, however, came to Atlanta in order to make the pilgrimage to the mountain with the klans in the Atlanta province.

Devotional Ceremony.

The ceremony on the top of Stone mountain was of a devotional nature, and was in commemoration of the re-founding of the order on the same spot, when at the hour of midnight 15 men assembled with Colonel William Joseph Simmons and there pledged their allegiance to the ideals set forth by Colonel Simmons.

Since that time, it is estimated by officials of the organization, that more than two million men have affiliated with the order.

After completing the devotional exercises about 1 o'clock Monday morning, the Klansmen, with one hand at the charred remains of the fiery cross and the other on the American flag, rededicated their "lives" to the principles of their order.

The rededication service finished, the Klansmen returned to the base of the mountain, where they entered the waiting automobiles for the return trip to Atlanta.

More than 2,500 automobiles were paarked on the roads near the mountain.

KLAN TO INVESTIGATE VIENNA WARNING NOTE

5-15-23

Negroes Told to Move, But Paper Does Not Bear Official Seal.

The Atlanta Constitution

A thorough investigation of typewritten warnings signed "K. K. K." which are said to have been recently placed under the doors of three leading negroes in Vienna, Ga., was promised Friday by officials of the Knights of Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta, who emphatically denied that the klan had been responsible for the warnings.

Nathan Bedford Forrest, grand dragon for the state of Georgia, informed The Constitution that there is no klan in Vienna or at any other point in Dooly county.

F. L. Savage, chief of staff, declared that the imperial palace would exert every effort to ascertain the identity of the author or authors of the letters

Warnings Typewritten.

One of the warnings, neatly typewritten on a blank sheet of paper, was furnished The Constitution by Dr. C. T. Stovall, its correspondent at Vienna, who stated that the note had been placed under the door of a leading negro business man at Vienna by an unidentified person. Two other negroes there have received similar notices, he said.

Accompanying the document was a letter from Dr. Stovall, revealing a shortage of farm labor in Dooly county that he described as "alarming." Approximately 650 negroes have left the county, he said.

Exodus of Blacks.

"The reported exodus of negroes in Dooly county is regrettable," Mr. Savage stated Friday night. "It is our intention to exhaust every means to learn the identity of the party or parties who are operating under the guise of the Ku Klux Klan in Vienna. The Ku Klux Klan will not let such an incident pass without a thorough investigation."

The warning, which notified the recipient to vacate the premises he occupied, because they were needed for other purposes, and stating that it would be unwise to ignore the note, was immediately referred to the imperial officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Letter Puzzling.

Had the klansmen in Vienna been responsible for the communications, Mr. Savage stated, the documents would have borne the official seal of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. In view of the fact that the warning which Dr. Stovall sent to Atlanta was written on plain paper, bearing no seal of the order, he was positive that the organization was in no way a party to the incident.

Dr. Stovall is a prominent physician of Vienna and has been The Constitution's correspondent at that point for more than a quarter of a century.

The warning read as follows:

"The ground on which this building is located is needed for other purposes; you are, therefore, notified to move to other quarters before May 1. Notify the party from whom you rent at once and do not wait for another notice.

"We have no ill feelings toward you but wish these buildings vacated at once. K. K. K."

Dr. Stovall's Letter.

Following is the letter of Dr. Stovall:

"Editor Constitution: As your correspondent I deem it my duty to submit the enclosed to you to do with it as you please. The enclosed slip and two others like it were placed under the doors of the most prominent negro places of business in this city a few nights ago, by an unknown person. Of course it stampeded them.

"It is admitted that these negroes are law-abiding, that their business is carried on in an orderly manner, etc. They are having the indorsement and protection of the mayor and police, backed by the public sentiment of white people, so far as is expressed, as well as by the owner of the buildings.

"The general belief is that the 'K. K. K.' had nothing to do with it. There is no lodge of them here, and but a very few members, so far as is known.

"Not long ago, you had me to investigate and report on the size and importance of the negro exodus in sofar as it affected this county. I then estimated that 600 had left the county, including Vienna. Since that time, at least 50 more have gone.

"There is an alarming farm labor shortage in this county, the negro tenants in some instances deserting the fields after the crops are planted and growing, and supplies furnished by the owners.

"And, it is plain that the approaching summer will witness this movement on a larger scale than ever.

"So far, not more than a dozen of those leaving have returned, and two or three of them were dead.

"And yet, a few seem to think this 'exodus' a good thing, as evidenced by the incident mentioned in the beginning of this letter."

KAMELIA ORDER WILL HONOR HEROINE

5-4-23

The Atlanta Georgian. The Atlanta Constitution

Breathing anew the devotion of the South of today to the traditions wrought by the Old South, a solemn memorial will be held in the Atlanta City Auditorium at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon alike to the old Knights of the White Kamelia of reconstruction times and to a Southern heroine of the Civil War.

The girl, Emma Sanson, of near Gadsden, Ala., guided the daring cavalry of General Nathan Bedford Forrest to safety in a moment of great peril. It is for her that Emma Sanson Court, of the Kamelia of Atanta, which will hold the memorial service, has been named.

Among those participating will be Emperor William Joseph Simmons, of the Ku-Klux Klan; Dr. W. E. Thompson and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley imperial kludd of the Ku-Klux Klan. Robed members of the Kamelia will attend, although the occasion will be public with thousands of Atlantans, it is expected, present.

As a link between the Kamelia of the present and the Knights of the White Kamelia of the Sixties, General A. B. Booth, of New Orleans, at one time a commander of the old order, is in Atlanta. He has been given a special invitation to attend as guest of honor.

From authentic records of General Forrest's campaigns, the story of the heroism of Emma Sanson has been revealed. Hard-pressed by federal troops, Forrest and his members faced grave danger at Black Creek, three miles from Gadsden. The bridge—the only known means of advance—was in flames.

The young woman, described as "a tall, comely girl of about 18 years," approached Forrest and offered to guide him to a ford half-mile away, unknown to the enemy. The gallant cavalryman assisted her to his horse and together they rode, despite constant rifle fire, to the ford.

WITHOUT FEAR.

Undismayed by the whistling bullets, she pointed out the approaches through which the cavalry could advance. Although several bullets pierced her clothing her one comment was: "They have only wounded my crinoline." Upon the return she waved her sunbonnet at the federal troops, causing them to cease firing and to cheer.

"The artillery was sent forward," the campaign records relate," and with a few shells, well thrown, quickly drove away the federal guard at the ford, and the passage was successfully effected in less than two hours."

In repayment for her aid, Forrest later in the day recaptured her brother from the federals. At the next session of the Alabama Legislature Miss Sanson was granted a tract of land and the Governor was instructed "to provide and present her with a gold medal, inscribed with suitable devices commemorative of her conduct."

Hundreds of klansmen, in Atlanta to attend the anniversary of its foundation, will attend the memorial, and there will be appropriate music

KAMELIA TO HONOR WOMAN HEROINE

Dr. W. E. Thompson, Col. William J. Simmons and Dr. Caleb Ridley to Address Women.

5-6-23

Emma Sanson court of the Kamelia of Atlanta, the local unit of the woman's organization founded by Col. William Joseph Simmons, will hold its first public meeting at the city auditorium at 3 o'clock this afternoon when it honors the memory of Emma Sanson, the brave Alabama girl who during the Civil war guided the daring cavalry of General Nathan Bedford Forrest to safety during a crucial moment.

All Atlanta has been invited to be present. A musical program will be provided by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., city organist.

Dr. W. E. Thompson, former United States commissioner to the Balkans, will preside. Principal speakers will be William Joseph Simmons, el magus of the Kamelia and emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan; and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd of the latter organization. Members of the Kamelia will wear white robes.

FIRST PHOTO OF KAMELIA INITIATION

Presented here is the first picture published of an initiation ceremony of the Emma Sanson Kourt, No. 1, of Atlanta, of the Kamelia, a secret order for women, founded on the principles of the Ku-Klux Klan. The above picture was made at the rededication ceremony to "God, Home and Country," similar to which will be the services Sunday afternoon at the Auditorium, when members of the order will gather to pay tribute to the memory of the heroines of the Civil War. High officials of the Klan will take part in the exercises, which will be open to the public.

KLANSMEN MEET IN ATLANTA TODAY

Seventh Annual Anniversary Celebration Will Be Held at Midnight on Stone Mountain.

The Atlanta Constitution

Klansmen from all parts of the United States are assembling in Atlanta for the seventh annual anniversary celebration of the refounding of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Seven years ago sixteen men gathered with Colonel William Joseph Simmons on the top of Stone mountain and there, under the flickering rays from the fiery cross, pledged their best efforts for the success of this organization.

Tonight, at the hour of midnight, these sixteen men, or as many of them as can be in Atlanta, will re-assemble on the mountain top in company with others who have joined with them in the past seven years.

Smallest Celebration.

The celebration this year will be the smallest in years, because the settlement of the recent litigation came too late for preparation and fulfillment of the elaborate program which originally was planned.

After the final settlement of the litigation ten days ago, a proclamation was sent to all klans in the country by Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, instructing them to hold celebrations in their home klaverns. Many klansmen, however, notified the imperial palace of their intention to attend the ceremony to be staged in Atlanta.

The usual parade will not be held, because of the anniversary coming on Sunday, nor will the barbecue and other features of entertainment be held, for the same reason.

The exercises Sunday will be mainly of a devotional nature, several meetings to be held in Atlanta during the day and early evening hours, while the annual pilgrimage to the mountain will begin about 9 o'clock at night.

Will Ascend Mountain.

Arriving at Stone Mountain about 10 o'clock, the Klansmen will ascend the mountain by easy stages and will spend the time after reaching the summit until midnight in silent prayer.

Promptly at the hour of midnight official services will start with lighting of the huge fiery cross, one of the main symbols of the order. As the flames mount skyward, each Klansman will kneel and be led in a series of prayers by various imperial officers of the order. Floating beside the fiery cross will be the Stars and Stripes.

A strict guard will be kept around all accessible portions of the mountain, that none but Klansmen approach the "shrine," but hundreds of people are expected to line the roads around the mountain for a glimpse of this ceremony.

Request For Receivership Is Feature of Development in Ku Klux Klan Fight

ATLANTA, GA., April 6.—Litigation between the Simmons and Evans factions in the Ku Klux Klan resulting from the temporary injunction obtained by Emperor William Joseph Simmons, restraining Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans and others from interfering with him in control of the klan, advanced a step further today when arguments were concluded before Superior Judge E. D. Thomas. The court announced a decision would be given in the case tomorrow.

Montgomery Advertiser 4-7-23

Another development of the day came with the filing of a petition seeking a receivership for the Ku Klux Klan by Attorney W. H. Terrell, representing Harry P. Narrell and other leaders of the so-called "insurgent faction." The petition, signed by Terrell, Z. R. Upchurch, Arthur E. Woodward and others, asked that a receiver be appointed on the grounds that the klan now is without a duly elected head.

Montgomery Ala

The application further set forth newspaper reports of alleged waste of klan funds by officials of the organization. The defendants named were H. W. Evans, F. L. Savage, Brown Harwood, Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, Nathan Bedford Forrest, Tom Akers, Fred B. Johnson, Paul F. Etheridge, T. J. McKinnon, N. N. Furney, J. K. Skipwith, H. C. Montgomery, S. K. Ramsey, E. J. Jones and James I. Lowry.

Charges that the injunction order obtained by the Simmons faction was obtained by fraud and that Evans never had been legally elected imperial wizard of the organization, were repeated in arguments of opposing counsel in the klan fight late today. Ben H. Sullivan, representing Emperor Simmons, made the first speech, while Imperial Klonsel Paul Etheridge, although entitled to the first and last speeches, made only the closing argument.

Attorney Sullivan contended that the charter of the klan was its fundamental law and that the klonvocation last November failed to follow the provisions of the charter providing for the election of its officials, in that nominations were made and viva voce vote taken instead of a "ballot." He declared Colonel Simmons was emperor and imperial wizard until a wizard had been properly elected.

Denying charges that fraud had been practiced in obtaining the temporary injunction against the Evans faction, Mr. Sullivan contended that Emperor Simmons was in actual possession of the imperial palace and that a meeting of the kloncilium, or supreme executive committee, was in session at the time the court order was served. A quorum of the kloncilium was obtained by the appointment by Simmons of three new members.

J. V. Poole, associate counsel for Colonel Simmons, also presented a brief argument contending that Simmons was in actual possession of the palace and property of the klan in a legal sense.

Fraud, "pre-arranged, concocted, concerted, premeditated," was charged against the Simmons faction by Imperial Klonsel Etheridge in his speech closing the case. He asserted that Simmons had called a meeting of the kloncilium in a downtown office building, at which arrangements were made for a quorum; that this meeting was adjourned to the imperial palace; that the emperor and his party went to the palace at a time when he knew the Imperial Wizard Evans and other officers were not present. He declared the emperor was admitted to the imperial wizard's office as a personal courtesy by an employe of the palace and that Simmons took advantage of this to hold the kloncilium meeting there.

He pointed out the fact that Sheriff J. I. Lowry was a member of the Simmons kloncilium and that he also interpreted the order of the court as dispossessing the Evans faction in favor of the Simmons faction, when such was not the intention of the court in issuing the order.

Referring to the action of the klonvocation, Mr. Etheridge contended that Mr. Evans had been properly elected imperial wizard. Colonel Simmons had vacated the office of wizard, he said, and had proposed Mr. Evans for the place; Mr. Evans was elected and later "annointed" into office by Emperor Simmons; that "since that meeting Simmons has served as emperor and has been accepting $1,000 a month salary for the position."

Imperial Wizard Evans has been "wizarding rigth along" since the November meeting, Mr. Etheridge said, without any disturbance of his authority until April 2, when the court action was taken by the Simmons faction.

Charges of larceny after trust against T. J. McKinnon, klan investigator, and N. N. Furney, cashier, will be taken up before Municipal Judge Hathaway tomorrow. The two klan officials are alleged to have removed funds of the order to prevent the Simmons faction from obtaining control of them.

Hearing on Petition to Dissolve Enjoining Order Granted to Simmons to Be Resumed Today

The Atlanta Constitution

With the two chief figures of the order openly arrayed against each other and with every indication pointing to a gathering of the forces of the two factions for a death struggle for supremacy, developments in the contest between Emperor William J. Simmons, founder of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, who occupied the stragetic position of executive chieftain of the order, came with startling rapidity Wednesday.

Late in the afternoon E. J. Jones, acting cashier of the klan and an ally of Simmons, secured in municipal court criminal warrants against N. N. Furney, cashier, and T. J. McKinnon, head of the klan espionage bureau, charging them with larceny after trust of approximately $107,000 in klan funds.

When deputy marshals of Chief Judge Luther Z. Rosser instituted a search for the two men, Paul S. Etheridge, attorney for the Evans faction, announced that Furney and McKinnon would present themselves in court Thursday morning and will be prepared to make bond in any sum. The attorney admitted that the funds in question were in possession of the two men, but added that they were holding it merely as protection to the klan itself in order that Simmons be prevented from securing possession of them.

Gives Fake Combination.

The story of how Simmons' brilliant legal coupe d'etat of Tuesday failed to gain him possession of the funds of the klan came to light when it was found that Furney, when Simmons seized the imperial palace, gave a fake combination and walked out with an $80,000 klan check made payable to himself, which had been prepared in advance. Simmons discovered this when locksmiths were called in and opened the vault. McKinnon is said to have in his possession $27,000 in recent initiation fees.

Representatives of the imperial emperor Wednesday charged that the two men took this course upon secretly telegraphed orders of Wizard Evans, whom they said was in New York at the time.

Hearing on a petition of Wizard Evans, filed at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning immediately after his return, was begun Wednesday afternoon before Judge E. D. Thomas. Evans petition was for modification of an order previously signed by Judge Thomas, which restrained Evans and leaders of his faction from interfering with Simmons in his control of the klan.

Filing of this petition, and favorable action upon it by Judge Thomas, dispossessed the Simmons regime at the imperial palace and threw the physical holdings of the order into the custody of Sheriff James I. Lowry, of Fulton county, who was appointed by the court to take charge pending the outcome of the litigation.

Recess Is Taken.

Attempt on the part of Simmon's attorney to delay the hearing resulted in a ruling by Judge Thomas that the case proceed immediately. The attorney immediately served notice he would take exception to this decision, and the hearing was thereupon recessed until Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

While the two factions were exhausting every resource of the courts, klansmen from all sections of the country were reported to be flocking into Atlanta to take their stand with one of the two chieftains. The controversy is the outgrowth of Colonel Simmons' recent announcement that the Kamelia, a woman's organization formed by him, would be allied with the klan.

Evans retaliated by making public an edict of the kloncilum, inner council of the klan, which forbade klansmen to affiliate with any woman's organization. The next development came in Simmons' successful move for an injunction restraining Evans and his faction from interfering in the former's administration of the klan. The wizard in turn struck back by appealing for a modification of this order, which automatically placed the klan's holdings in the hands of a custodian pending the court's final decision.

First Real Break.

The Evans-Simmons struggle marks the first real break among the chief men of the klan. For several years smaller officials and members have launched attacks upon the organization, but hitherto the real heads of the klan have met opposition with a solid front.

Dissension between the two chieftains has just come to light. About a year ago Simmons, suffering from ill health, retired from active administration of the klan, and was given the title of emperor, Evans being named imperial wizard. Affairs of the order were apparently working smoothly so far as the inner circle was concerned, when Simmons' announcement of the formation of the Kamelia brought quick strife to the surface.

After the two leaders had openly broken, Simmons announced that the rupture had been brewing for several months.

Commenting upon the warrants for embezzlement issued Wednesday, Attorney Etheridge stated that he is fully informed as to the circumstances which resulted in the issuance of the warrants, and that the men named in the warrants now have the funds mentioned in their possession, having taken charge of them to prevent Colonel William Joseph Simmons from securing them.

Men Are Under Bond.

"If I heard some one was trying to steal the klan's money I would try to get there first and protect it if I could," he said. He pointed out that Furney and McKinnon are under bond to handle the klan's funds and that Simmons and the officers appointed to handle the order's affairs after Simmons assumed control of the order and its headquarters Monday night are not bonded.

It is learned that when Colonel Simmons and his associates took charge of the imperial palace on Peachtree road Monday night they asked Furney for the combination to the safe. Furney gave them a fictitious combination, it is charged, and Simons' officers found it necessary Tuesday to employ a locksmith to open the vault.

Upon opening the safe, it is claimed, it was found that Furney had drawn a $80,000 check payable to himself, the check having been indorsed in blank by H. C. Montgomery, klan treasurer, before Montgomery left the city several days ago.

Tuesday morning, it is said, inquiry at the Fulton National bank brought the information that Furney had exchanged the $80,000 check for New York exchange for that amount. Furney's home is on Howell Mill road.

Money for Initiation Fees.

The $27,000 alleged to be in possession of McKinnon is said to have consisted of initiation fees taken in at the palace during the last week from field workers, or organizers, throughout the United States.

McKinnon lives at Norcross, Ga. He is said to have been in Atlanta Wednesday, but was reported to be at his home Wednesday night.

Pending outcome of the hearing before Judge Thomas, the palace will be in charge of deputy sheriffs. Wednesday night Deputy Sheriffs Milam and Nelms were assigned by Sheriff Lowry to guard the headquarters and grounds. The men slept and watched alternately.

Ben H. Sullivan, attorney for Colonel William Joseph Simmons, lost the first round in the hearing when Judge Thomas overruled his motion to postpone the hearing for ten days.

The hearing was on a petition of H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, filed through Attorney Etheridge, to dissolve the order previously signed by Judge Thomas, which restrained Evans and other members of his faction from interfering with Simmons in his control of klan affairs.

Simmons Loses Point.

Attorney Sullivan cited a section of the code which he said required that Simmons be given 10 days' notice before the hearing could proceed. Judge Thomas held that the section referred to applied only to general interlocutory orders. He expressed the opinion that an interlocutory order is at all times under absolute control of the court and may be dissolved by the judge without any notice whatever being given.

Simmons' attorney then gave notice that he would file an exception to the ruling. At that point court was recessed.

Dr. Evans was not present, although he arrived in the city late Tuesday night. Tom Akers, private secretary to F. L. Savage, Dr. Evans' chief of staff, seemed to be the principal representative of the Evans faction present, excepting Attorney Etheridge.

Colonel Simmons arrival in the courtroom was greeted with prolonged applause by 100 or more spectators. The courtroom was more than half filled, and when the emperor entered the room practically every man present arose and applauded.

The hearing on the petition of Evans to dissolve the temporary restraining order was originally set for 2 o'clock, but opposing counsel met in Judge Thomas' chambers at that time and conferred until nearly 3 o'clock in an effort to agree as to a temporary order which would eliminate the necessity of a hearing until Saturday morning, when Judge Bell will either dissolve or make permanent the restraining order secured by Simmons. No agreement could be reached, so Judge Thomas convened court and called the case.

KLAN DISBANDS, TO GIVE UP CHARTER

Lafayette, La., April 4.—The Lafayette Ku Klux Klan has disbanded and will give up its charter, it was officially announced in a published statement appearing in a local newspaper today, signed by the secretary of the organization and other members.

The decision to disband the local klan was reached at a meeting of members of the organization today, following numerous conferences between klan leaders and prominent men opposed to the organization.

A list purporting to contain the names of the charter members of the Lafayette klan was circulated here recently which brought about strained relations between the klan and anti-klan element, the immediate result of which was to threaten the social and commercial life of the city.

The bitterness between the two elements was increased when the captain of the Lafayette military company was attacked following a court-martial he had instituted against certain guardsmen who are said to have resisted his authority because of his alleged membership in the klan.

These incidents and other evidences of ill feeling are said to have brought leading men together in an effort to restore harmony.

The resignation of members of the klan and the intention to surrender its charter were made known in today's published statement.

MOTHER KLAN IN ATLANTA PLEDGES AID TO SIMMONS

Governing Council Also Reported to Be Behind Emperor

EVANS EXPECTED TO STAGE FIGHT

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 5.—The invisible empire under the present administration of the Ku Klux Klan became a government [illegible] declared Emperor William J. Simmons, founder of the organization, in a statement issued tonight. He said he intended to see to it that "the moneys coming into the treasury of the organization shall no longer be diverted to the purpose of blackmail-ink klansmen."

About the same time as the emperor was making this statement, 3000 to 5000 klansmen assembled in the lodge rooms of the Nathan Bedford Forest Klan No. 1, the first klan to be organized, proclaimed him imperial wizard of the order.

Council Backs Emperor.

At the same time that the influential mother klan swore allegiance to Simmons, it was announced that the kloncilium, inner governing council of the order, had also swung into the emperor's forces.

It became known through the announcement of the mother klan that a convention had been secretly held here Monday night, attended by the majority of the members of the kloncilium, and had voted support of Simmons.

This, it appears, was done while Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans was engaged in a conference in New York where plans were being laid to defeat the revolution from within and it is believed to be certain that Evans will bitterly fight all efforts to put the action of the incomplete kloncilium membership on official record.

Attorney J. V. Poole representing Simmons de[illegible] was present at the session and that the action ta[illegible] was legal.

Great Demonstration.

Simmons did not attend the meeting held tonight by the mother klan, but at first mention of his name a huge demonstration was staged. It was several minutes before order could be restored.

A brief proclamation was issued after the meeting, saying "We intend to stand by our emperor and imperial wizard, Colonel William J. Simmons, in his taking charge and administering of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and we pledge to him our loyal, unqualified and individual support."

In his statement the emperor said "It has been alleged that I have asserted my rights to govern the organization because of a lust for power or a lust for money or for both. There is nothing in the entire history of my connection with the order to justify such charges."

"It has been my distinction to remain much of the time in obscurity and all of the time in poverty, while others became conspicuous and rich," he added.

Rival Factions Present Claims in Court

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 5.—Taking of evidence in the hearing on the court order requiring Emperor Wm. J. Simmons, of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to show cause why the injunction brought by him and his faction last Monday against H. W. Evans, imperial wizard and others, should not be dismissed, was concluded in the superior court late today. Judge E. W. Thomas adjourned court until tomorrow afternoon, when arguments will be made.

Affidavits intended to prove that Imperial Wizard Evans has been in actual possession of the imperial palace, headquarters of the klan here, as well as all records, and other property of the order pertaining thereto, were presented by Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel for the klan who contended that the Simmons' faction had obtained the court order "fraudulently" by representing that Emperor Simmons was in control of the klan.

Affidavits Made.

The affidavits were made by Imperial Wizard Evans, J. A. Comer, member of the kloncilium, Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel; Tom Akers, secretary to F. L. Savage, chief of staff; T. J. McKinnon, investigator for the klan, and N. M. Furney, cashier.

Counsel for Emperor Simmons filed objections to all evidence introduced tending to indicate that Mr. Evans had been regularly elected as head of the order at the klonvocation held last November, contending, that as emperor, Colonel Simmons, remained the directing head of the Ku Klux Klan, which he founded. Copies of the old constitution and by laws as well as the new constitution adopted since the klonvocation also were introduced in evidence.

At the conclusion of the submission of evidence Mr. Etheridge offered to submit the case without argument, but Judge Thomas informed the lawyers he desired to hear the arguments and set the time for tomorrow afternoon.

Misappropriation Charged.

J. V. Poole, associate counsel for Emperor Simmons, introduced an amendment to the original petition, charging H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, Fred Savage, chief of staff, with appropriating funds of the klan to their own use. It charged that last month Mr. Savage received $68,000 of klan funds, which he deposited in his own name in a local bank, subject to his own check and for whatever purpose he desired. It also was charged that Dr. Evans as imperial wizard, received for his personal account $3 from the money paid in by each new member.

T. J. McKinnon, investigator and N. M. Furney, cashier, charged with embezzlement of klan funds, were released on bond of $1000 each today. Their cases were set for hearing Saturday morning.

Klan Chaplain Attacks Evans; Clears Clarke

Houston Post

Dr. Ridley's Sick Bed Sermon Goes Into Details of Fight

ATLANTA, Ga., April 8.—In a statement dictated from his sick bed and read to his congregation in the Central Baptist church here tonight by J. O. Wood, Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd (national chaplain) of the Ku Klux Klan, denied that E. Y. Clarke or Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow were in any way responsible for the movement to restore W. J. Simmons to the office of imperial wizard of the klan.

Dr. Ridley's statement was made in answer to one issued yesterday by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, who charged that Clarke and Mrs. Grow were responsible for the attempt of Simmons to displace Dr. Evans, and which attempt, through the courts, yesterday resulted in an order by Judge E. D. Thomas placing Simmons, Evans and J. M. George, municipal court marshal, in charge of the organization as a governing tribunal until further settlement could be made.

Dr. Ridley, associating his close friendship with Mrs. Grow and Clarke, who both were connected with the propagation department of the klan, declared they neither "nearly nor remotely" were implicated in the recent upheaval of the klan's affairs. He attacked the personal and professional record of Dr. Evans and declared that after the election of Evans to be imperial wizard he went to Mrs. Grow, embraced her and baptized her with his tears of gratitude for contributing to his advancement and elevation in life.

Reciting the part Clarke played in asking the klonvocation to confer the imperial wizardship on Dr. Evans, refusing it himself, Dr. Ridley concluded by settng forth that "there is no darker page of perfidity in the record of human relations than the conspiracy of H. W. Evans to crush E. Y. Clarke and to drive him out of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and make him an exile and a wanderer on the face of the earth."

"The statement of H. W. Evans," Dr. Ridley set forth, "is a gratuitous fling at Clarke and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, and is deliberate and malicious falsehood given to the public for the purpose of diverting the thought of the nation from the real issue. He evidently hopes to sustain himself in an untenable position by putting E. Y. Clarke in the attitude of traitor and of seeking to destroy what he could not control. By bringing the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow into the controversy he has made an assault upon a woman who is my friend, and whom I know to be absolutely free of any counsel, suggestion or intimidation concerning this fight for control and supremacy of the klan. * * *

This phrase of his means his undertakings to gain his own ends by the alienation of friendships among men who have always trusted each other."

Two court actions in the klan's affairs are now pending. One is a hearing to make permanent the Simmons injunction to displace Dr. Evans, and the other is the request for receivership.

KLAN INJUNCTION HEARING DATE SET

Houston Post

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 15.—The injunction suit of William J. Simmons, emperor, against Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, and others, involving control of the Ku Klux Klan, has been put on the regular calendar in Fulton county superior court. It is said that the case will not be reached before two weeks, at the earliest.

Meanwhile the affairs of the klan are being conducted as they were prior to April 2, when Emperor Simmons filed injunction proceedings, except that a committee consisting of Imperial Wizard Evans, Emperor Simmons and J. M. George, marshal of the municipal court, are in control under orders of the court. The committee is said to meet each day at the imperial palace, the general headquaretrs of the klan.

Dr. Evans and the officials under him are occupying their offices at the general headquarters.

N. Y. WOMAN AND MAN WHIPPED BY KLAN

New York Amsterdam News

MACON, Ga., April 4.—Mrs. Fredericka Pace of New York and Lynwood L. Bright were horsewhipped by kidnappers, believed by the police to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, on a country road, near here, late tonight. They were picked up by Sheriff's Deputies who were scouring the roads and taken to Police Headquarters at midnight.

The kidnapping occurred in front of the Tabernacle Baptist Church.

READY TO FIGHT FLOGGERS TO DEATH, SAYS MACON POLICEMAN

The Montgomery Advertiser

Lieutenant Griffin Receives Threatening Letter and Defies "Writer or His Gang to Face Him"; Man Whipped in Pitiable Condition From Tuberculosis; Two Make Hasty Retreat

8-15-23

MACON, GA., Aug. 14.—Receipt of a threatening letter by G. R. Griffin, lieutenant of police, marks the latest development here in connection with the recent whipping of four white men by a gang of unmasked men. No arrests have yet been made. Lieutenant Griffin's reply to the letter was that he defied "the writer or his gang to face me."

Lieutenant Griffin said: 'I should gladly give up my life in doing my duty if it is necessary in rounding up this gang."

R. E. Bobo and Gus Roberts, two of the men who were whipped and ordered to leave town, have already complied with the command. Bobo left the city Sunday and Roberts yesterday.

In Serious Condition

Ollie M. Perry, a third member of the quartet flogged and summarily ordered to leave the city within 36 hours, is still in a serious condition at his home, as a result of the whipping. According to his physician, he is suffering with tuberculosis. He is now helpless in bed and it will be a week, his doctors state, before he can be carried to a tubercular camp in North Carolina, where he was preparing to go for his health at the time he was flogged.

Perry yesterday gave the first details of the attack last Thursday night.

"I did not know the member of the gang," he said. "They drove up to my place of business in automobiles. One of them thrust a pistol into my face, another pushed a pistol into Gus Roberts' face, and a third man struck a customer over the head with a bottle, felling him to the floor, where I understand he was left unconscious."

Beaten Most to Death

Perry said he and Roberts were handcuffed, blindfolded, pushed into automobiles and carried to the outskirts of the city, where they were beaten "most to death."

"I asked them why they were beating me and I got the reply: 'We're cleaning up.' They gave both of us 36 hours in which to leave Macon or they said they would return and kill us. Roberts was in better shape and he has gone. He left the city, but I do not know where he went.

"I was just fixing to leave for the mountains of North Carolina. Doctors had told me I would have to go, or die."

Doctors who took newspaper men to Perry's home removed bandages from his back to reveal the raw wounds left by the lash of the floggers.

Machine Gunner on Duty

A machine gunner at the Georgia Training School for Boys at Milledgeville, which was visited by a mob several nights ago in an attempt to whip two negro employees, was still on duty today, although no further trouble had been reported and the situation appeared quiet.

Macon Floggings Cease Since Arrests

Atlanta Ga.

MACON, Ga., August 23.—No floggings have been reported here since the arrest of the three Hudson brothers Sunday night. County officials believe that the capture of these three men has dampened the spirit of zealous floggers in this section.

8-24-23

County and city officials resumed their search this morning for the second negro alleged to have been whipped by the Hudson brothers Sunday night. They believe that the same mysterious fear which has seized other victims is also holding back the identity of this one. Motorcycle policemen continue to patrol the county at night.

Sheriff's Officers Take Men When in Act of Beating Two Negroes.

[By The Associated Press.]

Macon, Ga., Aug. 20.—City and county officials to-day plan to commence a roundup of all automobiles not carrying state license tags in an effort to get at the bottom of the facts surrounding a series of floggings which have taken place here in recent weeks. In nearly all cases where kidnapers have borne away their victims in motor cars their automobiles have carried no tags.

Chicago Ill.

Sheriff's forces last night captured three alleged kidnapers and floggers while in the act of flogging two negroes The capture of the three men, who gave their names as S. R. Hudson, C. F. Hudson and J. C. Hudson, brothers and all residents of East Macon, are the first arrests to be made in connection with the recent "flogging wave."

Arrests for Perjury Forecast.

[By The Associated Press.]

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 20.—Arrests for perjury in connection with information given before a military investigating committee seeking perpetrators of floggings which have occurred near Tulsa during the last fifteen months were expected to-day as Tulsa entered its seventh day of martial law.

Simultaneously with Adjt.-Gen. Markham's forecast of perjury arrests he announced that whippings being investigated numbered between fifteen and twenty.

Daring of Negro Leads to Capture of 3 Ku Klux

The Atlanta Constitution

Macon, Ga., Aug. 25.—The first gang of alleged kidnappers and floggers which have been terrorizing Macon for six months was captured by Sheriff's officers. Three white men, brothers, were taken to jail after they had been captured, while in the act of flogging two Negroes.

The capture of the trio is said to be due to the daring work of a Negro Emory Roberts, whom the gang tried to pull from an automobile for the purpose of whipping. Another Negro was whipped by the same gang a few minutes before, it was stated.

Adjutant Gen. Cox was ordered to Macon by the Governor after police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers, and J. B. Hartley, a World War veteran, reported to the police he had been flogged by a gang of men. The Hartley flogging was the last of about a score of whippings reported to the police in the last ten days.

LOCAL KLAN ASKS COURT TO PREVENT OUSTING OF BODY

Atlanta Constitution

Requesting that the imperial officers of nights of Ku Klux Klan be restrained from ousting Klan No. 1, the original body of the order, for alleged refusal to pay its dues, a petition was filed in Fulton superior court Friday, by the Atlanta post. Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, Grand Dragon Nathan Bedford Forrest, and Great Titan B. H. Sullivan were specifically named in the petition.

This action followed adoption of resolutions Thursday night by members of the Atlanta post severing relations with the national order under the present regime.

The old controversy over the illegal election of officers was reopened in the petition. The post claimed that Evans was elected by especially selected delegates, whereas the charter of the klan asserts that officers must be elected by delegates named at state conventions.

The post offered the klan a certified check for $5,000, it was stated, to cover any indebtedness due the imperial palace, but the check was rejected by the officials named in the petition. The post also claims that the imperial palace is indebted to it to the extent of $7,042, of which $500 is an over payment in December, 1922, of per capita tax levied by the klan on the posts. More than $6,000 is due the post by the klan through an agreement to give the posts a bonus on new members signed by the post, it is claimed.

SIMMONS OFFERS-CLARKE SUPREME POST OF KU KLUX

The Houston Post

Must Assume Control Of Kamelia Also, Says Emperor

8-19-23

Houston, Tex.

ATLANTA, Ga., August 18.—William J. Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, today telegraphed Edward Young Clarke, at Indianapolis, an offer of "full and complete executive authority over all matters pertaining to the klan and Kamelia" if Clarke would return to Atlanta and assume control of the two organizations, according to a story printed in the Atlanta Journal today. The story said Emperor Simmons offered Mr. Clarke the title of sir knight supreme of the order of Knights of Kamelia.

Mr. Simmons issued a statement, the Journal says, in which he declared that "the development and progress of the Ku Klux Klan is stopped and disintegration is setting in throughout the entire bounds of the invisible empire, due to the lack of leadership and want of constructive programs of activity."

He declared further, the story relates, that "men of largest influence have either become indifferent or have withdrawn from the order."

KLAN IS BLAMED FOR LAWLESSNESS

The Constitution

8-30-23

Macon, Ga., August 29.—Charles H. Hall, an attorney, today charged before a local civic club that "lawlessness in Macon is an organized effort of the Ku Klux Klan and that a local dentist is the whipping boss of the organization," according to a story published tonight in early editions of The Macon Telegraph.

Hall, according to The Telegraph, mentioned no names but he presented resolutions, which were adopted, calling upon "the officers of the city and county to put an end to such depredation."

Atlanta Ga.

"If rumors of a prominent dentist's connection with flogging activities are true, law enforcement officers should take immediate action," Mr. Hall is quoted as saying.

Reign of Terror.

A reign of terror existed here a fortnight ago when organized flogging parties, according to the police, kidnaped a score or more of men, carried them into nearby woods and severely flogged them. Three brothers are now being held in jail in connection with flogging cases after, the police charge, they were caught whipping a negro, and also identified as being members of a party that flogged Ollie M. Perry.

The arrest of the trio and Governor Walker's threats of placing Macon under martial law resulted in placing a check on the floggers' activities.

While Mr. Hall was addressing one civic club, George S. Jones appeared before another civic body which, like the first, is composed of the most prominent business and professional men in Macon. Mr. Jones called upon the chief of police to resign, and urged that the police department be reorganized at once.

Klan Denies Knowledge.

The Ku Klux Klan, however, according to the newspaper, denies any knowledge of the whippings as an organization, and in conference here a few days ago with Sheriff Hicks a reward of $1,500 was offered by the Ku Klux Klan for capture and conviction of the floggers.

The three brothers who are in jail will be placed on trial on September 10.

Much activity was displayed by city and county authorities tonight when they received information that there would be more whippings, according to them.

Mrs. Ollie M. Parry tonight notified the police that she had received two anonymous messages informing her that her husband would again be taken out and whipped. Parry has not recovered from the last whipping and doctors say that he is in a dying condition from tuberculosis and the whipping. The police are guarding his home.

RAID MEETING OF KLANSMEN

The Daily News.

Deputy Sheriffs Visit Loop Meeting and Serve Injunction.

On petition of the Ku-Klux klan headquarters of Atlanta deputy sheriffs last night raided a meeting of klansmen at 19 West Adams street and served an injunction prohibiting further sessions until the quarrel between the Simmons faction and national headquarters of the society is settled. Copies of the restraining order were served on William J. Simmons, founder of the klan; Franklin C. Browne, James C. Stockwell and Millard Roberts.

Imperial Wizard Evans, who succeeded Simmons as head of the organization, set forth in his petition that the defendants had been suspended from the klan and had been active in a secessionist movement in behalf of the Knights of the Kamelia, a similar society.

From klan sources last night also came the announcement that the organization had completed the purchase of Valparaiso university at Valparaiso, Ind., for "more than $500,000." In the future the school will be known as the National university.

MILLER TO PRESS FLOGGING CASES

Macon, Ga., August 23.—Wallace Miller, formerly assistant United States district attorney, was today designated by Judge H. A. Matthews as special solicitor general to handle the flogging cases in Bibb county until the return of Solicitor General Charles H. Garrett, who is on a vacation.

Shortly after 6 o'clock tonight the sheriff obtained three warrants against S. R. Hudson, J. C. Hudson and C. F. Hudson, charging each of them with rioting, assault and battery and with being drunk on a public highway.

Mr. Miller suggested to the sheriff that the warrants be returnable to the city court of Macon, which means that the cases may come up on Saturday morning before Judge Will Gunn.

W. A. McClellan and Judge John P. Ross, lawyers for the Hudsons, will apply for bond for the prisoners tomorrow morning. They have been in conference with the prisoners during the day.

Ollie M. Pery, whipped two weeks ago, was carried before the three Hudsons last night, it developed today, to ascertain if he could identify the Hudsons as members of the gang that whipped him. The sheriff's office said that he failed to identify them. Perry was unable to leave his bed today.

WALKER DECLARES WAR ON FLOGGING

Offers Heavy Rewards for Men Implicated in State Reformatory and Macon Affairs.

The "full power of the executive department will be used" to stop the "series of floggings in Bibb county and other mob outrages in the state," Governor Walker stated last night in announcing rewards for the arrest, with evidence to convict, of persons connected with the recent whippings in Macon and an invasion of the state reformatory at Milledgeville.

The governor offered a reward of $500 for the leader of the Macon flogging party and $100 for each member. He offered similar rewards for the leader and members of the mob that invaded the state reformatory.

"I am going to the limit of my authority to put a stop to these whippings in Bibb county," the governor stated. "The mob outrages in other parts of the state also must come to an end. The law of the state will be upheld."

The governor's action came after he had investigated both the Bibb county floggings and the occurrence at Milledgeville. In his proclamation offering the rewards, the governor charged the Baldwin county mob with committing the offense of rioting and later assaulting Jim Douglas, negro janitor at the state reformatory.

The Bibb county floggings began several months ago, when whippings were administered Dr. Eugene Schrieber, formerly of Boston; Dr. R. N. Mills, Lynwood L. Bright and others. Mrs. Fredericks Pace, of New York, was taken captive by the party when Bright was whipped, but the woman was not flogged.

Thursday night, four men were flogged and left in the woods near Macon, according to reports given police. R. F. Bobo, proprietor of a small grocery store; Ollie M. Perry, under indictment for alleged illicit liquor traffic; Gus Roberts, a reported friend of Perry, and J. B. Goodyear, were the men said to have been whipped.

No arrests have been made in any of the cases.

FORMER GUARD ARRESTED; MACHINE GUN IS READY.

Milledgeville, Ga., August 11.—The first arrest in connection with whippings in middle Georgia took place here at 5 o'clock this afternoon, when J. J. Nolan, former guard at the Training School for Boys, was taken into custody, on a charge of inciting to riot.

The arrest was made by Sheriff S. L. Terry. Preliminary hearing will take place next Saturday.

Mrs. Orion Manson, superintendent of the Boys' Training school, announced tonight upon her return here that a machine gun with an experienced operator had been set up at the school for the purpose of protecting the inmates and the people employed there. She also said that other means had been taken to protect the institution from any possible attack.

Nolan is accused of being the moving spirit in a visit to the reformatory of a band of 25 or 30 men who sought to seize Tom and Mary Thomas, negro attendants, for the purpose of flogging them. Nolan is said to have had a grudge against the negroes because of his dismissal from the institution where he had been a guard for 15 years.

The band failed to get the negroes because of armed resistance.

Earlier the same night the mob seized Jim Douglas, brother of Thomas, and administered a severe lashing, because he would not tell

EVANS, SIX KLAN LEADERS CITED IN CONTEMPT

Failure to Answer Receivership Suit Brings Request for Bench Warrants.

Bench warrants were asked of Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton Superior Court Monday for the arrest of H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku-Klux Klan, and six members of his official staff at the imperial palace upon their failure to appear upon citation as respondents in the suit of David Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and other klansmen for a receivership for the organization. Judge Humphries adjudged the seven officers of the klan to be in contempt of court, and the motion for warrants followed.

The seven members of the official group were made the objects of the receivership suit, which charged mismanagement and gross squandering of klan funds, and which was returnable July 10. At that time continuance was granted until August 13, upon which date the seven officers were ordered to appear in court with books and records of the organization.

When the case was called on schedule Monday, and the seven respondents did not appear in accordance with the agreement said to have been exacted of them and their attorney, Paul Etheridge, July 10, Attorneys W. S. Coburn and Colquitt & Conyers asked that they be cited for contempt and that bench warrants for their arrest be issued.

The six klan officers cited besides Evans are N. M. Furney, H. K. Ramsey, A. C. Montgomery, Tom Akers, Don Harwood and T. J. McKinnon.

If Judge Humphries issues bench warrants for arrest of the seven klansmen who failed to appear Monday, the order is expected also to include seizure of records of the imperial palace.

"The court will recall," said W. S. Coburn, of counsel for the plaintiffs, "that when continuance of this case was granted, agreement was made that no questions would be raised by the respondents when the case was called on the date agreed upon. However, the imperial wizard and his officers come now with an eleventh-hour move, which is in violation of the agreement."

Instead of Paul Etheridge, who appeared as counsel for the klansmen July 10, there appeared Monday his associate, Augustin Sams, who announced that appeal had been taken.

W. T. Colquitt, of the firm of Colquitt & Conyers, took the witness stand to testify to circumstances of the alleged agreement by Mr. Etheridge and his clients july 10 to have records and witnesses in court August 13. Following this, the citation for contempt was made by Judge Humphries.

MACON FLOGGERS FOILED BY NEGRO; THREE CAPTURED

Victim Resists; Battle Brings Help.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 19.—Three alleged floggers were captured here early tonight, according to a report received at the sheriff's office.

The prisoners are brothers. S. R. Hudson gave his age as 35 years, C. F. as 27, and J. C. as 24. The county jailer was instructed not to accept bond for the men in the event any be offered during the night, pending a decision as to the other charges to be placed against the men.

The capture of the trio is said to be due to the daring work of a Negro, Emory Roberts, whom the gang tried to pull from an automobile for the purpose of whipping.

Another Negro was whipped by the same gang a few minutes before, it was stated.

Anti-Flogging Squad Responds.

When one of the men jumped onto the running board of the Negro's automobile and commanded him to stop, the Negro stepped on the gas and left the two brothers at the roadside. The white man in the car whistled for his brothers to join him, but before they could do so the big automobile was plunged into an embankment.

Persons passing the scene in other cars phoned the sheriff's office and immediately twenty men were rushing to the scene. The whole city and county anti-flogging squad was on the way. Three miles out the sheriff's force claims to have come upon the members of the gang, struggling with the Negro. Farther back on the same road was an untagged seven passenger automobile.

In the tonneau the sheriff's deputies found three leather masks and one cloth mask. Another mask was said to have been worn by one of the Hudsons as he jumped on to the running board of the Negro's machine. He still wore the mask, the officers said, when they reached the scene. There also was a small sledge hammer.

Brothers Trouble Makers.

The sheriff's force reported that the Hudsons had given them considerable trouble in recent years. It was the officers' opinion that the Hudsons were not attached to any organized flogging band, but were operating on their own hook.

During the days of old Camp Wheeler, according to the sheriff's office, the Hudsons figured in numerous difficulties. Some of them were taxicab drivers, it was stated, and one of them killed another taxicab driver, the sheriff said.

Because of the record of the Hudsons, it was learned at the sheriff's office an hour after the arrests, an investigation is being made to determine if they are paid gangsters.

Adjt. Gen .Charles H. Cox, after a confernce with local police authorities, the sheriff, and Gen. H. D. Russell, commander of the Georgia National Guard, left for Atlanta this evening before the arrests, with the intention of recommending to Gov. Walker that there be no martial law in Macon at this time, growing out of flogging conditions.

Ku Klux Klan—1923 Georgia.

Statement Is Read From Pulpit of Central Baptist Church at Sunday Night Service.

Atlanta Constitution

Charges by Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Saturday, that Edward Young Clarke, former acting imperial wizard, and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, formerly connected with the propagation department, were responsible for the movement to restore Colonel W. J. Simmons, imperial emperor, to control of the order, were warmly denied Sunday night by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd (national chaplain) of the klan, who from his sickbed dictated a statement, which was read at the Central Baptist church night service by J. O. Wood, editor of The Searchlight. 4-9-23

The statement was in reply to one given out by Dr. Evans, following order of the court which placed affairs of the organization in charge of a commission of three, composed of Evans, Simmons and Marshall J. M. George, of the municipal court.

In it Dr. Evans defended his administration, denied Simmons' charges of wanton waste of money, and asserted that Clarke and Mrs. Grow had planned a revolution in the organization in an effort to regain control of the propagation department and the income the office brings.

Ridley Scores Evans.

Dr. Ridley, in his statement, attacked the personal and professional record of Dr. Evans and declared that after his election as imperial wizard, Evans went to Mrs. Grow, embraced her, and "baptized her with his tears of gratitude for contribution to his advancement and elevation in life."

Asserting his warm friendship for Clarke and Mrs. Grow, the minister asserted that they had been in no way connected with the fight against Evans for control of klan affairs.

He said that Evans owed Clarke an immense debt of gratitude for his part in the election of the imperial wizard, adding "there is no darker page of perfidy in the record of human relations than the conspiracy of H. W. Evans to crush E. Y. Clarke and to drive him out of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and make him an exile and a wanderer on the face of the earth."

Dr. Ridley's Statement.

Dr. Ridley's statement follows:

"From a sick bed I am dictating a denial and a repudiation of the statement of H. W. Evans that E. Y. Clarke, or Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, are in any way, either nearly or remotely, connected with the movement to put W. J. Simmons in absolute control of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan; as he has a right to be, in fact and in law.

"The statement of H. W. Evans is a gratuitous fling at E. Y. Clarke and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow and is a deliberate, and malicious falsehood given to the public for the purpose of diverting the thought of the nation from the real issue. He evidently hopes to sustain himself in an untenable position by putting E. Y. Clarke in the attitude of traitor and of seeking to destroy what he could not control.

"By bringing the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow into the controversy he made an assault upon a woman who is my friend and whom I know to be absolutely free of any counsel, suggestion, or intimation concerning this fight for control and supremacy of the Ku Klux Klan. In fact Mrs. Grow is so broken in health that she has practically taken leave of the world and all of its concerns and on Tuesday next will go into a hospital for a capital operation from which there is small hope of her ever emerging. It is my certain knowledge that Mrs. Grow has not been approached from the outside and that she has not communicated with the outside for days together except through her nurse and by and with the consent of her physician.

Identified With Clarke.

"From the beginning of this organization and through its rise and expansion into a nation power I have been intimately and actively identified with E. Y. Clarke. The time came when through the machinations of men who feared his power or were jealous of the exercise of that power, he has broken in health, dispossessed of the position that he had earned in this organization and driven away from the association, the fellowship, and the confidence of his friends. From the day that he became the hunted of his despoilers down to the present hour he has not been in communication with any men connected with this movement to restore the government of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to William J. Simmons.

"When Prometheus was chained to the Tarpeon rocks and the thunderbolts were breaking about his defenseless head, it was a carrion crow that pecked at his eyes and clawed at his vitals.

"Who is this man who by intrigue and blackmail has elevated himself to the position where he claims to be the supreme head of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan? H. W. Evans is a man who grew to the meridian of life without having recorded a single success. In his profession he was unethical.

Record in Texas.

"Up to the time he became identified with the Ku Klux Klan there was nothing in his entire career to merit either the distinction or the honor of leadership in a great movement. It is true that he was identified with the Masonic fraternity in the state of Texas and he introduced into Scottish Rite Masonry what may be termed 'fraternal politics' and by his practices split and disrupted that organization in Texas.

"His political methods in the Masonic fraternity were the same as the methods which have characterized him in the Ku Klux Klan. It was a disposition of what he always terms 'poison meat.' This phrase of his means that he undertakes to exploit further and to gain his own ends by the alienation of friendships among men who have always trusted each other.

"When through an abortive attempt to put himself in control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan he was proclaimed imperial wizard, his elevation from obscurity to such a dizzy eminence evidently for a brief period unsettled his reason. He hastily left the hall of the klonvocation and entered his automobile and drove with great haste to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow and there embraced her with his tears of gratitude for contribution to his advancement and elevation in life.

"And to what and in what way had Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow contributed to this man's sudden rise to such a conspicuous position and such power? Why, Mrs. Grow had supplied him with a considerable sum of money in the day of his poverty and obscurity with which to meet the demands and necessities of life. 'Ingratitude is sharper than a serpent's tooth.' Life is capable of startling dualities and transformations. But never in the history of mankind has there been a more striking example of the rapid alternations between Uriah Heep and Nero.

Turns Down Office.

"E. Y. Clarke was tendered by the imperial klonvocation the office of imperial wizard and there is not a man living who could have been designated to that office until it had first been offered to Clarke.

"In his big generosity—in his unbounded unselfishness—when he was unanimously proclaimed the choice of the convention he, without hesitation, returned the office to the klonvocation and said that in keeping with his promise to the klan and to the American people that he was retiring from all official connection with the organization. He stated that the klan had kept faith with him and that he had kept faith with the klan and that there were no considerations that would cause him to break a promise with the organization or to recede from the position he had taken with the American people. He went further and requested that the klonvocation which had undertaken to thrust upon him the leadership of the organization should confer that honor and distinction upon his trusted friend, H. W. Evans.

Feared Clarke's Power.

"From the time that Evans entered the office of imperial wizard down to the present time, he has feared E. Y. Clarke's power and hated his popularity with the organization and nothing has been left undone by him and his henchmen to break the genius and to discredit the ability of E. Y. Clarke.

"There is no darker page of perfidy in the record of human relations than the conspiracy of H. W. Evans to break E. Y. Clarke and to drive him out of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and make him an exile and a wanderer on the face of the earth.

"The final court of arbitriment is the bar of public opinion and when the case is stated and the evidence is submitted I know that E. Y. Clarke is going to be disclosed as white as the driven snow as compared with the men who have plotted his downfall and have for the time being branded him with disgrace.

"C. A. RIDLEY,
"Imperial Kludd, K. K. K. K.,
"National Chaplain."

Evans' Statement.

Following the order of the court Saturday, Dr. Evans gave out a statement in which he accused Edward Young Clarke, former acting imperial wizard, of responsibility for the fight now being waged to take control of the order out of the hands of the present administration. The imperial wizard also announced that steps were now being taken by the order preliminary to the formation of a woman's auxiliary.

"So far as I know, I have no personal enemies within the klan," Dr. Evans said. "The present opposition to my continuing as active head of the organization has developed because I canceled a contract for propagating the order throughout the country held by Edward Young Clarke, under the terms of which he received $3 for each new member.

Dr. Evans stated that Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, who was formerly connected with the propagation department, was also one of those "behind the so called revolution," and that both Clarke and Mrs. Grow were influenced by the desire to regain control of a big profit-making machine. He asserted that he held that these funds should be collected directly by the klan and used for its advancement and for this reason he had cancelled the contract.

Call for Convention.

In discussing the decision to call a convention of klansmen here to consider the formation of a woman's organization Dr. Evans declared he felt that the time had come when the women of the country should be formed into a body coporate similar to the men's organization, and that after conferring with a number of leaders of the organization, he decided to call the conference.

Declaring the allegation that he had wasted funds of the klan was entirely untrue and absurd, Dr. Evans said:

"The charge that the treasury has been looted under my administration is wholly without basis. The resources of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have increased 50 per cent during the four months that I have been in charge and never has the klan had as large a bank account as at the present moment. This money belongs to the klansmen of the nation and will be used in their behalf. Our records show that the organization has never shown such numerical development as in the four months I have been in charge, and today there are more men being naturalized into the invisible empire than ever before in its history.

"Every one in the executive offices, charged with the handling of funds, is under bond, and every man handling klan money in various parts of the country is similarly amply bonded. No money has been spent foolishly or recklessly while the affairs of the klan were in my control, and certainly not in pleasure jaunts, as has been so maliciously charged through the newspapers."

Purpose of Chicago Trip.

"Specific allusion has been made to the expenditure of klan money for a trip to Chicago. I went to Chicago

NO KLAN PROTEST AT HEARING ON BILL TO UNMASK THEM

EVENING WORLD
MARCH 22, 1923

ALBANY, March 22.—There was no protest from Ku Klux Klan officials before the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday on the Walker bill, aimed to tear the mask from the "Invisible Empire," but there was a sharp exchange of words when Jay W. Forrest of Albany, representing the Sons and Daughters of Washington, urged the measure because it would force the Knights of Columbus and other fraternal bodies to file statements of membership, oath, &c., with the Secretary of State.

Mr. Forrest mentioned only this one group, although the legislation would affect Masonic bodies, Elks, Moose, or, as Senator Salvatore A. Cotillo of New York pointed out, "all existing membership corporations, as well as unincorporated associations, for it would not stand a court test if we merely single out the Ku Klux Klan."

Mr. Forrest charged that more than $5,000,000 contributed to the Knights of Columbus for the "boys in France during the war" was being used by the order for other purposes.

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgibbons of Oswego, representing the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, shook his fist at Mr. Forrest and shouted:

"Are you a member of the Ku Klux Klan?"

Forrest replied: "I certainly am not."

"Of course not," Fitzgibbons flashed back, "you have an organization of your own and it's of the same type as the Ku Klux Klan."

Recognition by the chairman of John M. O'Hanlon of Troy, representing the New York State Federation of Labor, ended the verbal warfare. O'Hanlon urged the exemption of labor unions from the provisions of the bill, adding:

"It's time the State of New York put a crimp in the Ku Klux Klan. Organized labor wants to see the State of New York do it and do it quickly."

Herbert J. Seligman, representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the secrecy of the Klan was of the same type as that invoked by burglars, murderers, pickpockets and others engaged in nefarious business.

Numerous organizations like the City Club of New York, the Citizens' Union and Y. M. C. A. asked for exemption from the bill, but supported the principle. These amendments will be made. No other opposition was recorded.

EVANS POLICY IN KLAN FIGHT EXPLAINED

Atlanta Georgian 4-10-23

Question Is Whether Institutions or Individuals Are to Control, He Says.

Only one issue is involved in the present litigation in the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan organization and that is whether the klans of the country are to control their own institution or whether the institution is to be controlled by a few individuals among whom are the founders, according to Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, in a statement issued Monday.

Dr. Evans made this declaration following the publication of a statement made by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd or chaplain, in which Dr. Ridley defended Edward Young Clarke, Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow and Colonel William J. Simmons against charges made by Dr. Evans in a statement issued Saturday night.

The three members of the commission named by Judge E. D. Thomas, of the Fulton Superior Court, to conduct the affairs of the klan held their meeting at 10 o'clock, as agreed. Following the conference all employes of the klan at the imperial palace were called before the commission. Dr. Evans, speaking for the commission, told the employes that they should return to their desks and take up the same duties they were discharging prior to the first legal proceedings brought April 2, by Colonel Simmons and associates.

Dr. Evans told the employes that the klan affairs will be conducted on the same status as they were conducted prior to April 2, until a hearing is held on the original injunction proceedings brought by Colonel Simmons. The original injunction named Judge George L. Bell as the judge to preside at the hearing, but it is possible that when the case comes up it will be heard before Judge Thomas. Judge Bell stated he would not hear the case, as it would be taken over by Judge Thomas when it comes up on the regular court calendar.

This statement was made by Dr. Evans a few minutes before he joined Colonel Simmons and Marshal J. M. George, other two members of the commission appointed to take over klan affairs, in a conference held at the imperial palace at 10 o'clock. At this conference the funds of the klan were audited and were turned over to Marshal George. After the conference the commissioners planned a visit to all banks where klan funds are deposited to obtain a final audit.

ISSUE NOT PERSONAL.

Dr. Evans in his statement declined to discuss the charges made by Dr. Ridley in any manner except to state the position he has occupied in the dispute since its inception.

"To begin with I would like to say that I have been the friend and hope to continue to be the friend, of Edward Young Clarke, Mrs. Eliza beth Tyler Grow, Dr. Caleb A. Ridley and Colonel William Joseph Simmons," he said. "There is no personal issue in this dispute. The real question involved is whether the klans of the country are to control their institution or whether it is to be controled by a few individuals."

Dr. Evans declared that he has no bitterness of any kind in his heart over the matter, but said he is working in a spirit of "peace and charity and love to all" to enunciate a program which will be beneficial to the country and which will work no harm on any individual.

"The only thing I am insisting upon is that the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan is not a personally owned organization or a personally managed organization, but is an organization that belongs to the klans of the nation. My attitude from the start has been based on this position. It is not my intention or desire to work any harm on Colonel Simmons, Mr. Clarke, Mrs. Grow or Dr. Ridley. It is my intention to continue to work in the movement to see that control of the klan affairs is vested in the klans of the nation and not in individuals. There is no personal equation in the matter at all. It is simply a question of principle."

READ AT CHURCH.

The statement of Dr. Ridley was read before the congregation at the Central Baptist Church Sunday night by J. O. Wood, editor of The Searchlight, unofficial klan publication. The statement was read by Mr. Wood because of the inability of Dr. Ridley to appear because of illness.

In Dr. Ridley's statement he charged that Dr. Evans was elected imperial wizard of the klan largely because of the work in his behalf done by Mr. Clarke and Mrs. Grow, and that after his election he was profuse in his thanks to Mrs. Grow and Mr. Clarke for their aid. He charged that Dr. Evans had manifested ingratitude in his present fight and defended both Mr. Clarke and Mrs. Grow against charges made by Dr. Evans that they were behind the present movement to win control of the klan for Colonel W. J. Simmons and associates.

Klan to Survive Despite Battles, Says Dr. Ridley

Imperial Kludd Presented With Check by Three White-Robed Klansmen.

"For an emperor and wizard to fly at each, others throats, looks dangerous in the extreme, but is quite possible that both will live over it; and ceertain it is the klan will survive.'

The Atlanta Constitution 4/16/23

The above words were spoken last night by Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of Central Baptist church and Imperial Kludd or chaplain of the Ku Klux Klan, in making a statement to a large congregation relative to the sensational battle that is being waged in Fulton county courts between the founder, Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor and Dr. H. W. Evans, wizard, for control of the "Invisible Empire.'

"Wizards may come," contiued the speaker, following an outbreak of applause that lasted for several minutes, "and wizards may go, but the Ku Klux Klan goes on forever!"

Give Ridley Check.

A dramatic episode, occurring just previous to Dr. Ridley's statement, which added perceptibly to the interest of his sensational remarks, was the appearance of three klansmen, hooder and white-robed, who marched silently down the aisle of the large church.

Reaching the platform one of the klansmen handed Dr. Ridley an envelope, after which they seated themselves at the foot of the rostrum. Opening the big envelope Dr. Ridley read a letter from Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, which offered sympathy to the preacher over the recent loss of his home, by fire, and which stated that a check had been enclosed which would aid him in restoring some of the treasures that he had lost. The amount of the check was not stated. The three klansmen, after reading of the letter, marched silently from the church, and as they reached the doorway the audience burst into applause. Dr. Ridley was much affected by the dramatic incident, saying simply, "thank you," as the hooded figures left the audience.

Says Klan Will Survive.

The statement, which was read by Dr. Ridley, in which he declared that God must have intended for the Ku Klux Klan to survive, despite "a dozen assasinations, two or three attempts at suicide, a trip to the hospital, another to a convent, and a visit to congress," was heard with interest by the big congregation. "Real Americans," said he, "whether they be klansmen or not, desire that our principles shall never fail and our standards never hit the dust. All others long to see the day when the Ku Klux Klan is dead.

"If the Ku Klux Klan as a great national organization, by some strange fate, should be blotted out forever, klansmen would still remain and so long as klansmen rule, America is safe."

Statement by Ridley.

"The theory of sentimental sobbers on the one hand and aspirants for mongrel suffrage on the other, that America is to be the great melting pot purifier for the semi-heathen peoples of all of the world, is a lie; but the idea has so taken root in the soil of our national life that we are already paying a terrible price for the birth of such a theory.

"There are today in this country many conflicting theories as to just what 'government' means—what it is and what it is for—but all these divergent ideas may be classified in one of two classes: American or un-American. This fact is more and more coming to the front as men study statecraft in its biggest sense. The lines of demarkation are bing more clearly drawn every day. He who is not for us is against us, and we are learning how to locate him.

"These two contending forces in our body politic have very different hopes and emotions regarding the future of the Ku Klux Klan. On the one hand there is the fear that outside attacks or internal dissensions, or both, may in some way destroy this great fraternity. On the other hand there is a painful fear that these things will not destroy us. Real Americans, whether they be klansmen or not, desire that our principles shall never fail and our standards never hit the dust. All others long to see the day when the Ku Klux Klan is dead.

Intends It to Live.

"But surely God intends for it to live, else He would have permitted it to pass out long ago. It has had such wonderful opportunities to die! It has been assassinated at least a dozen times and two or three times has attempted suicide; and yet it still lives. It has been in the hospital, the convent, and at last in congress; and yet it still lives. It has had goblins and dragons and hydras and wizards and yet it still lives. Wizards may come and wizards may go, but the Ku Klux Klan goes on forever.

"If the Ku Klux Klan, as a great national organization, by some strange stroke of fate should be blotted out forever, klansmen would still remain and so long as klansmen rule, America is safe.

"Of course, all internal troubles are more or less serious. It is not so difficult to operate on a stone-bruise as to operate for cramp-colic, but neither need necessarily prove fatal. For an emperor and a wizard to fly at each others throats, looks dangerous in the extreme, but it is quite possible both will live over it, and certain it is the klan will survive. Let us hold our heads, hold on to God and watch the clouds drift away to the music of their own silence."

Letter Sent Ridley

The letter received by Dr. Ridley, expressing sympathy over the loss of his home and its effects, and enclosing a check to aid him in securing another home is published below:

Nathan B. Forrest,
Klan No. 1 Realm of Georgia,
Atlanta, Ga., April 14, 1923.
Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, Pastor,
Central Baptist Church,
Atlanta, Ga.

GREETINGS:

It is with fond recollections that we, the Klansmen of Nathan Bedford Forrest Kno-1-Ga., recall the many noble deeds and the many acts of thoughtful kindness in times of stress and sorrow, that you, our beloved friend and fellow Klansman have rendered to us.

We learn with sincere regret of the recent loss of your home and its effects, and we take this means of tendering to you a slight token that will in some manner convey to you a KLANSMAN, our love, our sympathy and our desire to express the same in some substantial manner.

Therefore, we are handing you herewith, a check that we hope will aid you in restoring some of your lost treasures, with the prayers of Nathan Bedford Forrest Kno-1-Ga., that your years of service to our God, Our Country and Klansmen, may be extended into many spans.

Nathan Bedford Forrest Kno-1-Ga.
By Order of the Exalted Cyclops, by Kligrapp.

KLAN CLASH QUIET AWAITING HEARING

Simmons and Evans Motor Together on Business—Both Claim Support From Other States.

Atlanta Constitution 4-10-23

While the principals in the litigation between Colonel William Joseph Simmons and Dr. H. W. Evans for the office of imperial wizard Monday awaited announcement of the date of the superior court hearing on the injunction proceedings brought against Evans by Simmons, serenity marked local activities in Ku Klux Klan circles.

Colonel Simmons and Dr. Evans, although engaged in a finish fight in the courts for the klan leadership, rode about the city during the afternoon in the same automobile. They visited various banks which are depositories of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Marshal J. M. George, of the municipal court, third member of the commission appointed to manage klan affairs pending the outcome of the court fight, sat between the two.

The calls at the banks were merely to verify the financial status of the organization, it was stated, and to give the banks formal notice that no klan funds are to be withdrawn unless sanctioned by all three men.

Thomas to Hear Plea.

The hearing on the injunction petition probably will be heard before Judge Thomas, who issued the temporary injunction, it was stated at the courthouse, and probably will begin early next week.

Texas klansmen are "solidly behind" Dr. Evans, according to H. C. McCall, of Houston, grand dragon for the state of Texas, and as such, head of the klan in the Lone Star state. He is in Atlanta to support Dr. Evans.

"Texas has 140,000 klansmen," he said, "and all the 275 klans in this state are solidly behind Dr. Evans and will vigorously contest any attempt to usurp his authority.

"The biggest realm of the invisible empire recognizes the fact that Dr. Evans was duly and legally elected imperial wizard at the November klonvocation. Texas delegates were there and voted for him and they are determined that their properly expressed opinion shall not be set aside.

"Our state opinion was expressed at a meeting of Texas klansmen held in Dallas last week to the effect that Texas klansmen were proud of Dr. Evans in his determination to safeguard the order from personal exploitation and Texans would have been ashame of Dr. Evans had he chosen any other course of action."

Evans Claims Oregon.

Headquarters of Dr. Evans announced receipt of a telegram from Portland, Ore., that the klans of the realm of Oregon are solidly supporting him. He also announced that a telegram from the grand dragon of Arkansas stated that the klans of that state held special meetings Friday and a state meeting of Arkansas klans had been held in Little Rock and that Arkansas "gave its full support to Imperial Wizard Dr. H. W. Evans and commended his administration of klan affairs."

Indiana klan headquarters, it was announced, wired Dr. Evans that the klans of that state "unqualifiedly indorsed him and were with him to the limit." Indiana, the announcement said, is one of the largest of the klan states.

Similar messages were declared to have been received by Dr. Evans from the heads of the klans in the states of New York, Illinois and Ohio.

Simmons Claims Support.

Meanwhile the Simmons camp claims to be receiving telegrams hourly from klans throughout the nation pledging their support to the emperor and founder. He is said to regard the indorsement of his action by the Nathan Bedford Forrest klan, No. 1, the local klan, as indicative of the position of other large klans whose members are acquainted with the situation.

Dr. Fred B. Johnson, of San Antonio, who was appointed by Simmons last week to serve as chief of staff, exhibited a number of telegrams, which were in contradiction of the statement issued by McCall. Dr. Johnson was informed by Simmons adherents in Texas that Evans claims of support in that state are exaggerated.

"I am not now and never have been the enemy of Mrs. Grow, Mr. Clarke, Colonel Simmons nor Dr. Ridley," he declared. "I never have had personal differences with any one of them and I am the friend of all, particularly Mr. Clarke, for whom I would do any favor I could.

"All the actions taken and statements given in connection with the litigation over klan affairs have been purely impersonal. They have to do with the question of who is in control of the klan as its officers and my efforts are all directed to bring harmony within the organization."

Dr. Evans declined to make any comment on Dr. Ridley's charges against him regarding his connection with Masonic affairs in Texas before he became a klan official.

Marietta Klan Parade Favors Leader Simmons

Atlanta Constitution 4-10-23

Float Declares "Klan Not Tottering, Just House Cleaning."

Marietta, Ga., April 9.—(Special.) Displaying floats which proclaimed to the world that "real klansmen follow Leader William Joseph Simmons," and that "the klan is not tottering, just house-cleaning," more than 500 klansmen, members of the local branch of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and a few visitors from Atlanta, held a parade through the principal streets here tonight.

What is said to be the largest throng ever assembled in Cobb county lined the streets, afoot and in automobiles, along the line of march of the parade.

The parade was led by a squad of local policemen, who were followed by a single klansman riding a white-robed horse. Following the horseman was an automobile in which were seated four klansmen. They were carrying an immense fiery cross, one of the main symbols of the order, and a large American flag.

Next came the large and well-trained drum and bugle corps of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, Realm of Georgia, from Atlanta.

Behind the drum and bugle corps was the long line of klansmen, marching single file and evenly spaced. They passed a given point at the rate of 25 per minute, and the entire line passed in 22 minutes.

Call Simmons "Leader."

Two large floats and three smaller ones were carried by the klansmen. The first float read: "REAL KLANSMEN FOLLOW LEADER COLONEL WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS." The next one read: "THE KLAN IS NOT TOTTERING, JUST HOUSE-CLEANING." Then followed three smaller floats seen in most klan parades throughout the country. These read: "We Are Here Today," "We Were Here Yesterday," and "We Will Be Here Tomorrow."

Very little comment was heard from those along the line of march, most of the people standing in silence as the klansmen passed.

After the parade the klansmen disappeared.

KLAN WAR ENDED WITH COMPROMISE

Atlanta Constitution 4-15-23

Hostilities over control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan ended Tuesday with the signing of an armistice between the opposing factions, under the terms of which the kloncilium, or supreme council of fifteen men, assumes full charge of the organization. Colonel William J. Simmons, emperor, and Dr H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, will retain their present offices.

Under the new arrangement Imperial Wizard Evans will be subject to the kloncilium in all the duties of his office, including the expenditure of funds, it was stated.

Authority to direct the organization will be vested by the kloncilium in an executive committee of five members, none of whom shall draw compensation from the klan. The entire kloncilium will meet quarterly, while the executive committee will hold more frequent sessions.

Kamelia Is Authorized.

Full right to proceed with the formation of the kamelia, an organization of women proposed by Colonel Simmons along the same lines as the klan, is conceded to Colonel Simmons, it was announced.

The controversy was brought to an end through the efforts of a commission of klansmen, aided, it was said, by independent counsel, Arthur G. Powell and Hollins N. Randolph, who are not members of the order.

On motion for counsel for both sides, Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, dissolved the commission of three which had been directing the affairs of the klan. This commission was composed of Emperor Simmons, Imperial Wizard Evans and J. M. George, marshal of the municipal court. The court's order dismissed all pending litigation involving control of the organization.

The contest originated over the Kamelia, the women's organization formed and founded by Colonel Simmons along the lines of the klan. According to Fred B. Johnson, who has been acting as chief of staff for Emperor Simmons, the agreement reached with Dr. Evans calls for the imperial wizard to remove his objections to the Kamelia.

Emperor Simmons, on his part, it was declared, agreed to cancel his court action for absolute control of the klan, and work in absolute harmony with Imperial Wizard Evans, and both will bend their efforts to establish friendly relations between the factions.

Declaration of Peace.

"We are gratified to say that the litigation pending within the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has been adjusted on an amicable basis acceptable to all parties. This adjustment has been brought about through the kindly offices of a commission of klansmen co-operating with the attorneys who have been directing the litigation.

"Naturally the terms of the adjustment cannot be made public, but will be communicated in due course to the membership of the klan. It can be said, however, that the charter and the constitution and by-laws as adopted by the klan vocation are made the basic and controlling instruments of government of the organization. William Joseph Simmons is recognized as emperor and H. W. Evans as imperial wizard.—Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

Simmons' Statement.

"The litigation over the control of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has been settled out of court by a board of arbitration. All matters entering into the controversy were carefully considered by the board and the findings of the board will be made a court decree by consent. It is not at this time proper to make a statement to the public concerning all the questions that were settled by the board, but it may be stated that this one thing of paramount importance was done: The original charter and the constitution and by-laws of the order were harmonized and the organization was reestablished upon the charter foundation.

"My supreme concern, however, was to have clearly defined and established my rights and the rights of all other klansmen to participate in the organization of Protestant, patriotic, white American women. Such rights were clearly established by the board of arbitration. Any klansman under the finding of that board, and the finding of which is now the law governing the conduct of klansmen in this particular matter, may in his personal and individual capacity, but not in his official capacity, found promote, aid and comfort any woman's organization with purposes and ideals similar to those of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. But a klansman of whatever station, rank or degree may not, under the finding of the board, identify himself in any way as a klansman and in his official capacity, with a woman's organization.

"The proclamation issued on the 29 day of March making it a capital offense for a klansman to identify himself with an organization of women by giving encouragement, aid or comfort to such organization, was by order of the board of arbitration rescinded, and in lieu of that proclamation the board wrote another proclamation to be sent to all klans and klansmen by the imperial wizard vouchsafing the rights of klansmen to co-operate with organizations of women whose purposes and principles are similar or parallel to those of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

"My rights, therefore, to establish the order of Kamelia, free from interferenceo r control, of any authority or power vested or inhering in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, have been thoroughly vindicated. For the order of American women, espousing the principles of the constitution of the United States, and holding to the tenets of Protestant Christianity there is an open field and I anticipate for the Kamelia a rapid rise and extension to every state in the union. To the consecrated women of this order, I send my greetings of hope and encouragement, with the assurance that their fathers, their husbands, their brothers and their sweethearts may co-operate with them in preserving the foundations of our great government and in safeguarding our great American institutions.

"WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS,
"Emperor of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

Commission Government Checks Funds of Klan

ATLANTA, April 9.—A date for the hearing on the original injunction petition filed by Colonel William J. Simons as the opening gun in the present legal battle over control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is expected to be set some time this week by Judge George L. Bell, before whom it will be argued.

Meanwhile, the three-man commission appointed Saturday by Judge E. D. Thomas to direct the affairs of the order, is presiding over the organization. Emperor Simmons, Imperial Wizard Evans, accompanied by Marshal J. M. George of John Thomas' court, visited the Atlanta banks today having on deposit funds of the klan. They carried with them the order of Judge Thomas appointing the commission and arranged for the handling of klan moneys in accordance with the order.

Imperial Wizard Evans took cognizance today of the statement issued Sunday night by Rev. Caleb Ridley, imperial kludd of the klan, by issuing a statement denying that he is now or ever has been the enemy of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, E. Y. Clarke, former imperial wizard pro tem, or Colonel Simmons.

Wizard Evans declared that he had never had any personal differences with any of them and that he is now a friend of all, particularly Mr. Clarke.

Dr. Evans declined, however, to comment on Dr. Ridley's charges against him regarding his connections with Masonic affairs in Texas before he became a klan official.

COMMISSION BEGINS OPERATION OF KLAN

Men Named by Atlanta Court Take Active Control Over K. K. K.

ATLANTA, GA., April 9.—A date for the hearing on the original injunction petition filed by Col. William J. Simmons as the opening gun in the present legal battle over control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is expected to be set some time this week by Judge George L. Bell, before whom it will be argued.

Counsel for both sides said today that they expect the hearing to be held within ten days or two weeks, and that both sides would be ready.

Meanwhile, the three-man commission appointed Saturday by Judge E. D. Thomas to direct the affairs of the order, is running the affairs of the organization. Emperor Simmons, the imperial wizard, Evans, accompanied by Marshal J. M. George, of Judge Thomas' court, visited the Atlanta banks today having on deposit funds of the klan. They carried with them the order of Judge Thomas appointing the commission, and arranged for the handling of klan moneys in accordance with the order.

Imperial Wizard Evans took cognizance today of the statement issued Sunday night by Rev. Caleb Ridley, imperial kludd of the klan, by issuing a statement denying that he is now or ever has been the enemy of Mrs. Elizabeth Grow, E. Y. Clarke, former imperial wizard pro tem, or Colonel Simmons.

Wizard Evans declared that he had never had any personal differences with any one of them and that he is now a friend of all, particularly Mr. Clarke.

Dr. Evans declined, however, to comment on Dr. Ridley's charges against him regarding his connections with Masonic affairs in Texas before he became a klan official.

The Texas klansmen are solidly behind Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, according to a statement issued today by H. C. McCall of Houston, grand dragon for the state of Texas and head of the klan in that state. Mr. McCall is in Atlanta to support Imperial Wizard Evans.

"Texas has 140,000 klansmen," said Mr. McCall, "and all of the 275 klans in this state are solidly behind Dr. Evans and will vigorously contest any attempt to usurp his authority.

"The biggest realm of the Invisible Empire recognizes the fact that Dr. H. W. Evans was duly and legally elected imperial wizard at the November klonvocation. Texas delegates were there and voted for him and they are determined that their properly expressed opinion shall not be set aside.

"Our state opinion was expressed at a meeting of Texas klans held in Dallas last week to the effect that Texas klansmen were proud of Dr. Evans in his determination to safeguard the order from personal exploitation and Texans would have been ashamed of Dr. Evans had he chosen any other course of action."

Winder People Witness K. K. K. Initiation Work

Winder, Ga., June 27.—(Special.) The local membership of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan put on a public ceremonial at the Winder baseball park in the initiation of new members into the order.

It had been announced a few days beforehand that the public was invited to this special ceremony, and a number of people from Winder and the country around here came, also people from nearby towns. Many strangers were among the visiting audience.

During the afternoon two klansmen in the regalia of the order rode through the principal streets of the city, but were silent as they rode. The ceremony began at 8:30 o'clock at the ball park and these two same horsemen were the first to ride into the open space where the ceremony took place, leading about three hundred klansmen who appeared at the same time in automobiles.

The spectators, who were estimated at about two thousand, had already assembled when the ceremony began, many of them long before. The klansmen had assembled before they came to the ball park, and rode there in cars, parking their cars around the enclosure across from the spectators.

Ropes had been placed near the grandstand and klansmen patrolled the space between the crowd and those taking part in the ceremony. They asked that all be as quiet as possible while the ceremony was going on and that none pass beyond the ropes.

There were about fifty new men to be initiated. These came in from the rear of the park as soon as the klansmen were assembled. The ceremony was carried on so silently that nothing was understood. The crowd stayed throughout the ceremony which lasted about two hours.

When it was over, the klansmen together with the new members, who were masked with white cloth over their faces, got into their cars and rode away.

It was said that there were large numbers of klansmen from the towns within a radius of twenty-five miles of Winder. There were more than a hundred cars to leave the ball park carrying from two to five klansmen each.

Georgia Judge Blames Ku Klux for the Exodus

Athens, Ga., June 29.—Responsibility for the exodus from the South has placed upon the Ku Klux Klan by Judge Samuel Adams in an address before the graduating class of the University of Georgia without calling the Klan's name he scored it, declaring "There is no place in Georgia for an invisible empire."

"One of your solemn duties, young men and women, is to uphold the law, but do it in the open. Don't try men in the hidden secrets of an organization without a hearing. There is no room for an invisible empire in Georgia. I do not know much about the working of the organization, because the truth is not told us, but the fact that its name is used to cloak so much that is objectionable is enough to convince me that we have no place for such an organization. I do not object to any organization, Protestant, Jew, Catholic or what not or secret orders which confine their activities to their own members. They do not try to regulate the affairs of the public, state or nation. The Negro exodus is largely caused, I believe, by the use of the name of this organization, though the labor agent is carrying the brunt of the blame."

ANSWERS ATTACK MADE ON K. K. K.

Charging that an "invisible government" in the state of Georgia, had its headquarters in "a room in a well known Atlanta hotel," and not in the imperial palace of the Ku Klux Klan, Representative J. O. Wood, of Fulton county, arising to a point of personal privilege in the house Monday answered that portion of former governor Hardwick's recent message to the legislature which dealt with the klan.

Mr. Wood asserted that at one time, operatives of the klan, aided by members of the Atlanta police and detective forces, had kept a watch on this room and had found the governor and the editor of a newspaper in conference there. He added that at one time he persuaded the police not to raid this room in a search for liquor, because the governor of the state was in it at the time and he did not want the unfavorable publicity which would follow.

Mr. Wood also charged Mr. Hardwick with inconsistency, stating that attacks made on the klan by the ex-governor did not come well from a man who had, in a previous campaign, made klan speeches over the state and who had "ridden into office on the bandwagon of the greatest klansman of them all."

Portions of the oath of the klan were read by Mr. Wood and he asked the members of the legislature if they could find anything therein not favorable to God, Home and Country.

Concluding, he said "whether or not the people of Georgia endorsed the Ku Klux Klan at the recent state election, they at least went on record as being opposed to office holders of the type the former governor represented."

NEGROES FLOGGED

Near Royston, Ga., is the Report to N. A. A. C. P.

"White-capping" and flogging of Negroes near Royston, Ga., is reported in a letter received by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The letter states that Negroes have not only left their farms because of night-riding and intimidation in that section o fbGr,oe ajrugsta mhtsetm section of Georgia, but are beginning to leave the towns also. The letter says in part:

"It is hard here. The colored people are afraid to do what they can. They are white-capping colored people every chance they can get. I know of two cases recntly. Thy whippd a boy about running away. He did not owe them a penny.. Whipped a colored preacher last night for nothing. The police arrest the colored peole and turn them over to the mob. Is there any remedy for it?

"The colored people are leaving here fast. They have all just left the farms and now they are leaving their towns."

KLAN KLONCILIUM EXONERATES EVANS

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 20.—Resolutions expressing confidence in H. W. Evans as imperial wizard and his officers were adopted at the meeting of the klonclium of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan here late yesterday, it was announced by officers of the klan today. The resolution, it was stated, declared charges of extravagance and waste and maladministration, signed by Dr. W. E. Thompson of Atlanta and Minor Meriwether of Tulsa, Okla., were thoroughly investigated and held to be unfounded in fact.

Evidence to show that the charge that the imperial wizard had spent $50,000 in a Chicago political campaign was unfounded was introduced, officers stated, and it was shown that klan officials had not spent any money in the Chicago campaign.

Other allegations that Mr. Evans was charging all his personal and household expenses to the klan and was engaged in fee splitting with other imperial officers also were refuted, according to the klan officials.

SERVE KLAN HEADS WITH COURT ORDER

Superior Court Again Assumes Control of Klan Affairs Pending Hearing on Receivership Petition.

Service of papers of receivership proceedings against the Ku Klux Klan, which were signed by Judge John D. Humphries of the Fulton superior court Thursday, was executed Friday morning by Deputy Sheriff Milam. Papers against the organization were served to Tom Akers, head of the department of intelligence. Individual papers were also served against Akers and T. B. McKinnon, head of the extension department. This announcement was issued from the sheriff's office, where it was declared they were unable to locate any more of the officials, other than McKennon and Akers, who are involved by the injunction order.

Control of the organization, all Klan funds, and all records are now officially in the hands of the Fulton superior court. This state of affairs was brought about Thursday when Judge Humphries granted a petition presented by David M. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and others, which alleged gross mismanagement of the Klan's affairs and funds and charged that Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans and Emperor William Joseph Simmons had used the Klan for personal enrichment and aggrandizement, and that certain realms had threatened to secede and establish independent orders.

Klan Officials Meet.

The leading officials of the Klan, said to be sixteen in number, gathered in Washington Friday for a conference. The nature of this meeting could not be learned, although it was said by Evans to have no bearing upon the receivership proceedings filed here Thursday.

Unless the defense requests an earlier hearing, both sides will appear before Judge Humphries on June 9, according to the order of the court, at which time the defense will be called upon to show why the restraining order against use of Klan funds by Klan officials should not be made permanent and a receiver appointed.

W. S. Coburn, attorney for the petitioners, issued the following statement Friday relative to the position of Colonel Simmons:

"Colonel Simmons knew of the mismanagement and of the unfitness for office of the other officials of the Imperial Palace, and also knew of the approaching litigation which has been in evidence since the settlement of the controversy between Colonel Simmons and H. W. Evans.

Simmons Innocent Party.

"The attack or allegation that Colonel Simmons, in collusion with H. W. Evans, made a settlement whereby he was to receive $1,000 a month for the rest of his life, etc., is set out, not that Colonel Simmons in any sense whatsoever was offensively in collusion with H. W. Evans. This attack was made upon Evans in the colonel's suit and was to straighten out and correct the very things that the attack in the present suit is intended to strike. In asking the court to set aside that settlement we allege that Colonel Simmons was a party to the collusion—which is true; but the colonel was an innocent party, the settlement having been put over on him in a way which does not morally affect the colonel in any sense."

Simmons, press dispatches say, admitted the present klan administration was extravagant, but declared that there were no facts to justify an accusation that he had used the order for personal enrichment or aggrandizement.

Atlanta Supports Petition.

Attorney Coburn stated Friday that the Atlanta klan chapter was 100 per cent behind the petition. He also said that the names published on the petition were just a "few out of thousands."

He also explained that David M. Rittenhouse, whose name headed the list of klansmen bringing the suit, is an official in klan No. 1, Philadelphia. B. F. Graham, another of the petitioners, also is a Philadelphian, and a prominent lawyer, according to Attorney Coburn.

M. O. Dunning, of Sanford, Fla., also a petitioner, was in conference Friday with Mr. Coburn. Mr. Dunning is a kleagle in the realm of Georgia and a life member in the klan.

Mr. Coburn said that he did not want to discuss his evidence at the present but that he was fully prepared to make a full showing on all charges set out in the petition.

SIMMONS CREATES ORDER

"Knights of Kamelia" Hailed as Higher Order In "Empire"

TO PRESERVE ORIGINAL IDEALS

Associated Press Report.

Atlanta Ga. June 15 — 1923

ATLANTA, Ga., June 15.—Establishment of the order of Knights of Kamelia, as the "primary order of knighthood," with a government "separate and distinct from the government now controlling and directing the affairs of the first or the probationary order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," was proclaimed tonight by William Joseph Simmons, "in the exercise of the authority vested in me only as emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc."

"Everything that I have striven to build during the years gone by is in peril of being subverted to personal, political and sordid ends," Emperor Simmons said in a statement. "To save the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from spoilation and destruction, I have determined to establish Knights Kamelia and thereby give the klansmen of the invisible empire at least the opportunity to transfer to this primary order of knighthood and establish themselves upon the foundation as laid in the beginning."

Simmons Scores Kloncilium.

Referring to the action of the Imperial Kloncilium in leaving out the "Kamelia" among the women's organization authorized to become affiliated with the klan under the title of Women of The Ku Klux Klan, "Emperor Simmons" statement said:

"This action on the part of the imperial kloncilium in repudiating by explicit designation the Kamelia and by adopting other numerous organizations of women, was not only in violation of the contract between H. W. Evans and myself, but was also in violation of a decree entered in the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia, and further still was a violation of the original charter, which defines that male members only shall be admitted to the order."

The establishment of the "primary order Knights Kamelia" means, the statement declared, "that the members of the Ku Klux Klan are under the administration of the imperial wizard and the imperial kloncilium, while the order Knights Kamelia will be under my control and direction, with such men as I may designate as members of my cabinet. The order Knights Kamelia will therefore be absolutely free to inaugurate its policies, to establish its principles and to release its ideals under my supervision and direction and free from interference from any source or hostility within or without the invisible empire.

"I am impelled to promulgate the Knights Kamelia because of the restiveness that obtains among probationary klansmen throughout the country. There has been no way opened to advancement—no progress has been made—no construction work has been done. Klansmen identified with the organization from its foundation, have been held in a state of probation for years. They have not been indoctrinated with the principles or the philosophies of the order. They are unfamiliar with the purposes of the great order. They have been given no definite objects to be attained. Meanwhile there has been a continuous demand for another and higher order, that the worthy American citizens, might pass from the probationary stage into actual Knighthood and into active service in the invisible empire. These citizens can not be detained longer upon the threshold of the order, but must be admitted and elevated to another realm in which they may find exercise for their restrained and abated forces.

Klan Ideals in Peril.

"Another motive for forming the Knights Kamelia at this particular time is that my original plans, purposes and principles in founding the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan may be observed and consummated. Everything that I have striven to build during the years gone by is in peril of being subverted to personal, political and sordid ends. To save the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from spoliation and destruction I have determined to establish the Knights Kamelia and thereby give the klansmen of the Invisible Empire at least the opportunity to tarnsfer to this primary order of knighthood and establish themselves upon the foundation so laid in the beginning.

"This order of Knights Kamelia will also afford a refuge to klansmen who are exposed to the exercise of arbitrary and capricious power. A large number of excellent klansmen of the probationary order have already been banished without trial and without defense simply because they did not yield in subserviency to authority running mad or lend themselves without protest to policies of tyranny."

The statement of Emperor Simmons then refers to his founding the Kamelia, "an organization to be composed of native born, white, Protestant Christian women," and says this "met with the instantaneous disapproval of the imperial wizard, and with the recent disfavor of a majority of the kloncilium." He declared this order is present in 20 States. He declares the Kamelia is "as much my child" as the klan and that his purpose is to see the two orders are kept separate but working along parallel lines for the accomplishment of the same "great ends." In addition, therefore, he continues, "I am establishing a new and separate order of klansmen with which the order of Kamelia may co-work and from which the order of Kamelia may expect and receive protection and co-operation."

WOOD HITS HARDWICK IN HOUSE

Atlanta Georgian 7-3-23

Rising to a point of personal privilege in the House of Representatives Monday morning, J. O. Wood, representative from Fulton County, and editor of The Searchlight, official Ku-Klux Klan organ, launched a verbal attack on former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick.

Representative Wood said:

Mr. Speaker, Ladies and Gentlemen of the House: In rising to a point of personal privilege in this House, because of an attack made on me through an organization to which I belong, I shall state succinctly the reasons for the attack having been made. The retiring chief executive of this state, in his swan-song message, stigmatized some of the flower of Georgia's manhood, and incidentally cast aspersions on a goodly number of the members of this House. To set up a statement of facts that would reflect to the discredit and dishonor of the person who made the attack, would in no wise justify the existence of the organization, and I would not do so except that in so doing I may show why the attack was made.

"INVISIBLE" RULE. 7-3-23

The people of Georgia have a right to know why one who purported to speak for a great commonwealth takes occasion to speak in disparaging terms of an organization. This person would have you believe that the term "Invisible Empire" frightens him; although he knows, as does every klansman in the nation know, that when we speak of the "Invisible Empire", we mean the "Invisible Empire" of the soul. In his message he referred to "invisible government" and so connected up the phrase that he who runs may read and know that he meant, and intended that the people should understand him to mean, the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan.

There has been for many years—long before the advent of the klan—an invisible empire in Georgia. The visible government, legislated and administered through the General Assembly, is supposed to be divided into two houses, the upper and the lower; but the affairs of the State of Georgia were for many years influenced by the invisible government, or third, or invisible house of the General Assembly. The Constitution states plainly where the General Assembly shall meet, and so far as the people know, this General Assembly has always met in the Capitol, but in a large measure, the affairs of state were governed by the "Invisible House," in a certain room in a certain hotel.

Some of us well remember and can never forget the inconsistencies of the gentleman under discussion, when in one of his late campaigns, he made klan speeches all over Georgia and rode into office on the band wagon of the greatest Knight of them all. At a flag-raising at the home of Colonel William Joseph Simmons, soon after his election as Governor, he delivered himself in no unmistakeable language on the principles of the klan. One listening to him would have thought him a recognized lecturer for the organization. He told of having been interviewed by a reporter from The New York World, and he boasted of the replies made therein, which replies, as quoted by him, would have done credit to the emperor of this organization.

Immediately after that he formed a political coalition with a certain newspaper and a certain notorious lobbyist, who led him to believe that his only political salvation lay in his cutting absolutely loose from the klan and the men who put him in office.

Then why the change of front on the part of the person under discussion? I will tell you. That part of the coalition represented by the newspapers, in attacking this organization of men, assailed the only woman connected in any way with the organization and sought to drag her character into the mire of the streets. Because of the high position occupied by womanhood and motherhood in the minds and hearts of klansmen, the klans of the nation resented the attack, not so much on their organization, as on the only woman connected therewith.

WATCH KEPT ON ROOM.

The local klan quite naturally shared in this feeling and knowing the character at the head of the newspaper making the attack, determined to draw him into the courts and there show him in his true

Consequently, a watch was set by the local klansmen, acting in conjunction with the police and detective forces of Atlanta, and a certain room at the Kimball House was kept under surveillance until the newspaper man was known to be in the room engaged in swigging hooch and demonstrating generally the Darwinian theory—by reversal of the process. Klansmen who were assisting the officers, being opposed to dragging the name of our state in the dirt, were at a loss to know what to do when they found the chief executive sitting in on the party; they phoned me at my office and asked me what should be done under the circumstances. Thinking that our state had had enough of bad publicity, perpetrated by and through and because of chiefs executive, I advised against raiding the room while he was present. Three nights later, at about 6 o'clock, the room was raided. The notorious lobbyist and boon companion of the newspaper man and of the person under discussion, was arrested. In the room was found a quantity of moonshine whisky. The lobbyist assumed full responsibility for all the whisky and the other evidences of disorder in the room, and was placed under arrest by the officers.

CHARGE IS CHANGED.

It was immediately after this that the gentleman under discussion changed front, impelled no doubt by the fact that there had come a split, absolute and unconditional, between the klansmen of Georgia and the nation, and the newspaper represented by the whisky-swigging editor. This person who later made the attack on the klan and repeated it on the floor of this House, evidently felt that if he stayed in favor with this powerful newspaper, together with other organizations of a secret and absolutely anti-Catholic nature, that he could, notwithstanding the strength of the klan, maintain his political supremacy. Therefore, by logical reasoning and deduction, one arrives at this conclusion: "His opinion of the klan, and the members thereof, is based upon political exigencies and not upon his belief or disbelief in its principles or personnel.

His first public anti-klan speech was delivered at a meeting on the roof of a local hotel, which was a self-called and self-appointed body of men who came together for the purpose of attacking the klan for its stand on law enforcement; and at the same time styled itself an organization for that very purpose. The speech delivered by him at this self-styled "Law Enforcement League" was so mean and so contrary to the speeches delivered in his campaign, that it cost him his political head. In that speech he howled about "Invisible Government" and the indorsement of law through the regularly constituted authorities of the law. In his speech delivered at Klankrest, he paid tribute to the klansmen for their stand on law enforcement; because he knew then, and knows now, that on the one point of law enforcement every klansman has taken a solemn oath that he will see it is done through the regularly constituted authorities for law enforcement.

LIST OF KLAN QUESTIONS.

How did he know? Because at about that time he was making preparations to come into the klan and he was handed a list containing the following, which it is necessary that every klansman shall subscribe to:

I will at once seek information as to when my taxes are due and will pay them when due.

I will register as a voter.

I will use my ballot and influence in every election.

I will vote for the most honorable and capable candidate.

I will cheerfully accept my share of jury duty.

I will assist, whenever possible, in the apprehension and conviction of criminals.

I will interest myself in the public schools and in the election of competent teachers.

I will further the cause of education whenever possible.

I will read the Constitution of the United States at least once each year.

I will insist on the separation of church and state.

I will preserve the sanctity of my home.

I will obey the laws of my country, my state and my community.

I will familiarize myself with the history of my country and my state.

I will regard American citizenship as a life lived in conformity to the American ideals.

I will honor and protect virtuous womanhood, knowing that no nation can rise higher than its womanhood.

I will study the plan of government under which my community functions.

I will strive, through the constituted authorities to correct prevailing evils in my community, particularly vices tending to the destruction of the home, family, childhood and womanhood.

I will regard tax dodgers, jury dodgers and others, unwilling to accept their share of the burdens of co-operative government, as slackers.

I will in every way, try to live up to the high standards of American citizenship.

PLEDGE OF KLANSMAN.

"I will read the Constitution of the United States at least once each year," promises every klansman; and the first oath taken by a Klansman in a klavern is an unqualified allegiance to the government of the United States, to its Constitution and the laws made thereunder.

A canvass will show that outside of Klansmen, eight adults out of 10 have never even seen the Constitution of the United States or of the state. As an evidence of the lack of this knowledge on the part of our citizenry, there was introduced on the floor of this House the past week, a bill making the reading of the Constitution of the United States compulsory in all schools. Every Klansman in the world indorses that bill, for the simple reason that one of the four oaths taken by him as a Klansman is absolutely occupied with the reaffirmation of his allegiance to the Constitution of the United States. In his swan song, this person asked that legislation along all lines discussed by him be enacted by this body. In that part in which was couched the attack on me and my fellow Klansmen in the nation, he said "invisible government must go." He would have you believe that he meant, and he did mean, the Order of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan.

KLAN AND MASK.

Some time ago the Klansmen of Georgia said that invisible government, as represented by the type of men composing the coalition, should go—and it did, as evidenced by the occasion of the swan song argued to. Because of his affiliation with organizations of an absolute secret nature, he made no reference to the klan's secret membership, but centered his attack on the mask.

The klan uses a mask, as do many other organizations, in its ritualistic rites within the klavern. It uses the mask in its ceremonies, because the organization, in addition to its fraternal and benevolent nature, is a living memorial to the Klansmen of the sixties—that valiant, unconquerable body of men who reclaimed and saved, after the Civil War, that which was lost on the battlefield; and saved to the South and the nation that Anglo-Saxon civilization that we enjoy today. The mask is not worn outside of the Klavern, except when permission has been obtained from the duly constituted authorities of the municipality or county in which they wish to parade; and such parades are always held in conjunction with their ceremonies.

The last campaign of the gentleman under discussion was based almost wholly upon his opposition to the klan, asserting in every speech that he made that the klan must go.

Whether or not the people declared themselves in favor of the klan by their votes at the ballot box, they most certainly did unequivocally place themselves on record as being opposed to office holders of his stripe.

RELIGIOUS QUESTION.

In an aside and in language which does not appear in his written message, he referred to religious intolerance, as represented by persons who would oppose the religion of others. I say to you here and now, and defy him to successfully contradict what I say, that of all the anti-Catholic speeches that I have ever heard delivered, the most vitriolic and intolerable was delivered by the person under discussion.

The organization of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan restricts its membership to white, Protestant, Gentile, native-born Americans of good character; for the reason that we believe that persons of kindred thought and kindred ideals can best work in harmony to accomplish their purpose. Reasoning from the same prremise, we grant to every other creed or color the right to organize, and have never, by word or pen or act, sought to deny that right. The only organization of which I have any knowledge whose right to existence has been challenged is this organization of white, native-born Protestant, Gentile Americans .The oaths assumed by Klansmen al ltend toward an unqualified alelgiance to God, to home and to country, for we believe that—

"He who saves his country, saves all things
And all things living bless him;
He who destroys his country, kills all things
And all things dying curse him."

Klan to Fight Use of Its Name By Labor Agents

Action against labor agents who use the name of the Ku Klux Klan to frighten the negro into migrating north was announced today by J. O. Wood, editor of The Searchlight, "the official voice of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

"The Ku Klux Klan is the friend not the enemy of the negro," Mr. Wood declared. "Our policy is to help him, not to frighten or intimidate him. Southern Klansmen want the negro to remain in the south, and they want to give him justice and a square deal at all times. They want him to report all threats made against his life and home in order that they can co-operate with the legal authorities in giving him full protection.

"Reports from all parts of Georgia tell how negroes have received threatening letters warning them to leave the community at once, and signed in red ink with the letters 'K. K. K.' The labor agents have also chalked the letters 'K. K. K.' on negro cabins in order to frighten the darkeys into going north.

"When any negro receives such a letter or threat signed 'K. K. K.' we want him to report it to the local lodge of the klansmen or to the imperial palace of the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta, and we will make an investigation in order to bring the labor agents who used this trick into the courts of justice. And it will be the labor agents, not the negro, who will suffer because of the threat."

LOCAL KLAN INDORSES RECEIVERSHIP PLAN

Resolutions approving the filing of receivership proceedings against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan several days ago were passed Thursday night at a meeting of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, according to official announcement.

The resolutions, it was stated, set forth that imperial headquarters had been accused of misuse of funds and mismanagement, and that a receivership seemed advisable, in view of the probability that this action would result in a sound reorganization of the national organization.

A receiver was asked in a petition filed in Fulton superior court by a group of klansmen claiming to represent the rank and file of the membership. Although Emperor William Joseph Simmons was named as one of the defendants, he is understood to be in hearty accord with the proceedings, and regards the action against him as being entirely friendly.

THE NEGRO AND THE KLAN

ALBANY GA. NEWS
JANUARY 13, 1923

There has been many things written and said about the Negro, and likewise there have been many a thing written and said about the Klan.

There have been many things written and said about the Klan that were not true and there have likewise been many things written and said about the Negro that could be easily placed in the same category.

The very name of Ku Klux to the Negro of ante-bellum type or even of advanced years carried with it a fear, a horror, a real dread of the name. There has been known another Klan though of the same name, but of far different principles which has come to light in the latter days and which has claimed and is now claiming a sufficient amount of the country's attention, which in the columns of our own city press, and unsolicited (for we would not know who to solicit) has said that they are the friends of the Negro, and we have no inclination to doubt that friendship which they have voluntarily claimed for us, unless they adversely write it in acts.

It is not our purpose to here discuss any phase of the Klan, for to do so would be entirely irregular and wholly out of the question for we are not a member.

What we do propose to discuss here, however is, that there are too many things by far which are being directly attributable and charged to the Klan, that the Klan knows absolutely nothing about.

The hooded and robed feature of the Klan is the subject of much advantage being taken. Everybody who happen to have a grievance and wants to right the grievnce according to his own notion has nothing to do but to don the hood and robe, drop a placard with the three letters "K. K. K."and his every act from tarring and feathering to administering a good flogging, or whatever the case may be, is directly charged to the Klan, when the facts in the case are not arrived at in the least.

'Tis true, that nobody knows who operates behind the mask. And there is not a single mask now worn but for what some good and splendid imitation of the same thing can be found.

That being the case it stands to reason then that the Klan has to bear the direct responsibility for a goodly number of things of which they know nothing or little about.

We know that the Klan is organized for specific purposes for those in authority have said so. But for all of this they should not be held up to ridicule any more than any other organization until it is an established fact beyond a reasoneble doubt that the Klan, or some member thereof has been guilty of an infraction of the law.

As with the Klan in many accusations which have been laid to them, so in a great many instances with the Negro.

The Negro is charged with a great number of things, some of which he is guilty and some of which he is innocent. The Negro, unfortunately, does not have a trumpeter, for to advocate the cause of the Negro would be the direct signal for one's unpopularity, no matter how commendable the cause may be. Hence for a lack of this, for a lack of some one to speak the word, when it should be spoken, for a lack of the facts in the case to be derived at before a proper execution of justice is directly responsible for a great number of innocent Negroes having to suffer.

It is no more fair to lay the hand of accusation upon them without the proper exercise of legal judgment, than it is to lay everything that happens to be committed under the guise of a robe to the Klan.

In the first place, let us all be fair and broadminded towards our ownselves, and being fair and broadminded to ourselves we will likewise be fair in our accusation especially to the Negro and the Klan.

TWO CHARGES

The address by the representative of the imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan at the Court House served to reveal several things.

1/20/23
Supreme circle meet

It had been heralded that among other things that the Klan was anti-Negro in its scope, yet the Klan had openly in paid advertisements said that it was friendly to the Negro.

We did not know just how far and to what extent this friendliness went until on Friday evening among the other things the representative of the imperial wizard made it known.

It has been our plan and is now our plan and shall be forever our purpose to advocate, and to preach so far as our columns go a better relationship between the races and to prompt the Negro to a high sense of duty in order that he may be called that which is most valuable to a community, and that is a good citizen.

MITCHELL SHERIFF PROBES WHIPPING BY UNMASKED MEN

Atlanta Constitution
2/2/23

Camilla, Ga., February 1.—(Special.)—Sheriff C. D. Crow is making a thorough investigation of the reported whipping Tuesday night of Bob Davis by a party of unmasked men.

According to he story told the sheriff by Davis, who is a white man living four miles west of Sale City, he was called to his door about 10 o'clock Tuesday night and asked to bring a light and assist several men in fixing their car.

On emerging from the house with the light, Mr. Davis says he was seized, a sack thrown over his head, the light extinguished and he was thrown into the car.

This car, according to the story, went about 3 miles down the road where it was joined by another car. Davis claimed he then was removed from the car and was made the recipient of a severe beating. No reason was given for the attack, he says.

He was told to run, he says, and upon carrying out these orders several shots were fired at him. None of the party were recognized.

Albany, Ga., February 1.—Two whippings by mobs in the last two nights in the Baconton neigbborhood, in Mitchell country, 16 miles from Albany, have aroused that community, and the Baconton council has offered rewards for information that will lead to the apprehension of the guilty persons.

The first attack occurred Tuesday night when a party of white men called at the home of Timothy Wilson, a negro, on the Gill Grove pecan place and beat up his wife and children. According to the negro woman's story, the attackers, who were not masked, asked for her husband, and when she informed them that he was not at home, they beat her and the children so severely that they required the services of a physician to dress their wounds. None o fthe members of the party were recognized.

Last night a similar party of white men, also unmaked, called on Bob Davis, a white man, at his home on the Jackson Supply company's place, and gave him a severe beating. Davis also failed to recognize any of his attackers.

Dr. J. A. Garrett, mayor of Baconton, in announcing the council's offer of a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest of any member of the attacking parties, said the people of Baconton will not tolerate such lawlessness if within their power to prevent it and will do everything possible to apprehend the guilty parties.

they would likewise be good communities, and there would be no need for the much trouble we learn that is flashed from some portions of this and other states.

The Klan claims to be our friend and we would certainly like to most heartily return that friendship even if we know not in what direction to make the very conscientious beginning. We are at a loss however to know just exactly what the Klan means when it says that it is friendly to the Negro "as long as he does the proper thing under the circumstances.".. We admit that we do not know what theproper thing under the circumstances means.. For sometimes when the Negro is doing his best from a purely conscientious standpoint, he is too often misunderstood. And when he is following in the footsteps of the most exemplary white character he is criticised for that. And when he descends to the level of most disreputable one, the low is sure to take him in. "So long as he does the proper thing under the circumstances" is not understood by us for we know not what estimate is placed on either, and we should not be allowed to grope in the darkness, but be properly informed without deep insinuations in order that the tie of friendship may be greatly strengthened.

The insinuation, "the proper thing under the circumstances," is not what we herein set out to discuss altho we would like to be set right on the question.

We are called upon to answer two direct charges that were made against us as a group of people Friday evening, if for no other reason than the fact that we have no one to answer for us. We do not say in this instance, but in a good many instances any man or set of men who goes on record as advocating fair play for the Negro, immediately becomes a "Negro lover." No matter what the circumstances are and is not popular.

In the first place the Klan says it opposes Negro organizations that tend to fan race hatred and to preach social equality. These are the two things with which we are charged. "Organizations fanning race hatred, and preaching social equality."

We are here to say with all the forcefulness at our command that we are opposed to the same kind of organizations whether they exist or not.

We are members of many organizations and in fact almost every Negro organization in existence and for more than a quarter of a century during our very active life with these organizations we have never heard the slightest tendency that would even in substance lead toward inflaming race hatred or even sowing the first seeds along that line.

They simply do not exist, and the only thing you hear is just the self thing that Moton preached and advised in the Auditorium here in December, and that is, Cultivate a better relationship with your white neighbor.

The second charge is that of Social Equality. This is one of the charges that does the Negro a great injustice and works much harm for him by those who do not understand him.

The Negro does not now, has never wanted, nor does not in the future want social equality. And if the white man thinks so along that line he doesn't know the Negro, he is simply mistaken in his views. All that the Negro wants is that which is guaranteed him by the constitution, that which he didn't place there himself, that which he didn't ask to be placed there, and that which protects every other man should likewise protect him. Equality before the law is our most earnest plea and not that of social equality.

When it comes to form of social equality the men of the opposite race inflict and force it upon us as a weak and defenseless people to which we are admittedly tolerant in its very face.

If this is the interpretation of "as long as he doeos the right and proper thing under the circumstances," we ask in all fairness, voluntarily and otherwise, for a struggling and defenseless people, that the circumstances be immediately removed.

PROTESTS KLAN PARADE

Manget's Criticism Answered by Mayor Walter Sims.

Constitution

In a communication protesting against Mayor Sims' action in granting permission Wednesday night to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to parade on the city's streets, John A. Manget, widely known local religious worker, Thursday made public his views on the klan and denounced the mayor for granting the permit for the parade.

Atlanta Ga.

Mayor Sims, in replying to Mr. Manget's criticisms, declared he would not oppose, as official head of the city government, "peaceful parades of American citizens in this city," and that he would "just as readily grant a permit to the Order of Knights of Columbus or other legitimate organizations to pass through the public streets on parade."

In his public communication, Mr. Manget warned the populace of Atlanta "that we are sleeping on the brink of a volcano and yet will not wake up." He brands the klan as an organization founded "to cast fear and terror into the hearts of 100.000 citizens of this city," and adds that it has prospered on account "of its appeal to the ignorant and vicious based on religious intolerance, race hatred and determination to gain control of all governments, city, county, state and national."

Macon Flogging Victim Returns Home; Guarded

The Constitution 8-26-23

Atlanta, Ga.

Macon, Ga., August 25.—R. E. Bobo, driven from Macon by floggers two weeks ago, returned here today from Jacksonville, Fla. Members of his family said that he would be guarded while here. They gave no information as to how long he expected to remain in Macon.

Ollie M. Perry, another victim of the same band of floggers, is still in her tonight, in a serious condition.

There have been no floggings this week. An anti-flogging squad is on duty at police headquarters and the sheriff's office day and night.

At a hearing this morning before Judge Will Gunn, of the city court of Macon, the bonds of S. K., C. J. and J. C. Hudson, brothers, held in jail since last Sunday night in connection with flogging episodes, were ordered reduced from $5,000 to $3,000 each.

The men are charged with rioting, drunk on a public highway and assault and battery. Attorneys for the Hudsons stated they would probably take habeas corpus proceedings during the day to get the men released on a still smaller bond.

The cases were set for trial September 10.

Atlanta Ga. Journal 8-25-23

The board of deacons and congregation of the Central Baptist church last night made formal demand upon the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association, which recently proposed to withdraw fellowship from that church and condemned Dr. Caleb W. Ridley, pastor, for "conduct unbecoming a minister," for the names of all pastors who signed the resolutions. This action was taken after it had been announced that the Searchlight, semi official organ of the Klan, would make a similar demand in its next issue.

No statetment was made by the officers of the church or by Dr. Ridley as to why the names were wanted or as to what action the church proposed to take in the matter.

After the services had closed Dr. Ridley stated that if the ministers had planned their step for the purpose of benefiting him, they had not missed his mark. He was referring in this statement to the immense crowd which attended the barbecue given by his church recently, netting sufficient funds to pay off the debt.

Dr. Ridley stated that Sunday morning 57 men, three of them non members of his church, filed into the Sunday school room and asked the superintendent to make arrangements to incorporate them into a class, with the pastor as teacher. This Dr. Ridley agreed to do, although he is already teaching a large men's Bible class.

RULING IS MADE IN KU KLUX CASE

Atlanta Journal 8-10-23

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 9.—Depositions in the receivership suit of David M. Rittenhouse of Philadelphia and others against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will be taken on August 13, according to a ruling by Superior Judge John D. Humphries today, who stipulated that the depositions should be prepared before a hearing on the demurrer of the defendants filed several days ago, is said.

The defendants, Klan officers and members of the Kloncilium, entered a general denial of the charges of mismanagement of Klan affairs, made by the complainants.

D. Osmuth was named commissioner to take the depositions.

Negroes Flogged Near Royston, Ga., Leaving

"White-capping" and flogging of Negroes near Royston, Georgia, is reported in a letter received by the N. A. A. C. P. The letter states that Negroes have not only left their farms because of night-riding and intimidation in that section of Georgia, but are beginning to leave the towns also. The letter says in part:

"It is hard here. The colored people are afraid to do what they can. They are white-capping colored people every chance they can get. I know of two cases recently. They whipped a boy about running away. He did not owe them a penny. The police arrest the colored people here and turn them over to the mob. Is there any remedy for it?

"The colored people are leaving here bad, bad. They have all just about left the farms and now they are leaving their towns."

War Is Again Raging Within Ku Klux Klan

ATLANTA, Ga., June 28.—War again raged within the Ku Klux Klan last week when Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard, filed an injunction in the Fulton Superior Court to restrain William Joseph Simmons, emperor and founder, from revealing the secrets of the newly organized Knights of Kamelia. As defendants, the petition named Emperor Simmons, Rev. Caleb Ridley, J. O. Wood, editor of the 'Searchlight,' and several others.

Simmons and Evans Collusion Denied

Answering charges brought against them in a suit against the Ku-Klux Klan, William J. Simmons, emperor of the order, and B. H. Sullivan, Atlanta attorney, filed in Fulton Superior Court Monday a bill denying that Simmons and H. W. Evans were guilty of collusion in a recent court fight between the two.

The charges of collusion against Simmons and Evans were embraced in the petition for receivership filed several weeks ago.

Athens, Ga., June 29.—Responsibility for the exodus from the South was placed upon the Ku Klux Klan by Judge Samuel Adams in an address before the graduating class of the University of Georgia. Without calling the Klan's name he ignored it, declaring "There is no place in Georgia for an invisible empire."

"One of your solemn duties, young men and women, is to uphold the law, but do it in the open. Don't try men in the hidden secrets of an organization without a hearing. There is no room for an invisible empire in Georgia. I do not know much about the working of the organization, because the truth is not told us, but the fact that its name is used to cloak so much that is objectionable is enough to convince me that we have no place for such an organization. I do not object to any organization. Protestant, Jew, Catholic or what not or secret orders which confine their activities to their own members. They do not try to regulate the affairs of the public, state or nation. The Negro exodus is largely caused, I believe, by the use of the name of this organization, though the labor agent is carrying the brunt of the blame."

NOT WORRIED AT ATLANTA

Klan Officials Unperturbed by San Antonio Disaffection.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 23.—Officials at headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan here today declared they were not concerned over reports from San Antonio, Texas, that the San Antonio klan and certain other units of that order had adopted resolutions to break with the Atlanta headquarters. It was stated that a minority element in the San Antonio klan had been active for some time but that Texas is one of the strongest klan centers in the country and they were satisfied the magnitude of the incident had been exaggerated.

WHITECAPPERS AND COPS HAND IN HAND DOWN IN GEORGIA

NEW YORK CITY, June 30.—"White-capping" and flogging of Negroes near Royston, Georgia, is reported in a letter received by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 70 Fifth Ave., New York City. The letter states that Negroes have not only left their farms because of night-riding and intimidation in that section of Georgia but are beginning to leave the towns also. The letter says in part:

"It is hard here. The colored people are afraid to do what they can. They are white-capping colored people every chance they can get. I know of two cases recently. They whipped a boy about running away. He did not owe them a penny. Whipped a colored preacher last night for nothing. The police arrest the colored people here and turn them over to the mob. Is there any remedy for it?

MOTORCYCLE DETAIL ON FLOGGING DUTY

GEORGIA SHERIFF PLACES SIX MEN ON DUTY FOR PROTECTION.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 17.—Six motorcycle officers have been detailed by Sheriff J. R. Hicks, and Police Chief Martin Thompson for "flogging" duty, it was announced today. This squad, it was said, will perform no other duty except those that have to do with kidnaping and flogging cases.

Sheriff Hicks said that if his office is notified promptly he believes the "flogging squad" can capture the whipping gang that has been terrorizing Macon and Bibb counties for several weeks with their whipping parties.

The sheriff, it was also announced today, will appear before the Macon civic clubs and request that they will help swell the fund being raised for a reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties. The fund now totals $2,100 and it is hoped, it was said, to increase it to $5,000.

Bill Aimed at Maskers Introduced in Georgia

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 9.—A bill requiring all secret organizations and societies to file a list of their officers and members with the clerk of superior court in counties in which they have meeting places and to prohibit the wearing of masks or other covering of the face or head outside the lodge room, was introduced in the Georgia house of representatives today by Representative Bozeman of Worth county.

3 FLOGGING SUSPECTS HELD

Victim Escapes Band and Gives Alarm, Resulting in Capture of Brothers.

MACON, Ga., August 20.—Excitement ran high here Monday when Macon awoke to find another man had been victimized by the kidnaping-flogging gangs which for two weeks have been striking terror to the heart of this entire community. He had not been located early Monday.

The latest victim, a negro whose fate is unknown, led to the arrest of three white men, a trio of brothers, who are being held in jail without bond. The startling escape of another led to the arrests, officers said.

According to them, the second negro was driving along a road near Macon, when he ran upon a gang flogging the missing man. At his approach, he said, the three men now in jail leaped upon the running board of his car and attempted to pull him out.

He shot the machine full speed ahead and managed to throw two of the men from the car. While struggling with the third, the automobile plunged into an embankment and the other two men began rushing to their brother's aid.

At this point, officers said, some parties drove by and saw the fight. They rushed to Macon for the "flogging squad," which returned in time to make the three arrests. The men gave their names as S. R., C. F. and J. C. Hudson.

On returning to the Hudson's automobile, authorities declared they found a fully equipped kidnaping outfit. There were three leather masks and one of cloth, besides a gag, they said. The car had no license plate.

Some believe that there were others in the gang which assaulted the first negro Sunday night, but that they escaped with their prisoner. He makes the second man who has disappeared since Friday night and neither has been seen or heard of since.

In addition, this district has witnessed two lynchings during the past 10 days and several citizens have been "run out of town" by the unknown gangsters.

Adjutant General Charles H. Cox spent Sunday in Macon investigating the situation, but refused to make an announcement until he confers with Governor Clifford W. Walker at Atlanta Monday. He hinted, however, that martial law will not be declared at present.

Four Men Arrested In Flogging Case

DAYTONA, Fla., August 20.—Four men Monday are behind bars in Daytona jail as another result of the kidnaping and flogging wave which is sweeping over the Southland. They gave their names as L. E. and Phillip Buckles, Andrew Jackson and Sam Bangs.

Caesar Nealons, a negro, was taken out by the men and severely beaten with an oak club, he told officers. He said his punishment came because of certain information he gave authorities regarding the quartet.

Walker Says Local Forces in Control

Following a conference in the executive offices with Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, who had just returned from an investigation at the Governor's request of the series of floggings in Macon, Governor Walker announced Monday his readiness to dispatch military forces to take charge of the situation the instant the necessity develops.

"But," he added, "we do not apprehend the probability at this time. The co-operation of local forces has been developed and appears adequate."

Governor Walker reviewed the steps taken in Macon to care for the situation, as presented to him by General Cox.

"We shall await the request of Sheriff James R. Hicks, Jr., before calling out troops," said the Governor. "General Cox reported that the Sheriff has organized an efficient force of 14 deputies, with others subject to call. Motorcycle men have been organized subject to call for active service at any time.

"The City of Macon, I was informed, has 50 policemen on regular duty, all of whom are aroused to the need of extraordinary vigilance, and is now organizing an additional motorcycle force.

"The Sheriff and city police force, according to my information, are working in harmony, co-operating with each other and are willing to co-operate with any efforts by state authorities.

"The reason the floggers were not apprehended before, I was informed, was that the group of law-breakers has operated as a sort of flying squadron. They would pick out their victim, seize him, flog him, and be gone, before police could be notified. The very nature of these unexpected and unanticipated operations would make a military force of no more service than a vigilant force of local authorities.

"Sheriff Hicks, I was informed, expects to call a meeting of civic bodies and ask them to co-operate and assist his deputies and the police. He will ask also for more prompt report of signs of disorder. He also wants additional rewards by civic bodies, and has already received assurance, I understand, that these will be given.

"We feel that it should rest with Sherif Hicks whether military forces shall be assigned to the situation. He is confident, I am informed, that with the organization that has been perfected and that is in process of perfection, the rituation can be handled."

General Cox spent Sunday in Macon, having gone there at request of Governor Walker, and having been in conference with representatives of every agency working to alleviate the situation.

WRIT GUARDS KLAN SECRETS

Simmons Enjoined from Revealing Ritual to New Order.

[By The Associated Press.]

Atlanta, Ga., June 22.—A temporary injunction restraining William Joseph Simmons, Emperor of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, and others from "giving away" the secrets and ritual of the klan to the newly organized Knights of Kamelia was signed late yesterday by Judge John O. Humphries, it became known to-day. The order was issued in response to a petition filed by representatives of the klan faction headed by H. T. Evans, Imperial Wizard.

The court's order set the hearing for Saturday.

Defendants named in the petition are William Joseph Simmons, Emperor, Rev. Caleb Ridley, former imperial kludd or chaplain; J. O. Wood, editor of Search-Light; Henry J. Norton, W. H. Lathrop, Jr., William G. Thompson, E. J. Jones, Thomas H. Kight, C. W. Besom, N. H. Moore and the Knights of the Kamelia.

SAYS KLAN HAS HURT GEORGIA MORE THAN WEEVIL

The Atlanta

"The boll weevil has not hurt Georgia half so bad as the Ku-Klux Klan," said Deputy Sheriff C. Spencer, Thursday. "The Klan has driven the Negro out of Georgia and everybody knows how big a part the Negro has played on the Georgia farm. The people of Georgia are awake to the fact and are pleading for the Negro to come back, but he is not coming. A Negro, good or bad, won't stay in a place where terrorism rules as it does in certain parts of Georgia by reason of the Ku-Klux Klan."

Sheriff Spencer has just returned from a trip with his family to North Florida and Southern Georgia. He says conditions are much better in a business way in South Florida than they are in the sections he visited, but does not admit that the present comparison is anything new. South Florida's greater prosperity, he declares, is really record of considerable standing.

The sheriff when asked about the visit of Klansmen during his absence, reiterated his previous stand against the members of the masked order.

Atlanta, Ga.

"If the Klansmen's motives are so noble," said Mr. Spencer, "why do they insist on concealing their identity behind masks instead of coming out in the open like men and letting folks know where they live?"—Tampa Tribune.

KLAN REWARDS OFFERED IN FLOGGINGS

The Atlanta Georgian 8-12-23

General Nathan Bedford Forrest to Give $1,500 for Arrest and Conviction.

Atlanta, Ga.

Rewards of $1,500 each for arrest and conviction of any persons participating in a flogging in the State of Georgia were offered Thursday by General Nathan Bedford Forrest, grand dragon of the realm of Georgia of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan.

"Recent floggings in Macon and at the reformatory at Milledgeville have not only outraged Georgia but have given enemies of the klan an opportunity to villify the order on the assumption that the klan was involved in these outrages," said General Forrest.

"The Ku-Klux Klan stands for law and order as we have emphatically and repeatedly stated and now we are offering rewards and calling on our people to help trace the guilty parties. We believe that the step will not only stop floggings but will let the people generally know exactly where the klan stands."

LOCAL KLAN QUITS NATIONAL ORDER

Atlanta Constitution

Nathan Bedford Forrest klan, No. 1, "the mother klan of the world," at a meeting held in its klavern last night voted to sever all connection for the present with the national organization, and at "no time in the future recognize, contribute to, or in any manner affiliate with the national organization, until such time as the national organization has been purged and different officials placed in control thereof, who have the interests of the organization only in mind and at heart." 7-30-23

The resolution stated that the Atlanta klan will not return to the national fold until these conditions are met, but "in the meantime to continue our work as klansmen, separate and apart from the national organization."

The reasons for taking this action are set forth in the resolution as follows:

"Therefore, be it resolved, That we, in our klavern assembled do hereby honestly, fearlessly, as men, which God hath given, enter our most stringent protest against the present regime in power and control of the national organization of the Knights of Ku Klux Klan and their henchmen; and do by this resolution, notify and advise the klansmen of the union, that, in our judgment, from an unbiased viewpoint, and as original klansmen, familiar with the workings of the order, that they are being hoodwinked by a set of officials and hired men, into permitting and sanctioning, without full knowledge, the pilfering of their treasury for illegal purposes, for personal, political purposes and for the perpetuating of themselves in office, and exploiting the funds and principals of the organization."

The resolution pays high praise to Emperor William J. Simmons, founder of the klan, and commends him to the American public and "klansmen everywhere."

Passage of the resolution follows the recent action of the national organization in suspending Nathan Bedford Forrest klan as the result of the non-payment of dues claimed by the heads of the order. The local organization claimed that the dues were not due, on the ground that the national organization already had in its possession funds belonging to the Atlanta body.

CLAIM TO IDENTIFY MACON FLOGGERS

The Constitution

Macon, Ga., August 27.—Two of the three Hudson brothers, S. F. and J. C. Hudson, held here in connection with a recent flogging case, were tonight, county police announced, identifid as having been members of a party of men which kidnaped Ollie Perry and severely whipped him. The Hudsons, together with their brother, S. F. Hudson, were arrested while attempting to flog a negro near here a fortnight ago. 8-28-23

The arrest of the trio, the police said, was responsible in bringing to an end a reign of terror which prevailed here after almost a score of flogging cases were reported.

County officials said tonight the brothers were identified by two men who were in a store operated by Perry when it was invaded by masked men. They told the police they remonstrated with the alleged kidnappers and were subdued. Perry, the police said, was undecided as to the identity of the Hudsons.

Perry is said to be a tubercular victim, and since the whipping his condition has been pronounced serious by doctors.

Additional charges of rioting, and assault and battery will be filed against the Hudsons tomorrow, the police said. Hearing in connection with the charges growing out of the alleged flogging of a negro is scheduled to be given the Hudsons early in September.

Georgia Legislature Receives Measure to Forbid Practice—Resolution on Darwin

ATLANTA, GA., July 23.—Wearing of facial masks in public would be forbidden and the names of all members of secret and fraternal organizations would be ordered listed with county court officials under a measure introduced in the Georgia house of representatives today.

The bill is identical with a measure presented earlier in the session, and which has not yet been brought out by committee. 7-24-23

William J. Bryan's anti-Darwin and related preachments came in for consideration in the house with the introduction of a resolution declaring it to be the wish of the general assembly that no teacher in public schools or colleges who is paid in full or in part by the state shall teach agnosticism, atheism or Darwinism or any other hypothesis that links man in blood relationship to any other specias. Action on the resolution will be taken later.

CLARKE DENIES ACCEPTING POST AS KLAN CHIEF

Atlanta Constitution

Edward Young Clarke, former acting imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, has not decided to assume leadership of the organization in compliance with the request of Emperor William Joseph Simmons, he informed The Constitution Monday in a telegram from Indianapolis, Ind. 8-21-23

"The statement printed here this morning that I have accepted the offer is absolutely false," he said. "I have come to no decision and will not do so until I return to Atlanta for consultation with high officials of the organization."

The former acting imperial wizard was asked by Emperor Simmons to take charge of the klan's affairs and "restore harmony within the order."

KLAN NO. 1 SUSPENDED BY DRAGON

Gen. Forrest Says Atlanta Body Has Failed to Pay Its Dues.

The charter of Klan No. 1, of Atlanta—the first body of the Ku-Klux Klan to be organized—has been suspended by General Nathan Bedford Forrest, grand dragon for the State of Georgia, it was revealed Friday.

Failure of Klan No. 1 to pay its regular dues to the state organization was given as the cause of the suspension.

The order of suspension was signed by General Forrest early this week.

When asked concerning this action, General Forrest said he was sure the matter would be adjusted satisfactorily soon and the Klan restored to active membership.

"The law of the Ku-Klux Klan provides that any Klan failing to pay its dues shall be suspended automatically," said General Forrest.

According to General Forrest, no reason was assigned by officials of Klan No. 1 for their failure to turn over the required money to the state organization.

Henry C. Norton, cyclops of Klan No. 1—head of the organization—was out of the city Friday and could not be reached for a statement. Other officials declined to discuss the suspension and its causes.

FLOG AND SHOOT IN GA.—FLOG IN TEXAS—BURN FIERY CROSSES ALL OVER OKLA.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 18, 1923.—Police are reported to have engaged in a pistol battle in front of the Macon Terminal Station today with an alleged flogging gang, which had kidnapped a white man.

Cries for help came from an automobile, 50 yards from the entrance of the station. A group of men who responded faced several shots. They dodged to cover and Patrolman Rowe started toward the autotmobile, returning the fire.

The kidnappers sped away and as they passed witnesses said they could be seen beating someone in the rear seat.

GEORGIA PREPARES ANTI-MASKING ACT

Bill Introduced Makes It Unlawful to Wear Head Covering Out of Lodge

ATLANTA, GA., July 9.—Capital removel, anti-masking and taxation, marked today's session of the Georgia legislature.

Definite dispositions should be made of the capital removal questions, declares the resolution introduced by Representatives Hixford of Clinch, and Hillhouse of Worth, and which calls for hearings on the subject by a joint committee will be instructed to investigate the methods and advisability of submitting to the voters the question of capital removal, and authorized to relieve from Macon or any of the official bodies of Macon proposals to bear the expense or part of the expense of moving the capital there.

The house was presented with a new tax question proposal by Representative Grovenstein of Effingham, who would have the ways and means committee recommend a tax system providing that all property returned to the comptroller general of Georgia be taxed as at present and supplemented by a gross sales tax of not more than one-half of one per cent, a real and personal property tax or not more than one-half of one per cent and an income tax. The income tax would range from one dollar on $1,000 to $1,500 incomes, to one and one-half per cent on incomes above $4,000.

The anti-masking bill, aimed at secret societies was introduced in the house by Representative Bozeman of Worth, and, in addition to making unlawful the wearing of masks or other covering of the head outside lodge rooms, directs all secret societies to list the names of their officers and members with the superior court clerk of the county in which they meet. Misdemeanor penalties are provided in the measure for failure to comply.

The senate's calendar was short. It included a bill by Senator Stovall of the twenty-ninth, amending the act providing for the reading of the Bible in all public schools, and requiring that at least one chapter a day of the Bible be read in every educational institution receiving state funds.

HEAD OF ATLANTA KLAN IS EXPECTED TO PAY DUES TODAY

Dues of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, have not been paid to the office of the grand dragon for Georgia, owing to the absence from the city of Henry C. Norton, exalted cyclops, local klansmen stated Friday.

The explanation followed the announcement by General Nathan Bedford Forrest, grand dragon, that the Atlanta klan, named for his grandfather, had been automatically suspended due to its failure to remit to state headquarters the per capita tax due.

The exalted cyclops was expected to arrive in Atlanta some time Friday night, it was stated. Klansmen believed Friday that his first act will be to pay the funds into the state organization, such action automatically reinstating the local klan.

'Ready for Floggers' Victim's Warning

MOULTRIE, Ga., August 24.—"When I answer a summons at my front door in the future, no matter who my visitors are, I'll be ready to receive them," Henry Chaney, who was taken out several weeks ago and flogged by a party of five masked men, said today.

"When I think about that 20 licks they gave me and the walk of two miles back to my home, it makes me so mad that I almost bust," he added. Cheney said that he didn't recognize any of his assailants and since he can't go into court, he says he hopes they will try to "wait on him again." He said he was told that he hadn't been treating his family right.

MACON, GA., August 11.—Neither county officers nor the police had made any arrests in connection with four whippings on Friday night up to a late hour tonight. The officers insisted that they had nothing to work upon; that the victims were unable to identify the men who flogged them.

R. E. Bobo one of the men whipped tonight said that he had been given 48 hours in which to leave the city on penalty of death. He said that he had done nothing wrong, and that accusations of his kidnappers were false. The man said that his friends had advised him to disregard the warning.

Ollie M. Perry, another victim of the whipping, is said to be a victim of tuberculosis. He recently returned from the state's tubercular hospital at Alto, Ga. Perry was so badly whipped that it was said tonight he had little chance to recover.

CHARGES DENTIST IS WHIPPING BOSS

Macon Lawyer Says Lawlessness in Town is Organized Effort of Ku Klux Klan

MACON, GA., August 29.—Charles H. Hall, an attorney, today charged before a local civic club that "lawlessness in Macon is an organized effort of the Ku Klux Klan and that a local dentist is the whipping boss of the organization," according to a story published tonight in early editions of the Macon Telegraph.

Hall, according to the Telegraph, mentioned no names, but he presented resolutions, which were adopted, calling upon "the officers of the city and county to put an end to such depradations."

"If rumors of a prominent dentist's connection with flogging activities are true, law enforcement officers should take immediate action," Mr. Hall is quoted as saying.

A reign of terror existed here a fortnight ago when organized flogging parties according to the police, kidnapped a score or more of men, carried them into nearby woods and severely flogged them. Three brothers are now being held in jail in connection with the flogging cases, after the police charge, they were caught whipping a negro, and also identified as being members of a party that flogged Ollie M. Perry.

The arrest of the trio and Gov. Walker's threats of placing Macon under martial law resulted in placing a check on the floggers' activities

While Mr. Hall was addressing one civic club, George S. Jones, another attorney appeared before another civic body which like the first is composed of prominent business and professional men. Mr. Jones called upon the chief of police to resign, and urged that the police department be reorganized at once.

The Ku Klux Klan, however, according to the newspaper, denied any knowledge of the whippings as an organization, and in conference here a few days ago with Sheriff Hicks, a reward of $1,500 was offered by the Ku Klux Klan for capture and conviction of the floggers.

The three brothers who are in jail will be placed on trial on September 10.

Much activity was displayed by city and county authorities tonight when they received information that there would be more whippings, according to them.

Mrs. Ollie M. Perry tonight notified the police that she had received two anonymous messages informing her that her husband would again be taken out and whipped. Perry has not recovered from the last whipping and doctors say that he is in a dying condition from tuberculosis and the whipping. The police are guarding his home.

ARREST IS MADE IN GEORGIA FLOGGING

Governor of Georgia Offers Rewards for Leaders and Members of Party

ATLANTA, GA., Aug. 11.—The "full power of the executive department will be used" to stop the "series of floggings in Macon, Bibb county and other mob outrages in the state," Governor Walker stated tonight, in announcing rewards for the arrest, with evidence to convict, the persons connected with the recent whippings in Macon and an invasion of the state reformatory, at Milledgeville.

The governor offered a reward of $500 for the leader of the Macon flogging party and $100 each for each member. He offered similar rewards for the leader and members of the mob which invaded the state reformatory.

"I am going to the limit of my authority to put a stop to these whippings in Bibb county," the governor stated. "The mob outrages in other parts of the state also must come to an end. The law of the state will be upheld."

The governor's action came after he had investigated both the Bibb county floggings and the occurrence at Milledgeville. In his proclamation offering the rewards, the governor charged the Baldwin county mob with committing the offense of rioting and later attacking Jim Douglas, negro janitor at the state reformatory.

The Bibb county floggings began several months ago, when whippings were administered Dr. Eugene Schrieber, formerly of Boston; Dr. R. N. Mills, Lynwood, L. Bright and others. Mrs. Frederick Pace of New York was taken captive by the party when Bright was whipped but was not flogged.

Thursday night, four men were flogged and left in the woods near Macon, according to reports given the police. R. E. Bobo, proprietor of a small grocery store; Ollie M. Perrey, under indictment for alleged illicit liquor traffic; Gus Roberts, a reported friend of Perry, and J. B. Goodyear, were the men said to have been whipped.

Nolan is accused of being the moving spirit in a visit to the reformatory of a band of 25 or 30 men who sought to seize Tom and Mary Thomas, negro attendants, for the purpose of flogging them. Nolan is said to have had a grudge against the negroes because of his dismissal from the institution where he had been a guard for 15 years.

The band failed to get the negroes because of armed resistance.

Earlier the same night the mob seized Jim Douglas, brother of Thomas and administered a severe lashing, because he would not tell them where Thomas could be found.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 11.—The first arrest in connection with whippings in Middle Georgia took place here late today, when J. J. Nolan, former guard at the state training school for boys, was taken into custody on a charge of inciting to riot.

The arrest was made by Sheriff S. L. Terry. Preliminary hearing will take place next Saturday.

Mrs. Orion Manson, superintendent of the boys' training school, announced tonight that a machine gun with experienced operator, had been set up at the school for the purpose of protecting the inmates and the people employed there. She also said that other means had been taken to protect the institution from any possible attack.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug 11.—Convinced that Tulsa authorities are making an exhaustive investigation of the flogging there last night by a band of unidentified men of Nathan Hantman, Gov. J. C. Walton let it be known here today that he does not contemplate state action in the affair.

The governor declared he was satisfied with the efforts being made by Tulsa County officers to apprehend the members of the mob.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 18.—Police engaged in a pistol battle in front of the Macon Terminal Station early today with an alleged flogging gang, who had kidnaped a white man.

Cries for help came from an automobile, 50 yards from the main entrance of the station. A group of men who responded faced several shots. They dodged to cover and Patrolman Rowe started toward the automobile. He was fired upon and returned the fire.

The kidnappers speeded away from the station, and as they passed they could be seen beating someone in the rear seat, it was said by witnesses.

The police commandeered an automobile and pursued the flogging machine toward East Macon, losing it in the chase. Several more shots were exchanged in this chase.

The victim of the kidnaping, according to the police, made no report of the affair, and they profess not to know the name of the victim.

The sheriff's office had just established a motorcycle patrol to meet st such emergencies, but it did not work to perfection the first night after being established.

Police, however, reported that they had the automobile with kidnapers and the victim bottled up in a dead-end street in East Macon when the machine suddenly turned around and dashed through them. No shots were fired then. No arrests have been made.

Series of Kipnapings.

The kidnaping and shooting today followed a series of others during the last 10 days. A week ago Thursday four men were kidnaped. Three of these have left the city, in response to threats that they would be killed if they remained here.

A fourth man, Ollie M. Perry, under federal indictment for illicit liquor traffic, is in a helpless condition in his home here, doctors fearing that he can not live. Perry is a victim of tuberculosis. The skin was worn from his back during the beating and blood oozed from the broken flesh.

Previous to this series of whippings there are a number of others including Dr. R. N. Mills. Dr. Eugene Schrieber, Lynwood Bright and others. In the Bright case Mrs. Fredericka Pace, of New York, also was kidnaped and taken to the scene of the whipping, but she was not harmed.

Rewards totaling $2,100 have been offered for the arrest and conviction of the kidnaping gang.

MILLEDGEVILLE, GA., Aug. 11.—The first arrest in connection with whippings in middle Georgia took place here late today when J. J. Nolan former guard at the state training school for boys, was taken into custody on a charge of inciting to riot.

The arrest was made by Sheriff S. L. Terry. Preliminary hearing will take place next Saturday.

Mrs. Orion Manson, superintendent of the boys training school, announced tonight that a machine with an experienced operator had been set up at the school for the purpose of protecting the inmates and the people employed there. She also said that other means had been taken to protect the institution from any possible attack.

Mrs. Manson declared tonight she had received threats that the buildings housing the negro boys at the institution would be dynamited. She added that last night approximately twenty-five cars were seen parked about two miles from the reformatory but because, she said, of the heavy guard throughout the buildings no effort was made to come near the grounds.

Montgomery Advertiser

The superintendent also declared she had received an ultimatum from the inmates, their ages ranging from 6 to 18 years, that they would run away in a body if adequate protection was not furnished them. There are about two hundred youngsters at the institution.

Mrs. Manson said she had suspicioned Nolan and following his arrest he had been positively identified by several of the school inmates. Nolan made several threats to return and "beat those negroes to death," Mrs. Manson said, and she had feared trouble from him since his discharge some time ago.

Nolan expressed the belief, Mrs. Manson said, at the time of his dismissal that "they were going to hire a negro in his place." He left the grounds after making several remarks about getting even with the negroes, added the superintendent. She said that no one had filled the vacancy.

Adjutant General Cox in Report to Governor Recommends No Martial Law at Present Time.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Macon, August 19.—The first gang of alleged kidnapers and floggers which have been terrorizing Macon for the last six months was capturd here tonight by sheriff officers. Three white men, brothers, S. R. Hudson, C. F. Hudson and J. C. Hudson, were taken to jail tonight after they had been captured, officers said, while in the act of flogging two negroes.

When one of the men jumped onto the running board of the negroe's automobile and commanded him to stop, the negro stepped on the gas and left the two brothers at the roadside. The white man in the car whistled for his brothers to join him, but before they could do so the big automobile was plunged into an embankment.

Police Are Warned.

Persons passing the scene in other cars phoned the sheriff's office and immediately twenty men were rushing to the scene in automobiles and motorcycles. The whole city and county anti-flogging squad was on the way.

Three miles out the Clinton road the sheriff's force claim to have come up on the members of the gang, struggling with the negro. Farther back on the same road was an untagged seven - passenger automobile which the brothers were said to have used. Still further back was a coupe which also is said to have been used by the same gang.

There may have been others in the whipping party of tonight. The authorities are still investigating.

In the tonneau of the larger car the sheriff's deputies found three leather masks and one cloth mask. Another mask was said to have been worn by one of the Hudsons as he jumped onto the running board of the negro's machine. He still wore the mask, the officers said, when they reached the scene.

There was a piece of heavy felt, which was wet, and which the sheriff's deputies said was for use as a gag.

The sheriff's force reported that the Hudsons had given them considerable trouble in recent years.

On Own Hook.

It was the opinion of the sheriff's office that the Hudsons were not attached to any organized flogging band, but were operating on their own hook.

S. R. Hudson gave his age as 35 years, C. F. as 27 and J. C. as 24. The county jailer was instructed not to accept bond for the men in the event any be offered during the night, pending a decision as to the other charges to be placed against the men.

During the days of old Camp Wheeler, according to the sheriff's office, the Hudsons figured in numerous difficulties. Some of them were taxicab drivers, it was stated, and one of them killed another taxicab driver, he sheriff said.

Because of the past record of the Hudsons, it was learned at the sheriff's office an hour after the arrests, an investigation is being made to determine if they are paid gangsters, receiving a certain amount of money for each flogging.

FIGHT AGAINST RECEIVERSHIP WON BY KLAN

Atlanta Georgian 2-21-23

Supreme Court Denies Petition of Insurgent Members Against K. K. K.

The Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan were upheld in every phase of their fight against a receivership sought by certain insurgent members, in a decision rendered Tuesday by the Georgia Supreme Court. The higher court affirmed the decision of Judge George L. Bell in Fulton Superior Court sustaining a general demurrer by attorneys for the klan.

The action seeking a receivership for the klan and injunctions against its officers was brought by Harry B. Terrell, Lloyd P. Hooper, F. W. Atkins, A. J. Padon and 170 other klansmen or former klansmen. The contention was that Terrell and other members of the order had been expelled as the result of charges brought by them against Edward Young Clarke and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler.

Taking up the various prayers in the petition, Justice Beck, writing the decision of the Supreme Court, holds that the plaintiffs could not ask an injunction to prevent the klan from expelling them, although they could appeal from such an expulsion after it took place.

"The facts set forth in the suit do not authorize the appointment of a receiver for the klan, because of the purchase of a home for the imperial wizard, and other similar expenditures," the Supreme Court holds, "because such expenditures were made from funds that had been donated by members of the order, and the plaintiffs had no financial interest in them."

The Supreme Court also holds that a court of equity could not compel Clarke and Mrs. Tyler to cancel a claim of $5,000 for advertising presented to the klan, as asked by the plaintiffs in the case.

"The remedy in this instance would have been for the objecting members to ask the officials to refuse to pay the claim, and then they might have maintained a suit to protect the funds of the organization," he ruling states.

RADICAL MEASURES.

"A court of equity could not invoke such radical measures as to enjoin the further connection of Clarke and Mrs. Tyler with the klan, the by-laws of which provide ample machinery to prefer charges and try them," the opinion continues. "The remedy in this instance was within the order. It is true that the plaintiffs did make charges, but they were preferred in November and the suit filed in December, about 30 days later, and although they had not been acted upon at that time, there is nothing to show that they will not be acted upon."

The prayer that an injunction be granted to prevent the klan from buying a university is denied on the theory that it is not shown that such a purchase would not be in line with the policies pursued by the order.

REWARD OFFERED FOR DYNAMITERS IN CAVE SPRING

Atlanta Constitution 2-17-23

Rome, Ga., February 13.—(Special.)—The little city of Cave Spring, 14 miles from Rome, in Floyd county, was thrown into a panic late Monday night by an explosion of dynamite which occurred in the negro quarter near the home of Rene Stocks, an old colored man, blew out the windows of the house and otherwise badly damaged it. No one was injured. The negro was ill and in bed.

A short time ago he had received a note warning him to leave Cave Spring. A number of other negroes had received similar notes but had been told by the mayor and other leading white citizens to pay no attention to them as it was thought that probably boys were trying to frighten them, in fun. 2/13/23

The city of Cave Spring has offered a reward of $200 for the apprehension of the persons who caused the explosion Monday night and Governor Hardwick has been urged to supplement the amount for the state.

Marietta Syrian Asks Governor To Protect Him

Atlanta Constitution 3/7/23

Second Anonymous Warning to Leave Town Given Deraney Tuesday.

Served with a second warning that he must at once leave Marietta, Charles Deraney, Syrian, whose home there was dynamited several weeks ago, on Tuesday appealed to Governor Hardwick for protection. He was assured that every power of the state would be called upon to provide full protection both for himself and all other Syrian citizens of Marietta.

"move move move move

"you have had ample warning and this is final warning to you to move away from here now you said you wanted sixty days to make your arrangements and close your business and sell out and we gave it you The only Syrians who were not objectionable have gone and we intend to see that you leave or you may be hauled out and not be able to attend the next Mass Meeting."

Following the dynamiting of Deraney's house, a mass meeting of Marietta citizens had been held and resolutions denouncing the outrage were unanimously adopted.

The French government, which holds a mandate over Syria, inquired through the state department at Washington for details of the affair, but it was discovered that Deraney is a naturalized American citizen.

Deraney was accompanied to Governor Hardwick's office on Tuesday by John A. Manget, Atlanta business man, who has offered a personal reward for the apprehension of the dynamiters and by E. C. Moore, an Atlanta Syrian. While they were in his office, Governor Hardwick called Mayor Gordon Gann, of Marietta, over the telephone and called upon the city authorities to provide ample protection for all Syrians there. He pointed out that naturalized citizens are entitled to this protection as American citizens, and unnaturalized Syrians are entitled to it under international agreements with their own governments.

E. Y. CLARKE SEVERS KLAN CONNECTIONS

Atlanta Constitution Atlanta, Ga. 3/7/23

Former Propagation Chief's Contract Cancelled by Imperial Wizard.

Formal announcement of Edward Young Clark's severance of all official connection with the Ku Klux Klan was made Tuesday by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan. Mr. Clarke formerly headed the department of propagation.

Cancellation of the contract between Clarke and the klan was in accordance with the announcement last November at the klonvokation, that the propagation work would, within a reasonable time, be assumed and carried on by imperial headquarters. The announcement of the imperial wizard follows:

Edward Young Clarke no longer has any official connection with the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. He ceased to function as head of the former propagation department, now the department of extension, when I, under the authority vested in me as imperial wizard, cancelled the contract under which Mr. Clarke was operating.

The propagation work has been absorbed by imperial headquarters, and now is being conducted from the imperial palace under my sole direction and control as administrative and executive head of the order.

Not only has Mr. Clarke ceased to be an official of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, but it also is true that he no longer derives one cent of revenue from this organization. Money deirved from the propagation phase of our activities now is being turned back into the extension work of the order to its immeasureable benefit.

I cancelled the contract under which Mr. Clarke was working, for the good of the order. There was a clause in this contract which provided that it could be terminated at any time by either party thereto.

At the first klonvokation, or national convention of the klan, held in Atlanta in November, 1922, announcement was made through the press of the nation that Mr. Clarke would surrender the propagation work to the imperial headquarters within a reasonably short time. Several months having elapsed. I have now acted along the lines indicated by the klansmen of the nation at their national gathering.

With all the funds derived from extension work now available for broadening the bounds of the invisible empire and for the upbuilding of the spirit of real Americanism throughout the nation, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is assured of growth even more vigorous and amazing than that which has characterized its progress in the past.

H. W. EVANS,
Imperial Wizard.

Organizer of Department Turns It Over to Imperial Office.

All propagation activities of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will be under the direct supervision of imperial headquarters in the future, it was announced Friday. Edward Young Clarke, who organized this department and has been at the head for several years, has turned over the entire machinery and control of this branch of the work to the imperial office.

The transfer of this activity to imperial headquarters is in conformity to a plan announced last November. Since that time arrangements for the change have been going forward as rapidly as possible. Mr. Clarke and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, gave out the following official statement Friday:

"In conformity with the general plan announced to the press in November of last year, Edward Young Clarke today formally turned over to the imperial headquarters of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan the entire machinery and the control of the propagation department of the order, which department he organized, and of which he has been the head.

"Effective today, all propagation activities of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan will be under the guidance and direction of imperial headquarters.

Upholds Judge Bell's Ac-

The supreme court of Georgia, in a decision rendered Tuesday, upheld the lower court in its action in throwing out the petition of Harry B. Terrell and his insurgent faction of the Ku Klux Klan, for a receivership for that organization.

Judge George L. Bell, of Fulton court, had originally thrown out the Terrell petition on a general demurrer presented by attorneys for the klan, for E. Y. Clarke and for Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler. The supreme court yesterday upheld this ruling.

The petition contained five prayers, all of which were thrown out by the supreme court.

The first prayed that the klan be enjoined from banishing the petitioners. The court held that they had not been banished and had not been tried, therefore no case was presented to the court.

Secondly, they asked the appointment of a receiver, claiming that financial affairs of the order were being mismanaged and that Mr. Clarke and Mrs. Tyler were receiving too high compensation for their services. On this point the court said: "The facts do not authorize the appointment of a receiver. The petitioners have no financial interest in the property of the klan. The money they and other members paid was a donation."

The third prayer asked an order to compel Mr. Clarke to cancel an alleged claim of indebtedness by the klan to him. The court held that such a question could not prope: come before a court of equity.

The fourth and fifth prayer that Mr. Clarke and Mrs. T be enjoined from further official nec- tion with the klan or control c its affairs. On these points the urt held that "a court of equity wo not adopt these radical measures in advance of some action by the order itself, in view of the fact that the order has ample machinery to prefer charges and try those charges against any of its members."

Names attached to the petition included Harry B. Terrell, Lloyd P. Hooper, A. J. Padon and 170 others. They were represented by Attorney William H. Terrell an uncle of Harry B. Terrell, while the klan was represented by Attorney Ben H. Sullivan, Westmoreland & Smith and Ethridge, Sams & Ethridge.

CLARKE'S HEARING SET FOR MARCH 12 IN FEDERAL COURT

Former Acting Wizard's Bond Is Raised From $1000 to $5000

EIGHT JURORS BELONG TO KLAN

3/6/23

At the afternoon session of federal court Monday, Judge J. C. Hutcheson set March 12 as the date of hearing in the case of E. Y. Clarke, former acting imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, who was indicted by the grand jury last week on a charge of violating the Mann act.

Earlier in the day the court had raised bond in the case from $1000 to $5000. Clarke made $1000 bond following a hearing before the United States comissioner in Atlanta last Saturday. A "capias instanter" requiring Clarke's immediate presence in court here has been dispatched to Atlanta

Eight Jurors Klansmen

Monday morning it was brought out that eight members of the spring term petit jury are members of the Klan, when, in impaneling the jury, Judge Hutcheson asked a question similar to that put to grand jury members last Monday. The Judge told the jurors to "state whether or not you are members of a fraternal organization, and if so, what organization."

The eight who declared membership in the Klan were W. M. Pinchard, Houston; F. T. Cole, Bryan; M. S. Cayton, Livingston; A. E. Clarkson, Houston; A. M. Waldrop, Bryan; J. R. Elmore, Shepherd; J. L. Cooper, Madison; and J. L. Dabney, Evergreen.

Practically every fraternal organization in the city was represented by one or more of the 33 petit jurymen. There were two members of the Knights of Columbus.

Judge Issues Warning

In instructing the jury Judge Hutcheson warned them against two species of "virtue" which he found prevalent from time to time. One was the disposition on the part of jurors not to consider the "mote" in another's eye because of the "beam" which might be in their own. The other was represented by a desire to "clean up the community" by the simple process of finding every man accused of crime guilty.

"I am glad to find you are affected by neither," Judge Hutcheson said in laying down the principles of justice. He asked the jurors to find a man guilty only when the government had proved that fact.

Other questions presented to the veniremen by the court were whether they were prejudiced against railroad companies, and if they were opposed to or favored the enforcement of the Volstead act, and the conviction of those guilty of its violation.

Negro is Acquitted

One case was presented to the jury Monday. It was that of Carroll Humphreys, negro preacher, charged with the possession of liquor, and resulted in an acquittal.

The afternoon session began with the calling of some 14 cases on which caplases have been issued and bonds forfeited. Following this, a few criminal cases not heretofore set were called for setting.

Judge Hutcheson then handed down a number of fines and sentences on pleas of guilty.

A man 79 years old, with white hair, moustache and goatee, appeared before the court to plead guilty to a charge of counterfeiting. He was arrested in Brownsville last week by a government secret service agent, who confiscated a number of bills alleged to have been made by a photographic process. The bills were presented to the court. They were replicas of federal reserve notes, ranging in denomination from $1 to $10. In reply to a question from the judge, the aged defendant stated he had printed the bills on "ordinary typewriter paper."

A Confederate Veteran.

Further inquiries from the court revealed that the defendant was a Confederate veteran, now drawing a pension from the State of Louisiana, where he resided prior to going to Brownsville. He said he had been a farmer, but following heavy losses in cotton about 10 years ago, had taken to photography.

"How long have you had in your mind the matter of making counterfeit bills by photography?" the judge asked.

"I have been experimenting for about a year," was the reply, and the defendant then said he had hoped to circulate the bills in Mexico to help support his daughter and her child.

"Is your daughter here?" Judge Hutcheson asked.

The defendant said she was, and a bailiff was dispatched for her. Put on the stand, she broke down as she related to the court how her father had always been a law-abiding man, and that she knew nothing of his reason of going to Brownsville.

All the while, the old man, with his deep-set eyes and stern, down-drooping moustache, stood unmoved. At the end of his daughter's recital, Judge Hutcheson said:

Wearer of Gray Paroled.

"I would hate to impose a penitentiary sentence on a man as old as you. In a few years maybe the Lord will take you in. Meanwhile, I will continue your case to the next term of court and release you on recognizance to your daughter. Once it was your duty to look after her; now it is hers to look after you. If you are obedient and do as she says, perhaps your case will finally be dismissed. If you try counterfeiting again, I shall bring you back here and give you a penitentiary sentence, notwithstanding your age and army record."

The daughter smiled through her tears as she led her charge out. But he old martinet's stern expression never altered.

A sentence of eighteen months in Atlanta prison was given a man 39 years old, who claimed he had tried in vain every known cure for the dope habit. He was charged with possession of morphine.

"There is only one kind of cure that will do you any good," said the judge, "and that is to put you where you can't get morphine for a long enough time to kill you or cure you."

The sentence was originally made two years in Leavenworth but was reduced to eighteen months in Atlanta on the defendant's plea that he was forever "of the stuff" this time, that he wanted to follow the sea when he came out of prison, and would like to be near a port.

Bedroom Slippers in Court.

A Mexican youth appeared in a pair of natty bedroom slippers to answer a charge of possession of intoxicating liquor, and after a lengthy explanation, was given till 10 o'clock Tuesday morning to raise a $50 fine and recover his shoes from a friend. The alternative was 30 days in jail.

Another white-haired man of 68 was assessed $1000 for manufacturing wine in large quantities near Rose Hill. He went to jail in default of the fine.

The second case of Jack Darling, who gained some notoriety by riding into Houston on the cowcatcher of a train to answer a federal charge some time ago, was set for Friday. This time Jack is charged with obtaining $46 by impersonating a federal officer.

If Colonel W. J. Simmons is undertaking to organize a woman's organization called Kamelia, it is in his capacity as a private individual and not through his connection with the klan, Dr. Evans stated. Colonel Simmons, who holds the tite of "Emperor" in the klan, announced recently that another an organization of women will be formed along the lines of the klan. Texas.

Dr. Evans said that the sole executive authority of the klan is reposed in him as imperial wizard.

KU KLUX KLAN STAGES PARADE AT DECATUR, GA.

Atlanta Constitution

Decatur, Ga., March 13.—(Special.) Members of the local branch of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan staged a large and impressive parade through the principal streets of Decatur tonight. More than 500 klansmen were in the line. 3-14-23

The parade was headed by a drum and bugle corps, and the klansmen carried flaming red torches. All were dressed in the official white robes and helmets of the order.

It is understood that a large class was "naturalized" by the local klan following the parade. Klansmen from many nearby klans are understood to have been present for the "naturalization" ceremony.

CURLAT RECEIVES WARNING LETTER SIGNED BY "K. K. K."

Atlanta Constitution

Police are investigating the receipt of a threatening letter by Jake Curlat, operator of a soda fountain and lunch stand, on Butler street across from Grady hospital which was signed "K. K. K.," warning Curlat to take up his abode elsewhere. 3/21/23

Secretary W. H. Rossman, of the Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1 stated, after inspecting the letter, that there was nothing to indicate that it was written by any member of the Ku Klux Klan, and certainly by no officer of that organization.

Police expressed the belief that the letter was intended as a practical joke, or by some one of defective mind.

GEORGIA WILL NOT PROSECUTE CASES

Atlanta Constitution

The state of Georgia will take no active part in the prosecution of the defendants in the famous flogging cases now awaiting trial in Macon and Milledgeville. 9-9-23

This decision was reached Saturday morning after a conference between Governor Clifford Walker and Attorney-General George M. Napier, at which time it was decided that the Bibb county authorities were taking such excellent care of the state's interests that it would be unnecessary unless there be further developments, for any action from the capitol.

After the conference, Governor Walker issued a statement on the subject, which read as follows:

"I have had under consideration the employment of special counsel to assist in the prosecution of the defendants in the flogging cases at Macon and Milledgeville. Upon investigation I find that Solicitor Moore, of Macon, has the prosecution well in hand and I am advised that he will be able to take care of the state's interest in the matter and, unless there be further developments, the case will be allowed to rest with him in charge."

It was pointed out Saturday, at the capitol, that in the Milledgeville cases at least, the state will be well within the bounds of propriety in actively assisting the prosecution, if it is thought necessary. The outrages which were perpetrated at Milledgeville had as their intended victims employees of the Georgia Training School for Boys and took place on state-owned property, the lands occupied by the school.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923.

Oklahoma.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Oklahoma Moving on the Klan.

However it may be as to the lower house of the Oklahoma Legislature, its Senate has gone some way toward bringing the members of the Ku Klux Klan into public view and identification. It has passed a law of which the essential part prohibits the wearing of masks. This will at least make more dangerous than in the past those characteristic Klan activities by which its sentences to death, torture or banishment have been executed. 1-30-23

The Senators refused their approval to a section in the proposed law which required that the membership lists of all secret organizations in Oklahoma should be available for public inspection. The enemies of the Klan declare that this refusal renders the law worthless. That there is some basis for this belief is indicated by the vehemence with which the Klansmen in all parts of the country fought to keep their rosters secret, but it would be something quite new—something never before deemed necessary or even permissible—to exercise a compulsion of just this sort. The peculiar nature of the Ku Klux Klan, however, is sufficiently revealed by the fact that the members of all other secret societies are neither ashamed nor afraid to identify themselves by the wearing of badges or pins for everybody to see.

The fate of this bill in the Oklahoma House is in doubt, but the expectation is that efforts to lessen its rigors and preserve to the Klan its valued privilege of wearing hoods and cloaks will be made. These efforts will fail if the Senate stands its ground, and, anyway, it is manifest that the Klan's power in the State is no longer what it was. Its critics do not now walk in daily fear of the assassin's bullet or the lyncher's lash, and for that some thanks are due to ex-Governor WALTON, in spite of the unwisdom of his acts and his own vulnerability to attack.

America Now Has Its Bandits.

Almost the only element of the horrible lacking in the present revelations regarding the assassination of the two Brooklyn bank messengers lies in the fact that not only are the police free from any inculpation, but they have shown both energy and skill in the solving of a mystery that at first seemed wholly dark. It is not another Becker case.

That case, fortunately, stands alone in our police history. This one, however, is more than bad enough, and it is terrifying indeed to learn, not through mere rumor or unsupported assertion, but from evidence that will stand in court, that there are living here and daily moving freely about among us a considerable number of men who for hire or the hope of booty will undertake and carry to the most desperate conclusion any plan of robbery and murder that they can devise or others propose to them.

If these stories came from the Naples of the Camorra, from the Sicilian mountains or the wilds of Old Calabria, there would be in them a certain congruity with history and conditions. Here there is in them something of almost appalling novelty. We have had, of course, our full share of criminality and of criminals, but this seems, and we like to call it, un-American. Yet the heads of this grim conspiracy are not recently arrived immigrants; they are of native birth or long residence, products of our public schools.

That all of these wretches will have their deserved reward is made likely by the haste with which they are confessing everything except actual, direct murder; but, as the evidence of accomplices must be corroborated, the case of the police, strong as it is, still remains incomplete.

This, Too, Was Once "Un-American."

People with old-fashioned notions on the subject of feminine delicacies and proprieties are wondering, so far as they have given the "beauty contest" just decided in this city any attention, what sort of young women they are who thus submitted themselves to inspection and comparison. They are wondering, too, what sort of mothers and fathers—especially mothers—have they that they failed to get the once more than common home training which would have made them shrink aghast from the very thought of participating in such a competition.

It would not do, because it would not be true, to say that no decent girl would exhibit herself in this way, but certainly none would do it whose instincts were even a little nice or fine, who had been carefully lessoned in modesty and self-respect—who had been familiar in childhood with a mother who exemplified those qualities.

But even for the old-fashioned person of mossy and archaic notions there is one source of satisfaction to be derived from this episode. The winner of the first prize was a girl who confronted her judges with charms unassisted by any touch of paint or powder! So it is stated, at least, by the presumably veracious reporters, and it is to be hoped that they were glad to be able to make the statement.

If the arbiters of beauty had been as wise as their selection hinted their taste was good, they would have barred from their contest any girl who expected them to judge, not what she was, but what cosmetic arts could make her seem to be.

Witness Says State Clerks Aided in Oklahoma Klan Fight.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 9 (Associated Press).—Clerks of the State Highway Department wrote thousands of letters for Governor J. C. Walton in his canvass for funds with which to fight the Ku Klux Klan and checked an initiated petition authorizing the State Legislature to meet without Executive call, C. F. Bates, the department's Chief Clerk, testified today at the Governor's impeachment trial. 11-10-23

Bates told the Court that the Governor had used fifteen to twenty clerks and that from 10,000 to 20,000 letters soliciting funds were written. He declared that nearly 10,000 letters were sent out in reply to congratulations the Executive received on his fight with the Klan.

WITNESS SAYS WALTON BELONGED TO KU KLUX

Testifies to Administering the Oath to Oklahoma Governor.

(By the Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 13.—Dr. W. T. Tilly, former cyclops of the Muskogee, Okla., Ku Klux Klan, testified before a legislative investigation committee that Gov. J. C. Walton applied for membership in the klan, paid an initiation fee of $10 and took the oath of the organization, according to a report of the committee made public today.

The committee report quoted Dr. Tilly as saying he administered the obligation to the governor in the executive office here in the presence of Dr. E. A. Davenport, state health commissioner. Dr. Davenport was said to have testified before the committee in confirmation of Dr. Tilly's statement. No one else saw the oath administered, according to the testimony.

Testimony of Dr. Tilly given before the investigating committee follows, in part: 11-14-23

Question—"Were you present when the card seeking membership into the Ku Klux Klan was signed by J. C. Walton, or some one signed it for him?"

Dr. Tilly asked to consult his attorney and the request was granted.

Answer—"Well, my attorney advises me that it is absolutely necessary to answer the question, therefore, I will say—yes."

Q.—"Who was present, doctor, when that card was signed?"

A.—"Dr. A. E. Davenport, Gov. Walton and myself."

Signed in Walton's Office.

Q.—"Where were you when it was signed?"

A.—"In Gov. Walton's office in the state house. Dr. Davenport made the card out."

Q.—"He therefore wrote J. C. Walton's name on the card?"

A.—"Yes, sir."

Q.—"Did he do that in compliance with the wishes of J. C. Walton?"

A.—"The card was handed to Gov Walton and he said, 'Doc (meaning Dr. Davenport), you just fill the card out. I will answer the questions.'"

Q.—"And Dr. Davenport then filled the card out, signed J. C. Walton's name to it in the governor's presence?"

A.—"Yes, sir."

Q.—"How much money did the governor attach to the card or give to you as initiation fees?"

A.—"He gave me $10."

Q.—"In currency?"

A.—"Yes, a ten dollar bill."

Q.—"Did he give you that money in the presence of Dr. Davenport?"

A.—"Yes, sir."

Q.—"That being done what then happened?"

Klan Oath Administered.

Q.—"Did you administer the regular oath to Gov. Walton? The regular oath of the klan?"

A.—"Yes, sir."

Q.—"He took then, the regular oath of the Ku Klux Klan?"

A.—"Yes, sir, he took the same oath that I or any one else takes."

Q.—"By what authority, Dr. Tilly, did you administer that oath to him in his private chambers?"

A.—"By the authority of the great titan, Mr. Merriwether, and Dr. Edwin Debarr, the grand dragon of the klan for the state of Oklahoma. I was given verbal and written authority and authority over the phone."

Q.—"And pursuant to that authority you administered the regular oath of the klan to Gov. Walton?"

A.—"I did."

Q.—"Do you remember what day it was?"

A.—"Feb. 13, 1923."

Denial that he ever had subscribed to the oath of the Ku Klux Klan or that he paid the initiation fee in the secret organization was made here tonight by Gov. J. C. Walton in a written statement to the public.

The names of 55 members of the lower house of the Legislature, who Governor Walton said were represented to him as being members of the Ku Klux Klan, were included in the statement.

"Suffice it to say that there was a strenuous effort, amounting almost to intimidation, made to have me join the klan in February, during the session of the Legislature by certain parties, officials of the klan and some of them being in my official family, urging as a reason therefor that a majority of the members of the Legislature were members of the klan organization."

"I subscribed to no oath in the klan organization," Governor Walton asserted, "and none will be produced, nor will it be established that such an oath was taken by me or its membership fee paid as claimed."

As An Atlantic Monthly Reader Sees the Klan in Oklahoma.

Commercial Appeal

The Atlantic Monthly, one of the most conservative and at the same time best magazines in America, became interested in the Ku-Klux. In the November issue there is an illuminating story on the klux in Indiana. The editor of the Atlantic wrote to a friend in Oklahoma and got the following letter: Memphis, Tenn.

"In answer to a letter of ours (the Atlantic editor) asking about the klan situation in Oklahoma, we have received the following from a citizen of Oklahoma: 11-8-23

"'Dear Atlantic—You ask me about the present situation in Tulsa. Frankly I don't know what to say. It is easy to pass the matter with the statement that we are not affected by martial law, or by the klan, either. The daily life of the city goes on as usual. But back of everything is the tense feeling that comes from the manifestation of religious bigotry and of the secret rule of a hidden clique. The civil offices are unquestionably in the hands of the klan; and that fact makes it impossible for the governor to oust these officials. The testimony before the military court as to the outrages against citizens is almost incredible. Yesterday I was at the capitol at Oklahoma City. Guards were at the doors of the House and Senate chambers, and the governor's office literally swarmed with gunmen. Thirty-five members of the House were in caucus in the Skirvin Hotel, laying plans for the self-convening of the Legislature for the purpose of impeaching Gov. Walton.

"'Personally I do not see any satisfactory outcome of this matter until the federal government takes charge both of the investigation and of the military situation. The klan is in charge of fanatics who have some idea that they are heaven-sent crusaders to usher in a new day. The organizers have been very shrewd in gathering a large sum of money both for propaganda and for maintenance of offices and officers. I have tried to have if not a detached at least a semi-detached view of the situation; but I feel that one does not exaggerate in saying that the klan is the most dangerous force at large in the country today. For instance I have seen Tulsa in fifteen years grow from a village of twelve thousand people to a city of over one hundred thousand; and in all that time people of all religious beliefs and of all races mingled without any apparent clash. Since the klan was organized we have had a race riot, and a continued jarring among the citizens until today almost the sole topic of conversation is the klan and the governor.

"'This condition I consider typical of the south and perhaps of Indiana and Ohio. I sincerely wish that somebody could bring the matter to President Coolidge in such a way that he would make it known that the federal bureau of investigation would be at the service of the various states in their fights against the klan; and that in the last resort the army would be available to maintain the state governments. Serious opposition would then disappear in 24 hours.'"

OKLAHOMA HOUSE STANDS BY KLAN

Follows Senate Lead in Refusing to Make Secret Order Membership Public

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Dec. 6.—Like their colleagues in the senate, anti-Ku Klux Klan leaders in the lower house of the state legislature met a crushing defeat today in their attempt to make public the membership lists of secret organizations by legislation.

The house, in one of the stormiest meetings of the present session, voted down an amendment to the senate bill under consideration which would have compelled secret organizations to open their rosters for public inspection and then defeated amendments with virtually the same proviso which came in a steady stream from the anti-klan faction after the action on the initial proposal.

Opponents of the membership clauses maintained a clear majority of from five to 12 on each vote, and while there were no roll calls, it was noted that republican members, with but one exception voted solidly to kill the amendments.

The house chamber rank with tumultuous debate which the Ku Klux Klan both was eulogized and bitterly assailed.

Speaker W. D. McBee opened consideration of the bill with a plea for "reasonable, adequate," legislation and speaking in support of the first amendment, he declared that agitation over the issue such as now prevails would lead to a religious war ranking as the bloodiest in history unless it soon is ended.

INDICTMENTS LAID TO KU KLUX KLAN PLOT BY WALTON

Governor Submits Evidence; Grand Dragon Mum.

Oklahoma City, Dec. 9.—An echo of Oklahoma's bitter Ku Klux Klan controversy was heard in the district court here today in a preliminary hearing of evidence which the former governor, J. C. Walton, will use in support of his motion to quash six indictments charging him with criminal offenses while in office. The deposed executive's motion charges that he was indicted in fretherance of the Ku Klux Klan conspiracy, which he alleges was responsible for his impeachment and removal from office.

N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the klan in Oklahoma, created a sensation at the outset of the proceedings when he declined to answer questions of Walton's counscel pertaining to secret customs of the organization.

The hearing opened before a special judge today coincidentally with the filing of an appeal in the United States superme court in Washington by which Walton hopes to have the federal government intervene in the impeachment action against him on the grounds that the klan plotted with the state Legislature to oust him.

The day also was marked by an announcment from Walton that he is forming a national anti-klan association which he will head and which will be known as the National Society of American Free Men.

The grand dragon, Jewett, one of thirty or more witnesses summoned by the former executive, when asked as to the methods by which officers of the klan determined the identity of members, replied:

"I decline to answer."

Jewett admitted that two of the three Oklahoma county jury commissioners were members of the Ku Klux Klan and estimated the organization's strength in Oklahoma at 148,000.

Walton's attorneys issued a subpoena today for the manager of a local commercial telegraph company, requesting him to bring into court all telegrams exchanged in the last several months between Jewett and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan.

OFFICERS NAMED BY GRAND JURORS IN RIOTING PROBE

Alleged Anadarko Whippers Expected in Court Today

Associated Press Report.

ANADARKO, Okla., July 12.—Two men were at liberty on bond here tonight following their arrest on indictments returned yesterday by a special grand jury.

Roy Summers of Gracemont, a deputy sheriff, was taken into custody late today on a charge of not groving out of the alleged whipping last September of Claude Nathan.

The other was A. J. Morris, a local attorney, who made bond yesterday to appear at the September term of district court for trial on a charge of perjury.

Six other men against whom indictments were returned will appear in court tomorrow, when warrants will be served and they are expected to make bond, according to an announcement late today by W. L. Townsend, undersheriff.

They are George Atkins, a deputy sheriff, and Watt Caruth, town marshal at Carnegie, charged with Summers with being implicated in the Biddle whipping. Charles Goodwin, an Anadarko city official; John F. Ewall of Duncan; an unnamed defendant, charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice through alleged removal of Ku Klux Klan records from the jurisdiction of the district court, and Ollie Meadows, an attorney, indicted jointly with Morris.

It was announced today at the attorney general's office in Oklahoma City that a grand jury would be summoned in Chickasha July 23 to complete the investigation of the alleged whipping of Claude Nathan. The inquiry here revealed that the reported whipping occurred in Grady county, of which Chickasha is the county seat.

Klan-Ridden

The Oklahoma Senate has again refused to enact effective legislation against the "secrecy" abuses so conspicuously revealed in its own state. The reluctant consent of its majority to prohibit the wearing of masks in public amounts to a virtual confession that the abuses exist. Its rejection of the much more vital and essential safeguard will be widely interpreted as a confession that the "Invisible Empire" rules Oklahoma. Ex-Governor Walton's charge to that effect will accordingly be voted "a true bill" by disinterested observers throughout the country.

Oklahoma's misfortune—which is temporarily at worst and surely will be repaired soon or late by Oklahoma's own people—may have fortunate effect in other states. Its testimony that "invisible" super-government actually exists in practice and is not a mere figure of speech, warns the voters of other states not to confide their respective state governments and Legislatures to the hands of individuals who have sworn allegiance to the "Invisible Empire." It shows the meaning and effect of the practice of divided allegiance.

The lesson is so plain that certain of the klansmen holding seats in the Oklahoma Senate were themselves moved to open protest. One of these declared his revolt against the political policy of the "Invisible Empire" in his own state. Another senator, declaring that he spoke for "thousands of men who are or have been affiliated with the klan," pronounced the situation caused by the organization in Oklahoma "a detriment and a threat to the peace of mind of Oklahoma. If the effect of this bill is to kill the klan and to rid the state of the influence that is hurting it and destroying its peace of mind," he continued, "then I say let the klan be killed."

To this conclusion all intelligent Americans of good intent and sincere loyalty to our constitution, institutions and traditions, will be drawn or driven at last. The current developments in Oklahoma doubtless are hastening many, in and outside of Oklahoma, toward that conviction.

"Weaklings" Have Had Great Power.

The grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan attacks the governor of Oklahoma because that official has seen fit to take drastic measures to put down lawlessness and restore order to the state. The governor is accused of trying to make a national figure of himself, and of this the people outside of Oklahoma know little and care less. What is much more important is that the gubernatorial efforts have resulted in the arrest confession and punishment of a gang of "floggers," after the local authorities had been either unwilling or unable to do anything at all towards curbing the rule of the mob and restoring the rule of the law. Results speak for themselves and Gov. Walton has surely gotten results.

The fact that all of the confessed "floggers" admitted themselves to be members of the klan is interesting as confirming a general belief along that line, and as being a reply to the klan denial that any member of that organization ever indulged in a lawless act.

Faced with the confessed guilt of admitted klansmen the Oklahoma grand dragon took an entirely new tack. He said that the guilty are a few "weaklings" whom the klan repudiates This repudiation might be done now, but was it done before when the supposed "weaklings" were able to defy all the local authorities?

We doubt not that they are "weaklings," but it is an open question as to where their weakness lies. The state prosecutor of Oklahoma said they were the weak tools in the hands of the higher ups of the klan and his conclusion is strongly supported by the strength they have shown in being able to defy the local authorities. In Mer Rouge the "weaklings" thus far have been able to defy the governor and state authorities in Louisiana through their control of the local courts and in some places of Georgia and other states the "weaklings" engaged in mob violence have been considerably stronger than the law enforcing agents in their respective localities.

They are weak morally without a doubt in doing what they have done but politically they have been very evidently most powerful and influential.

GOVERNOR CLAIMS KLAN EXISTENCE HAS BRED REVOLT

Atlanta Constitution

Declares Any Person Aiding K. K. K. Is "Enemy" to Be Dealt With by Military.

9-16-23

WILL PLACE TROOPS WHEREVER NEEDED

Oklahoma City and County, and Creek County Under Absolute Army Law With Tulsa.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 15.—Martial law for the entire state of Oklahoma was proclaimed at midnight tonight by Governor J. C. Walton.

Calling the full force of the approximately 6,000 troops in the Oklahoma national guard to his command, the governor climaxed his spectacular fight against the Ku Klux Klan by declaring that any person who aids the organization in carrying out its "purposes" are enemies of the sovereign state of Oklahoma and shall be dealt with by the military forces.

Due to the existence of a "self-styled invisible empire," Governor Walton declared a state of insurrection and rebellion is in effect against the constitution and authorities of Oklahoma and that a general state of "public alarm and fear and jeopardy of life, peace and personal safety" has resulted.

Activities of the organization are centered in Oklahoma City and extend to every county in the state, the governor charged.

The proclamation invokes absolute martial law in Oklahoma county (Oklahoma City) and Creek county, the latter adjoining Tulsa county, where military rule has been in effect since August 14.

Troops will be placed at points in the state where they are needed, the proclamation says, this matter being left to the discretion of the governor and adjutant general.

Mobilization Not Out.

While no order has as yet gone out for the complete mobilization of the state militia, each contingent will be held in readiness for service. It is reported that companies from various parts of the state already are moving towards Oklahoma City and Creek county, of which Sapulpa is the county seat.

Accepting the recent challenge of the grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm of the Ku Klux Klan that "Governor Walton never could break the power of the klan in Oklahoma," the executive declared:

"The power of this criminal organization must be destroyed and it is necessary to proclaim martial law throughout the state."

Citing testimony taken by a military court at Tulsa, the governor declared that hundreds of men, and even women, of the state have been severely beaten, and that the "Invisible Empire," as an organization, is responsible.

"'The invisible empire' has usurped the power of the political government," Governor Walton said. "The power of this organization has been such that as many as 150 persons have been present when men and women have been flogged, whipped and beaten and their methods have inspired such terror that no mention of it was made even by the press.

"In the perpetration of these crimes, the Ku Klux Klan not only has disregarded the constitutional right of trial by a jury, but also the dictates of decency and civilization."

9-16-23

Capital Is Klan Seat.

"The head and front of this organization is in the capital city of the state. From this city orders are issued and complied with. This is the seat of power of the grand dragon. It is here that the commander-in-chief of this organization lives.

"It is here where the sovereign power of the state was defied when the grand dragon of this semi-military organization publicly proclaimed in substance that the sovereign state of Oklahoma could not break the power of the klan. Here men have been whipped and mutilated. Here, the police power, the sheriff's office, the jury commission and some of the judges of the district court are subjects of the 'invisible empire,' or are under its domination, and here today grand and petit juries are being called by a klan judge to shield and protect subjects of this empire."

District court grand jury was scheduled to meet here Monday to investigate charges that Governor Walton used state highway department employes to check names on an initiative petition for a bill to empower the state legislature to convene without a call from the governor.

Certain of the governor's opponents charged that such alleged action was in violation of the law. They circulated grand jury petitions recently resulting in the call for a special grand jury Monday.

Governor Walton warned today that any attempt on the part of members of the legislature to convene without his call as provided by the constitution, would result in the lawmakers going to jail.

A cordon of armed guards was thrown around Governor Walton's home tonight. Newspaper men who went to the mansion to receive his proclamation were made to identify themselves before they could pass.

Has Hooded Court.

"The invisible empire," Governor Walton declared, "assumes the functions of a political government. It has gained control of prosecuting officers, sheriffs' offices and jury commissions in many counties. It has a hooded court before whom citizens are tried. All who do not belong are aliens. It indorses tickets at general elections and its members are subject to prosecution and whipping if they fail to support the ticket indorsed.

"Two governments cannot exist in this state at the same time."

The proclamation declares that no soldiers will be sent to any county except those under control of the "invisible empire" and where the power of the state has been usurped by the klan.

The governor's order proclaimed:

Walton's Proclamation.

"1—That a state of insurrection and rebellion against the laws and constitution and constituted authorities of the state of Oklahoma does exist within and throughout the state of Oklahoma.

"2—That a general state of public alarm and fear and jeopardy of life, of peace and personal safety does exist among its citizens throughout the state of Oklahoma.

"3—That martial law be, and the same is hereby ordered and proclaimed within and throughout the entire state of Oklahoma in each and every county and city thereof, and the military forces of the state of Oklahoma are hereby ordered and commanded to occupy such place or places as may be directed and commanded by the governor and adjutant general of this state.

"4—That absolute martial law be and the same is hereby ordered and proclaimed in the city of Oklahoma City and in Oklahoma county, Oklahoma, and in Creek county, Oklahoma.

"5—That from and after the date of this proclamation each and every person within the state of Oklahoma who aids, or abets the said lawless organization commonly known as the Ku Klux Klan, either directly or indirectly, or gives aid or comfort to the same in the carrying out and execution of the purposes of the said Ku Klux Klan are, and shall be, decreed to be enemies of the sovereign state of Oklahoma and shall be dealt with accordingly by the military forces of the state.

"This proclamation shall be in force and effect from and after 12 o'clock midnight, of September 15, 1920.

"Under this declaration of independence, 'all men are created free and equal and endowed with certain inalienable rights among which are life, libetry and the pursuit of happiness.' Oklahoma is the sovereign state of the American republic and as such recognizes no superior power on earth, except the federal government," the proclamation says.

State Not Subservient.

"There exists in this state and nation a 'self-styled invisible empire' which assumes the functions of a political government, and whose ambition is to make the political power of this state subservient to its domination.

"It has an emperor for the United States, a grand dragon for each state or realm, a grand titan for a district and a cyclops for a lodge and committees organized and extending down to the grass roots. It has military squads of whippers and executioneers.

"It has a hoded court of sanhedrin before whom citizens are tried. All who do not belong are aliens. It is a crime for its members to even trade with aliens. It indorses tickets at general elections and its members to even trade with aliens, are subject to prosecution and whipping if they fail to support the ticket indorsed.

"Two governments cannot exist in this state at the same time. This so-called 'invisible empire' has gained control of prosecuting officers, sheriffs, the police power and jury commissions in many counties."

TRIBUNE CENSORS REMOVED FROM JOB.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Military censorship over the Tulsa Tribune was lifted late tonight by Governor Walton.

From his residence here where he had been confined throughout the day with a severe cold, the governor transmitted in person over long distance telephone his order to national guard officials at Tulsa to remove the military censors from the office of the Tribune at once.

"I uphold absolutely the freedom of the American press and the right to free speech," said the governor. "I have decided that conditions now do not demand military interference with the newspaper."

TULSA C. OF C. HEAD DENOUNCES KLAN.

Tulsa, Okla., September 15.—Branding the Ku Klux Klan as "the worst blight ever known in American history," H. O. McClure, president of the Tulsa chamber of commerce, tonight issued a statement calling upon Tulsa klansmen to disband.

McClure's statement followed failure of the board of directors of the chamber to support his report to them that he had told local klan officials that their organization should shoulder responsibility for conditions that brought on martial law in Tulsa county.

McClure, who has been attempting to negotiate a peace treaty with Governor Walton on behalf of Tulsa business men, under which troops would be withdrawn from the county, declared that the klan was to blame for the flogging, "religious, social and business interference," which he said had split Tulsa "wide open" with discussion, fear and bigotry."

The klan, he asserted, "has brought shame and disgrace to this ordinarily peaceful and law-abiding community causing men to fear for their lives and for a boycott against their business.

"Tulsa has been no different than every other similar community in America," he said. "It is a progressive city of 110,000 people.

"Yet, not more than 3 or 4 per cent of the population has sponsored and committed depredations that place Tulsa in the American spotlight as a city where law violations are committed on a wholesale scale, where public officials fail in the performance of their duty and allow civil law enforcement to be destroyed, where military rule must be placed to stop insurrection and rebellion, where lawlessness reigns without check or hindrance.

Whole City Suffers.

"Who suffers most because of this state of affairs? Not those who engage in floggings, for they are protected by an invisible government. Is it, then, those whose backs bear the lash wielded by masked and cowardly captors? Surely they share in the suffering. But they are not alone. The good citizenship of a progressive city—the citizenship that comprises almost the city's population—must bow its head as it realizes the outside world believes it is responsible for the conditions complained of.

"Yet, they have taken no part in floggings or similar law violations. They have gone about their daily pursuit as usual. But they are not entirely blameless, for by their lack of opposition to the Ku Klux Klan movement they have permitted a condition to arise that has become a nation-wide peril.

"Confidence in our courts have been almost lost because floggers have not been brought to justice and our civil law enforcement agencies are in the hands of the invisible empire. Citizens of the underworld whose constitional rights should always be granted, are whipped and maimed and their assailants are protected. Yet, among those same assailants and the men who protect them are perhaps greater criminals than those whose backs are lain open. Frequently we hear the cry that law enforcement has broken down It comes mainly from Ku Klux Klan sympathizers. How absurd is such a charge. Here in Tulsa our courthouse and our city hall are practically filled with members of the klan, elected to office with klan support.

"This cry not only indicates the officers but the Ku Klux Klan as well. If law enforcement has broken down, whose fault is it? I am compelled to wonder whether the klan really wants an efficient law enforcement through legally constituted civil agencies or if it prefers to take mob law into its own hands and deal out midnight justice.

He Accuses Klan.

"If law enforcement has broken down with klansmen holding the principal office, then it is time for a complete change and it cannot come soon enough.

"The Ku Klux Klan has denied connection with any floggings that have occurred in the past two years. I am not convinced this is true. But even if it is, the klan is accessory to every flogging in the United States; it trained its members in the atrocious practice and gave the idea of masked retribution to every other citizen.

"And today every flogging is laid at the door of the klan. If there is any possible need for the Ku Klux Klan, it could be nothing greater than to assist in law enforcement by helping the duly elected public officials.

"No masks or robes are needed for this task. It requires no reign of terror or masked parades that stir up strife and all to an already menacing state of dissension. The Ku Klux Klan with its masks and robes and floggings might not have been out of place in the dark ages, but surely, it has no place in our enlightened civilization of today. I say that the klan is the worst blight ever known in American history and should throw away masks and disband."

CENSOR SHEARS WORK ON KLAN PAPERS ONLY.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Only newspapers that by editorials and news stories incite "masked marauders to insurrection against constituted authorities," will be subject to censorship, Governor J. C. Walton said today in a telegram to the Baltimore Evening Sun.

The executive's message was in reply to a telegram from Hamilton Owens, editor of the newspaper. "The Evening Sun has from time to time praised your efforts to rid Oklahoma of masked marauders," said Mr. Owens' telegram. "We have, however, been somewhat disturbed at the imposition of a censorship upon The Tulsa Tribune. Could you wire us a statement of your view on the necessity of this action?"

The governor's response follows:

"In reply to your telegram will say that the fight in this state is between the state of Oklahoma, a sovereign state of the American republic, and the Invisible Empire, which is seeking to gain control and rule.

"There will be no censorship of the press in this state except in cases where newspapers by editorials and through newspaper stories are in fact inciting masked marauders to insurrection against constituted authority.

"The invisible empire of this state has gained control of prosecuting attorneys, sheriffs and of juries in many counties through klan jury commissions so that it is impossible in such counties through the courts for citizens to be protected and to prosecute masked marauders.

Claims He Is Threatened.

"I am being threatened personally and personally attacked in courts for my fight on this power and I consider the very life of constitutional government, personal liberty and personal safety is at stake, and I as chief executive propose to invoke every power of the state to protect its sovereignty. Two governments cannot exist in this state at the same time."

Governor Walton also made public a telegram he received from Sam J. Hunter, ex-justice of the civil court of appeals of Texas.

"Stand your ground. No compromise with mobs. The good law-abiding people are with you. You have forced the issue whether constitutional government or anarchy shall prevail in Oklahoma," Mr. Hunter wired.

Every state in the Union is interested, the Texas jurist said. "Declare martial law and enforce it with bullet and bayonet. The jurisdiction of court does not extend to questions involving the state or national existence, but the law of revolution."

Governor Walton replied:

"Thanks for your words of commendation. Let us all stand for American ideals. Let us all bow before the genius of America."

KLAN PLIES LASH IS BLAKE'S CLAIM

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 6. (Special.)—Unfolding the "story of Tulsa" as gleaned from sworn testimony taken before a military court, Aldrich Blake, executive counselor, presented to the press tonight an account of some of the brutal floggings that led Governor J. C. Walton to invoke martial law in Tulsa county.

Detailing a series of whippings, only a few of those that have spread terror for more than a year in many Tulsa county homes, Mr. Blake said:

"Through the 1,200 pages of testimony runs the same brutal refrain. It's always the klan or some member of the klan.

"In every case thus far examined, except two which have not proceeded very far, the evidence has led straight to the doorstep of the invisible empire, known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Not an alien has been accused; not a breath of suspicion against a single Tulsa citizen except members of the imperial organization.

"No arrests had ever been made until the military court convened," he said. "Except in one or two instances where the police called and immediately returned to the station, no investigation has ever been made of any one of these and dozens of other cases now under investigation. This is according to the sworn testimony."

Only First Chapter.

Declaring that the expose was only the first chapter of the "story," the executive counselor promised revelations in the near future of "other phases of the conflict between 'visible and invisible government'."

"The whole story of Tulsa will never be told," he said. "Men flee from savagery and torture. Scores of Tulsa victims fled. The average man is pretty apt to change his address after his skin has been whipped until it is raw and he is then threatened with death if he tells. That is exactly what happened in Tulsa, not once, but many times. Say fifty times, or one hundred times, or perhaps two hundred times, in a little more than a year.

"The wet rope is out of style," said Mr. Blake. "In Tulsa they use a leather strap. It is about three inches wide, perhaps four feet long. The end of the strap is 'cat-tailed'—sliced into three straps. Fifty lashes will tame the strongest man. A mile and a quarter southwest of Alsuma is Tulsa county's most famous whipping pasture. Strong men stagger away, ruined for life."

Many Were Flogged.

A mother roughly dealt with when a band of twenty men raided her home and beat her husband, a child born prematurely as the result; a member of a township school board abducted by floggers and coerced into voting for a school head whom he opposed; an elderly man lashed because he opposed the way the local school was run; a man and a woman routed out of their beds and taken to the whipping field where the strap was applied to both, because the whippers charged that they had been selling beer—these are among the cases related by Blake from the testimony.

And, according to Blake, a klansman who attended a whipping party testified:

"I think there were about 150 men out there. They were all disguised with old hats and old coats and with handkerchiefs tied over their eyes. They had two prisoners there standing near a telephone pole. The one that was whipped first was told to leave the county. The lights from the cars shone directly on the prisoners. A man from some other town talked to the prisoners. I didn't know him—you see they usually have a man from some other klan—a stranger in the community—to take charge. It is well arranged."

Lash Victim Testifies.

The woman who was lashed testified:

"They took the quilt away from around me and I just had on my night gown and they began whipping me and I began screaming and they put their hands over my mouth and I fell unconscious.

"I didn't know any more until I was back in the car and when I came to I was all wet with blood and some one had hold of my pulse and some one asked if my heart was beating. They blindfolded me again and brought me back home. I was sick at the time and haven't been well since."

Counselor Blake's accusation against the Ku Klux Klan brought the first official admission that the military investigation at Tulsa was being directed against the secret organization. Heretofore Governor Walton and his advisers have refrained from naming the klan in connection with mob floggings.

REPORTS of 2,500 whipping parties in Oklahoma in a twelvemonth, of a whipping squad in one county with more than 200 names on its list for visitation in the near future, of victims afraid to report their injuries because of threats, and of local authorities who refuse to act, have led Governor Walton to put Okmulgee County under martial law and to threaten three other counties with like procedure. The acting governor of Texas, T. W. Davidson, has sent rangers into Burleson County where recent acts have been a "challenge to the very foundation of law." The climax came when Otto Lange, a quiet, home-loving farmer, protested against being ordered out of his house at nine o'clock at night by four hooded, masked men, and was thereupon shot to death, the bullet passing through his body and hitting his three-year-old baby. The mob spirit which has held northern Arkansas in its grip since the Harrison attacks upon railroad strikers a year ago broke out anew in Pocahontas when unidentified men riddled a priest's home with bullets, injuring four priests and a church official. There seems to be no one in Arkansas with the courage and wisdom to meet the situation. Senator Jacob R. Wilson, of the legislative committee which investigated the Harrison outrages, deplores the fact that in spite of plenty of evidence the committee preferred to recommend no legal action.

OVER against such pusillanimity must be set a striking example of courage and public spirit on the part of young private citizens. On Independence Day, as the New York World tells the story, there had assembled at Houston, Texas, a crowd of 4,000 members of the Ku Klux Klan to hear an oration by "Emperor" William J. Simmons. The announced speaker was more than two hours late, and several Klansmen talked themselves hoarse to fill in the time. When they had finished, the master of the ceremonies asked—doubtless without the least anticipation of a response—if there was an anti-Klan speaker present who had nerve enough to come to the platform. Luther Evans, senior law student of the University of Texas, promptly accepted the challenge, and, amid angry cries of dissent, made excellent use of his opportunity. He twitted the Klan on its assumptions of a monopoly of patriotism, its professions of concern for freedom of speech, and its absurd apprehensions of Negro domination. What, he asked his hearers, were they going to do with the Negro? There were eleven million Negroes in the South. Did the Klan want to murder them all? It could not dispose of the problem by merely declaring that it was for white supremacy. "Finally," said this plucky young fellow, "your Klan speakers say that you stand for the chastity of womanhood, and for all high ideals. I stand for the chastity of womanhood, myself, and I practice this ideal; but there are thousands of you Klansmen who don't." No wonder that the audience was stunned for a moment by so plain-spoken an impeachment, and that its outcries then became so threatening that it was thought expedient by the master of the ceremonies that Mr. Evans should leave the platform. After all, the age of chivalry is not past.

Lady "Cu Clux" Raid Moonshine Den Unassisted

Jan 25, 1923.

Dressed in Blue Robes, With White Crosses, Women Overpower Stillers.

The Atlanta Constitution

Oklahoma City, Okla., January 24. Dressed in flowing blue robes and hoods with white crosses covering their breasts the ladies of the Cu Clux Clan began first open activities here Wednesday night by capturing a still in operation in a house four miles south of the city.

The raid was spectacular. Twelve women, said to be an auxiliary body of the Ku Klux Klan, slipped quietly out of the city in automobiles, stole up to the house, overpowered two men still operators and held them until local authorities were called.

The women made the capture without the aid of a single man until the police arrested the captives. The women held the men, the four heaviest of the women sitting on them, according to police. The men are being held in the city jail and the still will be used as evidence to convict them.

This was the first act of the women "law enforcers" following their recent announced extensive drive against law breakers and so far as is known here it was the first time an organized group of women raided a moonshiner's den.

In the past officials of the Ku Klux Klan have denied the existence of any authorized women's auxiliary within their organization. Officials who were in a position to discuss the matter could not be communicated with Wednesday night.

HOODED BAND MURDER WILL GO UNAVENGED

Eleven Freed in Ardmore for "Lack of Evidence."

Memphis, Tenn.

(By the Associated Press.)

ARDMORE, Okla., Feb. 28.—Eleven prominent citizens of Carter County were free tonight of charges of murder in connection with the slaying of Joe Carroll of Wilson, an alleged bootlegger and organizer of an anti-Ku Klux Klan demonstration. 3/1/23

Carroll was shot down at his home on the night of Dec. 15, 1921, when he resisted masked men who attempted to seize him. Two weeks before he had been warned to leave town in a communication signed "K. K. K. No. 18." He defied the warning and led what he called an "anti-Ku Klux" parade in Wilson.

Two of the masked raiders were fatally wounded before they were driven off by members of Carroll's household.

Jeff Smith of Hamilton, the only defendant brought to trial, was acquitted today after a second hearing of his case. The first trial last month resulted in a jury disagreement.

Cases against the other 10 were dismissed by District Judge W. F. Freeman on motion of County Attorney John L. Hodge, when the Smith jury reported after a jury had been sworn in for their joint trial.

Besides Smith the defendants were Dr. E. C. Harlow, optometrist; Dan Ridpatch, contractor; Ray L. Beede, automobile dealer; G. C. Whitechurch, oil supply man; J. P. Pitts, automobile dealer; Tom Hales, oil supply salesman; Frank Cradwell, insurance dealer; W. L. T. Hilton, oil broker; J. A. Gilliam, rancher, and J. D. "Curley" Smith of Healdton.

Mr. Hodge told the court that in view of the verdict in Jeff Smith's case it would be useless for the state to bring the other men to trial.

The defendants, the jurors and all the spectators were admonished by Judge Freeman to let constituted officers enforce the law.

PHYSICIAN KIDNAPPED

Four Masked Men Overpower Doctor and Make Getaway

Post Dispatch Advertiser Morning Mo.

(Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 6.—Returning home tonight from a professional call, Dr. B. Cheston Goldberg, a physician was overpowered by four unmasked men who carried him away in a motor car according to reports to the police.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 16.—Both houses of the Oklahoma legislature today heard brief addresses by W. J. Mahoney, lecturer of the Ku Klux Klan and a former member of the Mississippi legislature. Commercial Advertiser

"America is threatened by a "super-government," the Klan official told members of the house after he had gained recognition at the instance of Representative G. S. Long, of Tulsa.

Repeating that a "super-government" exists in the United States, Dr. Mahoney charged: "We must break it. We will." 3-17-23

Dr. Mahoney was introduced in the senate after passage of a resolution inviting him to speak. The resolution was presented by Senator Washe Hudson of Tulsa.

In both houses Dr. Mahoney was referred to as a former senator from Mississippi and apparently most members had no knowledge of his connection with the Ku Klux Klan. No direct reference to the Klan was included in Dr. Mahoney's remarks.

Dr. Mahoney told house members that if the occasion were different, he would elaborate on his subject.

Dr. Mahoney felicitated the members of the se[illegible]e on work they were accomplish[illegible] and touched on "Americanism."

The Illogical Emperor of an Invisible Empire.

William J. Simmons made a speech at Tulsa, Okla., Thursday. Simmons is emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, having metamorphosed into that exalted [illegible] through the avenues of the cyclops and the wizard.

The Commercial Appeal Memphis, Tenn. 4-27-23

The final stage through which a lepidopterous insect passes prior to its winged state is called the chrysalis. We assume, therefore, that Simmons is now reveling in the chrysalis. From cyclops to wizard to emperor—and then the wings.

Hallelujah! Swing low, sweet chariot, and in your sweep gather up those not possessed of anterior propellers capable of lifting them to realms above. But pause not to take aboard the elite whose pin feathers have grown into pinions, for on snowy wings of their own they may cleave the ether and soar to heights that lesser mortals wot not of.

However, the emperor of the so-called Invisible Empire is still of the earth earthy, and as illogical and contradictory as the humblest of any white-hooded band that ever assembled in secret to enact law or rode in the dark to flog a victim of its displeasure.

As proof we submit the speech of the emperor before the Kamelia, the rock upon which the Ku Klux Klan split, causing cyclops to turn on cyclops and wizard to attempt to conjure wizard.

He called on the women to take their places beside husbands and fathers "until the ideals of Americanism are established and institutions of the world's greatest democracy are made secure for all time."

Is it an ideal of Americanism that the peace and prosperity of Americans be secured through the orderly process of the courts, or that it be guaranteed by "an invisible empire" that meets in secret to stir up religious and racial prejudices, bring to trial and condemn without hearing men of their own blood and belief, and then behind mask and under cover of darkness carry out sentence that they dare not attempt to execute in the light of day?

Let the "emperor" answer.

Is it an ideal of Americanism that men elected to office shall take the required oath and keep it inviolate, administering affairs for the whole people, or that they shall stultify themselves by cringing before a secret organization—an organization which belies its avowed purpose by reaching out for political power and attempting to dictate to the citizens of a community or state whom they shall call to rule over them?

Let the "emperor" answer.

Simmons' speech to the women gathered at Tulsa is a voluntary insult to the intelligence of women. He tries to drag forth ghosts that were laid away years ago. The "emperor" wants to "skeer 'em."

He points out that the foreign population settles in the great centers of population, citing New York. Probably the "emperor" thought the women of the west were under the impression that ships from Europe landed at Tulsa or Medicine Hat.

There is nothing new in the "emperor's" statement that immigrants first settle in New York. Neither is it alarming. There is nothing un-American about it. Even if there was, the evil could not be eliminated through an un-American organization.

Taking it by and large, however, New York seems to be doing pretty well, as is New England, which the "emperor" tells the women is under control of the Canadians. This is news—or would be if it were true. But even if naturalized Canadians were showing the way in New England, we would have to admit that they were making a pretty good job of it.

The "emperor's" fulminations regarding the east may amuse without doing harm, but when he veers to the south and attempts to raise a race issue it is different. Ordinarily the white people of the south and the negro get along very well. It's only when an "emperor" or a labor agent or something similar butts in that trouble ensues.

"In the south there are more than 11,000,000 negroes, presenting a problem such as has never been solved in the history of civilization," says the emperor.

And just to think, the millions of white people and the millions of negroes in the south have been getting along so well for a quarter of a century that they didn't know there was a problem until the "emperor" happened along to tell them about it.

But if such a problem exists in the south, and the emperor is interested why not attempt a solution by legal process instead of going so far away from home to take on an additional burden by attempting to abrogate alleged evils in New England through an institution that functions in secrecy?

The speech of the "emperor" is illogical, his efforts are at cross purposes. He pulls in one direction and pushes in the other. He inveighs against anarchy and countenances that which is counter to the law.

The split in the Invisible Empire was inevitable. Disintegration has begun. Well-meaning men who had identified themselves with the klan have seen a light and are breaking away.

Emperors pass when empires perish. Simmons realizes this. But his kind die hard. They do not relinquish power without a struggle. It is not surprising, therefore, that he should turn to the women for help and create the Kamelia. It is the old cry of Caesar, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink!"

But Kamelia doesn't seem to be responding very readily. Such outbursts as that of the "emperor" at Tulsa will not make much impression on the woman of today, who is not deceived by topwaters or surface indications.

Religious intolerance, race prejudice and the yellow peril served mountebanks in a day that has passed. They are obsolete now. Even a wizard cannot revive them.

If for diversion the women have to choose between bridge and Simmons, it is probable that they will stick to bridge.

However, if the "emperor" really desires to engage in some constructive work, we invite him to discard the mask and come out in the open to join those who are preaching obedience to the Ten Commandments, reverence for the constitution and respect for the law.

KAMELIA PARADE IN TULSA CLOSES SECRET CONCLAVE

Thousands View White-Clad Women of Klan

Auxiliary

TULSA, Okla., April 20.—Wending its way through dense crowds of spectators, a spectral procession of white robed Kamelias paraded here tonight.

The parade was the outstanding public feature of the two-day convention here of Kamelia delegates from Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, which closed tonight with a secret meeting at convention hall, following the tramp through the business district.

Between 30,000 and 50,000 people viewed the silent stream of snowy-garbed women in their 19-block hike. It was an undemonstrative crowd that watched the "lady klansmen." Ripples of handclapping played up and down the line of march occasionally and now and then a shout was heard, but in the main silence reigned.

500 In Line.

The Kamelias, organized by Colonel William J. Simmons, founder of the klan, picked a dreary night for their first public appearance in America. Following a day of so much rain that for a time it seemed there could be no parade, the night was chill and damp. Blankets would have made much more comfortable wrappings for the marchers than did the muslin that adorned them.

Less than 500 women marched. Two counters stationed by a newspaper at different vantage points checked off 461 and 462 respectively. There were eight men in the ranks, carrying a little red house supposedly symbolic of the home.

The parade lacked the spectacular trappings observed in the Ku Klux Klan parade here last year. There were no torches, no red fire, in fact, no display at all save a few banners.

Carry Banners.

The women were all clad in what was announced as the official Kamella regalia. It was a very simple costume, a white robe with a red "K" on the breast and a white hood.

Some of the banners displayed in the parade.

"Kamelia."

"Protection of women."

"This group 100 per cent Americanism."

"Kiss the flag or cross the pond."

"Oregon, we are coming."

"Organization and strength."

In addition to the thousands of spectators that lined the streets through which the parade moved, other thousands filled windows in office buildings all along the way while others occupied choice seats in hundreds of automobiles that filled every available parking place.

16,000 WOMEN JOIN KAMELIA, SIMMONS TELLS CONVENTION

Next Conclave of Klan Auxiliary to Be Held In Kansas City

TULSA, Okla., April 21.—Sixteen thousand women have been recruited in the ranks of Kamelia, sister organization of the Ku Klux Klan, according to William J. Simmons, founder of both secret orders.

Announcement of the growing strength of the feminine Klan was made by Colonel Simmons here last night at the closing session of a two-day meeting of Kamelia delegates from Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri. It was the first convention in the history of the organization.

The next convention will be held in Kansas City within six months, it was announced.

Colonel Simmons, who is emperor of the klan and el magus of Kamelia, addressing the delegates, predicted that within several years "millions" of American women would become members of Kamelia.

The organization has for its objects the doctrines sponsored by the Ku Klux Klan.

In a parade through the business district last night the "lady klansmen" made their first public appearance in the country. Four hundred and sixty women hooded in white, their bodies shrouded in flowing white robes, with a red "K" gleaming on each breast, marched through streets jammed with silent spectators. It was estimated that 30,000 to 50,000 persons witnessed the parade. The torches, fiery cross and other spectacular features of Ku Klux Klan parades were lacking. Eight men were in the column, each carrying a miniature red house, symbolic of the home, observers thought.

"Protection of Women," "100 per cent Americanism" and "Kiss the Flag or Cross the Pond" were some of the inscriptions on banners carried by the marchers.

Miss Grace Marie Jones, Renia, national president of the organization, lived in Tulsa until last fall, when she went to Atlanta. She was employed for some months here by the Tulsa open shop organization in a secretarial capacity and also worked for several oil companies. Last summer she became secretary to the organizer of a woman's study club, who is a klansman.

New York Scored As 'Unamerican' By Klan Emperor

Colonel Simmons Addresses Kamelia at First General Convention.

TULSA, Okla., April 19.—New York is "the most unAmerican center on the American continent," William J. Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, declared here tonight to the Kamelia, the women's organization formed along the lines of the klan, at their first general convention.

Directing the attention of the convention to what he said was the "menace to the white Protestant civilization of the race from all sides," Colonel Simmons said the foreign population settled in the great centers of population. He cited New York.

Every Tongue and Creed.

"Within a radius of 19 miles," he said, "there are more than seven millions of people congested. Of this enormous centralized population, there are only 1,100,000 native-born, white Protestant Americans. The majority of some six million of this vast centralized population are of every land and every tongue and every creed. They speak 37 different foreign languages and some of them in their homes or in their communities speak the English language. The foremost political and social economist of the world recently made a survey of New York city and after listening to its babel of tongues, after feeling its hot breath of anarchy, after touching its seething restlessness, he calmly turned away and said that Petrograd, in its dust and desolation, was a picture of New York city of the future."

The founder of the klan told the convention that "an organization of patriotic, white, Protestant American women" was the "other part of a dual vision" which came to him in his youth and "I am proud to see the realization of my dream in a great national woman's organization." He called on them to take their places besides husbands and fathers "until the ideals of Americanism are established and the institutions of the world's greatest democracy are made secure for all time."

Negroes in South.

Colonel Simmons declared "New England is settled by French Roman Catholic Canadians. They speak the French language, maintain parochial schools and multiply with amazing rapidity." In the south, he asserted there are more than 11,000,000 negroes "presenting a problem to the white people of that section such as has never been solved in the history of civilization." On the Pacific coast, he continued, "the Japanese, for years have striven for a foothold on the American continent. They have sought to acquire land, to have and to exercise property rights and at the same time hold allegiance to the Mikado. All the efforts of the Japanese to colonize on the Pacific coast may be interpreted as a carefully designed plan by which that nation is to take asylum in America for a refuge against the coming of the day of wrath, when China undertakes to have an accounting with Japan."

The American nation, the klan head continued, "has been invaded by foreign and alien and undemocratic elements, most of which has been untaught, undisciplined and unchastened. They are incapable of self-government." He said the American womanhood "must co-operate in putting an arrest upon immigaration to this country and in distributing the foreign and alien population already here over the country at large and in Americanizing these unAmerican elements that we must retain." He advocated that the English language be spoken in every section, schools teaching and maintaining a foreign tongue abolished, and newspapers and publications printed in the English language. He said the Kamelia and the klan contemplate the founding of a great American university in Atlanta.

Return to Reverence.

Colonel Simmons called on the women to preserve the home and to reform and reorganize "the social life of the nation." He asserted that the nation was in the midst of a transitional period "when al lthat was old is being ridiculed and all that is substantial is being swept away. There must be a return to reverence, to decency and to the earlier processes of social life. If the present movement continues, we shall be a nation without modesty, without decency, without marriage and without religion."

Playgrounds for childen in cities and American music, the klan chieftain said, are essential. He said the public school system was "being threatened and invaded." A sect holding allegiance to a foreign potentate, maintaining the right to educate its children under the supervision and control of its church, inveighs against our national public school system."

Telling of how he founded the Ku Klux Klan which he said had grown to millions in numbers, Colonel Simmons continued:

"An insistent demand has come in from other English-speaking Protestant countries to extend the organization to embrace all men of kinship in ideals and in creed. But, however, this organization may grow and expand, however the invisible empire may go on from conquest to victory under the fiery cross, the world's civilization, the great institutions of the white man's founding, the ideals of Protestant Christianity, can never be secured to the world except through the co-operation and active participation of the women of America, in this the last and greatest struggle of the white Christian race for supremacy, first in America and then in all the world."

University Plans.

Colonel Simmons' remarks at the Tulsa meeting in reference to his plans for a great university in Atlanta will be of especial interest to members of the klan. The land, recently purchased for this institution is located on the Howell Mill road near the intersection of the Collier road, and is declared to be one of the most suitable for such a purpose in this vicinity.

In reference to this university Colonel Simmons spoke as follows:

"My vision of the work of the Kamelia, along with my vision of the work of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, contemplates the founding of a great university for the higher education of American boys and girls in real Americanism.

"Temporarily my plans for the establishment and the organization of the university in the imperial city of Atlanta have been interrupted and intercepted. A magnificent site of hundreds of acres of land, on the battlefield where the Blue and the Gray fought a great battle over the maintenance of the union—one and indestructible forever—where the rifle trenches and the artillery pits remain to this very day, the university is to be built and organized for service to American youth.

"It is a part of the task which I now commit to American women to carry on and consummate this great work, which for the time being has been delayed. Every organization of women of the white man's breed, every organization of women who have bred native sons, should espouse the cause of higher education and should begin to turn the great tide of young American life into this institution.

"By thorough co-operation this university may be opened with thousands of students within a short space of time and every worthy and capable American boy and girl may find access to its classrooms and receive an education which will qualify them to think for the multitude and to direct the activities of their fellow citizens less favored and untaught."

YOUTHS FLOGGED BY UNMASKED MEN

(Associated Press)

TULSA, Okla., March 7.—George Price and Fred Saunders, 17-year-old youths, were abducted by parties of unmasked men here early tonight and taken into the country where they were horse-whipped. The youths were returned to their homes shortly before 11 o'clock.

Price was seized by three men as he was emerging from a suburban drug store on the east side of the city, while Saunders, simultaneously was seized by three other men in the home of his stepfather nearby.

Saunders' stepfather, W. P. Cunningham, told the police that the abductors had accused the two boys of getting a young girl intoxicated several days ago.

Two automobiles were used by the floggers. Police immediately began a search for the machines.

Houston, Texas.

Associated Press Report.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 23.—Coming as a sensational climax to the tenth day of Adjutant General Baird H. Markham's investigation of the floggings in Tulsa county, Ben F. Sikes, Grover C. Sikes and Earl Sack of Broken Arrow, self-confessed members of the Ku Klux Klan, pleaded guilty tonight to rioting charges before District Judge W. B. Williams and were sentenced to serve two years each in the State penitentiary.

This is the first instance on record in which klansmen have confessed in court that they were members of a flogging party and the first time sentence has ever been passed in the entire country on a klansman for participation in a mob outrage, State officers here believe.

The Sikes brothers and Sack were brought before Acting County Judge Luther Lane and waived their arraignment and preliminary. Thirty minutes later they had entered pleas of guilty before District Judge Williams and were sentenced after Ed Crossland, their attorney, and Assistant Attorney General C. W. King recommended they be given the minimum punishment—two years. The maximum is 10 years.

Others Plead Not Guilty.

Simultaneously in county court A. M. Calloway, W. M. Bills, Avery Barbour, T. V. Venator and W. M. Lewis were arraigned and plead not guilty on informations charging them with participating in the flogging to which the Sikes brothers and Sack admitted they were parties—that of Ben Wagner, a farmer near Broken Arrow.

Informations also were filed against Hal Benson, Dick Fisher and Harvey Akers, but they had not been arrested in time to be arraigned with Calloway, Bills, Barbour, Venator and Lewis. The preliminary hearing for these men were set for September 4, and thier bonds placed at $1500.

According to Assistant County Attorney Tom Wallace and Attorney Ed Crossland, the three men sentenced tonight signed confessions admitting their own part in the Wagner flogging, and implicating those for whom informations were filed today.

The Sikes brothers and Sack will not be taken to the penitentiary immediately, but probably will be kept here to be used as witnesses against the others charged in informations. By court agreement, they were turned back to military authorities by Sheriff Bob Hanford immediately after sentence was passed and for the present are to be kept under military guard at the armory.

Head of Large Family.

Wagner, a slight man about 60 years old, has a wife and eight children. He owns an entire section of land four miles southeast of Broken Arrow. According to his story and the confessions of the Sikes brothers and Sack, he was flogged by a band of about 20 men wearing the full Ku Klux Klan regalia on a corner of his own land on the night of October 28, 1922. It was about that time that unmasked bands of floggers replaced masked mobs in this vicinity.

On the night Wagner was whipped he was called from his home by a strange man who told him one of his horses had been cut badly by a strand of barbed wire. In company with two of his small children, aged 9 and 11, he went outdoors and started toward the pasture. He had proceeded only a few feet when a white sack was thrown over his head from behind. He was seized and taken nearly a mile away and severely beaten. His two children were detained by a member of the mob until he returned.

Through the thin covering over his face and aided by several flash lights, Wagner said he saw all but several of his captors wore the robes and mask of the Ku Klux Klan. The others wore ordinary clothing, he said. While preparations were in progress for the flogging members of the mob, apparently confident their victim could not see them, removed their masks.

He was able to identify three or four. Fearful lest he should be flogged again, he withheld his knowledge until Adjutant General Markham started his investigation and it appeared he would be given protection by the soldiers from his former captors.

The sudden and entirely unexpected turn of the investigation came after an apparent lull of two days at military headquarters.

Not only the three who confessed but also the others who pleaded not guilty in county court were laborers, most of them wearing work clothes.

All the prisoners brought into court had been kept under military guard at the armory for several days. With soldiers behind and in front of them they filed into the county court room.

The entire legal proceedings in both courts lasted about forty minutes, and established a record in the handling of court cases locally.

Immediately after the three prisoners had stood and entered pleas of guilty to the charge of rioting their attorney began his plea for judicial clemency.

His client, he declared, were not half as guilty of flagrantly violating the law as the officials of the Ku Klux Klan, who, he charged, inveigle unsuspecting young men into their order, then take their money, and then help them paralyze law enforcement.

He was followed by Assistant Attorney General King, who explained that as the prisoners had voluntarily confessed their membership in the Ku Klux Klan and their connection with the flogging of Wagner he wished to recommend that they be given the minimum sentence.

Will Go to Penitentiary.

Advised of the development, Attorney General George Short said in Oklahoma City that "the men have been sentenced to the penitentiary on their confession, and we will see that they get there. However, the courts are open."

Confessing their participation in the floggings of Ben Wagner, a farmer living near Broken Arrow, the klansmen pleaded guilty last night to charges of riot and threw themselves on the mercy of the court. The minimum sentence, two years' imprisonment, was pronounced by District Judge W. D. Williams after a plea for leniency had been made by Assistant Attorney General King and Ed Crossland, defense counsel.

8-25-23

Eight Others Accused.

Eight other men, five of whom have pleaded not guilty, are charged with implication in the Wagner flogging as the result of the confessions.

Those who elected to stand trial are A. M. Galloway, W. M. Bills, Avery Barbour, T. V. Venator and W. M. Lewis.

Memphis Tenn.

Warrants have been issued for the three others, Hal Benson, Dick Fisher and Harvey Akers, and date for their preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 4.

The presence of troops in Tulsa County and the display of the state's determination to bring to justice those who are cited for mob operations led to the clearing up of the attack on Wagner. Since the night of October last year when he was taken from his home and severely beaten by a band of men wearing the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan, Wagner's lips had been sealed with fear, although he recognized several of his abductors.

Then when the military authorities took charge in Tulsa under Gov. Walton's directions and Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham began an inquiry, Wagner, a slight man of 60 years, decided to tell his story. Results followed.

After their sentence the Sykes brothers and Sack were turned back to the military authorities. It is understood that they will be held in Tulsa to appear as witnesses against the others charged in the Wagner case.

TULSA, Okla, Aug. 24.—Possibility that the sentences imposed last night on Ben F. Sikes, Grover C. Sikes and Earl Sack, confessed floggers and members of the Ku Klux Klan, might be voided, was seen by county officials here today when it was reported that the scene of the whipping for which the men were sentenced was about a mile outside the jurisdiction of the court in which they were sentenced

It was indicated that an investigation would be made at once to determine where the whipping occurred. Ben Wagner, the victim, lives just across the Tulsa County line in Wagoner County.

It was said at the county attorney's office that if it is found the whipping occurred in Wagoner County, the sentences imposed here will be illegal and that the men will have to be turned over to Wagoner County authorities for prosecution.

WOMAN CLAIMS MASKED PARTY ABDUCTED HER

Tulsa, Okla., July 19.—Details of her abduction on a busy street corner here Monday evening, and subsequent torture in an effort to wring from her information relating to a deal involving George Petropol, an oil lease broker, were taken last night by Mrs. Pearl Hayter, according to a story published this morning by The Tulsa World.

The woman related her story and the scene of the first attack she alleges was made upon her by abductors. This was at a point south of Tulsa, where Mrs. Hayter, in company with two men, drove the reporter in a motor car.

Before she was thrown from an automobile on the streets of Okmulgee last Monday night, Mrs. Hayter declared she was assaulted by two of her abductors and burned with acid. Her hair was shorn by the kidnapers, she said.

Denial was made by Mrs. Hayter that she and Petropol had been blackmailing business men in Tulsa and Sapulpa, as alleged by 12 masked men who were reported to have summoned a reporter of The Tulsa Tribune Tuesday and stated that they were responsible for the torture of the woman, charging that she and Petropol had been practicing extortion. Petropol also denied such charges, challenging his accusers to meet him in court.

An official inquiry into the case will be instituted, it was announced by County Attorney John M. Goldsberry. The masked men declared they were not members of the Ku Klux Klan.

REPORTER TOLD OF WOMAN TORTURE

Associated Press Report.

TULSA, Okla., July 18.—Twelve masked men gathered in a room in an office building here yesterday told a reporter for the Tulsa Tribune that they had punished Mrs. Pearl Hayter, a divorcee, who was kidnaped on a busy street corner in Tulsa Monday evening and tortured with acid applied to her body, according to a story published by the Tribune today.

A reporter for the newspaper was called to the office, where the leader of the masked men made a long statement to which the others assented, according to the published story. The spokesman was quoted as saying that the woman was tortured because of alleged extortion practices she and George Petropol, an oil lease operator, had engaged in. Several Tulsa and Sapulpa business men were the victims, the leader charged, according to the accounts of the reporter.

Petropol told his version of the attack on Mrs. Hayter, who is said to be his housekeeper, after publication of the alleged confession made by the masked men. He denied the purported charges and defied his accusers to meet him in court.

Mrs. Hayter, Petropol said, could identify one of her abductors. He declared that two of the three men whom Mrs. Hayter said kidnaped her had assaulted her while she was held prisoner near Okmulgee.

The woman was seized on a street corner here early Monday evening, forced into a motor car and carried to the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad, where she was placed aboard a train and taken to Okmulgee, where she was released, according to the story she told Okmulgee police officers late Monday night.

2500 OKLA. WHIPPINGS

IN ONE YEAR — MANY NOT IN NEWSPAPERS—K. K. K. DIRECTLY AND BY EXAMPLE SUBVERTING LAWFUL GOVERNMENT IN SO. WEST, U. S. A.

Olkahoma City, Okla, June 30, 1923—There have been at least 2500 "whipping parties" in Oklahoma in the last year, according to unofficial information received in a statement issued today from the governor's office by Aldrich Blake, the executive's secretary.

Mr. Blake said that some of the reports had been obtained by the governor from his official representatives but that most of them had been made by individual citizens through the mail or in person. Only a small percentage of the reports have been made public.

Letters revealing alleged violence at the hands of masked bands had been pouring into the Governor's office since martial law had been declared in Okmulgee county last Tuesday and the governor had determined to stamp out mob violence in the state.

Mr. Blake said reports indicated that there had been an average of one whipping a day in Tulsa county and about one a week in Oklahoma county.

"I do not mean to say and do not mean to leave the impression that all this has been done by any one organization," he explained. "These outrages cannot be traced to any one organization directly. However, I believe most of them could be traced indirectly."

He said that a letter was received today alleging masked violence in Logan county and another containing further information regarding the reported mutilation of a miner at Pichen, Ottawa county.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 23.—Coming as a climax to the tenth day of Adjutant General Baird H. Markham's investigation of floggings in Tulsa County, Ben F. Sikes, Grover C. Sikes and Earl Sack of Broken Arrow, self-confessed members of the Ku Klux Klan, pleaded guilty tonight to rioting charges before District Judge W. B. Williams and were sentenced to serve two years in the state penitentiary.

(By the Associated Press.)

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 23.—Governor Neff announced today that Ranger Captain Frank Hamer had reported to him that conditions of lawlessness surrounding the recent flogging of E. T. McDonald at Amarillo were "very bad." He also announced that a report of the flogging of Mrs. L. Jackson, wife of a minister at Cross Plains, Callahan County, had been made to him by the sheriff and county attorney of the county.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 23.—Martial law was proclaimed in Tulsa following the recent flogging of Nathan Hantman there. Other flogging cases resulted in troops arresting upwards of a dozen men.

Martial law, which had previously been proclaimed in Okmulgee County by Gov. Walton, was withdrawn when order was restored there. State officials have contended that over 1,000 cases of flogging are on record in Oklahoma within the period of a year.

ONE MORE TULSA FLOGGER GIVEN TERM IN PRISON

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 27.—The road to the state penitentiary opened today to another Tulsa county flogger and admitted member of the Ku Klux Klan when William Arthur Finley, constable at Broken Arrow, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for participation in the whipping of Leslie Goolsby and Mrs. Myrtle Spain, now Mrs. Goolsby, on the night of July 29, 1922.

Finley confessed having turned over Goolsby and Mrs. Spain to a band of whippers and pleaded guilty to a charge of riot. He received the minimum penalty.

Four other men are jointly charged with implication in the offense for which Finley was sentenced, only two of whom had been arrested tonight.

Two Plead Not Guilty.

T. H. Matthew, retired merchant of Broken Arrow, and W. M. Bills, Broken Arrow transfer man, were the two arrested. They entered pleas of not guilty and were released on bond of $1,500 each. The others are George Bradshaw, city marshal of Broken Arrow, and Harve Acres.

Officers visited Broken Arrow during the afternoon, but did not arrest Bradshaw. Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham was in conference during the afternoon with Mayor Keener of Broken Arrow.

Constable Finley is the first public official to be caught in the investigation being conducted by Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham into mob activities in Tulsa county.

Four Thus Far Sentenced.

Four men have now been sentenced as the result of the inquiry, Grover and Ben Sikes and Earl Sack of Broken Arrow having pleaded guilty last week to taking part in a flogging administered by robed klansmen to Ben Wagner, aged farmer living near Broken Arrow.

Goolsby and Mrs. Spain, then the wife of "Daredevil Slim" Spain, a parachute jumper, were placed in the hands of the whipping band after their arrest on a statutory charge. Spain fell to his death at Seneca, Mo., a few days after the flogging and Goolsby and Mrs. Spain then were married.

Finley was turned over to the military authorities by Sheriff Bob Sanford under authority of a telegram from Gov. J. C. Walton. The telegram granted a fifteen day stay of execution and explained that the military desired to use Finley further in the investigation.

DETAIN "FLOGGERS" TILL OTHERS TRIED

Three Men Sentenced Will Appear as Witnesses Against Eight Named in Charges

TULSA, OKLA., Aug. 24—A lull, so far as public developments were concerned, marked the continuation today of the state's inquiry into mob lawlessness in Tulsa county. Adjutant General B. H. Markham who is in charge of the investigation, indicated, however, that further results would be forthcoming in the near future.

For the third time in a week Marshall Moore, Broken Arrow dairyman and a special deputy sheriff, was taken in custody by the military authorities this afternoon. Moore was at liberty on two bonds of $1,500 each, charged with participation in the flogging of J. S. Lawhorn, Jenks merchant the night of June 4, 1922, and the whipping of Leonard Bagby of Broken Arrow, ten nights later. Adjutant Gen. Markham made no explanation of Moore's third arrest.

Three confessed members of the Ku Klux Klan, Ben F. Sikes, Grover C. Sikes and Earl Sack, who pleaded guilty Thursday night to participating in a flogging and were sentenced to two years each in the state penitentiary, were held by the military authorities today to appear as witnesses against eight others named in the flogging.

Letters, telegrams and telephone calls from a dozen states as well as locally poured in on Adjutant General Markham during the day congratulating him on his success in obtaining the conviction of the Klansmen.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 18.—Fiery crosses blazed simultaneously at 260 places over Oklahoma tonight, signalizing a state-wide drive by the Ku Klux Klan against lawlessness and as a memorial to the late President Harding.

BAPTIST PASTOR PLEADS SUPPORT FOR KLAN RULE

Accepts $10 Gift and Tells Members to Pick Up Cross and Follow the Ku Klux

Chicago Defender

Perry, Okla., May 4.—While the members of the congregation of the Rev. Dr. R. B. Urmy (white) of Pittsburgh, Pa., were engaged in chasing a group of klansmen from the church, the Rev. Mr. Combs (not white) of the Baptist church here submitted to a gift of $10 from the klan and busied himself in exhorting his members to support the principles of such a fine organization.

Rev. Combs finds himself falling by the wayside. 5-5-23

White pastors throughout the United States have awakened to the emerging menace seen in the klan's attitude toward the Protestant church. From the start the hooded organization has made it a practice to deluge with gifts churches and other welfare groups and bodies, with the evident design of getting the forces for good lined up on the side of the kluxers. 5-5-23.

Preachers Fight Klan

Now there is an active adverse reaction to the klan efforts. The entire scheme is seen by white ministers and they are no longer prone to welcome the klan's gifts. Klansmen who visit churches now in the name of the flaming cross are met with resistance.

Dr. Urmy, the white Pittsburgh pastor, not only refused the klan's money, but also stood by while his parishioners saw to it that the group of klansmen got out of his church quicker than they intended. Some of them were unmasked. During the week the minister was visited by the kleagle of the realm of Pennsylvania and high klux officials from other states. Dr. Urmy remained adamant, and preached a sermon condemning the klan the following Sunday.

Denies Connection

Said he: "The increasing frequency of visits paid by delegations of klansmen to Protestant churches, bringing donations of money with the possible intention of establishing a connection between the klan and the church, naturally raises the question of relationship between the two. The Protestant church prides itself on its faithfulness to American ideals. But the klan, in my opinion, does not measure up. The klan is very friendly to the Protestant church, and its friendship is undoubtedly sincere, but I cannot help feeling that when it comes to the application of the Protestant principles of life the church might well pray to be delivered from its friend."

How Rev. Combs Acted

Fifteen klansmen entered Rev. Combs' church here. They filed in at the front door and marched in single file to the altar where Rev. Combs stood at attention. The leader of the klansmen handed the preacher an envelope containing $10. He then turned, facing the congregation, and the other 14 followed his lead. Raising his right hand for attention, he declared that the knights of the Ku Klux Klan did not wish the people of the Race to have any fear of them. After the klansmen had left Rev. Combs made a talk in support of the principles of the klan and asked his congregation to get behind them.

WHIPPING PARTIES RESULT IN THREAT OF MARTIAL LAW

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 14.—Oklahoma is threatened with martial law if "whipping parties" continue.

Governor Walton following his campaign against lawlessness announced Monday that unless the parties alleged to have whipped Frank Nathan at Anadarko are convicted, after being found guilty by the attorney-general's court of inquiry, he will declare martial law. Walton said that his office was beseiged with reports of violence.

Special investigators are working on the Nathan case, and Walton has asked the attorney-general to make every effort possible to obtain conviction of those guilty in participating in mobs that beat persons under threats of greater violence if the victims relate any incidents surrounding the occurrence.

FARM-LABOR FORCES TAKE STATE COLLEGE FROM KU KLUX KLAN

Oklahoma Governor Appoints Nonpartisan Organizer School President Despite Threats

ELECT RADICAL TO FEDERATION

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

OKLAHOMA CITY.—With the election of Ira Finley, Reconstruction league legislator and Socialist, as president of the Oklahoma State Federation of Labor and the dissolution of an injunction brought to prevent George Wilson, newly elected head of the Agricultural and Mechanical college, from taking his office, the farmer-labor forces of Oklahoma have won the two most important tests of strength with the conservatives since the election of J. C. Walton as governor. 6-16-23

George Wilson was formerly director of extension work in the North Dakota Agricultural College and late prominent organizer in the Nonpartisan league in North Dakota and Kansas. He returned to Oklahoma and was for a time manager of the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction league. Every farm and labor organization in the state demanded his appointment to the head of the A. & M. College. The American legion, groups of alumni and the powerful Ku Klux Klan organization, heretofore dominant in Oklahoma's schools, opposed him. To the opposition rallied the host of wheat, cotton and produce buyers who feared Wilson's teaching of cooperative organization to the farmers.

Attempt to retain Klan control of the state university and A. & M. college was made by the outgoing governor when he made appointments to the board of regents. Governor Walton, however, appointed new regents for both institutions. Immediately Stratton D. Brooks, labor-baiter, resigned as president of the state university to become president of the University of Missouri, where a vigorous attempt is being made to check liberalism among the student body.

Eskridge, outgoing president of the A. & M. college, did not accept his fate so meekly. He hired as attorney the once campaign manager of the Klan candidate for governor. He organized a crusade of students who marched 500 strong to the capitol to protest Wilson's appointment. The robed and hooded students burned Wilson in effigy.

Governor Walton, defying the threat of mob violence, declared that if necessary he would place Stillwater, the seat of the college, under martial law.

Then came court action. Eskridge alleged a conspiracy on the part of the board of regents and Wilson to prevent an audit of the books of the financial secretary, a Wilson supporter, who they claimed was short $100,000. A temporary injunction was issued, but on motion by the state was dissolved.

When Wilson took over the school he found a red flag at the top of the flagpole.

Wilson's plan is to take over the college farm of 1,000 acres, and run it as a community enterprise, giving students practical experience. He will make the farm support the student body so that poor students can attend and earn their way by working on the farm. Meals will be prepared by the home economics students. Meat will be raised, slaughtered and served by students. The extension service will be pushed and the farmer taught the value of cooperative marketing and purchasing.

The fact that Wilson with a life-record of constructive farm teaching has no degree, is being used to discredit him. Some papers have declared that he "can hardly read."

WAR ON MASKED MOBS OPENED IN OKLAHOMA

Gov. Walton Says Troops Will Remain in Okmulgee,

CITES ALLEGED ABUSES

County Officials Refused to Investigate Depredations, Governor Claims—Military Now Acting in Place of Sheriff at Okmulgee.

(By The Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., June 27.—Operations of "lawless mobs that have been committing outrages in Okmulgee County for months" and not merely the statement of three citizens detailing alleged abuse of official authority by deputy sheriffs, prompted Gov. J. C. Walton to proclaim martial law in Okmulgee County, he told the Associated Press today. He said the statement was "merely the climax."

The governor declared that throughout the six months that he has been in office he has received reports of mob violence in Okmulgee County.

"Several months ago there was a murder in Henryetta," Gov. Walton recounted. "I do not recall the man's name, but his brother was in my office last week asking me to do something to apprehend the slayers. He said that he had tried to investigate but had been warned secretly that unless he stopped the inquiry and left the city he, too, would be found dead.

"Many other similar incidents have been brought to my attention. It is not only the alleged depredations of the deputy sheriffs. It is these lawless mobs that have been operating for months. The statement yesterday regarding the deputies was merely the climax."

Seized By Masked Band.

The governor said that he had received a report from Andarko, Caddo County, that Paul Freeman had been seized by a masked band there while escorting two young women home from church, taken into the woods and beaten into insensibility. He said the report declared Freeman had gone to Cement, Okla., and is in a serious condition.

"Officials of Caddo County declined to investigate the case, declaring there was nothing to the charge," Gov. Walton said.

A grand jury has been called by the governor's order to meet at Anadark July 9 to investigate alleged masked outrages.

The governor said that four other counties in the state were threatened with the same alleged condition as he said existed in Okmulgee County.

"Caddo County is on the verge of the same thing," he declared.

"I am going to stamp mob rule and mob violence out of Oklahoma if I have to put every county under military law and leave them there as long as I am governor."

"I have tried and tried to get results through the regular civil agencies without success," the governor declared. "Local officials are too often allied with these secret, lawless mobs, and I have gotten no results. I am determined to get results.

"Okmulgee County is going to stay under martial law until I am satisfied there is sufficient enforcement there."

Gov. Walton said that the status of the civil courts in Okmulgee County had not been determined, but that the courts would probably be permitted to operate. He said he did not think a coal carnival at Henryetta next week would be stopped. The carnival, which is an annual affair, usually attracts thousands.

TROOPS ACT FOR SHERIFF

Alleged Violations of Law in Okmulgee County Under Investigation.

(By the Associated Press.)

OKMULGEE, Okla., June 27.—All except a "small force" of the Oklahoma National Guard units which arrived here this morning to enforce martial law in Okmulgee County following Gov. J. C. Walton's proclamation late yesterday, were ordered returned to their homes and demobilized, Brig.-Gen. Alva Niles said in a statement issued here this afternoon.

Instances of alleged law violations are being "rigidly investigated" and the guilty will be proceeded against through the usual agencies, the statement said.

Roy Crane, speaker at an alleged anti-Catholic meeting here last night at which minor disorders are said to have occurred, had been forbidden to hold a similar meeting tonight, it was announced.

General Niles said that after conferences with officials and civic organization heads "the conclusion has been reached that the situation does not warrant drastic application of martial law." He said the "situation was well in hand for insuring law enforcement" which was "the sole point aimed at in the proclamation of martial law issued by the governor."

The statement said that Sheriff John Russell had turned his office over to the military forces, which would operate as a law enforcement body and that none of the other governmental or court business of the county would be interfered with. Extraordinary meetings were banned but those of common routine are to be permitted, it was stated.

EARLE OILING STREETS.

EARLE, Ark., June 27.—Work of oiling the streets here is well under way, and when completed Earle streets will compare favorably with any town of its size.

The work is financed by the city council, road districts and private subscriptions.

Efforts are being made to have the weeds cut on vacant property and to have several low places in the city filled. It is probable that these places, which are a menace to the health of the city's citizens, will be filled by the city and charged to the property owners in cases where the owners will not have the work done.

'2500 WHIPPINGS IN YEAR,' WALTON'S ANSWER ON MOBS

Explains Reasons for Use Of Troops; More Violence Reported

PASTOR'S TALK BRINGS SOLDIERS

Associated Press Report.

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 30.—Explanation of why Governor Walton is determined to put an end to mob outrages in Oklahoma and is ready to use military force if necessary, was made today by the executive's secretary, Aldrich Blake, who declared "whipping parties" throughout the State during the past year have numbered at least 2500.

Blake said the estimate of the total whipings was based upon reports received by the governor, some from his official representatives and others from victims of mobs.

Since the governor opened his drive on mob violence last Tuesday by placing Okmulgee county under martial law, letters telling of mob activities have been pouring in on the executive, Blake said.

One a Day at Tulsa.

Disclaiming any intention to leave the impression that cases of mob violence over the State have been the work of "any one organization,' the governor's secretary added that while the outrages could not be traced "directly" to one organization, he believed most of them could be traced "indirectly."

Tulsa county has averaged one whipping a day, while Oklahoma county has had about one a week, reports indicated, the secretary said.

Further information was received today in regard to the seizure of a miner at Picher, in Ottawa county, Blake said. The governor is awaiting a complete report before taking action in that county. The day also brought to the governor a letter detailing alleged masked violence in Logan county.

The situation in Henryetta, the only portion of Okmulgee county still remaining under martial law, became more tense today as a result of announcement by the Rev. C. Bowles, Baptist minister, that he would deliver two sermons Sunday on local conditions.

Sermon Stirs Apprehension.

In an advertisement yesterday the pastor stated that on Sunday he would "preach a sermon vital to every member of the church and any who may wish to hear us."

"Sunday evening" the announcement said, "our message will be: Sheriff Russell and his deputies and who is who in Henryetta. Does the governor know the real facts in Okmulgee county?

"The people of Henryetta have been mistreated by a self-appointed committee and the governor of this State, and have been for some time by a lawless element.

"I speak as a minister and a tax paying citizen."

A national guard company from Okmulgee was hurriedly sent to Henryetta early today to reinforce the few guardsmen already on duty there, after Sheriff John Russel and James Sturmont, Henryetta police chief, advised Adjutant General B. H. Markham they could not dissuade Rev. Mr. Bowles to call off his sermons, and that more trops were needed for a possible emergency Sunday.

However, after a two-hour conference during the day with Colonel E. L. Head, in charge of the troops at Henryetta, Rev. Mr. Bowles stated that he had postponed his "message" and allowed the understanding to go out that he would deliver it after the martial law order had been lifted and there was no longer any danger of military censorship.

It was Rev. J. C. Curry, Methodist minister, Chief Sturmont and a Henryetta garage owner, who called upon Governor Walton for action in the county last Tuesday, alleging that members of Sheriff Russell's forces had been abusing their authority.

GOVERNOR CLAIMS PROCLAMATION IS DIRECTED AT MOB

Military Hearing is Ended Upon Charges of Misuse of Power and State of Siege is Nearing End

OKMULGEE, OKLA., June 28.—With the completion of a military hearing at Henryetta into charges of misuse of power lodged against the force of Sheriff John Russell, indications were tonight that martial law would be lifted from Okmulgee county within a day or two.

When the questioning of witnesses was concluded at Henryetta today Adjutant General B. H. Markham left immediately for Oklahoma City, forecasting that the small detachment of troops on duty in the county would be demobilized by Saturday.

Evidence brought out in the military inquiry was turned over to Brig. Gen. Alva J. Niles, of Tulsa, commanding the guardsmen enforcing the martial law decree, to be prepared by him for submission to Governor Walton. Brig. Gen. Niles said tonight that his official report would not be made until after the troops had been demobilized and he had returned to Tulsa.

Charges by Governor Walton that numerous cases of mob violence had occurred in Okmulgee county in months past were met here today with the statement that the recently organized "committee on community harmony" had done much to allay feeling engendered by secret organizations.

One prominent citizen declared that membership in the Ku Klux Klan had dwindled in the county as the result of the work of the harmony organization, adding that the "true blues" who banded together to oppose the Klan were not now functioning.

After Ku Klux Klan officials had been quoted in Oklahoma City as saying they believed Governor Walton's threat of extending martial law into other counties, unless activities of "lawless mobs" ceased, was directed at the Klan, the governor issued a statement declaring his Okmulgee guard order was "not aimed at any organization but at all elements that are taking the law into their own hands." Governor Walton said he was not in a position to say who was responsible for "the depredations over the state."

Four Klansmen Confess Oklahoma Floggings

Draw Minimum Sentence of 2 Years—To Be Used As State's Witnesses.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 30.—Four self-confessed members of the Ku Klux Klan face prison terms as the first definite result of Gov. J. C. Walton's drive to uproot mob violence in Oklahoma. The men are Ben F. Sikes and Grover C. Sikes, brothers, Earl Sack and Constable Arthur Finley, all of Broken Arrow.

The first three, confessing participation in the flogging of Ben Wagner, a farmer near Broken Arrow, pleaded guilty to charges of riot and threw themselves on the mercy of the court.

The minimum sentence—two years in prison—was pronounced by District Judge W. B. Williams after a plea of leniency had been made by Assistant Attorney General King.

Finley was likewise sentenced to serve two years in prison. He confessed to taking part in the flogging of Mrs. Myrtle Goolsby at Broken Arrow in July, 1922. The floggers accused her of improper relations with a man they also whipped.

Eight other men, five of whom have pleaded not guilty, are charged with implication in the Wagner flogging as the result of the confessions made by the Sikes brothers and Sack. Those who elected to stand trial are A. M. Galloway, W. M. Bills, Avery Barbour, T. V. Venator and W. M. Lewis.

Warrants have been issued for the three others, Hal Benson, Dick Fisher and Harvey Akers, and date for their preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 4.

Dispute as to Jurisdiction.

Since Sack and the Sikes brothers were sentenced a dispute has arisen as to the legality of the action. Other defendants yet to be tried contend the whipping of Wagner took place a mile outside the court's jurisdiction in Wagoner County. Wagner lives just across the Tulsa County line.

If the defendants escape trial in Tulsa on this technicality they will have to face trial in Wagoner County, for Prosecuting Attorney Moss of that county has already sworn out the nine warrants and is holding them in readiness if the defendants are released here.

The presence of troops in Tulsa County, and the display of the State's determination to bring to justice those responsible for mob operations led to the clearing up of the attack on Wagner. Since the night in October of last year when he was taken from his home and severely beaten by a band of men wearing the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan Wagner's lips had been sealed with fear, altho he recognized several of his abductors. Then when the military authorities took charge in Tulsa under Governor Walton's directions and Adj. Gen. B. H. Markham began an inquiry, Wagner, a slight man of 60 years, decided to tell his story. Results followed.

After their sentence the Sikes brothers and Sack were turned back to the military authorities. It is understood that they will be held in Tulsa to appear as witnesses against the others charged in the Wagner case.

A dozen floggings, never known to the public, have been revealed by the military inquiry around Broken Arrow.

Plea for Clemency.

Admitting that his clients had participated in the assault on Wagner, Attorney Crossland delivered an eloquent plea for judicial clemency, declaring that the defendants were but dupes of officials of the Ku Klux Klan.

"They went into the Klan without knowledge of what they were doing," Crossland said. "They are hardworking men; they make no money out of this order. They were misled and beguiled into an insidious order that has sought to and has now covered the country, disseminating hatred and intolerance and teaching men to use the lash.

"The real guilt of this thing lies at the door of the men who are getting the money out of it and who are willing to prostitute their talent for the sake of money—and politicians who are willing to sacrifice anything for a vote."

Members of the mob that arranged the abduction of Wagner had told his clients, Crossland said, that Wagner had mistreated his family and had torn up a Bible.

THREATENING LETTER SENT TO GOV. WALTON

Floggers Warn Him to Withdraw Troops From Tulsa.

TULSA ZONE EXTENDED

Martial Law in Other Parts of County When Ten Men Are Placed Under Arrest for Recent Floggings.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug 17.—An anonymous letter threatening Governor Walton unless troops immediately are withdrawn from Tulsa was received at the executive office today, according to an announcement from Aldrich Blake the governor's counselor.

"Unless troops are withdrawn at once your fate will be the same as that of the others," Blake said the letter read.

Blake said much of the contents of the letter was unprintable. He declined to divulge the name of the place at which it was posted, explaining that it might handicap the state investigators in their search for the writer.

The governor left here today on a motor trip.

(By the Associated Press.)

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 17.—Martial law, which has been in effect in the city of Tulsa since last Tuesday, was extended early tonight in the southern portion of Tulsa County, including the towns of Red Fork and Broken Arrow, scene of recent floggings.

The order enlarging the area of military occupation, signed by Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham, came upon the heels of the arrest of 10 men late today at Jerks.

No additional troops will be called into service.

Felons Paroled By Scores and Citizens' Rights Set Aside

WALTON SAYS K. K. K. RULES

Speaker McBee, Leader of the Opposition, Likens Executive to Louis XIV.

By L. C. SPEERS.

OKLAHOMA CITY.

THE truth of the Oklahoma situation will shortly be before the country. For weeks this great State, one of the wealthiest and most prosperous in the mid-western country, has submitted to a publicity bombardment that is probably without parallel in the history of the United States. On one side have stood Governor Jack C. Walton and his supporters, who have proclaimed to the country that the State is in the clutches of the Ku Klux Klan, and that thousands of its citizens have been terrorized and hundreds of them flogged by the hooded hordes of the "Invisible Empire."

On the other side are thousands of Oklahomans, among them a large proportion of the best citizenship of the State, including men and women who have no patience with the Klan and are as desirous as other law-abiding citizens that the Klan shall be unmasked and put under the control of the lawful authorities. These citizens declare that bad as is the Klan situation, it is not the big issue in the present controversy. The issue, they declare, is the Governor himself.

The Governor, these citizens will tell you, in the ten months he has occupied the executive chair, has turned loose upon the State scores of desperate criminals. They say that in his program of freeing these creatures he has permitted a traffic in pardons and paroles; that he has not sought to curb extravagance in the management of the State finances; that he has commissioned as State Deputies thousands of men, armed them and without authority of law scattered them over the State; that he has appointed radicals to important positions in the State educational system; that he suspended the writ of habeas corpus and placed the State under martial law at a time when law and order prevailed in every part of the Commonwealth; that he has interfered with the operation of the Grand Jury system and, as a climax, in an effort to stave off impeachment, dispersed the State Legislature at the point of the bayonet.

At the head of his own forces is the Governor himself. In command of the opposition is a clean-cut, mild-mannered, determined man of Stephens County, W. D. McBee, once a Texas cowboy, now a leading citizen of Oklahoma and the newly elected Speaker of the lower house of the Legislature.

Walton's Vivid Career.

John C. Walton is still in his early forties, stands nearly six feet, is inclined to corpulency, is bushy haired, clean shaven, a somewhat careless dresser, an able campaigner and not without personal magnetism. He was born in Indiana and reared in Arkansas. At seventeen he was thrown upon his own resources. He went to Mexico and worked in a silver mine. Next heard of he was firing a railroad engine and in due course of time was an engineer in the employ of the National Railways of Mexico. In the days of Porfirio Diaz, he had the honor on occasion to pilot the Presidential train.

He attended St. Louis University and studied engineering. Eighteen years ago he arrived in Oklahoma City, a salesman of electrical supplies. A few years passed and he began to mix in politics, and in 1917 he was elected Commissioner of Public Works of the city. Two years later he became Mayor. In 1922, the Farmer-Labor organization captured the Democratic Party and he became its candidate for Governor and was swept into office in November, 1922, by a majority that approximated 100,000 votes.

From the first he has had a stormy Administration. He started off with a big barbecue to which he invited his friends and followers from all parts of the State. When the barbecue roasting pits were covered and the folks had gone back home, Walton began. The storm clouds were not long in gathering. The newspapers soon began to comment on the fact that convicts were being pardoned in wholesale fashion and that others were being paroled. In some instances, they alleged, desperate men were allowed to have leave of absence of from thirty to ninety days, and other criminals were permitted to take "vacations" on the authority of the Governor.

Long List of Pardons.

Today the list pardoned and paroled includes 267 names. One of those men who owe their freedom to Governor Walton is a Choctaw Indian named Willis Hickman. He was serving a sentence for murdering a woman said to have been his grandmother. A jury convicted him of chopping the old woman's head off with an axe. While he was in the penitentiary oil was struck on his land. When released last April, his royalties on deposit in the Indian Office at Washington totaled, it is stated, more than $1,500,000.

Ira Williams, in 1920, criminally assaulted a young girl in Okmulgee. The girl subsequently died. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary. He was paroled last May. The protest was so vigorous that the parole was canceled. In the meantime Williams had left the State. He is still, so far as the records show, at liberty.

Then there was the case of Barnoski Halotka who, with his brother, murdered a young farmer, his wife and their little child. The only defense offered was drunkenness. Barnoski was pardoned last May.

These cases are cited as examples. The protest was loud, but the records show that the Governor paid little attention to it. The pardoning and paroling policy continued. Two more felons were freed this week.

After the appointment of George Wilson, a North Dakota radical of the Non-Partisan League stripe, to the Presidency of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, the American Legion launched a fight against him, and a month later Wilson lost his job.

Late in May the storm of protest against Walton became State-wide. It was non-partisan, and its intensity assumed major proportions. Then, in June came the first taste of martial law. Okmulgee was the victim. The Governor, who it is charged, sought membership in the Klan but was turned down, suddenly launched a campaign against the masked organization. He laid all the troubles of the State to the activities of the hooded bigots. He charged that the Klan was in control of the State, that it was seeking to depose him as Governor, that a reign of terror existed in the State. He charged some of the State's leading newspapers with supporting the Klan despite the fact that some of these papers are leaders in the fight to unmask the organization, the strength of which in Oklahoma no one denies and which is estimated at anywhere from 75,000 to 100,000 members.

Walton's Impeachment Sought.

In the meantime the campaign for the impeachment of Governor Walton was started. It was charged that he had interjected the Klan issue for the purpose of obscuring the bigger issues which were at stake, issues which, it was contended, involved the sovereignty of the State. But the Governor fought back and in daily statements from the Executive Mansion declared that the Klan was the backbone of a great conspiracy which involved the nullificaition of the laws of Oklahoma and the deposing of him as Governor.

The fight daily grew more bitter. In August martial law was declared in Tulsa, the second city of the State. A Grand Jury called to investigate the situation was dissolved by the Governor, and martial law proclaimed in Oklahoma City, the State capital.

The Legislature tried to assemble. It was dispersed by force of arms. Martial law was declared to prevail in all parts of the State. An election to pass an amendment to the Constitution which would give the Legislature the right to assemble on the petition of a majority of its members was called for Oct. 2. The Governor announced there would be no election and that if necessary he would stop it, even if it involved the shedding of the blood of citizens. The election was held and the Governor lost by more than 200,000 majority.

Following the election things happened in bewildering succession. The Governor himself called the Legislature into extra session. Next he recalled the troops that were on duty in the cities. Then he offered to resign if the Legislature would pass an anti-Klan law of his own making. The Legislature refused to pay attention to his suggestion. In the meantime he kept up his fight on the Klan, declaring that the Klan was directing the fight against him. There is, he again affirmed last week, no other issue.

What the Governor Says.

Let the Governor speak for himself. "For more than two years," he says, "the Ku Klux Klan has spread terror throughout Oklahoma. In the dark hours of the night the victims of the Klan have been dragged from their homes, and then without trial and without mercy these men and women have been tied up like beasts and beaten and flogged until only a wreck of humanity was left. And now the K. K. K. is pleading that they are for the law and the Constitution, and I am being subjected to their denunciation because, as Governor, I have exposed them and the crimes they have committed.

"When I began the investigation of these Klan crimes I soon found out that the Klan functioned most freely in communities where the officials charged with the administration of law were themselves members of the organization. I found that when charges were brought against the Klan, charges involving the whipping and flogging of innocent people, a Klan Sheriff would have to do the arresting, a Klan prosecuting attorney was in charge of the proceedings for the State, a Klan court was ready and a Klan jury would be drawn by a Klan jury commissioner.

"In the face of such a situation my warnings were flouted and my efforts to clarify the situation set at nought. It was then that I declared martial law, for only under the protection of bayonets could these cowed victims of the Klan be induced to testify against the invisible hordes. They had been warned that death itself might be the penalty for testifying against the Klan. Reluctantly these people testified, and although it came trembling from their lips they told the truth.

"At first only certain communities were included in the martial law area. But the power of the Klan was not broken. Aided by every political element in the State that was willing to join with the Klan in its effort to crush me, there developed a situation that made necessary the further extension of martial law, and the result was that martial law was proclaimed throughout the State so as to make it possible to reach every witness we needed and at the same time throw the necessary protection around those who were willing to come forward and tell the truth.

"So it was that little by little the invisible monster was uncovered. It ran to cover. It wrapped the flag around its dragons, cyclops, goblins and wizards. It held aloft the Constitution, called upon the people to witness that it represented the only Americanism in the land, at the same time denouncing me as a violator of the law, a war lord, mad with power, an official who was a menace to the sacred institutions of the State of Oklahoma.

He Accuses the Klan.

"Now, what is it that I have done? Have I interfered with the business of a single merchant or professional man, with the operation of any corporation or any institution in the State? I have not. They say I censored a newspaper and sought to stifle the press. I did this for two days because a certain newspaper which was violently Ku Klux had sought to incite the people against the forces of the Government operating against the K. K. K.

"They say I suspended the writ of habeas corpus. Only when necessary to uncover the crimes of the Klan. And that was accomplished without injury to a single guiltless person in the State of Oklahoma. I say now that not an honest man or woman in this State, not a business interest of any kind has suffered by reason of the martial law we had to declare in this State. Only the K. K. K., that has committed almost every crime behind masks and under cover of the dark, cries out that I am violating the political rights of the people.

"The Klan is now demanding that I be impeached and removed from office. A majority of the members of the Legislature are members of the K. K. K. The Grand Dragon of the Klan has marshaled his forces who are members of the Legislature, and they are now threatening me with impeachment. Is this move any different, I inquire, from any of the other tactics of the Invisible Empire? Here is a Legislature, made up mostly of Klansmen, which will seek to impeach and remove me from office because in the discharge of my duty I have uncovered the crimes of the Klan in this State.

"The only thing that surprises me is that they have not convened at night in the whipping pastures and there, in full regalia of mask and robes, in the presence of dragons, cyclops, goblins and wizards, impeached me in the sanctity of Nature's Temple that so often has resounded with the cries and agonies of tortured victims."

Briefly and in his own words this is the Governor's arraignment of the K. K. K. of Oklahoma. After dispersing the Legislature at the bayonet point, after prohibiting and then permitting a special election in which a majority of more than 200,000 was rolled up against him on October 6, he surprised the State by issuing a proclamation directing the Legislature to meet in extraordinary session on October 11 for the specified business of enacting laws to curb the activities and to unmask the Oklahoma realm of the K. K. K.

A big majority of the Legislature promptly let it be known that they would meet as directed, but that their first business would be inquisitorial and not legislative.

Offers to Resign

It was made plain that the impeachment of the Governor would be the first business before the Legislature and, that finished, then would come the enactment of a law to remove the mask of the Klan and, if such a thing be possible, bring it within the law.

"My reasons for calling the Legislature into extraordinary session," the Governor explained, "are well known to the citizens of the State. It is because the time has come to kill the serpent in our midst and to restore that good nature, harmony and tolerance without which Oklahoma can neither progress nor prosper nor guarantee the happiness of her citizens."

Four days passed, days in which the friends of the Governor declared he would fight to a finish regardless of the legislative odds against him. Then on Wednesday night last the Governor issued an address to the people, not to the Legislature, in which he promised to resign immediately if the Legislature would pass an anti-Ku Klux Klan law which he had drafted. The members of the Legislature promptly announced that they would accept no such proposal. If the Governor wanted to resign unconditionally, well and good, they said, but so far as Klan legislation was concerned the Legislature would attend to that business in its own time and in its own way. Such was the blunt information conveyed to the executive ear.

The Governor, of course, denies the charges made against him and his Administration and against many of his particular friends and opponents by those who have announced their determination to bring him before the bar of the State Senate.

In the event the Senate move is frustrated by his resignation, his opponents will institute Grand Jury proceedings in Oklahoma. In other words the resignation of the Governor would simply transfer the inquiry from the halls of the Legislature to a Grand Jury room.

The Leader of the Opposition.

No man in Oklahoma is more outspoken when it comes to matters involving religious tolerance and the guaranteed rights of all citizens without regard to race, creed or birth than is Mr. McBee, the ex-cowboy from the Texas plains, who has, within the last few weeks, stepped to the front as one of the admittedly big men of Oklahoma. The Governor and his friends declare that the fight to impeach and remove the Governor has been directed by N. C. Jewett, the Grand Dragon of the Klan, and other officials of the hooded organization. But the evidence does not substantiate that assertion. It is Mr. McBee who has directed the State-wide protest against the Governor, and when the time comes to draft the charges which the Governor will be haled before the State Senate to answer, Mr. McBee will have the leading part in the drafting.

"J. C. Walton," said Mr. McBee, "was elected Governor of Oklahoma in November, 1922. He had gained his popularity and election by parading throughout the State, carrying with him a jazz band, something new in political campaigning. His principal stock arguments were to pit class against class and to appeal to prejudice.

"In one part of the State he would be a Jeffersonian Democrat, and in another he would laud the greatness of Lincoln. He promised prosperity to every laboring man and a home for every tenant farmer—all upon the pledge of a vote. Only a month ago, since the election, he made the threat that he would use the militia to commandeer stores and supplies from the merchants and give these to the tenant farmers. He promised before election that he would enact legislation that would bring prosperity to everybody.

"The people of Oklahoma City, where J. C. Walton had been mayor, voted strongly against him, but his camouflage in the outlying districts was sufficiently spread that it carried him into office. As I was on the same ticket with Walton, running for membership in the House of Representatives, I supported the Walton ticket, although I had not supported him in the primary. On the day he was inaugurated I told him that a Democratic Administration should be a success and I would give him all my support as long as I thought he was carrying out Democratic ideas.

"Within a short time I found that the Administration forces were carrying on a program entirely at variance with my views. I remained quiet, however, until near the end of the session, when I discovered that legislation was being put through by changing the covers, so as to get House bills into Senate covers and thereby slip them past the unsuspecting members without their becoming aware of the trickery. I immediately called the attention of the House to this method of deception and caused a furor in the House. The Speaker became greatly alarmed lest he should be thrown out, and secretly he employed some eight or ten armed guards, and had them seated around the House members.

Guns in the Legislature

"A number of us, discovering these strangers within our midst, called on the Speaker to explain, and to disperse these armed men. In his chagrin he concluded to give us an excuse that some one had learned that whisky had been in a committee room, quite a distance from the House chamber.

"After dispersing these gunmen, another attempt was made to sneak through a batch of these outlawed and discarded bills, and I rose to my feet and denounced the Administration, the Speaker and every one connected with such a despicable régime. I told the Speaker that I did not believe that such a shameful act as placing gunmen among legislators had ever been perpetrated before, and that it was a direct personal insult to every member.

"The Governor had been in office about three months and in that time he had ousted every Democrat who held an appointive office and had installed a red Socialist, a Communist or an I. W. W. in his stead. He kept this up until he finally had one George Wilson, an agitator, without a college degree, installed as professor of the A. and M. College. This Wilson had become notorious in saying that 'every time he saw an American Legion button he wanted to shoot a hole through it.'

"On the last night of the regular session of the Legislature Governor Walton came before the joint Assembly and among other things said, 'As long as I am Governor I will not permit the death penalty to be inflicted.' He had launched on one of the most shameful crusades of pardoning and paroling of criminals that has ever been perpetrated in the annals of American history.

"This crusade has been the means of many lawyers getting rich through trafficking in pardons and paroles. 'It is said that one rich negro paid $10,000 for a parole. One man who killed his grandmother by braining her with an axe received clemency for a large fee. The most notorious murderers could easily get clemency if they could raise some real cash. Relatives would mortgage their homes to pay for pardons which had been issued and carried by the attorney, in some cases, for weeks.

"One Ira Williams, thirty-six years old, who had been convicted for raping a girl of seventeen, who died from her injuries, procured a parole by paying several thousand dollars; the tragic part was that Williams's mother gave a second mortgage on her home (everything she possessed on earth) to raise the money. The case attracted so much attention that the Governor revoked the parole; but some one phoned Williams before the Sheriff could reach him, and Williams made good his escape.

"The public official list of persons receiving pardons or paroles numbers 267, but as this list does not mention several from my own county, it is reasonable to presume that the 'unofficial list' is several times as large as the official list.

Says Governor Seeks Glory.

"Governor Walton became imbued with the idea that he was a man of national calibre. He needed some vehicle in which to ride into national prominence. He had taken the obligation of the K. K. K. at the noonhour in his executive office, on Feb. 13, 1923. Then later he attempted to get into a lodge of Klansmen and was barred from it. He became incensed. He had heard that some 'alley rats' had been flogged at Tulsa two years before, so, announcing vengeance on the Klan, he declared martial law in Tulsa, one of the most peaceable cities in the United States, and began two crusades, one of taking testimony in the Tulsa flogging cases and one of highly exaggerating and coloring the details for the Eastern press.

"The great rank and file of Oklahoma people are law-abiding, honest and industrious. Not many people paid much attention to the Governor's antics, although Tulsa's commerce was almost ruined by the military rule. No lawlessness was happening and none had happened for eight months, but the Governor could turn loose a small consignment of this highly colored testimony and get a splendid return in good publicity from the eastern press, and a first page, photograph included, in dozens of newspapers throughout the country.

"At home no one paid much attention, however, one knew that if he had been sincere and had actually wanted results he could have detailed the Attorney General on the case. That official could have had the local officers suspended and new men in their places in twenty-four hours, and could have secured many convictions in a short time. As it has been conducted by the Governor after months, with the aid of State-wide military rule, three men have entered pleas of guilty, but not one has been sent to the penitentiary. More than a score, however, some of them murderers, have received executive clemency during the time this investigation has been going on.

"He has failed and refused to prosecute. He has been amusing himself at the expense of Eastern credulity. In order to play the game in the most lucrative way, he presses military rule harder, suspends the writ of habeas corpus, puts a censorship on a daily newspaper, and spends State funds. He violates State statutes in many ways, notably in hiring of lawyers and using department clerks to obstruct the enactment of an initiated bill authorizing the Legislature to convene itself for impeachment purposes. He suspends Grand Juries impaneled to investigate his unlawful acts after having trained guns on the halls of justice and in general acting as the most despotic tyrant since Louis XIV.

No Reforms Accomplished.

"He has added thousands of members to the Klan by persecuting its membership. He has not effected even the beginning of a reform. He has fanned the flames of hate, race prejudice, religious intolerance and bitterness until he has fanned himself almost out of office.

"I bided my time patiently, watching the name of our fair State being dragged in the mire of disgrace, and withstood the insult to American institutions and the republican form of government for a long time. But when the martial law was declared in the whole State, including my peace-loving, God-fearing county of Stephens, the revolutionary blood of my Colonial forefathers boiled in my veins. I took the first train for Oklahoma City and proceeded to organize the committee to investigate the unlawful acts of Governor Walton.

"When the press announced that there might be a session of the Legislature, he had made the threat that if we tried it he would arrest us and keep us in jail as long as he was Governor. One paper wired me to know if I thought we had the right to meet, and whether or not I would go to jail in order to test the matter. My reply was: 'I know we have the legal right to meet for the purpose of investigating accusations against State officers. I favor meeting and will go to jail if necessary.'

"Then I made the call for the Legislature to convene. A large majority responded in spite of his mobilization of 35,000 soldiers and his orders of 'shoot to kill.' We were dispersed at the point of the bayonet but we are still in session, and the election came in spite of the Governor and his militia and 22,000 volunteer gunmen, many of them ex-convicts. The people overwhelmingly rebuked the Governor, and it now appears that he has landed back on earth again, has issued his call for the Legislature and we are to take up his case for investigation. If he is found guilty he will be impeached.

"Our cause is that of real American constitutional Government versus tyranny and one-man despotism. May Divine Providence guide and guard us to accomplish that result in the dignified and manly manner which our cause justly and richly deserves."

There are many well-informed men who say that Walton will resign rather than let his case come to a vote in the State. On the other hand, there are those who say he will fight to a finish. If he resigns it will not mean the end, for in that event the Grand Jury will take up the investigation. As Mr. McBee expressed it to the writer, there is "not much choice between the two."

then he had good advisers. Dr. E. T. Bynum, a real estate dealer, who puts the doctor before his name on the strength of a Ph.D., is supposed to be the most educated man in the State. They tell you with some awe that he was educated in foreign universities. Bynum was one of Walton's intimates in the Mayor's office, and he soon developed not only a keen political sense, but what's more an ability to raise campaign funds that made him a mighty welcome sight. Again Walton, who recently made a speech in which he referred to the graduates of the State University as "aluminum," found that Bynum's trained pen helped in the making of statements. Aldrich Blake, an intelligent young lawyer who managed Blind Tom Gore's campaign for United States Senator, began to take some interest in the new Mayor.

The war and factional disputes had pretty well shot the Oklahoma Socialist organization to pieces. Time was ripe for a new party and new methods. The writer records:

Leaders such as Oscar Ameringer, Dan Hogan, Luther Langston and John Hagel decided a year before the last gubernatorial election that the time had come for a new movement that would catch up the scattered strands of progressivism and bring together the opprest tenant-farmers of the State with the miners and city workers. There were the usual conferences of a few men and women meeting at one another's homes or in obscure little halls, and then one day the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League was formed, and a convention of farmers and industrial workers was held at Shawnee, at which the famous Shawnee platform was written. The new movement turned to Walton and the Democratic organization as the best means of getting their demands into legislation. Walton decided to invade the Democratic primaries, standing on the Shawnee platform. He made a poor start by eloquent praise of Woodrow Wilson, but after being warned about the consequences, he stuck pretty close to the planks of the Shawnee platform, advocating State cement plants, a fair election law, taxation for the benefit of the tenant-farmers and similar measures looking to the immediate relief of the suffering workers.

It was the Oklahoma Leader, the daily organ of the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League, edited by Oscar Ameringer, that alone of all the papers in the State supported Walton. The devotion and heroism of the men and women who made The Leader the fighting, aggressive labor daily, that single-handed put its candidate over, is worth a story by itself.

Walton came successfully through the primaries with the help of The Leader and funds subscribed by the locomotive brotherhoods and the miners.

His election by 50,000 majority thrilled progressives everywhere, and Walton's victory was set down high on the list of the other Farmer-Labor victories of the great turnover of 1922.

Then strange things began to happen out at the State Capitol which stands high above the city on the edge of prairie lands. When Ameringer and the others of the Farmer-Labor crowd went out to the State House, they found that the Governor was busy conferring with real estate men and lawyers.

At a desk in front of the Governor's private office sat Aldrich Blake, the new lawyer-secretary. At another desk sat Dr. Bynum. The Farmer-Labor folks had to be content with the shortest of interviews. They went away, wondering a bit, but still strong in their faith in their Governor. Rumors drifted about that the Governor was getting "up-stage." To a certain extent these were verified when the Governor moved from his unpretentious wooden house on an obscure side street to a beautiful brick and stone mansion in the most exclusive residential district.

Then came the appointment of the new president of the Agricultural and Mechanics College at Stillwater. This institution had been founded to train the sons of the farmers in the ways of the fields. Of late it had turned out a host of real estate brokers, embryo clerks and such, and the farmers didn't like the trend of things one bit. They wanted their sons to come back to them from Stillwater with something more in their heads than a knowledge of football scores and how to skin suckers out of their money. With one voice they demanded that a dirt farmer be put in charge at Stillwater, and that that farmer be George Wilson, one-time organizer for the non-Partizan League and former instructor at Stillwater. Instantly the American Legion and the Ku Klux Klan joined hands with the oil interests in telling Walton that the appointment of Wilson would be a fatal surrender to "the Reds." Walton is known to have stalled along on making the appointment. What finally persuaded him to send Wilson to Stillwater was the hot campaign made by The Leader. In one day the Governor received 2,000 letters from farmer readers of The Leader.

The rejoicing among the radicals did not last very long. The Governor reversed himself, under pressure from factions who didn't like Mr. Wilson's attitude toward the American Legion or American principles generally. The Socialists dipt their pens in vitriol, and related that their former comrade "Jack" Walton was a traitor to everything worth standing for. Then came the Klan difficulty. The Governor announced at first that he was not opposed to the Klan, he was merely opposed to the private whipping parties which had been growing in number until, he declared, no such thing as personal liberty had been left in Oklahoma. A personal view of the Governor, together with the first climax of the Klan trouble, is given in The Nation, by Aldrich Blake, whose position as "Executive Counselor to the Governor of Oklahoma" is called "the highest appointed position in the State." Mr. Blake is also the editor of a newspaper through which the Governor expresses his policies and attacks the Klan. The Nation's article runs:

It is quiet at the Capitol. For several hours Governor Walton has been interviewing job-seekers. He sees them all personally; he would like to help them all. Suddenly the monotony is broken: "A committee from Henryetta, Governor." Oklahoma's Chief Executive smiles graciously, rises and shakes hands with his visitors—a minister, the chief of police, and a prominent business man.

The committee begins its story. The people of Henryetta are being intimidated by the Klan. A number of outrages have occurred. One man has been killed. The circumstances were—

The Governor interrupts: "I have heard enough. Mob violence is going to cease in Oklahoma; within five minutes the order will be given to place Okmulgee County under martial law."

The committee is dazed. The press of Oklahoma, always hostile to Walton, howls its derision. The Governor's friends are alarmed. "Jack has made a mistake," they say.

Oklahomans are still talking about "Jack's mistakes." They will tell you they love him on account of the "mistakes he has made." In fact, this young Governor thrives on "mistakes." It is the Walton way—a tremendous decision in a flash, a terrifying attack on the enemy, a wallop that leaves friend and foe alike paralyzed by the impact. You can hit as hard as you like. There are no rules, Queensbury or other. It's "dog eat dog" when Walton sounds the tocsin.

It is so in the Klan war that now splits Oklahoma asunder and threatens to assume national proportions. Academic discussion long since has ceased. A young Jew with a police-court record is seized on the main thoroughfare of Tulsa, taken to the whipping pasture, and severely beaten. The troops are ordered to Tulsa.

The Governor is deaf to the suggestion that an investigation first be made by the civil authorities. "Make them feel martial law in Tulsa," are his orders to the adjutant-general. "Tulsa is rotten. There is no civil law there, only Klan law. Why waste time?"

The strategy of attempting a civil investigation first does not appeal to him. He jumps a cog, maybe two. It is his way. He leaps across the first- and second-line trenches and engages the enemy in hand-to-hand combat at the very walls of the citadel. And he has never lost a battle. Some say it's the daring of the man that has made him a political leader of such tremendous power; others state he is possest of unerring intuition, that instinct serves him better than reason.

In any event, Governor Walton does not pretend to be a scholar in politics. He admits that he is not "learned." His enemies assert he has never read a "serious book" in his life. Perhaps so: but his friends are not shocked. Governor Walton has drawn richly from the experience of every-day life and contact with the "under dog." As a locomotive engineer and railroad conductor, he studied men. He loves the poor. If you are "down and out," see Walton—that's what they will tell you in Oklahoma. If he can help you, he will do it, and he won't ask your politics. Publicly, he is a Democrat, but there are scores of Socialists and Republicans on the State pay-roll—put there by Walton.

Just now the Governor is engaged in his greatest battle. For two years Oklahoma had lived under a cloud—a thick mist behind which the Invisible Empire gave its orders to sheriffs, prosecuting attorneys, jurors, and judges, ordered citizens flogged, threatened others, and instituted a business boycott against what they call the "alien world." The more timid leaders urged that the Klan be left alone, allowed to run its course. Meanwhile tens of thousands of citizens silently and sullenly submitted to a gradual encroachment upon their precious liberties.

Such a condition could not endure—not in Oklahoma where men value initiative, enterprise, and freedom. On August 14, Governor Walton sent the troops to Tulsa. In less than six weeks a Grand Dragon and a Titan have been put under arrest charged with rioting, four Klansmen have confessed to flogging a defenseless citizen and have been sentenced to two years each in the State penitentiary; many others have been bound over to the district court, the Invisible Empire has announced that all masked parades and meetings will be "deferred," and the fiery cross, which had brazenly burned in some cases from the tops of the courthouses, has been taken down and destroyed. Walton did it.

Personally Governor Walton is a most charming gentleman. A bitter foe becomes tractable in his presence. A woman with a couple of ragged children can win a pardon or parole for her husband quicker than the warmest political friend or the shrewdest lawyer. In fact, it is almost impossible for Governor Walton to resist the appeal of poverty, no matter what the request may be. Early in his administration he announced that all death sentences would be commuted during his term of office. A storm broke over him, but he did not waver. And so again he braved public scorn when he wrote a letter urging President Harding to release the political war prisoners. "Here's the letter; now howl," he said to the reporters when making the communication public. And the papers howled. Another Walton "mistake."

His sympathy for the tenant-farmers and wage-earners of the State is almost pathetic. "I can not give them all jobs," he will say, "and political and industrial reforms are so slow. What can I do?" He has already given them warehouses, an anti-discrimination law, a first-class market commission, and legislation of inestimable value to the growing number of cooperative societies.

Governor Walton gets most of his amusement poking fun at Oklahoma's newspapers. In fact, he never fails to give the "corrupt press" credit for his political success. For years Walton has fought the newspapers and the newspapers have fought him, and Walton has always won.

By his enemies John Calloway Walton is regarded as a political adventurer, corrupt machine politician, hypocrite, and brainless tool in the hands of designing men who have crept into his councils; by his friends "Governor Jack" is hailed as the champion of political freedom and democracy, a two-fisted fighter after the style of Roosevelt, and with a heart like the heart of Lincoln.

And so goes the battle in Oklahoma.

This, of course, is an ex parte statement of the affair. Another view, which takes into consideration the faction which would be delighted if Oklahoma could rid itself both of its Klan and its Governor, is exprest in this special dispatch from Oklahoma to the Boston Globe:

Oklahoma to-day has not one issue, Klan or no Klan, but three. It is the Klan, Jack Walton, or neither. The fight is to the finish. It had its origin two years ago when Walton was Mayor. It flared out again when the Klan bitterly fought Walton's nomination, and again when Klan members redoubled their efforts in the election. Each camp has its followers. Sixty-nine legislators of the 104 in the State say they are ready to assemble in Oklahoma City to attempt to impeach Walton. That is indicative of the sentiment throughout the State.

The crisis in Oklahoma culminates a year fraught with disappointment and uncertainty. Tired of political chicanery, of graft and factionalism, she hoped for accomplishment for a year that would bring her strides farther in her rapid commercial and industrial development.

She had seen a Governor formally charged with bribery. She had seen him saved from possible impeachment by one vote. Her farm interests cried in vain for relief. Her commercial interest could muster little confidence in her administration. She saw her banking laws crumble and her banking commissioner disappear under charges.

To-day she wonders if she has jumped from the frying-pan into the fire. Her farmers and laborers piled up the largest vote ever given a Governor when they put Jack Walton in the chair in January. Every large city with the exception of Muskogee voted against him. Many of her farmers still believe Walton has their interests at heart and will accomplish their purposes. Many do not. The cities have said "Enough."

Since Walton, his brass band and his policemen were swept into the Capitol building, newspapers have had to revise their estimates of big stories. The State has become numb to the sensational. It started with the barbecue. Then the Legislature. More than 200 convicts given executive clemency, an edict setting aside capital punishment, the appointment of George Wilson, Socialist leader, as president of the State Agricultural and Mechanical College, and his as sudden removal, the break and repudiation of the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League, the organization which elected Walton, and the attempt to retain the "rank and file" martial law in Tulsa, and then the whole State censorship, the ban and its removal on the Oklahoma State Fair, all came too fast for Oklahomans to digest them.

Oklahoma feels keenly she has been misrepresented to the world because one man has made political fodder of an admitted evil. With pompous word and sensational phrasing she feels Walton has painted her as in rebellion when she will admit no more than an infection. Few Oklahomans stand for the Klan, fewer perhaps than stand for Walton. Yet the Klan claims Walton's fight has resulted in hundreds of new applications for that order. Oklahoma is fighting to-night for her place in the sun. A place in the respect of the Nation. She is fighting for the opportunity to continue the meteor-like development she started some 30-odd years ago when there was not an oil-well, a business building or a farm of significance within her boundaries.

Governor Walton in the course of the detailed statement of his position, made to the New York World on October 6, defends himself against the charge that his anti-Klan agitation has hurt business in the State. He concludes his three-column statement with this praise of Oklahoma, particularly if it could be free from the influence of the Klan:

The State of Oklahoma is fabulously rich in minerals, metals and agricultural possibilities—not as yet one per cent. developed—oil and natural gas in abundance, an inexhaustible supply of lead and zinc, cement rock in sufficient quantities to furnish cement for every hard-surfaced road in this country and erect all the buildings in the universe, with mills already in operation; an inexhaustible supply of glass sand, a glass factory in operation and enough glass and sand in sight to furnish window-glass for the world; gypsum beds, mountains of fine marble and granite, salt plains miles in extent, and all this wealth waiting for capital for its development.

Our soil produces wheat, corn, cotton, kaffir corn, milo-maize, sudan grass, broom-corn in abundance, all fruits and vegetables. As many as five crops of alfalfa have been cut in one season on some of our river-bottom land; three crops of potatoes have been grown in one season, and yet the soil of Oklahoma has scarcely been scratched.

We need money for development, but money invested in Oklahoma will never be safe under Klan rule. But if God gives me strength, this hydra-headed monster, called the Invisible Empire, will be crusht effectually and completely, and capital can find safe profitable investment within our borders.

I have determined that the Klan, invisible government, must unmask and give way to visible government or leave the State, or I must seek habitation elsewhere.

On the same day the Klan announced, according to a special dispatch from the staff correspondent of The World in Oklahoma City, that it would unmask "thenceforth and forever," ten days after the Governor was removed from office. The Klan authorities confidently expect that the legislature, called to meet on October 17, will impeach the Governor. According to a former State Corporation Commissioner, "acknowledged spokesman for the Klan," quoted in the World's dispatch:

"You can tell the rest of the [illegible] that the Klan will discard its hoods and gowns ten days after Jack Walton is hurtled back into private life. This is positive and certain.

"Most of the Klansmen have been against the mask and gown since the inception of the Klan. In fact, I was head of a committee appointed by the Oklahoma Klan to visit Atlanta and obtain from the head of the Klan permission to unmask in this State. I even thought we should get rid of the hood and gown in Oklahoma without asking permission.

"It was just at the moment when the Klan was about to unmask that Governor Walton seized upon the alleged political and moral issue against the Klan. He had his spies in the Klan, and he knew we were about to face the public as I have always felt American citizens should."

THAT BIG MEAL

When Governor Walton gave his barbecue, said to have been "the greatest meal ever served," this is what he ordered:

500 beef cattle.
200 hogs.
10 buffaloes.
10 bears.
10 deer.
10 antelopes.
5,000 chickens.
1,000 turkeys.
500 ducks and geese.
200 "possums"—and sweet "taters" to go with them.
1,000 rabbits.
1,000 squirrels, groundhogs and frogs' legs.
100,000 loaves of bread
100,000 buns.
5 tons of coffee.
5 tons of sugar
250 bushels of onions.
5 tons of salt.
1,000 pounds of pepper.—From the Boston Globe.

"JACK, THE KLAN-FIGHTER" IN OKLAHOMA

The Literary Digest

GOVERNOR "JACK" WALTON may be all wrong or all right, but at least, as one visiting newspaper man telegraphs back from militia-ruled Tulsa to his Boston paper, he is the central figure in "a drama for which the stage is set in Oklahoma," and which "is being watched by an audience consisting of the population of the other 47 States of the Union." The play could be well called "The Man of the Hour," suggests this writer, because John Calloway Walton—ten years ago an obscure clerk in Kansas City, and now Governor of Oklahoma—to-day "probably has more eyes focused upon him than any other citizen of the United States."

New York 10-20-23

But the hero of a play, as a rule, has to stand forth as an all-wool, undisputed hero, and that is right where the debate starts. On the one hand, he is spoken of as "a political adventurer, a corrupt machine politician, a hypocrite, a brainless tool in the hands of designing men." This view of him is very commonly held by his enemies, announces his friend and "Executive Counsellor," Aldrich Blake. On the other hand, "Governor Jack" is hailed as "the champion of political freedom and democracy, a two-fisted fighter after the style of Roosevelt, and with a heart like the heart of Lincoln." Seldom in the history of these United States, it appears, has there been a man about whom opinion seemed to be, not only so violently divided, but also so much mixed up.

The Governor, for cause which he considers to be more than sufficient, has deliberately started out to "get" the Klan, thus creating the primary issue of the Governor or the Klan. His methods, however, which include martial law for the State, have so aroused public opinion that there are now said to be three issues—the Klan, Jack Walton, or neither—with the "neithers" in the majority. Governor Jack, nevertheless, is standing pat, and his friends say that the cry of "A curse on both your houses!" now raised against both the Klan and Walton factions, is largely the product of a few big newspapers, voicing the sentiments of commercial interests which have been hurt by exposure of the Klan's methods in Oklahoma.

"Who is this Governor Walton?" ask several editorial critics of the trouble which he has stirred up, or in which, at least, he has become violently involved.

He was once a Socialist, or a near-Socialist, it appears, and before that he was, for ten years, a salesman in Kansas City.

He lost much of the respect of his radical friends when, after his election as Governor, he "paraded around the golf links in knickers and fancy stockings." Before that he had been more frequently seen in overalls and hickory shirts, and his labor friends are said to have objected to his new and frivolous costume.

He has such an aversion to capital punishment that he announced no man would be put to death in Oklahoma while he was Governor, and he has kept his word by pardoning prisoners in a manner described as "wholesale."

For the rest, says the Boston Globe, concisely summing him up:

His eyes are large and blue, his face oval, his complexion ruddy. He has an aquiline nose and a stubborn chin. He doesn't drink—he says he'll give $1,000 to any one who has ever seen him take one—and he doesn't like cigars. His pet smoke is a pipe, and he works this overtime.

He was the candidate of the Farmer - Labor Reconstruction League, elected by largest plurality in history. He gave an old - fashioned barbecue attended by 300,000 at his inauguration—the "world's biggest meal."

"THE KLAN OR ME!"

Governor Walton announces that the K. K. K. must either unmask and reform, or that the State of Oklahoma will not be big enough to hold both the organization and himself.

He has two daughters, twelve and ten years old, Madge and Vena.

His Socialist and radical friends, who were so largely responsible for his election, are reported to be having a troublesome time. They long since disavowed him, when he discharged his recently appointed president of the State Agricultural College, a Socialist by the name of George Wilson. Mr. Wilson is reputed, by his enemies and by Governor Walton, to have announced that any man wearing an American Legion button should be shot, and to have shown "Bolshevist tendencies," but the Socialists of the country never forgave Walton for turning against him. The radicals, however, hate the Ku Klux Klan rather more than anything else, and its promiscuous beating of radicals and others in Oklahoma makes Governor Walton seem the lesser of two evils. The Socialistic New York Call, with these various factors in mind, tells a part of the "Story of Oklahoma's Most Sensational Figure," in the following article by McAlister Coleman:

If you had asked the Man in the Subway a year ago to name the Governor of Oklahoma, he would have looked at you with an air of utter negation. To-day the name of John Walton is known as far as newspapers circulate.

First there was "Our Jack" running as candidate for the Democratic party on the notably progressive platform of the Farmer-Laborites. Then there was "Governor Jack," he of the hickory shirt, whose inaugural barbecue was attended by most everybody in the State, and attended as well by much publicity. Then there was the Walton of the pardons who announced that as long as he was Governor no criminal should suffer the death penalty in Oklahoma. Followed a Walton who ruthlessly discharged George Wilson, the big-hearted, big-brained choice of the Farmer-Laborites for president of their agricultural college. They called him "Oklahoma's Monstrosity, the Two-headed Calf," did the Farmer-Laborites, and Judas, and worse. And now and behold Walton, the terror of the Klan—the Governor who hands out martial proclamations as freely as he issues pardons, and who has ordered the most powerful body in Oklahoma to drop their masks and hoods under penalty of the most severe sentences.

What strange, contradictory manner of man is this, whose sudden shifts of front bewilder the most experienced political observers? Why should Walton, who last July was being damned from Tonkawa to Red River by the progressive elements in the State, turn now on those popularly supposed to be his new supporters and make a strong bid for political suicide by attacking the Klan and the great oil interests back of the Oklahoma Knights?

Walton is a square-built, low-slung man with the big hawk nose of a public character, bulging eyes and powerful shoulders. Oklahoma City first knew him some ten or fifteen years ago when he came from another State into the "Sooner" country to sell the services of a firm of electrical engineers. He turned to politics instinctively. At that time the Socialist party was strong in the state. There was a hopeful spirit of progress in the air of all the new Southwest, and Walton alined himself with the workers. Walton was a good mixer; he showed a sympathetic interest in the general aspirations of labor, tho it is doubtful if he has ever had any grasp of economics. At all events he made a good speech, had a certain presence and for any semi-intelligent perso competition in Oklahoma politics was not too keen.

He was elected Mayor of Oklahoma City on a ticket which had labor's support, and he made a good record. When the printers in the capital city struck, he refused to sick the police on them. His popularity increased with the issuing of various statements from the Mayor's office, expressing sympathy with labor. And

Ku Klux Klan—1923. Oklahoma.

NEITHER HOOD NOR BAYONET

There is an amazing and startling situation in Oklahoma. It would be even surprising if the story of such a condition were cabled to America from a district in Russia or the Balkans. The state is on the brink of civil war.

Commercial Appeal

But here we are commemorating the Constitution of the United States. This has been Constitution Week. People all over the country have been explaining.

9-23-23

Senator Williams threw a dazzling light upon it Friday night in a speech he made in this city and he made gloriously effulgent the soul, the spirit of this charter of our liberty. Under this covenant all the states should live in peace and all the people should be at peace. The courts should function, the judges and the court officers should be responsible to the Constitution alone. No notion, no clique, no faction, no masked society, no church, no governor should swerve them from the faithful course marked out by the Constitution.

Memphis, Tenn.

Under the Constitution we find that the minorities as well as the majorities are protected. The right of one man is just as important under this instrument as the rights of a million.

It is hard for an American knowing and desiring to be obedient to the laws of the United States to understand what is going on in Oklahoma. The whole thing is so absurd, in view of what should be in these times of peace and where the law is supposed to be supreme that one at a distance can scarcely comprehend.

Several months ago Oklahoma became disturbed, excited and agitated. Many of the people of the state had become very rich because of oil. Some of them became wild spenders and wild livers. Many others became poor because of the collapse in live stock and farm products two years ago.

Organized labor became agitated. The farmer-labor forces gathered strength. Almost every one was discontented. The rich were angry with the government for taxing them heavily on their excess profits. The poor were angry because they saw evidence of great wealth about them when they had a hard struggle to make buckle and tongue meet.

Into this melee came the Ku Klux organizers. They offered a new thing. Their organization was mysterious and attractive to those who were looking for a new method of regulating things according to their own wishes.

There were many evidences of law violations in Oklahoma as there were in other states, and soon the papers were filled with stories of whippings, banishings and floggings and as the strength of these flogging parties grew the strength of the courts declined.

Of course politics was at fever heat every day. The new conditions gave opportunity for new men to get office and those in office sought to hold on by playing to a public opinion that was more or less influenced by prejudice and hysteria.

Governor Walton came into power. He was backed by a force of many sorts of opinions when he was elected. He began to see that some of the elements that had supported him entertained views that were at fault with the law and common sense.

He seems to be an impulsive man and soon at outs with a great many who had been his eager supporters. Where he lost friends in one place he gathered friends in another.

Thus the struggle went on with conflicting forces of one day being united forces the next day, against a group which had also changed alliance over night.

One thing led to another until Oklahoma reached a point dangerous to all of its people and dangerous to the life of the state itself.

We find in Oklahoma today two sorts of government. They are in conflict. One is the invisible government. This government is composed of people who seek to regulate the affairs of the community independent of and outside of the regularly appointed law forces. They give allegiance to officers with curious names who are responsible to an inner circle in another state, whose highest officer has the title of emperor. This is the invisible government. It is not known in the articles and in the sections of the Constitution of the United States. It is imperialistic, elusive and secret, whereas the sprit of the Constitution is democratic, frank and open.

But on the reverse of the shield is another form of government which is visible, but it is visible under a form that free men in a free republic do not like.

Governor Walton, holding that the legal authorities in some of the towns had broken down and that mob rule had usurped lawful rule, declared martial law.

Martial law is a dangerous instrumentality in a republic. The Constitution does not forbid it, but the fathers looked upon it as a thing to be invoked only in times of great peril. Its danger is manifest when it clashes with that exalted instrument of human liberty, the writ of habeas corpus. The writ of habeas corpus goes down before it only under the doctrine of "Silent leges inter arma," and this prescription is not truly a part of the common law and the American constitutional system, but is seized upon as the best justification in sight for an action full of peril.

The laws of America should never be silent in America. It was a bad day for the republic when in the dark hours of the Civil War the president, commander-in-chief of the army, more than once ignored findings of the supreme court and denied the virtue of the ancient habeas corpus.

In Oklahoma we saw the governor make a move to censor the press. The liberty of the press was regarded as of such importance that it was guaranteed along with the right of free speech and freedom of worship in a special section of the Constitution. The governor later receded from this position.

But now we find in Oklahoma the visible rule of the bayonet.

The bayonet is a symbol of martial law. The bayonet is war's most deadly instrument.

So we have the ultimate of the invisible rule and the ultimate of the visible rule. We have martial law against masked law.

We have the bayonet against the hood.

One Oklahoma paper of fine character, after bitterly denouncing the rule of the mask, denounced the rule of the bayonet. It has opposed Governor Walton, but states that as between the two it will accept his rule of the bayonet because it is visible against the invisible rule.

Right there the paper is wrong.

Neither the hood nor the bayonet should rule in Oklahoma. The law should rule in Oklahoma.

The law as construed by strong men and men faithful to the Constitution should rule, and it is up to the law-loving people of that state regardless of personal affiliations, klans or Waltonites to get together and enthrone the law upon its constitutional foundation.

A man's allegiance to nothing in America or out of America is superior to his allegiance to the Constitution of the republic.

The judge, or the ruler, or the editor, or the sheriff, the banker or the farmer is a traitor to the republic if he refuses obedience to it both in its letter and its spirit.

Its letter and its spirit are solemn preachments for obedience to lawfully constituted authority, for peace, order and human charity on the part of man towards his neighbor.

Walton Confident as Legislators Plan to Test His Authority

Oklahoma Governor Declares He Welcomes Opportunity to Place Klan Issue Before Federal Courts—Sees Organization as Issue in Next National Election—Silent on Political Ambitions

9-24-23

Associated Press Report.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 23.—A test in the United States courts of his authority to prohibit the convening of an extraordinary session of the Oklahoma house of representatives scheduled for Wednesday, will be welcome, Governor J. C. Walton declared tonight.

"I want to place the issue of the Ku Klux Klan before federal authorities and an injunction action against me will be the most direct method of bringing this about," he asserted.

Governor Walton said that "the Ku Klux Klan is bound to be an issue in the next national election."

The executive's statement was in reply to a declaration of members of the house that they would resort to court action if he carried out his announced intention to bar the session.

He declined to say whether he would be a candidate for the United States senate on an anti-klan platform.

"I have no announcement to make at this time," he said.

The governor said that he "believed the klan was licked" but that he was prepared to go on indefinitely with his campaign against the organization.

He said that if lack of funds later prevented the purchase of supplies for troops on duty he would commandeer what was necessary.

Replies to Critics.

A statement replying to critics who have assailed him for suspending the writ of habeas corpus and quoting a federal statute passed in 1871 which he said "outlawed the klan in the United States," was issued by the executive.

"Much has been said about the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and there are those who declare that during the days of reconstruction following the Civil war the writ of habeas corpus was never suspended," the governor said. "I fear the memory of some people is failing for there was passed a law by the congress and approved April 20, 1871, which was known as the 'Ku Klux Klan law.' This law was directed at the klan and outlawed it in the United States."

He quoted the law as follows:

"That if two or more persons within any State or territory of the United States shall conspire together to overthrow or put down or to destroy by force the government of the United States; or by force, intimidation or threat to deter any party or witness in any court of the United States from attending such court or testifying in any matter pending in such court fully, freely and truthfully, or to injure any such witness in his person or property on account of his having so attended or testified; or by force, intimidation or threat to influence the verdict, presentment or indictment or any juror or grand juror in any court of the United States, or to injure such juror in his person or property on account of any verdict, presentment or indictment lawfully assented to by him on account of his having been such juror; or shall conspire together, or go in disguise upon public highways or upon the premises of another for the purpose, either directly or indirectly, of depriving any persons or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges or immunities under the laws, or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities of any State from giving or securing to all persons within such State the equal protection of the laws; or shall conspire together for the purpose of in any manner impeding, hindering, obstructing or defeating the due course of justice in any State or territory with intent to deny any citizen of the United States the due and equal protection of the laws, or to injure any person in his person or his property each and every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a high crime."

Revolting Mob Story.

A revolting story of how members of a masked mob at Tulsa, after mercilessly beating a victim, cut off one of his ears and tried to force him to eat it, was made public tonight by Governor Walton, in the form of testimony given the Tulsa military court by J. H. Smitherman.

"This is only one of the hundreds of such crimes committed, which the civil authorities of this State refused to prosecute," declared the executive. "I ask the people of the civilized world, in the presence of this testimony, if I was not justified in proclaiming martial law in the city of Tulsa."

Smitherman, a negro, related how on the night of March 10, 1922, he was summoned to his door by 12 men, eight of whom were masked, forced into an automobile at the point of revolvers, taken into the country, stripped of his clothing, handcuffed and tied to a tree, whereupon his captors accused him of registering negroes as democrats and advising them to vote against the city administration.

Next, one of the men spit in his face, Smitherman testified after accusing him of "ungentlemanly conduct" toward a white woman. Then he was beaten severely by two of his abductors, he declared, adding: "One would whip until he had exhausted himself and then the other would whip me."

"Finally," Smitherman's testimony said, "the man who spit in my face stuck a gun to my head and said, 'I am going to kill you.' But one of the unmasked ones dissented, so they talked it over privately for a few minutes. Then the same man who wanted to kill me came up, pulled a knife out and cut off my ear. Then he tried to make me eat it, and when I refused, he took the butt end of the whip and hit me in the face until he was tired, all the time trying to make me eat my ear. Finally they turned me loose and told me to leave Tulsa and to leave Oklahoma warning if I did not, one of the 12 would kill me."

Smitherman testified that he told his captors he had advised all the negroes he could to register as democrats and vote that ticket, because he himself was a democrat.

"There was nothing else to do," he said he told the men.

He said he denied the accusation concerning his conduct toward a white woman.

Only Two Cities Guarded So Far; Court Adjourns to Avoid Complications of Martial Law.

9-18-23

Associated Press Report.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. Sept. 17.—Its two largest cities actually occupied by the military, Oklahoma passed its second day under martial law today without disturbance.

Nowhere in the State except at Tulsa and Oklahoma City was martial activity visible.

At these places, however, military courts of inquiry were in session and proceeding with investigations ordered by Governor J. C. Walton into alleged masked depredations and regulations were in effect clearing the streets of traffic and pedestrians between midnight and 5 a. m. Armed guards paced the entrances to the State capitol here, permitting only those to pass who had official business within.

Early tonight, word was received from Coalgate that Judge J. H. Linebaugh had adjourned the regular session of district court there until next Monday, explaining that he wished to avoid any question as to the legal of the court's right to proceed.

This, with the orders issued preventing the convening of a special district court grand jury here this morning, are the only instances of military interference with the courts.

Withdraw Machine Guns.

Civil authorities here tonight held undisputed police powers following Mayor Cargill's threat to withdraw the entire police department from duty unless the military relinquished control over it. Colonel W. S. Key, commanding the local troops immediately ordered the reinstatement of Police Chief Ray Frazer and machine guns which had frowned on the city hall and county court house were removed.

Although Greek county, with Oklahoma and Tulsa counties, fell under Governor Walton's decree of "absolute martial law" no troops yet have been stationed there.

The belief is current that military rule actually will be extended only to a few sections of the State and this opinion has been strengthened by the fact that only a small part of the strength of the State's national guard forces has been mobilized.

Probe Klan Center.

The military investigation into acts of mob violence undoubtedly will center in Oklahoma City, whence, the governor charged in his proclamation of martial law, the organization of the Ku Klux Klan emanates to all parts of the State.

Being Constable Made Klansman's Task Easier—Four Knights of Ku Klux Klan Now Face Two Years in Prison.

(By the Associated Press.)

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 27.—The state penitentiary opened today to another admitted member of the Ku Klux Klan when William Arthur Finley, constable at Broken Arrow was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for participation in the whipping of Leslie Goolsby and Mrs. Myrtle Spain, now Mrs. Goolsby, on the night of July 29, 1922.

Finley confessed having turned over Goolsby and Mrs. Spain to a band of whippers and pleaded guilty to a charge of riot. He received the minimum penalty.

Four other men are jointly charged with implication in the offense for which Finley was sentenced, only two of whom had been arrested tonight.

T. H. Matthew, retired merchant of Broken Arrow, and W. M. Bills, Broken Arrow transfer man, were the two arrested. They entered pleas of not guilty and were released on bond of $1,500 each.

City Marshal Accused.

The others are George Bradshaw, city marshal of Broken Arrow, and Harve Acres. Officers visited Broken Arrow during the afternoon, but did not arrest Bradshaw. Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham was in conference during the afternoon with Mayor Keener of Broken Arrow.

Constable Finley is the first public official to be caught in the investigation being conducted by Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham into mob activities in Tulsa County.

Four men now have been sentenced as the result of the inquiry, Grover and Ben Sikes and Earl Sack of Broken Arrow having pleaded guilty last week to taking part in a flogging administered by robed klansmen to Ben Wagner, aged farmer living near Broken Arrow.

Goolsby and Mrs. Spain, then the wife of "Dare-devil Slim" Spain, a parachute jumper, were placed in the hands of the whipping band after their arrest on a statutory charge. Spain fell to his death at Seneca, Mo., a few days after the flogging and Goolsby and Mrs. Spain then were married.

Finley was turned over to the military authorities by Sheriff Bob Sanford under authority of a telegram from Gov. J. C. Walton. The telegram granted a 15-day stay of execution and explained that the military desired to use Finley further in the investigation.

Mrs. Goolsby reported the whipping later to the authorities, saying that her assailants had accused her of improper relations with Goolsby, then 19 years old. She was 22.

In a statement attributed to her by county officials at the time she declared that "the Ku Klux Klan made me promise to go back to Spain for two weeks."

Woman Tells Story.

Mrs. Goolsby, sitting in Adjt. Gen. Markham's office with her two months old daughter in her arms, told newspaper men of her whipping.

"I was working on John Hodges' farm, near Broken Arrow, hoeing cotton for $1 a day when Finley and Marshall Bradshaw of Broken Arrow came after me," she said.

"Mr. Goolsby was also working there, and he was arrested, too, and we both were taken to jail in Broken Arrow. They put us in jail and nothing was said then about why they arrested us.

"About 8:30 that same night Finley and another man came to the jail and got us, put us in a car, stating they were going to bring us to Tulsa, and that everything would be all right. About a mile this side of Broken Arrow they turned off the main road and we were blindfolded and carried further on. We were met by a party of six more men when the automobile stopped in some out of the way place.

"They charged us with living together and not being married. They whipped me with a leather strap. They did not make me undress. They gave me seven lashes. The strap didn't cut the blood from me, but made my back black and blue. Then I was taken back to Tulsa by Finley."

Goolsby said that he was bared to the waist and given 19 lashes. He said there were eight in the whipping b[illegible]

TENSION PRECEDES PARADE OF KU KLUX

But Demonstration Is Held Without Disorder Under Guard of Policemen Heavily Armed

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA., Aug. 27.—A parade was staged in Bartlesville tonight by the Ku Klux Klan without disorder despite earlier indications that the demonstration might bring a clash between the paraders and opponents of the Klan.

There was no attempt at interference with the parade. A score of special policemen armed with rifles and shot guns, were on the streets ready for any emergency.

Anti-Klansmen attended a meeting before the parade at which Arthur Fitzpatrick, an attorney, declared he would be killed before the American flag "was carried down the street by Klansmen." The anti-Klan meeting was called by Fitzpatrick.

During the parade nothing was seen of Fitzpatrick.

TENSE SITUATION

Montgomery Ala

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA., Aug. 27—A tense situation existed here early tonight preceding a scheduled Ku Klux Klan parade.

In newspaper advertisements Saturday and today the Bartlesville Klan announced there would be a parade through the downtown streets at 8:30 o'clock tonight, following which there would be held a meeting at the baseball park. In today's advertisement the Klan reiterated its intention to parade "regardless of rumors to the contrary."

This afternoon also appeared the following advertisement:

"Notice, citizens of the visible empire: The American flag will not be carried down the streets of Bartlesville tonight. A mass meeting is called at the ball park for 7:30 p. m., to organize and prepare to uphold the law and protect the flag. Come prepared to uphold the law and the constitution and to assist the state peace officers.

(Signed).

"Arthur Fitzpatrick, chairman of the committee."

Fitzpatrick is a local attorney.

It was learned from an authoritive source that Klansmen would come here from all sections of Northeastern Oklahoma and southern Kansas for the advertised demonstration.

Police Chief U. L. Gaston said early tonight that Mayor F. N. Buck gave Klan leaders permission to stage the parade. Mayor Buck is in Texas on vacation.

"My force will be on the job tonight," said Chief Gaston.

Acting Mayor J. W. Mullin declared the meeting called by Fitzpatrick for the avowed purpose of preventing the Klan parade should be stopped. However, he had issued no orders to the [illegible]ce to that effect it was said.

[illegible]enty special policemen were s[illegible] in at 7 o'clock by Chief Gaston, and [illegible]rmed with rifles. They were sent to the baseball park "to keep the peace," according to Gaston.

The streets were thronged with people as the hour for the parade approached. Klansmen from neighboring cities poured into town by every road.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 23.—A test in the United States courts of his authority to prohibit the convening of an extraordinary session of the Oklahoma House of Representatives, scheduled for Wednesday, will be welcomed, Gov. J. C. Walton declared tonight.

Memphis Tenn.

"I want to place the issue of the Ku Klux Klan before federal authorities, and an injunction action against me will be the most direct method of bringing this about," he asserted.

Sees K. K. K. as National Issue. 9-24-23

Gov. Walton said that "the Ku Klux Klan is bound to be an issue in the next national election."

The executive's statement was in reply to a declaration of members of the House that they would resort to court action if he carried out his announced intention to bar the session. He declined to say whether he would be a candidate for the United States Senate on an anti-klan platform.

"I have no announcement to make at this time," he said.

The governor said that he "believed the klan was licked" but that he was prepared to go on indefinitely with his campaign against the organization.

He said that if lack of funds later prevented the purchase of supplies for troops on duty he would commandeer what was necessary.

A statement replying to critics who have assailed him for suspending the writ of habeas corpus and calling a federal statute passed in 1871 which he said "outlawed the klan in the United States," was issued by the executive.

"Much has been said about suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and there are those who declare that during the days of reconstruction following the Civil War, the writ of habeas corpus was never suspended," the governor said.

"I fear the memory of some people is failing, for there was passed a law by the Congress and approved April 20, 1871, which was known as the 'Ku Klux Klan' law. This law was directed at the klan and outlawed it in the United States."

Finley is the fourth man sentenced since Governor J. C. Walton placed Tulsa and parts of Tulsa County under martial law two weeks ago and opened an investigation into floggings here. Like the other three, he admitted membership in the Ku Klux Klan.

Finley confessed to having participated in the flogging of Mrs. Myrtle Goolsby at Broken Arrow in July of last year. 7-28-23

At the time of the whipping, Mrs. Goolsby was the wife of "Slim" Spain, a parachute jumper, who was killed in an exhibition a few days later at Senect, Mo. Okmulgee County Faces Martial Law as a Result.

(By the Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 30.—Martial law again threatens Okmulgee County because of alleged mob violence, it became known tonight following a visit to the governor's office of O. White, a negro, who reported that he had been beaten at his home near Okmulgee early Sunday morning by a party of six men.

In a sworn statement White said that he recognized three of his assailants, one of whom he alleged was a deputy sheriff. The other two, he said, were Okmulgee citizens. White reported that he could identify the other three.

Aug. 31, 1923

After the negro's appearance at the capitol, Gov. Walton dispatched curt telegrams to the sheriff and county attorney of Okmulgee County, demanding to know what they had done and what they propose to do in the case.

Memphis Tenn

County officials will be given an opportunity to arrest and punish White's assailants, it was said at the governor's office, but it was added that troops might be returned to Okmulgee unless it was shown that local officials were doing all in their power to cope with the situation.

At the same time it was revealed that requests had been received from Wagoner, Washington and McCurtain counties for state investigation into mob activities.

WALTON BLAMES KLAN HIGH KLAN CHIEF

Atlanta Constitution

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 9.—Mob whippings in Tulsa county, alleged to have been the work of members of the Ku Klux Klan at the direction of a high official of the invisible empire, from the theme of the second installment in Governor J. C. Walton's "story of Tulsa," made public tonight. The story of Tulsa was written by Aldrich Blake, legislative counselor, and contains what is declared to be testimony given at a military court of inquiry being conducted there. 9-10-23

Testimony is introduced into the second installment in which an unnamed witness asserts that attempts were made by klan members on two different occasions to seize members of their own organization by force because it was reported both men had favored Governor Walton in the election last fall. The klan was opposed to Walton, its members say.

Indications that klan officials had advised witnesses appearing before the military court that the military investigators were without power to punish for refusal to answer interrogations, also was disclosed in the second chapter.

Refused to Take Oath.

"The last witness refused to be sworn. A high official of the klan, he says, advised him the military tribunal is without power. It cannot punish for contempt. The invisible government triumphs. The witness is excused."

So goes a portion of the narrative.

The next day Tulsa was placed under absolute martial law and the visible government triumphed, it continues.

A greater part of the civil authorities in Tulsa county belonged to the klan, according to testimony related in Blake's story. The account said the men testifying was a high official of the klan.

One witness, when he refused to take the oath of the military tribunal, was asked whether he regarded his oath to the Ku Klux Klan above his allegiance to the United States constitution. He refused to answer, the narrative declares, and was temporarily dismissed.

The military investigation is known to have encountered a number of witnesses who had apparently been given legal counsel before being summoned before the tribunal. It was this "continued opposition" to the efforts of military authorities to obtain information which is admitted to have brought about absolute martial law in Tulsa.

May End in Martial Law Being Enforced in the Entire State of Oklahoma.

Constitution

Oklahoma City, September 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Governor J. C. Walton's campaign to rid Oklahoma of mob violence and bring to justice persons responsible for floggings developed today in an open contest between the executive and the Ku Klux Klan with indication of a battle to the finish.

What the governor's next move would be in the face of public defiance by N. W. Jewett, grand dragon of the klan realm of Oklahoma, who condemned Walton's investigation of mob activities in Tulsa county as a fight on the klan, was a matter of speculation.

One thing was made clear, however, martial law threatens the entire state in the event of increased opposition to inquiries into mob activities being conducted in a number of counties at Governor Walton's direction.

Rumors have been circulated in capitol circles for several days that Governor Walton was contemplating action to force the klan to unmask in the state. Such reports have found no confirmation.

The fight between Walton and the klan was brought out into the open yesterday when Grand Dragon Jewett challenged the executive to attempt to break the power of the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma. Jewett's attack followed the issuance of a statement from the governor's office declaring that evidence gathered by the military court sitting in Tulsa placed responsibility for Tulsa county floggings squarely at the doorstep of the klan.

Jewett denied the charge and asserted that the klan held no sympathy for the "weaklings" in its membership found to be connected with lawless acts.

Executive Counselor to Gov. Walton Presents Review of Testimony in Investigation — Tells How Many Tulsa People Flogged by Klansmen Until Near Death, Then Made to Leave Town for Minor Offenses.

9-7-23

(By the Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 6.—Unfolding the "story of Tulsa" as gleaned fro msworn testimony taken before a military court, Aldrich Blake, executive counselor, presented to the press tonight an account of some of the brutal floggings that led Gov. J. C. Walton to invoke martial law in Tulsa County.

Detailing a series of whippings, only a few of those that have spread terror for more than a year in many Tulsa County homes, Mr. Blake said:

"Through the 1,200 pages of testimony runs the same brutal refrain. It's always the klan or some member of the klan.

"In every case thus far examined except two which have not proceeded very far, the evidence has led straight to the doorstep of the invisible empire, known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Not an alien has been accused; not a breath of suspicion against a single Tulsa citizen except members of the imperial organization."

"No arrests had ever been made until the military court convened," he said. "Except in one or two instances where the police called and immediately returned to the station, no investigation has ever been made of any one of these and dozens of other cass now under investigation. This is according to the sworn testimony.

Only First Chapter.

Declaring that the expose was only the first chapter of the "story," the executive counselor promised revelations in the near future of "other phases of the conflict between 'visible and invisible governments.'"

"The whole story of Tulsa will never be told," he said. "Men flee from savagery and torture. Scores of Tulsa victims fled. The average man is pretty apt to change his address atfer his skin has been whipped until it is raw and then he is threatened with death if he tells. That is exactly what happened in Tulsa, not once, but many times. Say 50 times, or 100 times or perhaps 200 times, in a little more than a year."

"The wet rope is out of style," said Mr. Blake. In Tulsa they use a leather strap. It is about 3 inches wide, perhaps four fet long. The end of the strap is 'cat-tailed'—sliced into three straps. Fifty lashes will tame the strongest man. A mile and a quarter southwest of Atsuma is Tulsa County's most famous whipping pasture. Strong men stagged away, ruined forl ife."

A mother roughly dealt with when a band of 20 men raided her home and beat her husband, a child born prematurely as the result; a member of a township school board abducted by floggers and coerced into voting for a school head whom he opposed; an elderly man lashed because he opposed the way the local school was run; a man and a woman routed out of their beds and taken to the whipping field where the strap was applied to both, because the whippers charged that they had been selling beer—these are among the cases related by Blake from the testimony.

All Were Disguised.

And, according to Blake, a klansman, who attended a whipping party testified:

"I think there were about 150 men out there. They were all disguised with old hats and old coats and with handkerchiefs tied over their eyes. They had two prisoners there standing near a telephone pole. The one that was whipped first was told to leave the county. The lights from the cars shone directly on the prisoners. A man from some other town talked to the prisoners. I didn't know him—you see they usually have a man from some other klan—a stranger in the community—to take charge. It is well arranged."

The woman who was lashed testified:

"They took the quilt away from around me and I just had on my night gown and they began whipping me and I began screaming and they put their hands over my mouth and I fell unconscious. I didn't know anymore until I was back in the car and when I came to I was all wet with blood and someone had hold of my pulse and someone asked if my heart was beating. They blindfolded me again and brought me back home. I was sick at the time and haven't been well since."

Counselor Blake's accusation against the Ku Klux Klan brought the first official admission that the military investigation at Tulsa was being directed against the secret organization. Heretofore Governor Walton and his advisers have refrained from accusing the klan in connection with mob floggings. Mr. Blake acted at the direction of Gov. Walton in presenting to the public a review of the evidence uncovered in the military inquiry.

9-12-23

By International News Service.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 11.—The Ku-Klux Klan must cease its efforts to exercise influence over the state, city and county governments of Oklahoma, Governor Jack Walton decreed Tuesday.

Thousands of klansman over Oklahoma were declared at Ku-Klux Klan headquarters to be ready to meet the Governor's newest edict with the ballot.

"We issued an order to prohibit masked parades not because of any fear of Governor Walton," according to the statement.

"The klan fears evil consequences against our state may arise from disobedience to this edict. Hence we shall hold no masked demonstrations.

Atlanta Georgian

"We will whip Jack Walton with votes."

Klan officials asserted that the Governor's decree that the organization must cease its activities in state, city and county government would be without effect because in the exercise of the ballot the klansmen would be acting as individual.

On the surface there was a lull in the war between the governor and the klan.

Governor Walton's friends asserted that the Ku Klux Klan had bowed to his first two demands prohibiting masked demonstrations and that flogging parties had ceased. The Goverfnor's office added that the investigations into floggings of the past year would be conutinued and if possible all guilty persons would be brought before courts.

The martial law situation focused is Tulsa where custer proceedings against the commissioners and the members of the police force were being aired in court. The state is seeking to prove that the Tulsa police force, made up partly of Klansmen, was in league with the persons alleged to be guilty of floggings.

VOTE TO INVESTIGATE OKLAHOMA KLAN

The N. Y.

Legislators Name Committee to Act on Walton Charges in Stormy Session.

Times

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 17.—The House of Representatives staged another stormy sesion this afternoon. Twice the Sergeant-at-Arms had to intervene when personal encounters seemed imminent. The anti-Walton element charged the supporters of the Governor with "smoke screen tactics," and the Walton forces insinuated that the investigating committee had been packed.

The Republican minority came to the front and Leslie Salter, their leader, denounced James A. Harris, the Republican National Committeeman from Oklahoma, as a friend of Walton's and a traitor to his party. He described Harris as "a piking, pie eating, pussyfooting, political jackal." Salter made it plain that the Republicans are standing to a man with the Democratic majority in the fight to out the Governor.

The Ku Klux issue also came up again and this time the House, which on Monday rejected with hoots and jeers a resolution to investigate the Klan, voted unanimously to inquire into the activities of the order. Today's resolution was not the sweeping document rejected on Monday, but a brief resolution directing a joint committee of six members to inquire into the charges made by Governor Walton that the Klan controls the State Legislature and has rendered impotent the governments of various cities and counties. The resolution directs the committee to suggest a law to meet the Klan situation.

A wrangle followed the introduction of a resolution directing that the investigation of the Governor be conducted in the open instead of in secret as is now the case. Representative Callahan, who introduced the resolution, said he had no faith in the committee. "We are entitled to know what is the evidence on which teh impeachment of the Governor will be asked?" he declared .

The anti-Walton contingent refused to let the resolution be read, and it was tabled by a 10 to 1 majority.

The resolution calling for the impeachment of Governor Walton is now being drafted and it is the purpose of his foes to offer it in the House Friday afternoon and to pass it as speedily as possible. It is expected that a vote will be had on Saturday, and in that event the resolution will go to the Senate on Monday. The suspension of the Governor, pending the outcome of his trial by the Senate, will probably follow as soon as the charges are filed in the Upper House.

Urged to Resign, He Refuses—Probers Report to House For Action

By International News Service.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 22.—Governor J. C. Walton (Iron Jack), who only 10 months ago swept into Oklahoma Governorship on a wave of popularity, and who brandished only recently the state's entire militia in a fight on the Ku-Klux Klan, was the target for impeachment charges filed in the House of Representatives Monday.

In the face of his indictment, the executive who has seen his friends desert him in his extremity and whose advisers have urged him to quit, announced grimly that he would not resign nor had he ever had any such intention.

ARTICLE LENGTHY.

The articles of impeachment against Governor J. C. Walton by the investigating committee fill 35 pages.

The digest of evidence taken by the committee shows in its opinion that Governor Walton, "is guilty of willful neglect of duty, incompetence, corruption in office and of offenses involving moral turpitude."

The report accuses him of "wrongful, willful, unlawful, fraudulent, corrupt diversion and appropriation of funds from the state treasury," to private use under the guise of placing his chauffeur on the department of health payroll as an officer.

The committee charges he prohibited assembly of a grand jury in Oklahoma County by training machine guns on the county court house.

Another accusation is that he used official influence and power to acquire private credit and property.

It is charged Governor Walton threatened use of the vote power to acquire money for private use by requiring citizens to contribute money to him and associates to obtain his approval of an appropriation for the University Preparatory School at Tonkawa, Okla.

HABEAS CORPUS DENIAL.

Suspension and denial of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus is another accusation, as is "preventing the assembling of the men and the converting of the House of Representatives of Oklahoma on September 26, 1923, by military force."

Other charges are: "Declaring of martial law in certain areas when no cause existed therefor.

Appointment and employment of a large number of persons on the payroll of the state, when no statutory authority existed therefor.

Refusal to permit the execution of death penalty for crimes committed withi nthe state.

Abridgement of the freedom of the press and censorship of The Tulsa Tribune and The Henrietta Free Lance.

Appointment of "special officers" and attemptingto authorize such persons to carry arms, and enforce the law.

Abuse of pardon and parole power.

Collection through various offices of the state and individuals many large sums of money for his own use.

The committee recommended it be authorized to continue its investigation of executive, legislative and judicial officials.

TABLE ANTI-KLAN RESOLUTION IN OKLAHOMA HOUSE

Chicago Daily News 10-16-23

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A resolution introduced in the lower house of the state legislature today calling for an investigation of all members to determine whether they belonged to the Ku Klux Klan was tabled after three minutes' discussion. 10-16-23

Suspension of the rule was necessary to expedite the action. The house was in session only twenty-nine minutes.

The resolution was introduced by E. P. White, Democrat, Bryan county. It declared the klan violates the constitutional guarantee of religious liberty and provided for the expulsion from the house of all members found to belong to the organization.

The senate did not have a quorum and no session was held. The house will not meet again until Wednesday.

Impeachment Effort Goes On.

Meanwhile the house investigation and impeachment committee continued its investigation today. Among the witnesses summoned were employés of Gov. J. C. Walton's office.

A motion by attorneys for Gov. Walton to quash a grand jury investigation into alleged misuse of state funds by the governor was stricken from the records and the grand jury was convened here today. This is the grand jury that was prohibited previously by the governor by the use of state guards.

Walton Loses Court Ruling.

Judge George W. Clark, in striking the motion from the record, said:

"If this sort of a motion would be proper in court, in my judgment, any bootlegger who had been violating the law and desires that there should NOT be a grand jury to investigate his acts might interpose the same motion and be untitled to consideration.

The grand jury was called upon petition circulated by Campbell Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission, who alleged the governor had used state employés to check signatures illegally on an initiated petition providing for the constitutional amendment adopted at the polls Oct. 2, empowering the state legislature to meet without call by the governor.

Effort to Unseat Nine Members Fails After Hot Fight

Associated Press Report

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 17. A "searching" investigation into the Ku Klux Klan and its activities was authorized today by the lower house of the State legislature when it adopted unanimously a resolution proposing the inquiry.

Norman Oklahoma 10-17-23

A joint committee of three members each from the senate and house would be named to conduct the investigation and consider evidence of mob violence and masked depredations adduced by military courts of inquiry in various sections of the State. The resolution was introduced by Representatives Otjen of Enid and Vernon of Waggoner.

The action came at the close of the stormiest meeting of the extra session during which an attempt failed to unseat nine house members and charges and counter charges of party prejudices in the impeachment proceedings against Governor J. C Walton, were hurled across the chamber.

The house adjourned late this afternoon until 1:30 p. m. Friday and the senate, which transacted little business, recessed until tomorrow.

The house investigating committee inquiring into the governor's official conduct, held a night session tonight for submission to the assembly Friday.

OKLA. NEGRO DEMOCRAT LOSES EAR

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 15.—A revolting story of how members of a masked mob at Tulsa, after mercilessly beating a victim, cut off one of his ears and tried to force him to eat it, was made public recently by Gov. J. C. Walton in the form of testimony given the Tulsa military court by J. H. Smitherman, a Negro Democrat and deputy sheriff.

"This is only one of the hundreds of such crimes committed which the civil authorities of this State refused to prosecute," declared the executive. "I ask the people of the civilized world, in the presence of this testimony, if I was not justified in proclaiming martial law in the city of Tulsa."

Smitherman, a Negro, related how, on the night of March 10, 1922, he was summoned to his door by 12 men, 8 of whom were masked, forced into an automobile at the point of revolvers, taken into the country, stripped of his clothing, handcuffed and tied to a tree whereupon the captors accused him of registering Negroes as Democrats and advising them to vote against the city administration.

Spit in His Face.

Next, one of the men spat in his face, Smitherman testified, after accusing him of "ungentlemanly conduct" toward a white woman. He was then beaten severely by two of his abductors, he declared adding:

"One would whip until he exhausted himself and then the other would whip me."

"Finally," Smitherman's testimony said, "the man who spit in my face stuck a gun to my head and said: 'I am going to kill you,' but one of the unmasked ones dissented, so they talked it over privately for a few minutes. Then the same man who wanted to kill me came up, pulled a knife out and cut off my ear. Then he tried to make me eat it, and when I refused he took the butt end of the whip and hit me in the face until he was tired, all the time trying to make me eat my ear. Finally they turned me loose and told me to leave Tulsa and to leave Oklahome, warning if I did not one of the 12 would kill me."

Smitherman testified that he told his captors he had advised all the Negroes he could to register as Democrats and vote that ticket, because he himself was a Democrat.

"There was nothing else to do," he said he told the men.

He said he denied the accusation concerning his conduct toward a white woman.

Legislators of Oklahoma are taking steps to meet within the next few days to consider impeachment proceedings against Governor J. C. Walton, whose fight on the Ku Klux Klan with drastic methods of employing militia has aroused deep resentment among his opponents. Governor Walton charges that a majority of the members of the legislature are members of the Klan and has announced that if the legislature attempts to meet, as they say they will, he will take drastic steps to stop them. He states that if necessary he will confiscate all firearms except those held by the military and civil police, close the state fair now in progress, patrol the highways leading into Oklahoma City and strengthen military control.

Oklahoma Governor Declines to State Whether or Not He Will be a Candidate for United States Senator

REITERATES STATEMENT THAT KLAN IS WHIPPED

Executive Says if Funds Short He Will Commandeer Supplies

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 23.—The Associated Press.—A test in the United States courts of his authority to prohibit the convening of an extraordinary session of the Oklahoma house of representatives scheduled for Wednesday will be welcome, Governor J. C. Walton declared tonight.

"I want to place the issue of the Ku Klux Klan before federal authorities, and an injunction action against me will be the most direct method of bringing this about," he asserted.

Governor Walton said that "the Ku Klux Klan is bound to be an issue in the next national election."

The executive's statement was in reply to a declaration of members of the house that they would resort to court action if he carried out his announced intention to bar the session.

He declined to say whether he would be a candidate for the United States senate on an anti-klan platform.

"I have no announcement to make at this time," he said.

Believes Klan "Licked"

The governor said that he "believed the klan was licked" but that he was prepared to go on indefinitely with his campaign against the organization.

He said that if lack of funds later prevented the purchase of supplies for troops on duty he would commandeer what was necessary.

SAYS EAR CUT

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., September 23.—A revolting story of how members of a masked mob, at Tulsa after mercilessly beating a victim, cut off one of his ears and tried to force him to eat it, was made public tonight by Governor J. C. Walton in the form of testimony given the Tulsa military court by J. H. Smitherman, a negro.

"This is only one of the hundreds of such crimes committed which the civil authorities of this state refused to prosecute," declared the executive. "I ask the people of the civilized world, in the presenc of this testimony, if I was not justifid in proclaiming martial law in the city of Tulsa."

Smitherman related how on the night of March 10, 1922, he was summoned to his door by 12 men, eight of whom were masked, forced into an automobile at the point of revolvers, taken into the country, stripped of his clothing, handcuffed and tied to a tree, whereupon his captors accused him registering negroes as democrats and advising them to vote against the city administration.

Next, one of the men spit in his face, Smitherman testified, after accusing him of "ungentlemanly conduct" toward a white woman. He was then beaten severely by two of his abductors, he declared, adding: "One would whip until he exhausted himself and then the other would whip me."

Masked Men Dissented

Finally, Smitherman's testimony said "the man who spit in my face stuck a gun to my head and said: " 'I am going to kill you.' But one of the unmasked ones dissented so they talked it over privately for a few minutes. Then the same man who wanted to kill me came up, pulled a knife out and cut off my ear. Then he tried to make me eat it, and when I refused, he took the butt end of the whip and hit me in the face until he was tired, all the time trying to make me eat my ear. Finally they turned me loose and told me to leave Tulsa and to leave Oklahoma, warning if I did not, one of the 12 would kill me."

9-24-23

He said he denied the accusation concerning his conduct toward a white woman.

A statement replying to critics who have assailed him for suspending the writ of habeas corpus and quoting a federal statute passed in 1871 which he said "outlawed the klan in the United States," was issued by the executive.

"Much has been said about the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and there are those who declare that during the days of reconstruction following the civil war, the writ of habeas corpus was never suspended," the governor said. "I fear the memory of some people is failing for there was passed a law by the congress and approved April 20, 1871 which was known as the "Ku Klux Klan law." This law was directed at the klan and outlawed it in the United States."

He quoted the law as follows: "That if two or more persons within any state or territory of the United States shall conspire together to overthrow or put down or destroy by force the government of the United States;—or by force, intimidation or threat to deter any party or witness in any court of the many states from attending such courts or testifying in any matter pending in such court fully, freely and truthfully, or to injure any such witness in his person or property on account of his having so attended or testified; or by force, intimidation or threat to influence the verdict, presentment or indictment of any juror or grand juror in any court of the United States, or to injure such juror in his person or property on account of verdict, presentment, or indictment, lawfully assented to by him on account of his having been such a juror; or shall conspire together or go in disguise upon public highway, or upon the premises of another for the purpose either directly or indirectly, of depriving any persons or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges or immunities under the laws, or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities of any state from giving or securing to all persons within such state the equal protection of the laws; or shall conspire together for the purpose of any manner impeding, hindering, obstructing or defeating the due course of justice in any state or territory, with intent to deny any citizen of the United States the due and equal protection of the laws, or to injure any person in his person or his property, each and every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a high crime."

Rebellion Section

Governor Walton pointed out that section four of the act provides: "It shall be lawful for the president of the United States when in his judgment, public safety shall require it, to suspend the privileges of habeas corpus, to the end that rebellion may be overthrown."

"1—And when ever in any state or part of a state that unlawful combinations named in the preceding sections of this act shall be organized and armed and so numerous and powerful as to be able by violence to either overthrow or set at defiance the constituted authorities of such state and of the United States within such state,

"2—Or when the constituted authorities are in complicity with or shall connive to the unlawful purposes of such powerful and armed combinations,"

"3—And whenever, by reason of either or all of the causes aforesaid the conviction of such offenders and the preservation of the public safety shall become in such districts impracticable."

The act provides that "in every case such combinations shall be deemed a rebellion against the government of the United States."

"The federal government was having to meet the very same condition that I have to meet," said the governor, "and meet them just as I have had to meet them. I have the greatest authority in the land for precedent and I have followed that precedent with much less hardship upon the public than did the federal government under war conditions.

"Now let the newspapers court headed by E. K. Gaylord (publisher of the Daily Oklahoman) pay its respects to the United States law that made it a high crime for masked and robed organizations to pass along highways.

Writ Is Suspended

"Under the above mentioned statute the whipping of an individual by a mob was sufficient grounds for declaring a state of rebellion and a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus.

The Daily Oklahoman and other Oklahoma newspapers have advocated appealing to the federal courts. Under the statute I have just quoted, before one could sit upon a jury in a federal court he had to swear that he was not connected with any organization named in the acts and that he had no knowledge of any of their conspiracies. If it was proven that he perjured himself in taking such an oath he was subject to severe penalty.

"I submit this so the people of the state may know that I am not doing anything that has not ben done before to protect the rights and liberties of the people, and I have the precedent of the greatest govrenment on earth for my guide."

Oklahoma's Disgrace

IT WILL be years and years before Americans can tell to their children the full history of Oklahoma. The present troubles out there are not any too complimentary of the American white man and his idea of a "land of the free and the home of the brave." Free men are allowed freedom of action and of locomotion until such action encounters the law of the land. "The brave" men of this country are willing to stand back of their institutions, including constitutions, courts, state sovereignty, and executive proclamations. Those who prefer to see law over-ridden by self styled executives, cyclops, and gobblins were not "the brave" spoken of by the writer who tried to immortalize his country, and his country's flag.

Pittsburgh Courier

The report that a legislature is about to convene in violation of the forces of the law set in force by the duly elected chief executive of the state place American institutions in jeopardy, and the whole country on the defensive. If, as is reported, the whole legally constituted force of the state of Oklahoma is in the hands of some person who, by the mere saying, can paralyze law enforcement in spite of executive orders; if, as is reported, the state police is in the hands of the Ku Klux Klan and will act subject to orders from the Klan leaders, then there is a menace in America which far transcends earthquakes, cyclones and famines. There is growing beneath the stars and stripes a serpent whose revolutionary fangs need but little more maturity before our government will crumble and the whole world will be let into our borders to divide up our territory, appropriate our lands and raise above our helpless heads another flag, and set over us another army. 9-29-23

If we want our homes blotted out; if we want our history re-written by thugs and prowlers, let Oklahoma proceed with her lawlessness. The life of one governor may not be much in the sight of hungry thugs, but his single life will be paid for by thousands of lives harvested by the greedy fangs of the serpent of hate. We seem to be in for a period of darkness.

The Oklahoma Situation

Kansas City Star 9-27-23

About the only thing that newspaper reports make perfectly plain is, that they offer no basis for any exact judgment as to the real situation in Oklahoma. Passion and prejudice are running high, and the statements of both sides take on more or less of the color of these. Many of the statements of Governor Walton impress one as being the statements of one who is taking counsel of his suspicions, and the charges against the governor brought by those members who seek an extra session for his impeachment have too much the appearance of being arranged with a view to countering the charges of the governor. One thing which looks bad for the governor is, that the press of the state is almost unanimously against him. It has to be considered, however, that the threat of military censorship of the press would tend to make newspaper men very apprehensive, not to use stronger terms. Outsiders will have to wait until the heat and smoke have somewhat subsided before presuming to say where the greatest wrong is to be found, or to estimate the damage which has been done and fix responsibility.

Commander Directs Them to Stop Proposed Assemblage at State House Today.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—A general order issued by Adjutant General B. H. Markham forbidding the convening tomorrow of a special session of the State House of Representatives, was served late today on House members gathering here for the session.

As the order was served, each member asked if he was being served as an individual or as a Legislator. Upon being told the service was in their capacity as Legislators, each asked the name of Major J. J. McCartney, in charge of the service detail, and then took the names of witnesses to the service. This was regarded as indicating that the way was being paved for court action to test the Adjutant General's authority.

Adjutant General Markham also issued a general order to all units of the Oklahoma National Guard on duty declaring that "any attempt of the State Legislature to meet would be illegal and must be stopped."

Appeals to Coolidge and Daugherty.

Governor Walton appealed to President Coolidge and Attorney General Daugherty tonight to use their good offices to prevent members of the Lower House of the Oklahoma Legislature from convening in any Federal building in the State.

The Governor announced that 35,000 men in the State have volunteered for service in the National Guard during the legislative crisis.

The Executive made it plain, however, that he anticipated no necessity for calling the volunteers to duty. Another unit of guardsmen will be brought to Oklahoma City early tomorrow to aid troops already stationed here in blocking the called session of the Legislature at noon, the Governor added, but declined to say what battery had been called.

Copies of the order forbidding the impeachment session were posted on the House and Senate doors. But authoritative sources, which could not be revealed, expressed the belief that a "gentlemen's agreement" would prevent any danger of bloodshed.

It was indicated that the refusal of the military to give the Legislators access to the Chamber would involve nothing more than the formality of a guard officer informing the House members that they were not permitted to enter.

Arrest of Several Forecast.

Then, it is believed, the Representatives will leave the Capitol, later assembling at some unannounced location, where they will convene and where some of their number probably will be arrested. It is believed that guard officers even may be informed of the intended location for the second convening.

Reports that he had stated that he knew of no reason why the Legislature should not meet in the District Court Room of the Federal building were denied tonight by Federal Judge John H. Cotteral.

"We stand where we have always stood; we will meet pursuant to our signed call," Representative W. D. McBee, in charge of the session plans, said tonight. "Wednesday noon will find us at the Capitol unarmed and unguarded."

Plans for holding a caucus tonight to organize the House were canceled, the Legislators deciding to wait until the body is regularly convened before electing officers.

Charles S. Brice of McAllister, speaker pro tempore, will call the session to order, it is understood. Election of a regular speaker and adoption of a resolution vacating the organization elected during the last regular session will follow, it is expected.

Governor Retaliates on McBee.

Striking back at W. D. McBee, leader of the movement to seek his impeachment, Governor J. C. Walton today stopped all work on a $1,000,000 highway project in Stephens County, which McBee represents in the State Legislature.

The Governor declared that "if charges that McBee has received a large fee from a cement company in connection with the project are proved, criminal action will be instituted."

Told of the Governor's charge, Representative McBee made the following statement:

"The Governor's statement is unfounded. I refer to any one wishing to verify the fact that I had no part in determining the material used in the Stephens County highway project, to the Duncan (Okla.) Chamber of Commerce."

Continuance for two weeks of the trial of N. C. Jewett, Grand Dragon, of the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma, charged with rioting, was granted in Justice Court today at the request of S. P. Freeling, former State Attotrney General, counsel for Jewett.

Application to file an original quo warranto actions against Adjutant General B. H. Markham to test his authority to name a military supervisor for the Tulsa County Sheriff's office was filed in the State Supreme Court here today. The application was made by counsel for R. B. Sanford, civil Sheriff of the county.

Will Forbid Use of Federal Building.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—It was learned tonight that the Government will probably instruct the official in charge of the Federal building at Oklahoma City that the building must be used solely for the purposes of the Federal Government and that any other use of it would be unlawful.

GOV. WALTON EXULTANT.

Thinks He Has Blocked Last Move To Impeach Him.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 26.—History repeated itself today when the troops of Gov. "Jack" Walton, the "lion" of Oklahoma politics drove 62 members of the House of Representatives from the doors of their legislative chamber in the capitol and later prevented them from assembling in a downtown hotel.

There was no trouble, no bloodshed, no arrest of members. The legislators gathered in front of their barred door at noon, under their own call for a special session, and looked into the impassive faces of a row of militiamen resting on their guns. They attempted to call a session in the rotunda but were dispersed by Col. W. S. Key, military commander.

"See that these men move" was the curt order of the colonel to his men after he had concluded the reading of the order by Adjutant General B. H. Markham, forbidding the meeting at the direction of his superior, Gov. Walton. The governor remained in the cool green seclusion of the executive mansion, miles from the scene. Exultant, he believed he had blocked the last move to impeach him.

Back of the militia were the guard of the governor, 20 or more of the hard eyed men with "four gallon" Stetson hats, wandering about town and turning up at critical moments where the legislators happened to assemble in groups. These were members of the state secret police, under orders from the governor. Col. Zack Mulhall, friend of Theodore Roosevelt and former gun fighter and "Buck" Garrett were the chiefs of this squad.

"Of course, I would hate to see any bloodshed," said Col. Mulhall, when he strolled out of his hotel in the morning, "that would be a shame. But those fellows have to walk a chalk line." He meant the rebel legislators. They were really a lost and helpless group of men who marched to the sacrifice. They never had a chance to meet from dawn today until midnight.

Oklahoma Executive May Be Suspended by Senate If House Adopts Indictments.

ACCUSED CHIEFTAIN BREATHES DEFIANCE

"Will Not Resign" Is the Message Sent in Reply to 14 Specific Charges of Malfeasance.

BY THE UNITED NEWS.

Oklahoma City, Okla., October 22. Legislators meeting in special session here at the call of Governor J. C. Walton are expected to act Tuesday on the report of the Disney-Tolbert investigating committee calling for the impeachment of the chief executive, which was filed in the house Monday afternoon.

Atlanta Constitution 10-23-23

The report, submitted in thirty-five pages of closely typed charges, accused Walton of wilful neglect of duty, incompetency, corruption in office and of offenses involving moral turpitude committed by him on various occasions while in office.

Just what the next step of the Oklahoma legislature in the impeachment proceedings will be is considered highly problematical. House leaders declared Monday night they would proceed swiftly with plans to oust the governor.

May Suspend Walton.

From other sources, however, it was learned that the senate might suspend the chief executive. As a legislative body, observers pointed out, the upper house could not take this action. Immediately upon receipt of the house charges it would form itself into a court of impeachment, choose its officers and engage the chief justice of the supreme court to preside and in this manner try Walton's case.

Those close to the governor say he will, should this be done, test the validity of his suspension by pardoning a convict, appealing to Secretary of State Sneed to attest it. Should Sneed, refuse, counsel for Walton said they would have the prisoner ask for a writ of habeas corpus, thus making a test case of the upper body's order.

Walton, who day by day has dismissed from service some of his closest advisors and has seen his friends desert him in the face of his approaching crisis, is still fighting back. His office at the state house was packed and he refused to see newspaper men.

Sends Out Defiance.

By an intimate friend he sent a message to the waiting scribes which plainly indicated his fighting mood. The message was:

"I will not resign."

W. E. Disney, chairman of the committee which investigated the governor's office, reiterated his statement of Sunday night that every charge made in the indictment of the governor was backed by proof.

"I have no comment to make on the report. I believe it speaks for itself," he said.

A partial summary of the indictment follows:

The Indictments.

"That the evidence taken by your committee in the opinion of the committee shows that the cheif executive is guilty of wilful neglect of duty, incompetency, corruption in office, and of offenses involving moral turpitude committed by him while in his said office and on the occasions under the circumstances and in the matters and the particulars as follows:

"Wrongful, wilful, unlawful, fraudulent, corrupt diversion and appropriation of funds from the state treasury to private use under the guise of paying his chauffeur, T. P. Edwards, on the payroll of the department of health as an officer therein.

"Prohibiting and preventing the assembling and convening of a grand jury in Oklahoma City by causing machine guns to be trained on the county house.

"Use of official influence and power to acquire private credit and property.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 24 (Associated Press).—A statement claring that "ninety per cent. of the members of the Oklahoma National Guard are members of the Ku Klux Klan" and that "if the contention of Governor Walton that N. C. Jewett, Grand Dragon of the Klan in Oklahoma can call the scheduled session of the State Legislature, then all that would be necessary to stop martial law in Oklahoma would be for Jewett to call out the Klan members of the guard" was issued here today by Dr. G. S. Long, Representative from Tulsa County in the State Legislature.

Dr. Long, an admitted member of the Klan, made it plain, however, that such action would not be taken by leaders of the organization.

"The Klan oath is a rededication of a man's loyalty to the Constitution of Oklahoma, the Constitution of the United States, the Government of Oklahoma and the Government of the United States," he asserted. "And so long as Governor Walton exervises his authority as Governor of Oklahoma, Klan members of the National Guard will remain loyal to the orders of their Commander-in-Chief."

Both Sides Reiterate Defiance.

The situation today, with but 48 hours remaining before the test of strength between Governor Walton and members of the House of the State Legislature, who are scheduled to meet Wednesday noon in an effort to unseat him as chief executive, simmered down to a barrage of statements from the opposing sides.

Speaking for the legislators, Representative W. L. McBee reiterated, "We will meet."

Governor Walton again asserted, "They will not."

The Governor said that "As many additional troops as are needed will be on hand," to prevent the session from convening. He indicated that not only legislators but crowds of onlookers will be dispersed by the military.

Representative McBee declared that the Governor had wandered in declaring the members of the House, who called the extraordinary session with the announced purpose of investigating the executive's official acts were members of the "Invisible Empire."

"The Governor claims that we are a 'Klan mob,'" Representative McBee said. "We claim that we are neither 'a Klan mob' nor an anti-Klan mob.' We do not claim to champion the cause of either class, but we do champion the great class of American people who are not members of either faction."

Governor Walton may not be the exclusive subject of legislative investigation, it was indicated. Several members of the Legislature may be asked for explanations of certain actions not mentioned and the scope of the House investigation, if that body meets, will include whatever lawless acts fall within the legal limits of inquiry, members declared.

Twenty-four hours after Governor Walton issued an appeal for funds to establish a newspaper here that he might "let the people know the truth," the Executive told press correspondents he thought he would "just use handbills, larger than ordinary handbills distributed about the streets and consisting of four to eight pages."

Jewett Threatens Suit on Charges.

The Oklahoma City military court continued today to push its inquiry into mob activities. Cliff Myers, Oklahoma County Clerk, was before the tribunal several hours. Jurors are drawn by the jury commission and summonses are issued by the clerk.

It is believed that Myers was questioned in connection with Governor Walton's assertion that the jury commission was controlled by the K. K. K.

Members of two undertaking firms, both of which maintain ambulance services, also were before the court.

Grand Dragon Jewett today declared that he intended to seek damages in a civil action for charges made against him in connection with the revealing of testimony before the military court here.

Federal court action seeking a restraining order is threatened by the House members if the Executive attempts to block the session by force or throw any of the members in jail for the remainder of his more than three year-term in office. The Governor would welcome such a legal test, he said last night. Such action may come between now and Wednesday noon, the hour set for the House call.

Tulsa Court Told of Burnings.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 24 (Associated Press).—Testimony describing the burning of three houses in Tulsa in one night by a party of masked men was heard by Governor J. C. Walton's Military Commission this morning as investigation into hooded band activities was resumed, a high officer of the commission declared in an interview with newspaper men.

Persons whose dwellings were put to the torch were in the examination chambers, the officer said, in announcing that the full testimony would be made public "when all parties who participated have been named in our official record."

When the commission adjourned Saturday the number of cases bared since Tulsa County was put under maritla law on Aug. 14 stood at 121, it was announced.

Sheriff R. D. Sanford of Tulsa County and City Police Commissioner Kiskaddon of Tulsa "both are members of the K. K. K.," the Military Commission announced, "and we have positive evidence that their forces never have inestigated a single case of these outrages which has been brought to our attention."

A wedding ceremony performed in the centre of a field in Creek County, adjoining Tulsa County, while the bridegroom was chained to a gas engine, with pistols leeled at his head, was another case heard by the Military Commission this morning.

WALTON FIRES TWO OKLAHOMA STATE OFFICERS

Chicago Daily Tribune

Impeachment Committees Named.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—Aldridge Blake, the executive counselor, and Dr. E. T. Bynum, state bank commissioner, were removed from office tonight by Gov. J. C. Walton.

10-13-23

Dr. Bynum's administration has been "entirely unsatisfactory," the executive declared in a communication to the bank commission.

Columbus

No explanation was given of Blake's removal. It was understood, however, that the executive counselor had broken with Gov. Walton over the latter's recent policies, particularly with regard to his military activities against the Ku Klux klan.

The state legislature, its plans virtually completed for an investigation, not only of impeachment charges against Gov. Walton, but of the K. K. K. also, recessed today until Monday afternoon.

Table Anti-Klan Bills.

When the lower house closed its session, two anti-klan bills lay on the clerk's desk, the first measures introduced in the extraordinary session which convened yesterday. They were submitted by Representatives W. B. Thornsbrough of Coal county and John Garner of Johnson county, and each was directed mainly at the wearing of masks.

A house committee of twenty-three was named today to conduct the inquiry into the records of state officers. The committee to consider the activities of the klan may be named Monday.

The committee to report on a basis for possible impeachment actions probably will be divided into a number of subcommittees to faciltiate the investigation. It was indicated that most of the testimony will be taken publicly.

Klan Inquiry May Be Broad.

The committee on klan will have at its command all records of the military courts throughout the state submitted by Gov. Walton, and will be empowered to summon for hearings any state or county official in Oklahoma accused of having connection with or being under the influence of the organization.

The house voted to investigate its own members who may have been accused of trafficking in pardons and paroles or of having unlawful interests in state contracts, the result of a resolution introduced by Allan Street of Oklahoma county.

Oklahoma Official Urges Pressure on Legislature to Enact Order's Anti-Mask Law.

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 14.—The Ku Klux Klan, for the announced purpose of demonstrating its dominating position in the Southwest, is arranging for a monster mobilization of Klansmen in Dallas on Oct. 24. The Texas American, one of the organs of the Texas Klan, is authority for the statement that this date will be "Klan Day" at the Texas State Fair and that more masked men "than ever gathered anywhere in one day and in one place" will swoop down on the city. According to a Klan official now in Oklahoma City, between 150,000 and 200,000 members will answer the call.

Nothing could better illustrate the power of the masked organization in the Southwest than does the program for the Dallas mobilization. Announcement is made that the demonstration is to be a reply to those who have recently asserted that the strength of the organization in this section has been overestimated. Every branch in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana has been ordered to send representatives, while other delegations will come from Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Kentucky, according to Klansmen here.

Even those who have no sympathy with the Klan reluctantly admit that it has almost succeeded in its efforts to gain control of the political machiney of the States named, and in every one of them there are signs that the order will seek to make its influence count in the 1924 elections. A Texan of unquestioned standing stated last night that the Government of Dallas is completely in the control of the Klan and what is true of Dallas, he added, is true of scores of other cities and towns. The Klan, he said, had a floor leader in the Texas Legislature and was openly preparing to place a ticket in the field in 1924 for all the offices from Governo to constable.

What is true of Texas is just as tru of Oklahoma and Arkansas. In Arkansas at the last election the Klan carried every office in Little Rock and it success was just as sweeping in othe parts of the State.

Today a letter bearing the signatur of N. C. Jewett, Oklahoma Grand Dragon, a ddressed to Oklahoma Klansmen, became public. It read in part:

"You have, I am sure, observed the increasing agitation for anti-mask legislation, fomented by the daily press and lustily chorused by enemies of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. We do not object to legislation that would penalize the illegal use of the mask.

"On account of the antagonistic publicity through the daily press and enemies in which they seek to indict our organization for the use of the mask, you are urged to have a proper person or persons immediately get in contact with our legislator and inform him that a bill regulating the use of the mask should provide:

"That it be a felony for one or more persons at any time to trespass upon private property while masked, or to appear in public masked, except at public initiatory ceremonies held upon premises regularly secured for the purpose and at public parades, permission for which must be secured from the authorities in the community where such parade is to take place.

"Such legislation would not interfere with the private use of the mask as regalia and would protect every member of society fro mthe wrongful use of masks and meet every honest criticism of their use by the Klan.

"If anti-mask legislation other than this is suggested, or any more drastic is passed by our present Legislature our enemies will have largely won their fight. This must not occur."

In another addressed only to "Exalted Cyclops and Kiligraphs" Jewett urges them "to shower telegrams, letters and telephone communications on your Senators and Representatives" demanding that in the present session they "deliver the goods."

At news stands where out-of-town papers are sold there are on sale the Klan organs of most of the Southwestern and Central Western States.

The Klan phase of the legislative session is expected to be brought up in the House tomorrow, when various bills are called up for reference to committee. A bill which the legislative leaders insist will meet the Klan problem will ultimately be reported out of committee and passed.

The committee investigating the Governor and other State officials and executive departments was again in session last night.

Adjutant General Gets 10-Day Leave — Rumors Cite Action as Break in Walton Ranks.

(BY UNITED NEWS.)

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 28.—Governor "Jack" Walton received his second set-back in the courts late Friday when the state supreme court denied his motion for a rehearing of a petition asking that a special election be held on October 2, when the people will vote on amending the constitution to allow a special session of the legislature without the call of the governor.

The high court, Thursday, ruled that the election could be held. Governor Walton ordered Attorney General Short to ask for a rehearing of the petition which was denied.

Walton on hearing of the court action refused to comment on his next step.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 28.—(United News.)—Slowly being driven into a corner by reverses in the courts, Governor "Jack" Walton Friday night, with his back to the wall was determined to fight to the end.

The state supreme court, Thursday, threw the first bomb into the belied impregnable camp of the chief executive's forces, when it ruled that a special election could be held on October 2, to allow the people to vote on an amendment to the constitution making it legal for the legislators to convene in special session without the call of the governor.

Attorney General Short, who had appealed the case to the higher court after a district court had ruled that the election would be illegal, immediately was notified by the governor to file a motion for a rehearing on the petition.

This the attorney general did, and the supreme court late Friday denied the motion. Just what the next move of the governor will be, is problematical.

Walton heard the news of his defeat with the same stoic calm that he displayed upon receipt of reports of successes of his military probes, and his new extensions of strict martial law.

Only his closest personal friends and advisors were received by him at the mansion. To these friends, it was learned, Friday, he indicated his determination to fight more fiercely since he was being pressed.

Markham On Leave.

The governor had no comment to make on persistent rumors that martial law would be lifted in the state at midnight. These reports gained ground with the disbandment of Battery A, of Enid, which has been stationed here.

From authoritative sources it has been learned the governor's appeal for funds with which to carry on his fight against the klan, has not been met with the spirit he had hoped for, nor have contributions rolled in as he expected.

Close observers of the martial law tangle in the state since its institution commented Friday on Adjutant General Baird Markham's sudden declaration that he would leave the city on a "10-day leave of absence," and that Brigadier General Charles F. McPherson would be in charge of the military in the county.

Markham, who has been Walton's right-hand man since martial law was declared in the state, was reported to have incurred the displeasure of the governor when he ordered all of Walton's "secret service" men out of the Skirvin hotel, headquarters of the insurgent legislators, Wednesday, when the solons complained the men had been rifling their papers and desks.

LAST LEGAL BARRIER IS SWEPT AWAY.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—The last legal barrier to the special election called by Governor J. C. Walton for October 2 was removed late today when the state supreme court issued a mandate to the local district court for dissolution of the injunction under which the election would have been prevented.

9-29-30

The supreme court earlier in the day had denied a rehearing of the friendly suit instituted by Attorney General George Short to test the legality of the election, after yesterday reversing the decision of the lower court in granting the injunction.

The mandate formally notifying the district court that the restraining order had been dissolved, directed that the state election board be informed in effect that machinery for the election now can be set in motion.

The fate of an initiative bill which would allow the state legislature to convene without a call from the governoon will be taken up at a supreme court conference tomorrow morning.

At that time the court is expected to rule on an application for mandamus filed by Campbell Russell, who circulated the petition to force the election board to place the measure on the October 2 election ballot. The supreme court also is expected to act on the application of Governor J. C. Walton for rehearing of his appeal from the decision of the secretary of the state holding that the referendum is legal.

Walton Charges Forgery.

Governor Walton charges that a number of signatures on the petition are forgeries.

Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission, and bitter political enemy of Governor Walton, circulated the petition for local governmental research organization.

It provides for a constitutional amendment empowering a majority of the state legislature to call a special session.

Charges that the governor used state highway department employees illegally in checking names on the petition to substantiate his contention that there were not sufficient signatures on the petition to make is legal resulted in the calling of a grand jury in district court which the executive prevented from meeting by military authorities enforcing martial law here.

The secretary of state held the petition legal and dismissed Governor Walton's appeal from the decision.

Late yesterday a new hearing of his appeal was granted.

Would Forestall Interference.

Russel explained that he requested a writ of mandamus to forestall further court interefrence should the supreme court rule against the governor. Attorneys pointed out that such an action would prevent a district attorney from issuing an injunction keeping the measure off the ballot.

The election board, it is understood, anticipated action by the supreme court tomorrow on the initiative bill and will wait until then before ordering the ballots printed. While it is considered almost certain that the court will decide the case tomorrow, should there be a delay, the election unquestionably will be held, without the referendum on the ballot because of the short length of time remaining.

Other election supplies already have been forwarded and final arrangements completed for the voting, it was said tonight.

The court action to test the legality of the election was brought by Attorney General Short at the direction of Governor Walton. The governor acted at the request of American Legion officials interested in a bonus proposal.

PAYNE COUNTY GOES UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—The area of stringent martial law in Oklahoma was widened tonight when Governor J. C. Walton ordered national guard troops to Payne county in response to an appeal from District Judge C. C. Smith, of Cushing. The judge declared that no justice can be obtained in the county through the county attorney, the governor said.

Governor Walton said that only the "Cushing district," an oil field section which extends into Lincoln and Creek counties, will be affected. The military has occupied Drumright, in Creek county, which was included in the original proclamation of absolute martial law, he added.

Stillwater, seat of Oklahoma agricultural and mechanical college, the head county government and one of the largest towns in Payne county, is not included in the edict of military rule, Governor Walton said. He declined to elaborate on Judge Smith's charges against the county attorney. J. W. Reece is the prosecutor.

Coincident with his order, the governor intimated that martial law throughout the state will be modified within the next few days.

"Military rule may be eased up after Tuesday," he declared.

WALTON GIVES OUT MORE TESTIMONY.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—The story of a woman who testified she was kidnaped and outraged by two men, burned about the body with acid and shorn of part of her hair, was made public tonight by Governor J. C. Walton, in the form of testimony given a military court of inquiry by Mrs. Pearl Hayter, of Sapulpa. Five men and a woman seized Mrs. Hayter in Tulsa last July, according to her testimony, made her go by train to Okmulgee, and there she was forced to suffer the indignities.

"Her experience," Governor Walton declared, "indicative of the grossest depravity and of inhuman cruelty, alone justifies the use of martial law; for the civil authorities in her case, as in many others, had failed to unearth any evidence or to make any sincere attempt whatever to ascertain the truth about the matter."

Seized, because, her captors told her, she was associating with a foreign subject, Mrs. Hayter said she was placed on an Okmulgee train and on arriving at its destination, she was met by four men in an automobile. Two of them, she said, attacked her and burned differen parts of her body with acid in an effort to make her "talk." The witness said she replied she had nothing to talk about, whereupon she was subjected to still further outrages.

Her story of what happened after she arrived in Okmulgee was so outrageous, Governor Walton declared, that it was not typed in the copy released to the press.

Governor Walton also made public an affidavit, signed by a farmer, declaring that he was warned to sell his farm and leave the country or he would be "burned out." The man said he disposed of his property at a loss. He named the man who he said was the outhor of the warning, and declared the latter was a Ku Klux Klan man. He said he had never committed a crime.

BAN LIFTED ON OKLAHOMA FAIR

9-19-23

By International News Service.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 18. The ban on the Oklahoma State Fair was lifted here this afternoon by Governor Walton.

Action followed a conference of city officials, civic organizations, fair directors and the military authorities. The Fair Association agreed to conditions submitted by Governor Walton.

From the bayonet-bristling capital came the information that Governor Walton is preparing to make a statement on conditions of lawlessness at Tulsa which will "startle the nation."

Revelations that will have a tendency to turn Governor Walton's enemies to friends and co-workers with him in his attempt to wipe the "invisible empire" of the Ku Klux Klan out of Oklahoma will be made in the final chapter on the "Story of Tulsa," it was officially stated.

No further extension of absolute martial law had been made late Tuesday. Only Tulsa and Oklahoma City at present are under military rule, and there seemed to be no present indication that an extension of the bayonet administration would be made unless some emergency arises.

Tulsa Is Quiet Under Martial Law

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 18.—Tulsa Tuesday seemed the least effected of any large city in the state by Governor Walton's extension of martial law over the entire commonwealth. There are less than 100 soldiers here now.

A stranger would never know

there was martial law in Tulsa. The military investigation into flogging is progressing as usual with from 15 to 20 witnesses being examined daily. New indictments are expected in view of Governor Walton's statement at Henrietta that "I have sent four to the penitentiary from Tulsa and there are a hundred more on the way."

A test of the supremacy of civil military law will take place Wednesday. District Judge Hunt has ordered General Markham to appear before him on that day with Ben and Grover Sikes and Earl Sack to show cause why they should not be released on writs of habeas corpus. The men were sentenced to two years in prison each when they pleaded guilty of rioting. Inasmuch as Governor Walton has suspended the writ of habeas corpus his order may be disregarded by the military forces.

Poll of the state legislators, it was said Tuesday, reveals an overwhelming majority willing to convene in session in Oklahoma City despite Governor Walton's threat to put them in jail. Their statements range from "the session is justified," to "hold the jail open for I am coming."

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., September 22.—Mobilization of additional units of the Oklahoma national guard will be ordered soon, Governor J. C. Walton declared tonight in announcing that an extension of the scope of absolute martial law to several counties of the stae is in prospect.

WILL NOT USE FORCE

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., September 22.—Members of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature will not resort t ophysical force if Governor J. C. Walton attemps to disperse them when they convene next Wednesday to consider his impeachment.

This announcement was made tonight by W. D. McBee, reprerentative from Stephens county, and leader of the impenchment movement against the governor.

By JAS. L. KILGALLEN,
Staff Correspondent, I. N. S.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 22.—Both Governor J. C. Walton, Oklahoma's militant governor and inexorable foe of the Ku Klux Klan, and Representative W. D. McBee, spokesman of the legislature that is aiming to impeach him, laid their cards down tonight. Both sides maintained an attitude of non-compromise.

Representative McBee said the legislators would use the courts should Governor Walton want to prevent the assembly Wednesday.

Walton, more implacable than ever, announced that if the legislators attempt to meet next Wednesday, as they say they will, he wall take drastic steps to stop them. He said that if necessary, he will:

Confiscate all firearms held by the military and civil police.

Close the state fair, now in progress.

Patrol the highways leading into Oklahoma City, and strengthen military control.

Advertiser

Representative McBee who issued the call for the extraordinary session of the legislature to investigate Walton's official acts, adopted a more moderate policy than that of the governor, but made it plain there would be no backdown in the legislators' determination to assemble. He outlined the procedure now contemplated by the legislators for next Wednesday as follows:

They will go to the capitol, but not in a body. They will arrive singly and in palrs. They do not want to precipitate violence. They do not expect to be threatened or stopped by the national guardsmen stationed therein by the governor. But if they are prevented from entering the house chamber, they will not stage a demonstration. They will leave quietly, peacefully. Their attorneys, however, will file a petition signed by members of the legislature charging that in preventing their assemblage the governor has violated his constitutional authority.

9-23-23

Oklahoma City Quiet

Oklahoma City, despite the presence of the military, was quiet tonight as it has ever been since martial law was declared in the state.

The play being enacted, however, has all the elements of tragedy, melodrama and farce. No one can say what will "break" and the possibilities are numerous.

Everybody is talking "iron Jack" Walton. He is unmercifully flayed by many, praised by others. His statement, "by the just God above me, no mob shall rule Oklahoma while I am governor and am above the ground," has thoroughly roused some of his most ardent enemies.

Tongiht the American flag was run up atop the local temple of the Ku Klux Klan, taking the place of the fiery cross. No explanation was given although the governor had ordered the dismantling of all fiery crosses.

MAY ENJOIN GOVERNOR.

Officials of the state fair and the chamber of commerce indicated that if Walton closed the fair by an official fist they would seek an injunction in federal court against interference by the governor.

The governor in his latest statement, referred to the legislature's proposed session next Wednesday as a "klan assembly."

"From their (the legislators) expressions," the governor said, "and their open defiance of lawful authority, they evidently intend to ride through blood up to the bridle, and anyone who opposes them will be waddling through a slaughterhouse into an open grave.

"These defis cannot go unnoticed by me and as the state fair will bring thousands of visitors to our city, some innocent of any lawless intent and others with the avowed or secret purpose of assisting this lawless element to usurp the powers of the government, it may, if persisted in, compel me to order the state fair closed and further compel me to place this city under such absolute martial law as will necessitate under proper authority the patrolling of all highways leading to this city; the confiscation of all firearms possessed without authority of law; to the end that the lives and property of citizens may be preserved."

In commenting tonight on the governor's statement, representative McBee said:

"None of the talk of 'riding through rivers of blood' has emanated from any member of the house of representatives."

N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, realm of Oklahoma, whose arrest was brought about by the governor's military court of inquiry, and who was again assailed by Walton today, had no comment to make "at this time."

Jewett, who is charged with rioting in connection with the whipping of E. R. Merriam, a laundry wagon driver, will not be given his preliminary hearing until October 2, County Attorney J. K. Wright announced. The hearing which is set for next Tuesday, probably will be postponed, it was said, to give the military authorities opportunities to file charges against four additional men alleged to have participated in the whipping.

Governor Building Organization in Hope of Splitting Legislative Opponents

The State

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 13 (By the Associated Press).—Oklahoma's legislative situation tonight assumed the proportions of a bitter political controversy with forces of Gov. J. C. Walton girding to combat an impeachment act instituted by the lower house of the state legislature.

Having already thrown aside his most prominent administration advisers—Aldrich Blake, the executive counsellor, and Dr. E. T. Bynum, state bank commissioner—the governor now is said in official quarters to be building an organization by which he hopes to split the ranks of his legislative opponents.

Columbia, S.C.

While the executive himself refused to outline his plans, it is rumored that his supporters have prepared a definite campaign and are awaiting the reconvening of the legislature Monday to launch their defensive.

Meanwhile, Clifford W. King, an assistant to the attorney general, whom the governor appointed today, will act as the executive's personal adviser.

No successor to the former bank commissioner has been named. Both Blake and Bynum issued statements today attacking the governor for his recent official activities. The former executive counsellor declared he had been ousted because the governor had been defeated in his fight against the Ku Klux Klan but that, despite his removal, he intended to carry the anti-klan campaign into "every precinct in the state."

10-14-23

The house committee, appointed to investigate impeachable offenses alleged to have been committed by various state officials, continued its session today and examined more than a score of witnesses. Several of the governor's special agents, including Buck Garrett and Zack Mulhall, were called before the committee, as were also a number of Oklahoma City business men and bankers.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 23.—Although Governor Walton feels today that he has won his fight against the members of the Oklahoma Legislature, who will attempt to meet at the capitol next Wednesday to impeach him, he has in his power, there is no lifting of martial law rule in sight. The fight against the Ku Klux Klan would go on, the governor Walton said tonight. He thinks it will become a national issue perhaps affecting the next presidential election.

He said he was not a candidate for the United States Senate. Asked how long he could hold out financially with troops under arms, he said:

"Perpetually. If we cannot feed and clothe the soldiers with money raised by deficiency warrants we will take the food, commandeer it."

The governor is reeciving hundreds of telegrams fro mall parts of the country.

House Claims Right To Meet

For the "rebel" legislators tonight, a committee of five lawyers which has been studying the situation for several days made public an opinion in which it is declared:

"We are clearly of the opinion that the House of Representatives has the undoubted and exclusive right at any time to convene itself as an impeaching body. In fact, neither the governor nor any other outside authority has the power to call a session thereof for such purpose, the majority of the members of the House itself beign the sole judges of the necessity for such a session and of the time when same should be convened.

The question will be taken to the federal court of appeals at St. Louis, if the session is declared illegal in this state, and from there to the United States Supreme Court.

The state treasury is low on account of the heavy expenditures of the governor. Banks have been warned to take at their peril the "deficiency warrants," which the governor is signing to cover the "war."

9-14-23

Ready for Court Fight

Senator John Carlock of Ardmore said today that the next Legislature might not approve these certificates, and advised bankers to put their money into Liberty bonds. All these moves are called "klan" by the governor, who has recently put in a political manager, E. T. Bynum, as bank commissioner, and it is predicted that Bynum will find a way to place the certificates in one of the banks. The governor declared today that he would have plenty of funds from outside.

The Legislature, according to the latest plan of procedure, will stroll out to the capitol Wednesday morning in small groups, carrying no arms, accompanied by no show of strength, some may go in shirt sleeves to prove they are not armed.

They will make an attempt, at least, to get into the chambers which they occupied so serenely last winter, and if the soldiers turn them out they will come downtown and peacefully go t otheir hotels, while their attorneys with petitions all prepared, will go to the supreme court.

The petitions will charge that the governor has violated his constitutional authority. The legislators are making it very clear, indeed, that they desire and intend no show of force. They are aware of the presence in town of about 20 gunmen on the governor's personal staff, more formidable than the soldiers, less inclined to lawful methods, perhaps.

The Legislators Are Standing Pat.

There are klansmen among them, they admit, as there are klansmen everywhere, even in the churches. Several ministers today expressed a fear to state their true minds in this situation. Gov. Walton stated to newspapermen last night that there are about 80,000 klansmen in the state and that some are in the National Guard.

The governor thinks that Oklahoma is in the same condition that the federal government was in 181 when the Ku Klux Klan was outlawed. He quoted legal authorities to prove his contention that the whipping of individuals by a mob was sufficient grounds for declaring a state of "rebellion" and for suspending of the writ of habeas corpus. He is assuming the prerogatives given the president under the act of the congress April 20, 1871.

Walton Makes Light of Report of Bloodshed if Legislators Meet

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 23.—Federal buildings in Oklahoma will be barred to members of the state legislature for their proposed special session, Governor J. C. Walton was advised tonight in a telegram from Bascom C. Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA., September 23.—The fiery cross of the Ku Klux Klan is blazing tonight over the local "klavern" where a meeting is said to be in progress. High officials from Atlanta are reported in the city. The Klan cross was recently barred in Oklahoma by Gov. J. C. Walton under a martial law decree.

VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICE

OKLAHOMA CITY, September 25.—Thirty five thousand men in the state have volunteered for service in the Oklahoma National guard during the legislative crisis Gov. J. C. Walton announced here tonight.

The executive made light of reports that there would be bloodshed and violence when the legislators attempt to meet tomorrow.

"Why I could take a cap-pistol and drive all of those fellows into the Red River," the governor said jocularly. "I don't think there will be the least bit of violence."

APPEALS TO GOVERNMENT

OKLAHOMA CITY, September 25.—President Coolidge and Attorney General Daugherty were appealed to tonight by Gov. J. C. Walton to use their good offices to prevent members of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature from convening in any federal building in the state.

In a telegram sent to the president and the attorney general, Governor Walton said that the afternoon newspapers stated that permission to use the federal court room here for the proposed assembly had been granted by federal district Judge John H. Cotteral.

Newspapermen called to the executive's attention the fact that Judge Cotteral had denied the statement attributed to him in a local newspaper that he saw no reason why the legislators could not assemble in the United States district court room.

"Well such a plan has been rumored at any rate," Walton replied.

"If the legislators meet on federal property then the government has the baby on its hands to raise," the governor said.

Telegram To Coolidge

The telegram dispatched by the executive to President Coolidge and the attorney general follows:

"Unmentionable mutilations have been inflicted upon numerous citizens of this state, and scores of others have been taken from their homes at night and beaten and flogged in a most unmerciful way. This state is now under martial law by proclamation issued by me and military courts are now sitting in Tulsa and in Oklahoma City investigating these barbarous acts.

"These courts have taken testimony much of it coming from the lips of klansmen themselves, showing that each and all of these atrocities have been committed by members of the so-called Knights of the Ku Klux Klan or the invisible government or the invisible empire. I have authentic information showing that a great majority of the members of the house of representatives of the Oklahoma legislature are members of the so-called invisible government. These klan members of the house constituting a majority of its membership in collusion with high klan officials are attempting to hold a session in Oklahoma City with the avowed determination of impeaching me and thereby halting my investigations and prevent subsequent exposures which will show the inner workings of this un-American mob organization, known as the Ku Klux Klan.

Meeting Unlawful

"A meeting of the legislature of this state or any branch of it in extra session without the call of the governor is unlawful and unauthorized by the constitution and laws of this state. The only purpose of this unlawful assembly is to further complicate matters and give aid and comfort to the klan.

"I will not permit this assemblage in the capitol and the afternoon newspapers state that permission to use the federal court room here for its meeting has been granted by Judge John H. Cotteral, judge of the western district of Oklahoma.

"In view of the conditions existing in this state at this time and in the light of exposures already made and given to the American public, I appeal to you in the name of the people of Oklahoma and true Americanism to use your good offices to prevent this unlawful assemblage in any federal building in this state."

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 25—By The Associated Press—A general order issued by Adjutant General B. H. Markham forbidding the convening tomorrow of a special session of the state house of representatives was served late today on house members gathering here for the session.

As the order was served, each member asked if he was being served as an individual or as a legislator. Upon being told the service was in their capacity as legislators, each asked the name of Major McCartney, in charge of the service detail and then took the names of witnesses to the service. This was regarded as indicating that the way was being paved for court action to test the adjutant general's authority.

Despite its issuance the opinion gained strength tonight that the stage had been set for the attempt tomorrow to convene the extraordinary session, at which opponents of Gov. J. C. Walton have promised to seek his impeachment.

To Avoid Bloodshed.

Autharitative sources which could not be revealed, expressed the belief that a "gentlemen's agreemnt" would prevent any danger of bloodshed.

It was indicated that the refusal of the military to give the legislators access to the chamber would involve nothing more than the formality of a guard officer informing the house members that they were not permitted to enter the doors.

Then, it is believed the representatives will leave the capitol, later assembling at some unannounced location where they will convene and where some of their number probably will be arrested.

This maneuver, it is believed, would be intended to prevent a public spectacle which might invite violence by onlookers not identified with the guard.

It is believed that guard officers even may be informed of the intended location for the second convening.

Reports that he had stated that he knew of no reason why the legislature should not meet in the United States district courtroom in the federal building were denied tonight by Federal Judge John H. Cotteral.

"We stand where we have always stood, we will meet pursuant to our signed call," Representative W. D. McBee of Stephens county in charge of the session plans, said tonight. "Wednesday noon will find us at the capitol unarmed and unguarded."

Caucuc is Cancelled.

Plans for holding a caucus tonight to organize the house were cancelled the legislators deciding to wait until the body is regularly convened before electing officers.

Charles S. Brice of McAlester, speaker pro tempore, will call the session to order, it is understood. Election of a regular speaker and adoption of a resolution vacating the organization elected during the last regular session will follow, it is expected.

Names Alleged Conspirators

He charges that the following "conspired or participated in the violence" against him:

Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a corporation; the Tulsa Benevolent Association, a holding corporation for Tulsa No. 3 realm of the Oklahoma klan Charles B. Peters; Richard Lloyd Jones publisher of the Tulsa Tribune; N. C Jewett, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, realm of Oklahoma; inor Merriweather, former grand titan of the realm of Oklahoma; W. Shelby Rogers, cyclops of Tulsa klan No. 3; D. C. Rose, secretary of Tulsa Klan; C. W. Reynolds, assistant secretary; Bob Adkins, E. H. Consolvo, C. L. Holland, C. R. Philbrick, Floyd Mendenhall and I. W. Montgomery, members of the klan.

The suit is declared by its supporters to have been based largely on testimony given the military court of inquiry established in Tulsa, August 14, under Governor J. C. Walton's proclamation of martial law.

Lesky alleged that he was abducted, forced into an automobile at the point of revolvers and driven a long way into the country, and there, while bound hand and foot, gagged and blindfolded, "his clothing was removed and a coat of hot tar applied to his bare body."

Tells of Tar and Feathers

The petition declared that "after the tar had been applied in liquid form and at a scalding temperature, the mob applied a large quantity of feathers, placed the plaintiff in a car and brought him back to the most public place, and with his clothing removed except his trousers, forced him to get out of the car at a time when people were leaving the theatres, x x x x with his hands tied together behind his back, blind folded, and with a large placard pinned on his back with the inscription: "I am a bondsman for all the crooks."

The petition charged that as a result of the incident Lesky had lost "large sums of money" because his experience had caused "such a feeling of ridicule toward him that those owing refused to pay him."

Lesky was forced to leave Oklahoma because of the incident, the action declared. He was said in the petition to own property in the United States worth $150,000.

Militia Ordered To Halt Meeting Of Okla. House

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 22.

"THEY shall not meet. It's up to General Markham to see that they do not."

By that command, made in the presence of Adjutant General Baird H. Markham, commander of the Oklahoma National Guard, Governor J. C. Walton served notice Saturday night that he will use the militia to prevent the meeting of the legislative quorum of the House of Representatives.

The Governor's order means that soldiers will be used to disperse assembly of the members wherever they attempt to convene, at the state house or any place else.

COURT TEST IS POSSIBLE

Declaring Unauthorized Session of Legislature Would Be Nothing But a "Ku Klux Klan" Assembly, Governor Takes Dramatic Stand. Legislators Not Expected to Offer Resistance.

(By The Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 24.—Adjutant General B. H. Markham tonight was ordered by Gov. J. C. Walton to "use all force of arms necessary" to prevent the session of the lower house of the Oklahoma Legislature called for noon Wednesday.

All citizen soldiers of the state between the ages of 21 and 45 were directed in the order to hold themselves in readiness "with such arms as they possess or can obtain to come to the assistance of the sovereign state of Oklahoma when ordered to do so by the governor."

Governor Walton reiterated his charge that the proposed meeting would be an unlawful assembly "dominated and controlled by the so-called invisible empire commonly known as the Ku Klux Klan."

He declared that since the Ku Klux Klan was proclaimed an enemy to the state of Oklahoma under his martial law proclamation of Sept. 15, the session therefore would be in defiance of the laws of the state and an attempt to break the peace.

With issuance of the military order all doubt was removed as to the executive's determination to prevent the House session which has been called by his legislative opponents to consider his impeachment.

The adjutant general was ordered to use all military forces of the state if necessary to disperse the assembly.

Can't Meet Anywhere.

As a precaution against any attempt of the legislators to meet elsewhere should they be barred from the House chamber at the state capitol, the governor also directed Adjt. Gen. Markham to disperse the meeting at "any other time or place in the state of Oklahoma."

Steeled for action, a majority of the members of the lower house were gathered in Oklahoma City tonight awaiting the zero hour of Wednesday noon, when they will face guns and bayonets in their attempt to convene and consider the impeachment of Gov. Walton.

That guns and bayonets in the hands of national guardsmen, posted before the bronze doors of the House chamber at the capitol, will be waiting the legislators, was the promise of the governor.

That House members will go peaceably to the state house and attempt to assemble, offering no resistance in case their way is blocked, was the firm declaration of Representative W. D. McBee, who is in charge of the session plans.

Three Constitute a Mob.

Three or more persons constitute a mob within the meaning of Oklahoma statutes, and the executive indicated that all groups of three or more persons gathering around the entrance to the House chamber Wednesday would be dispersed. Whether arrests will be made was not revealed, the matter being in the hands of Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham, who is maintaining silence as to his plans of action.

Indicating his determination of purpose, Gov. Walton gave the newspaper corps a friendly warning not to congregate in groups of more than three when they go to the "front." Military authorities, however, agreed to issue passes to the correspondents so that they can pass through the lines.

The House members do not plan to go to the capitol in a body and in this was seen tonight the possibility that there would be no wholesale dispersion by the military. If the legislators walk singly or by twos to the door of the house chamber and, upon his arrival here that the "force opposing the meeting of the house at noon Wednesday are weakening."

"Friends of the governor have been turning heaven and earth throughout the last five days, trying to scare the members off," Disney said. "All imaginable methods have been resorted to to intimidate the representatives, but without success. Every one of the original signers of the call will be on the job Wednesday.

"We will have a good majority when the roll is called. We are going to meet in the regular meeting place of the House of Representatives. The governor's bluff is called. There will be no lawlessness. We will walk right in and go to work."

Representative McBee declared that the legislators who plan to be present were not a "klan mob nor an anti-klan mob," but were champions of the "great American class of people who are not of either of these factions."

Gov. Walton in a statement today referred to the Stephens County representative as "Kleagle McBee."

The first concerted action among the House members will come tomorrow night when they caucus for preliminary organization and to choose officers. It is understood that finding their way barred, depart, it is not expected that the military will interfere.

This procedure, it is suggested, would establish, without a collision with the military, the fact that Gov. Walton had prevented the session. The legislators then would have ground for action in the courts, which they plan to bring, if interfered with, to test their rights.

Gov. Walton declared he would welcome a court test of his power to block the gathering.

SOLONS TO RECESS AS IMPEACHMENT PLANS ARE MADE

Oklahoma House to Investigate State Offices and K. K. K.

New Orleans,

10-13-23

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 12.—The state Legislature, its plans virtually complete for a thorough investigation not only of impeachment charges against Governor Walton, but of the K. K. K. in Oklahoma as well, recessed late today until Monday afternoon. When the lower house closed its session today, two anti-klan bills lay on the clerk's desk, the first measures introduced in the extraordinary session which convened yesterday. They were submitted by Representatives W. B. Thornsbrough, of Johnson county, and each was directed mainly at the wearing of masks.

A House committee of twenty-three members was named today to conduct the inquiry into the records of state officers and the committee to consider the activities of the klan probably will be named Monday.

The former committee, the reports of which will provide the basis for possible impeachment actions, probably will be divided into a number of subcommittees to facilitate the thorough investigation promised by the legislators. It was indicated that most of the testimony adduced by the committee will be taken publicly before the entire membership of the House, according to tentative plans.

The committee to investigate the klan will have at its command all records of the military courts throughout the state submitted to the Legislature by Governor Walton, and will be empowered to summon before it for hearings any state or county official in Oklahoma accused of having connection with, or being under the influence of the organization.

The House also voted to investigate its own members who may have been accused of trafficking in pardons and paroles or of having unlawful interests in state contracts.

The resolution was introduced by Allan Street of Oklahoma county, and a committee to conduct the inquiry probably will be named Monday.

GIVES OKLAHOMA ISSUES

Memphis,

Fight Against "Invisible Empire" Hampered by Walton's Statements to Press, He Declares. Will Continue Fight.

(By The Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 13.—Oklahoma's legislative situation tonight assured the proportions of a bitter political controversy, with forces of Gov. J. C. Walton girding to combat an impeachment act instituted by the lower house of the state Legislature.

Having already thrown aside his most prominent administration advisers—Aldrich Blake the executive counsellor, and Dr. E. T. Bynum, state bank commissioner—the governor now is said in official quarters to be building an organization by which he hopes to split the ranks of his legislative opponents.

While the executive himself refused to outline his plans, it is rumored that his supporters have prepared a definite campaign, and only are awaiting the reconvening of the Legislature Monday to launch their defensive.

Meanwhile Clifford W. King, an assistant to the attorney general whom the governor appointed today, will act as the executive's personal adviser.

No successor to the former bank commissioner has been named.

Blake's statement follows:

"To the People of Oklahoma:

"Early in the primary campaign for governor of Oklahoma, I cast my fortunes with J. C. Walton. I had never met Mayor Walton but he had been elected as the standard-bearer of the farmers and laborers of the state and I had always stood primarily for their interests."

The fundamental issues were economic and industrial just as they are today in Oklahoma and throughout the world.

"Concretely, these issues resolve themselves into this proposition: The farmer produces a ton of cabbage and receives therefor $7. The laborer consumes a ton of cabbage and pays $198 for what the farmer sold for $7. The problem of expenses is to reduce the spread between $7 and $198. This purely economic question has been temporarily lost sight of in a political question which is: Who shall rule in Oklahoma, the people functioning through a representative form of government, or what is known as the invisible empire functioning through dragons and cyclops who receive their orders from Atlanta, Ga?

Issue Now Defined.

"This issue is now defined in Oklahoma and there is no middleground.

"On July 15, 1923, I was offered and accepted the office of chief counsellor to the governor of this state. For months I had warned the governor against the operations of this hooded order, called the Ku Klux Klan. Not only had I read the hundreds of letters complaining against mob violence, but I had seen the most sinister attempt made to fill the capitol and state institutions with men who favor allegiance to the 'Empire.' I saw a Legislature, supposed to be filled with representatives of a sovereign people, docily submit whenever the affairs of the 'Empire' were at stake.

"This Legislature gave the health department the greatest appropriation in its history and the klan members boasted that they put this over because the health commissioner was a klansman. You had but to be a klansman and all was well.

"On August 14 the battle opened when the governor placed Tulsa County under martial law. From the beginning I urged a straight out fight on the klan. I had hoped to see this fight conducted on a high plane with the personal issue eliminated, but this soon became impossible. A huge accumulation of political entanglements and embarrassments and acts of administration detail which I have been powerless to prevent, together with a number of extemporaneous interviews given by the governor to newspaper men ridiculed his political enemies. Side issues of every conceivable nature were injected into the fight while the governor himself was surrounded by advisers and appointees who differed on the fundamental question as to who should rule.

"All men have their limitations, and in no unfriendly spirit, I must say that he could not rally the entire anti-klan forces. Retreat for the governor was necessary. Others of his advisers convinced him that my fight against the klan was not in the best interest of his administration and he was finally prevailed on to relieve me of my position as chief councellor. This, of course, was his own affair and I have no criticism to offer. I had tried to serve Governor Walton intelligently, industriously and honestly and with the utmost loyalty, bearing always in mind that a public official owes a higher duty to the people of the state than to any single individual. In performing the service I was obliged to say things and give advice which often pained me, but I was dealing with the personality of J. C. Walton and had to be governed accordingly.

"Fight Must Go On."

"The klan fight must still go on. With the personal issue at last eliminated, the path is clear. The klan already stands condemned by public opinion in Oklahoma. It now remains to translate that public opinion into law and to see that the laws are enforced.

"I am glad to be free to continue the fight unhampered, and I now promise that it will be carried into every precinct in the state. As a public official, I am proud of my part in this vital struggle to crush the invisible empire. As a private citizen, I am only too eager to do what I can to rally the anti-clan forces and to save the state from rule by hooded mobs and secret organizations."

In a statement regarding Gov. J. C. Walton's action in removing him as state bank commissioner, Dr. E. T. Bynum declared today that "further than a wicked abuse of the state's resources in providing for his friends with reckless abandon, he (Gov. Walton) had no policies," Dr. Bynum said it was "extremely mortifying to me to have to issue such a statement."

WILL FIGHT IMPEACHMENT

Can Never Permit It, Says Executive's Adviser — Attempt May Be Made Outside City.

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 21.—"The Oklahoma Legislature will never be permitted to meet in the State House or in this city for the purpose of impeaching Governor Walton," said one of the close advisers of the Governor tonight. The Governor himself was closeted with friends all day and was expected to give formal sanction to this attitude later.

The call for the special session, now signed by seventy-five members, will be filed with the Secretary of State Wednesday. It is thought the "rebel" legislators will meet in secret in the city and then adjourn to some other part of the State for impeachment proceedings.

Anti-Klansmen, armed, are gathering in the city tonight. Under cover of the fair crowds, which are coming in rapidly for the opening tomorrow, Klan and anti-Klan are manoeuvering and the men at Guard headquarters are preparing for trouble. Mounted machine guns are ready for action.

"The Legislature will meet," said W. D. McBee, a member from Duncan, today. "The Governor has threatened to throw us in jail. I would lie in jail until I rot rather than part with my ideas of American liberty."

Victor S. Purdy, Secretary of the State Federation of Labor, in a letter today said:

"I regret to see martial law in Oklahoma. I have not always agreed with Walton's acts as Governor, but when it comes to choosing between Walton and the invisible empire, I am for Walton heart and soul."

Klan's Cross Removed.

The fiery cross, emblem of the Klan, which has stood over Klan headquarters blazing against the sky, was taken down some time last night by order of the Governor or by the Klansmen themselves.

N. C. Jewett, Grand Dragon, denied today that he had led in whipping parties, as was charged in testimony before the military court made public last night. He threatened action for libel against the Governor.

The Governor has decided to carry his campaign to the nation. He and his State House group expect to have $1,000,000 to spend if the campaign for funds is successful. It is understood that anti-Klan organizations in Texas have met and decided to support Governor Walton's campaign financially.

Dr. A. A. Maupin, whose testimony was made public last night by the Governor, was recalled before the military court again today. He placed the whipping of E. R. Merriman, a laundry driver, as March, 1922. Independent reports at that time were that Merriman had been ordered to leave town.

"One night in a meeting in Rose Hill Cemetery," the witness testified, "Jewett made a speech and said there had been too much talking on the outside. He said persons who had been doing things around Oklahoma City were liable for the McAlester or Leavenworth penitentiary. He asked that careless talking be stopped."

County Judge George W. Clark admitted today that he had been obligated into the Klan about eighteen months ago but had dropped his membership. He called the Grand Jury which was to have indicted Governor Walton, but which was dispersed by the troops last Monday.

Resignations of Judge Clark, County Attorney J. K. Wright and Sheriff Tom Cavanar, all put in the Klan by Dr. Maupin's testimony, are to be demanded by the Governor, according to Administration camp gossip tonight. Neither Wright nor Cavanar made any statements of denial of membership.

Klan Chief Accused of Rioting.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 21 (Associated Press).—Charges of rioting were filed here tonight against N. C. Jewett, Grand Dragon of the Oklahoma Realm of the Ku Klux Klan.

In answer to queries as to his final stand on the convening of a special session of the Lower House of the Legislature next Wednesday without his call, Governor Walton today made public a statement written by Paul Nesbitt, State Highway Commissioner and former Speaker of the House, holding that the House members have no right to convene themselves.

Jewett was charged with implication in the flogging of E. R. Merriman, who it is alleged was whipped a year ago.

The information against the Grand Dragon was filed in Justice Court by County Attorney J. K. Wright on the basis of evidence gathered by the Military Court sitting here.

The called meeting of the Lower House of the Oklahoma Legislature here next Wednesday will be an attempt at an "unlawful Klan assembly" because sixty-eight members of the House also are members of the Ku Klux Klan. Governor J. C. Walton declared here tonight in stating that he would oppose the session.

"There will be no meeting of the Legislature," said the Governor.

[By The Associated Press.]

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 22.—A threat to close the state fair and place Oklahoma county under a more rigid enforcement of martial law unless members of the state legislature abandon their plan to meet in extraordinary session next Wednesday was voiced today by Gov. Walton.

9-22-23

BY PAUL R. LEACH.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 22.—Employment of force to prevent the extraordinary session of the state house of representatives called by a "rebel" committee of legislators for next Wednesday noon to consider impeachment proceedings against the governor of Oklahoma was threatened in a written statement issued to-day by Gov. Walton. Characterizing the proposed house session as a meeting of the Ku-Klux klan, which he says he ordered martial law to combat, the governor charged N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the klan here, with directing the impeachment move.

Jewett Taken Into Custody.

The first arrest of an official of the klan in Oklahoma City since Gov. Walton proclaimed martial law a week ago occurred last night when Jewett, was ordered taken into custody by County Attorney Wright, following charges filed against the klan chief by the county official. Jewett arranged for a bond of $1,000.

The bill of information was based upon evidence brought out late yesterday before a military court of inquiry. Jewett is charged in the bill with riot. According to evidence brought out in the same court, Jewett was directly concerned in the flogging of E. R. Merriman near here in March, 1922. Prosecution is placed in the bands of civil authorities.

The evidence is based upon testimony of Dr. A. A. Maupin, local dentist, formerly a klansman, who said Jewett had told him of his part in the Merriman affair.

All to Be Prosecuted.

Definite bills of information would be filed in Oklahoma civil courts against every person found by evidence adduced before the martial law courts of inquiry to have been implicated in masked mob activities, Gov. Walton stated last night.

It is evident that the governor is worried about the call of "rebel" members of the house for the extraordinary session for the purpose of going into the governor's record, looking toward impeachment.

He stated last night that, to the best of his information, sixty-eight members of the house of representatives, including at least one member of the "rebel" committee, were klansmen.

"Just why did you proclaim martial law for the state?" was asked.

"That was told in my proclamation. I did it solely for the purpose of bringing out evidence against the klan in the military courts," he explained. "All evidence so gained will be placed before civil courts. Courts-martial will try nothing except offenses against the military law."

Declares All Members Guilty.

"I wish to say now that I have the evidence which shows that under the laws of this state and under the laws of this state and under section 19 of the penal code of the United States every man who joined the klan and remained in the organization long enough to know its ultimate purpose is guilty as an accomplice either before or after the fact.

"When any man is mobbed, murdered, mutilated or flogged every member of the organiaztion is guilty of the crime as an accomplice, either before or after the fact, unless he promptly withdrew and severed his connection when he discovered that the klan, as an organization, was mobbing, murdering, mutilating or flogging a member of the human race.

"I now state and charge that N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Ku-Klux klan, is guilty of murder and other crimes as an accomplice both before and after the fact."

Petition for New Law.

A petition was filed with the Oklahoma secretary of state yesterday, proposing a new law providing that secret fraternal orders be required to file with county clerks full lists of officers and members. Under Oklahoma law such a petition bearing 8 per cent of the bona fide names of voters at the last general election must be offered to the people in a referendum. The petitioner has ninety days in which to acquire his signatures and the election is asked for Dec. 15, 1923.

Exemption from the provision would be given industrial firms, industrial unions, farm and labor organizations, such other organizations as have for their purpose economic betterment, and also school societies. The proposed law would prohibit masked or disguised persons from appearing in public places.

A $500 fine and imprisonment for six months would be the penalty for infractions.

Six Indicted for Flogging.

[By The Associated Press.]

Wagoner, Okla., Sept. 22.—Six residents of Broken Arrow, Tulsa county were indicted yesterday by the Wagoner county grand jury charged with participation in the whipping of Ben Wagner, a Wagoner county farmer by alleged members of the Ku-Klux klan.

Governor Fires Two Chief Aids and Begins Fight for Control of the State Senate.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 18.—Ignoring Governor Walton's offer to resign if the Legislature would enact a law to compel all secret orders to unmask and make public their membership, the Legislature which he called into extra session to enact this law is going diligently ahead with plans to impeach him. Committees are now taking testimony in various parts of the State and will report to the Legislature the last of this week and early next week, when a bill is expected to be drawn up which will arraign the Governor before the bar of the Senate.

The Governor's foes claim to have a majority in the Senate, which has entire say as to whether the House charges should be sustained, but they are moving fast while they believe they have this majority intact. They charge Governor Walton is doing everything in his power to win over Senators, making political trades and doling out patronage for this purpose.

Two of the Governor's chief aids have been let out: Aldridge Blake, executive counsellor, and Dr. E. T. Bynum, State banking commissioner. There are various reasons given for their decapitation. Blake is said to have broken with the Governor in his war on the Ku Klux Klan, particular with the Governor's use of the military. Dr. Bynum is said to have incurred his displeasure when he failed to induce Oklahoma banks to continue accepting his deficiency warrants indefinitely for the maintenance of the militia. When the banks quit cashing this paper the troops returned to their homes.

Unbiased observers say Walton rid himself of Blake and Bynum because both were unpopular with the Farmer-Reconstruction League, and Walton is soliciting its fifteen votes in the House and four in the Senate to save his scalp.

Blake says the Governor has become convinced at last that he cannot rally all the anti-Klan forces and retreat is necessary. To make it appear he has been led into the war by poor advice he is making a goat of Blake. To make it appear that Walton's fight against the Klan is not sincere a Legislative committee has obtained a stenographer's report of an address he made to the Legislature March 31. This reveals Walton as having said:

"I want to say to the Legislators here that you are our Legislators—that you are my Legislators, no matter whether you are Ku Klux, Tigereyes (meaning drinkers or bootleg hooch), Democrats or Republicans. When you come to Oklahoma City I want you to call at my office."

Blake and Bynum both have appeared before committees investigating the Governor's conduct. All sessions are secret and there are no Walton men on the committees.

Governor Welcomes Injunction Suit on Issue of Legislature's Meeting Wednesday.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 23 (Associated Press)—The President of the Military Commission has been served with formal notice that County Sheriff R. D. Sanford will institute quo warranto proceedings in the Oklahoma Supreme Court to remove the military from the Sheriff's office here. The action would be instituted at Oklahoma City next Thursday, the notice said.

Service on the contemplated action was accepted by Brig. Gen. Charles B. McPherren, the ranking officer, now in Tulsa. The notice was signed by Representative W. B. Disney, Democratic floor leader in the last session of the Oklahoma Legislature; M. M. Bakes, a local attorney, and the Sheriff.

The action will be directed against Adjt. Gen. B. H. Markham, General McPherren, Colonel H. L. Head, the Military Sheriff and Captain H. H. Donahue.

Predicts Klan Issue in Election.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 23 (Associated Press).—A test in the United States Courts of his authority to prohibit the convening of an extraordinary session of the Oklahoma House of Representatives set for Wednesday will be welcome, Governor J. C. Walton declared tonight.

"I want to place the issue of the Ku Klux Klan before Federal authorities, and an injunction action against me will be the most direct method of bringing this about," he asserted.

Governor Walton said that "the Ku Klux Klan is bound to be an issue in the next national election."

The Executive's statement was in reply to a declaration of members of the House that they would resort to court action if he carried out his announced intention to bar the session.

He declined to comment on previous published statements by others that he would be a candidate for United States Senator on an anti-Klan platform.

"I have no announcement to make at this time," he said.

The Governor said that he "believed the Klan was licked," but that he was prepared to go on indefinitely with his campaign against the organization.

He said that if lack of funds later prevented the purchase of supplies for troops on duty he would commandeer what was necessary. Worn out by exertion in his campaign against the Klan, he remained in seclusion at his residence today.

Military courts in Oklahoma City and Tulsa were not in session and headquarters of the guard officers were quiet. The State Fair is attracting thousands of visitors to this city which is being policed entirely by regular city officers.

Observers of the situation look for a solution in the courts this week. Adjutant General B. H. Markham declined to reveal his intended course of action to carry out the Governor's order against the assembling of the Legislature on Wednesday, but the jail threat has not been withdrawn.

Governor Walton has issued an appeal for funds to establish newspapers in this State that "will tell the people the truth," asserting that certain Oklahoma papers were "subsidized with money for Atlanta," and were refusing to carry testimony adduced by the military courts tending to implicate the Ku Klux Klan in law violations.

For the "rebel" legislators tonight, a committee of five lawyers which has been studying for several days made public an opinion in which they declared:

"We are clearly of hte opinion that the House of Representatives has the undoubted and exclusive right at any time to convene itself as an impeaching body. In fact, neither the Governor nor any other outside authority has the power to call a session thereof for such purpose, the majority of the members of the House itself being the sole judges of the necessity for such a session and of the time when same should be convened."

The question will be taken to the Federal Court of Appeals at St. Louis if the session is declared illegal in this State, and from there to the United States Supreme Court.

State Funds Reported Low.

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 23.—The Oklahoma State Treasury is so low in funds on account of the heavy expenditures of Governor Walton in his anti-Klan campaign that banks have been warned to take at their own risk the "deficiency warrants" which the Governor is signing to cover the expense of the "war."

The legislators, according to the latest plan for the assembly in defiance of the Governor, will stroll out to the Capitol Wednesday morning in small groups, carrying no arms, accompanied by no show of strength. Some may go in shirt sleeves to prove that they are not armed. They will make an attempt to enter the chambers, and if the soldiers turn them out they will peacefully go to their hotels, while their attorneys, with petitions all prepared will go to the Supreme Court.

Walton Says Jury Dominated by Klan

Evening Star

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Sept. 18.—After again hurling his threat of undying warfare at the Ku-Klux Klan in Okmulgee County, the first to be placed under martial law in the fight which he has now extended to the entire state, Governor J. C. Walton returned to Oklahoma City Tuesday. In some quarters the Governor's visit was described as a "daring invasion of enemy country."

9-19-23

The Governor appeared Monday night before the Oklahoma Federation of Labor at Henrietta, coal mining center where state troops were employed for the first time with the announced intention of stopping floggings.

Walton asserted that the grand jury which was ordered convened Monday at Oklahoma City and ordered dismissed by military authorities, was dominated by the klan. The Governor said men opposed to his anti-flogging campaign intended to have him indicted under cloak of investigating use of state highway employes for checking initiative petitions designed to permit meeting of the State Legislature without executive call.

Long Legal Battle Over Legislature's Right to Assemble in Prospect, With the Real Decision Between Walton and His Foes Resting on the Ballots Next Year.

(By The Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 27.—The pyrotechnics that have kept Oklahoma aflame since Gov. J. C. Walton opened his war on the Ku Klux Klan, and state legislators in turn instituted a drive to impeach the executive, began to fade out tonight with a long court battle in prospect.

The first move to test in the courts the legality of the special session of the lower house of the Legislature, called by members who hold it is their right to investigate the official acts of Gov. Walton was taken in state district court here late today. Sixty-seven House members applied for a temporary injunction restraining Adjt.-Gen. B. H. Markham and all members of the Oklahoma National Guard from interfering with meetings of the House.

No order was issued by the court during the brief proceedings, and by agreement of all parties, hearing on the petition was set for next Tuesday before Judge J. I. Phelps.

Begin to Leave For Homes.

Meanwhile, the House members who gathered here yesterday and attempted to convene, only to be dispersed by military authorities acting under instructions from the governor, began to leave for their homes to await the outcome of the court fight.

A pledge was signed by the legislators that should the courts finally decide they have authority to meet as an impeachment body, they will convene at any time upon call of Representative W. D. McBee of Stephens County, one of the leaders of the legislators. No further attempt will be made to convene, it was agreed, until the issue is decided in the state supreme court, and then there remains the possibility that the case will go through the long stages of final settlement in the United States Supreme Court. A temporary injunction, if granted by the district court, will not be made the basis for another attempt to assemble, the legislators decided.

Expressing satisfaction with the situation, Gov. Walton declared today "the fight is over so far as the House is concerned." The executive will be represented in the action by Attorney General George F. Short and his assistants.

There were indications tonight that within the next few days the governor would modify his martial law regulations and retire the greater part of the troops now mobilized.

No relaxation in the investigation into the cases of mob violence will follow, however, it was made plain.

Invasion of Rights.

The injunction petition filed by the legislators declared that the action of Adjt. Gen. Markham in dispersing them when they gathered at the capitol yesterday and in continuing through force and arms to prevent an assembly "was and is without authority of law, and was and is an invasion of the constitutional and civil rights of these plaintiffs."

The legislators denied in the petition that they have been guilty of any offense against the laws of the state or the nation and disclaimed intention to commit any breaches of the peace.

The petition related that the House members were dispersed when they assembled "in good faith" to determine whether impeachable offenses had been committed by any officers of the state subject to impeachment. The legislators set out that the session was called in the belief that "many of the guarantees of the constitution of the state have been and are being abrogated by executive action, and the liberties of the citizens destroyed, and that numerous acts of the grossest corruption. . . have been and are being committed.

The House members are represented by C. B. Stuart, J. F. Sharpe, John H. Miley, R. M. Singletary, W. E. Disney and D. A. Richardson.

Brig. Gen. Charles E. McPherren, of Durant, an attorney and stat senator, appeared in court today in behalf of Adjutant General Markham.

Claim It Their Duty.

The petition recited in part:

"It is the duty, purpose and intention of these plaintiffs and each of them as such members of said House of Representatives, peaceably to reassemble and continue the said session of the House; but plaintiffs are unable to do so because the defendant (Adjutant eGneral Markham) has threatened and still threatens, by force and use of armed soldiers under his command to continue forcibly to disperse any assembly of said House of Representatives, and to prevent it from transacting any business, and these plaintiffs from attending any session of said House, and unless restrained by the order of this honorable court, he will do so."

"Under the constitution and laws of the State of Oklahoma, the governor and other elected officers are li ble and subject to impeachment: and under the constitution and laws of the state of Oklahoma, it is the duty of the House of Representatives to present all impeachments to the Senate sitting as a court of impeachment, and to draw up, approve and present articles of impeachment and to prosecute the same before the Senate sitting as a court of impeachment.

In a formal statement tonight addressed to the people of Oklahoma, the House members detailed their attempt to assemble and their action in taking the case to court.

"We, as members of the Legislature, propose and purpose to be governed by the laws of our country as enunciated by the highest court of our state," the statement staid.

WALTON'S CENSOR ON TULSA TRIBUNE

Oklahoma Constitution

Orders Proofs on All News Relating to Martial Law—Paper to Seek Injunction.

9-13-23

Tulsa, Okla., September 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—A military censor took up his post in the editorial rooms of The Tulsa Tribune, an afternoon newspaper, at noon today. He ordered 'proofs' of all news matter relating to Governor Walton and martial law in Tulsa county, to be submitted to him for approval.

The censor is Major Roark, of Oklahoma City, a former newspaperman and an officer in the Oakland national guard contingent here to enforce military rule.

The Tribune announced today it would apply for an injunction in United States district court to prevent Governor Walton from interfering with the publication of the paper.

The Tribune denies Governor Walton's charges that the newspaper has "agitated against the state's military investigation of masked activities in Tulsa county."

The Tribune recently began publication of the "story of Walton," a review of some of the official acts of the executive. One chapter of this story appeared simultaneously with the installment of the "story of Tulsa" written by Aldrich Blake, the executive counsellor, at the direction of Governor Walton. The latter was in the form of an expose of conditions in Tulsa county growing out of scores of alleged cases of mob violence.

Seeks $150,000 Damages From Klan

Morning News

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Sept. 26.—A petition seeking $150,000 damages from the Ku Klux Klan of Tulsa and State officials of the organization was received by W. V. McCure, Clerk of the United States District Court here, today from attorneys in Tulsa representing a man alleged to have been whipped by the Klan, it was announced at the Clerk's office. The petition has not been filed pending the guarantee of filing fees.

HOTEL MAN KILLED

A. M. Birch, Proprietor of Marlow Hostelry, Dies in Defense of Negro.

MARLOW, Okla., Dec. 21.—A. W. Birch, 48, proprietor of Marlow's largest hotel, was shot and instantly killed here tonight when he attempted to defend a negro porter from a band of approximately 15 men who called at the hotel in an attempt to lynch him. Robert Jernigan, the negro, also was shot and is thought to be fatally wounded.

MEMBERS OF OKLA. MOB ARRESTED

County Prosecutor Says of Nine Taken in Custody Six Have Been Positively Identified.

N. Y. Tribune 12-26-23

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 24. — Assistant Prosecuting Attorney J. H. Long of Stephens County said last week that no evidence had been found to prove the Ku Klux Klan responsible for the killing at Barlow of A. W. Birch, hotel keeper, and the fatal wounding of Robert Jernigan, a colored porter in his employ. 12-26-23

"For many years," said Long, "probably a majority of people of Barlow have opposed Negroes living there and at all times a few have favored the Negroes. The situation was not unusual. There are many towns of Oklahoma where Negroes are not welcome.

"A party of youths constituted the mob that attacked the Birch Hotel, and Marvin Kincannon, a lad of bad reputation, who had served in the reformatory, did the shooting."

Nine arrests have been made. Mr. Long thinks that six have been positively identified as members of the mob. State authorities have taken no steps toward an investigation.

The trouble was precipitated last Saturday, when Birch brought Jernigan here to work as a porter in his hotel. A few hours later he received an anonymous communication ordering him to discharge the colored man. This Birch failed to do. The mob went to the hotel a night, or two later and called loudly for the surrender of Jernigan, saying that it intended to hang him on the spot.

The hotel proprietor, with Jernigan at his side, hurried into the lobby and was shot dead before he could speak. An instant later Jernigan was wounded.

CITY RULED BY KLAN LIVES UP TO ITS RECORD

Chicago Chronicle

Marlow, Okla., Dec. 21.—Mob law, the supreme tribunal of the state of Oklahoma, again made its presence known late Monday night, when A. W. Birch, a white hotel proprietor, was shot through the heart because he violated one of the traditions of the city and employed a Race man in his hotel as porter. Robert Jernigan, the unwitting cause of the shooting, was also wounded and is not expected to live.

Marlow is one of those towns in Oklahoma that boasts such signs on its depot as, "Nigger, don't let the sun go down on you," and "Nigger, read and run, and if you can't read, run anyhow." It was to this town that Jernigan came to work in a hotel. When the powers that be heard that there would be a Race man in the city as an employee, they warned Birch to get rid of him, but the proprietor, evidently a different type of man from his neighbors, persisted in hiring Jernigan.

About midnight Monday, 15 unmasked men went ao the hotel to get the nigger." Birch attempted to remonstrate with them, and without warning or a man's chance, he was shot down. The "citizens" next turned their attentions to the unarmed porter and poured their lead into his body.

The men who composed the party are well known. They boast openly of the parts they played in the evening's entertainment. No arrests have been made, nor will there be. For Oklahoma thrives upon the law of the lawless, now that they have rid themselves of the only real governor the state has ever had.

This town was one of those that took such a prominent part in the proceedings against ex-Governor Walton, and is now admittedly in the hands of the Ku Klu Klan.

Oklahoma.

GOV. WALTON'S REAL OFFENCE.

N. Y. Age

Commenting on the impeachment of Governor Walton of Oklahoma the Oklahoma Black Despatch reviewed the impeachable records of previous governors of the State in the following fashion:

With all the ado that is being made about the sins of Walton, it might be well to take a retrospective view of what has happened while other governers of this state have served in the highest position in the gift of this commonwealth. Surely our readers have not forgotten how the first governor of the state stole the capitol from Guthrie, broke faith with the people, and lugged the great seal of the state of Oklahoma City in the still watches of the night. All know the nightmare of despair after the failure of the Columbia Bank and Trust Company, and the subsequent exposures of official corruption. Negroes especially, cannot forget Haskell, for was it not Negroes who, with their vote, gave Haskell his first political chance when they sent him to the constitutional convention from Muskogee? Haskell in turn promised the Negroes that he would prevent a Jim Crow clause being placed in the fundamental instrument of the state. Haskell kept the separate coach and waiting law from becoming a part of the constitution of the state. The Negroes voted for him again when he ran for governor, and Haskell rewarded them by asking in his first message to the legislature that an emergency be declared and a separate coach and waiting law be enacted. Incidentally, we might say Haskell went into office a poor man. He is now on Wall Street. It is probably fortunate for him that the spotlight of investigation that fell upon Walton did not shine down upon our first governor. 12-15-23

And we can't forget Governor Bob Williams, the governor who was O. K'ed for the Federal bench after he had called an extraordinary session of the Oklahoma legislature, and in defiance of the Supreme Court of the United States which had nullified the Grandfather law, insisted upon the passage of the vicious registration law that today the entire citizenship is ashamed of? We cannot forget Governor Bob, for it was during this same administration that somehow, some way, a blanket lease was given to one Mr. Marland, now in Ponca City, on valuable oil land in this state. Yes, Williams met Marland long before Walton reached the spotlight of public notice. Marland ought have paid well for what he received practically free gratis from the state and he ought have paid a deal more than the price of Walton's mansion, if he knew anything about values and wanted to take care of those with whom he was dealing.

Editor Dunjee concludes that Governor Walton's chief offence was that "whether he meant it or not, he said he wanted a fair election law enacted in this State, and he said he wanted to fix it so that the humblest Negro would feel safe upon the public highways of Oklahoma. Many Black folk in this State will always feel that Iron Jack committed his first impeachable offence when he permitted Negroes to sit as delegates in that memorable Shawnee Convention."

Editorial Comment of White Press on Walton-Cauffiel 'Law and Order' Edicts

Pittsburgh Courier

Two government executives, Governor J. C. Walton, of Oklahoma, and Mayor Cauffiel, of Johnstown, have distinguished themselves for anti-Klan and pro-Klan activities in behalf of law and order. Governor Walton, following the flogging and mistreatment of white citizens by the supposed Ku Klux, called out the militia and issued the following statement:

"We have reached the point where the issue is the survival of invisible government or the permanency of our own visible government. I am going to clean that situation up if I have to stand out alone and let them shoot at me."

Mayor Cauffiel, of Johnstown, ordered all Negroes who had not lived in Johnstown less than seven years to leave and keep away from Johnstown. The order followed a pistol fight, when a colored man is alleged to have killed a police officer.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

9-29-23

GOVERNOR WALTON!

GOVERNOR A MENACE

The St. Louis Globe Democrat confesses that the Klan is a "menacing institution in many states," but the action of Governor Walton will establish a precedent more dangerous to American institutions than the Klan is ever likely to be. We quote:

Gov. Walton himself has created by his military excesses and the assumption of a dictatorship of a character hitherto unknown in American history. It is essential, therefore, that the people of Oklahoma reduce their Governor to his proper place as a constitutional executive.

Whatever may be the facts as to the Ku Klux activities in that state they are of secondary importance, when compared with those of Gov. Walton. The Klan, in the acts reported from Oklahoma, is a menace to law, to private rights and to individual liberty. The acts of Gov. Walton are a menace to constitutional government, which is the source and the instrument of law, the sole protector of our rights and liberties.

PRAISE FOR GOVERNOR

The Richmond Times Dispatch speaks courageously:

The Klan may not be responsible for all of the lawlessness charged against it, but it is undeniably chargeable with a good deal of it. It as a masked organization working outside the law to inflict penalties upon those who have fallen under its disfavor. The practices it has indulged may have been imitated by others not connected with the organization, as is claimed by the latter, but in the final analysis the Klan must be held responsible for the reign of terror claimed by Gov. Walton as having held the state in its grip for the past year or more. Whenever private citizens take the law into their own hands and administer private punishment, and punishment unknown to the law, that is certainly rebellion against the law, and it can hardly be successfully pleaded that the mere declaration of martial law by the Governor is an attack "upon law and constituted authority."

PROPER TREATMENT

The Detroit Free Press says the situation in Oklahoma received the proper treatment:

It may be that the Governor of Oklahoma has adopted a rather rough and ready way of interpreting his powers. Since a copy of the state constitution is not immediately available, we cannot arrive at an opinion about that. But as between the course he has selected and the practical surrender of the commonwealth to the mercies of night riding, woman flogging, terrorists of the Ku Klux Klan, there could be only one choice for a governor with blood in his vains and regard for the responsibilities of office.

Gov. Walton was bound to act, and act vigorously, and he did so. Those who object to the treatment they get from him, have an easy remedy for their sorrows. They need only to be decent, law-abiding citizens, upholding the laws instead of flouting them.

PAYING THE PRICE

The worst face that can be put upon it is the statement by the editor of a chain of Southern newspapers: 'We are paying the price for remaining indifferent while a masked super-government grew up in our midst. If public officials all over this state, instead of groveling for votes, instead of fraternizing with an inevitable empire for political ends, had spent a little time studying their duty, J. C. Walton would never have dared call out the militia and we would not now be living under a dictatorship."

MAYOR CAUFFIEL

JOHNSTOWN'S MAYOR

The Boston Post says the mayor of Johnstown is "amusing" in his pro-Klan order to Negroes to leave the city:

It is almost amusing to note the way in which Mayor Cauffiel of Johnstown seeks to reduce the disgust felt by liberal-minded people everywhere over his reported order to colored people of his city to leave the place unless they have lived there seven years.

The mayor now says that the papers were all wrong in saying that he had issued a formal order for these residents to quit; he only "advised" them "for their own safety and the good of Johnstown to leave the city."

But does that put the official in any better light? Such "advice," coupled with the word "safety," is just as unwarranted a violation of the rights of American citizens as any order could be. To unsophisticated minds it meant the same thing.

Come to think it over, it is just a bit worse, for it implies an official unwillingness to protect residents of Johnstown if their color happens to be not strictly up to Caucasian standards.

"TEMPERAMENTAL"

The Nation writes:

The temperamental mayor of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, complains that while he was away his city got in a ferment. "I decided,' 'he said, "that the only thing to do was to send these newcomers out of town and keep them out." These newcomers are Negroes, two thousand of whom have been forced out of town within the past week under Mayor Cauffiel's order that only Negroes who can show seven years' residence be allowed to remain in the city. This is the same mayor that brought nation-wide attention to Johnstown a year ago by his spectacular stand on the sale of beer. So far the Ku Klux Klan has been the only group to praise the mayor for "banning" Negroes purely on his own authority unsupported by any statute of Pennsylvania or the United States." They burned 12 fiery crosses on the hilltops surrounding Johnstown in celebration, apparently not at all concerned by the fact that this th[illegible] of disregarding the law may, in the hands of Go[illegible] Walton, p[illegible]e to their disadvantage.

MEXICO INVESTIGATES!

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin says a word about Mexico's appeal for protection against Johnstown Klan:

The Mexican government inquires as to the reported "warning" of Mexicans from Johnstown; its representatives at Washington and Philadelphia have been instructed to determine the facts; there has been action, direct or indirect, to deprive Mexican citizens of their rights, a protest was made to the United States Government.

But surely, the rights of citizens of Mexico are not more sacred in Pennsylvania, nor more enforceable than the rights of citizens of the United States, whether they come from Georgia, South Carolina or any other of the sisterhood of states.

TREATY ASSURANCES TO MEXICO OF FAIR PLAY FOR ITS CITIZENS ARE NOT MORE BINDING OR ENFORCEABLE THAN CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES TO CITIZENS OF OUR OWN COUNTRY.

OKLAHOMA'S UNCIVIL CIVIL WAR

"ON THE BRINK OF A CIVIL WAR," is where Oklahoma stands, in the opinion of an editor in that harassed State. "From the Red River to the Salt Fork, and from the Panhandle to the Arkansas Line, there is danger of big trouble, observes the Philadelphia Public Ledger. For, it adds, "there seems to be as much blind passion in the fight between the State Government and the Ku Klux Klan as there was in the fight between Dempsey and Firpo—and about as much regard for the rules of civilized existence."

The Literary Digest

A special correspondent sent to Oklahoma by the Chicago Tribune writes that "the invisible government of the Ku Klux Klan is matched by the visible government of the Oklahoma National Guard," and that "the State to-day presents a social and political situation that has no parallel since the reconstruction period of the Civil War." The Louisville Courier-Journal agrees that "here is one of the greatest issues that has developed, certainly since Altgeld of Illinois attempted to defy the Federal Government in the Cleveland Administration." The issue in Oklahoma is thus impartially summed up by the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot:

9-29-23

"Because the law failed to punish those who they believed ought to be punished, Ku Klux Klanners took the law in their own hands. Because the Klanners punished those whom they had no right to punish, the Governor took the law in his hands."

New York

The "war" in Oklahoma began with whippings, which have been going on for some months, the actual number being estimated at anywhere from a few hundred to 2,500. In briefly retelling the story, on the basis of news dispatches, it should not be forgotten that Jack C. Walton was elected Governor of Oklahoma last fall by the largest majority in the history of the State. He was a Democrat backed by an organization known as the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League, and he celebrated his entry into office by giving a barbecue to which the whole State was invited. On August 14 the Governor sent a military court of inquiry to Tulsa, which had been the center of the flogging epidemic. By August 27 this court had sentenced four floggers, who had admitted that they belonged to the Klan. The Governor declared martial law in Tulsa on September 1. On September 6 the Associated Press dispatches from Oklahoma City carried the "story of Tulsa" as told by the Governor's executive counselor, in summing up the testimony taken by the military court. In every case examined except two, according to this document, "the evidence has led straight to the doorstep of the invisible empire known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan." Some of the cases reviewed in this story are thus briefly summed up in an Associated Press dispatch:

"A mother roughly dealt with when a band of twenty men raided her home and beat her husband, a child born prematurely as the result; a member of a township school board abducted by floggers and coerced into voting for a school head whom he opposed; an elderly man lashed because he opposed the way the local school was run; a man and a woman routed out of their beds and taken to the whipping-field, where the strap was applied to both, because the whippers charged that they had been selling beer."

"I KNOW OF NO OTHER METHOD"

Says Governor J. C. Walton of Oklahoma, explaining that he placed the State under martial law as the only way "to save its sovereignty" and "conquer the invisible empire."

Martial law in Tulsa brought protests from citizens and officials. But Secretary of War Weeks refused to interfere. On September 8, Governor Walton said to a thousand people at a county fair: "If one of those masked men comes to your house and attempts to bother you, turn loose both barrels of your shotgun, and I will pardon you." About this time the Grand Dragon of the Oklahoma Klan said, "the Governor and all his cohorts never will be able to break the power of the Klan in Oklahoma," but on September 10 he issued an order complying with one of the Governor's edicts, forbidding to Klansmen "any parade or masked meeting of any kind in the State of Oklahoma." On the same day another instalment of the "story of Tulsa" contained the statement that the majority of the Tulsa County officials belonged to the Klan. Then Governor Walton went to Tulsa and made this declaration:

"The issue is the survival of 'invisible government' or the permanency of our own visible Government. I am going to clean that situation up if I have to stand out alone and let them shoot at me."

By this time, the Governor's policies were beginning to arouse newspaper protest, in Tulsa, Oklahoma City and Muskogee, and the Governor countered by putting a military censor in the editorial rooms of the Tulsa Tribune. By September 15 the State legislature had been drawn into the battle. Several of its members talked about holding a special session to consider the Governor's acts, only to be told by the Governor: "There will be no session of the legislature as long as the National Guard will obey the orders of its Commander-in-Chief." At midnight of the same day the Governor proclaimed martial law for the entire State, at the same time lifting the censorship from the Tulsa Tribune. He justified his call for troops by asserting that the "invisible empire" had "usurped the power of the political government," and "the power of this criminal organization must be destroyed." The proclamation further declared every person aiding or abetting the Klan to be "enemies of the sovereign State of Oklahoma." Over most of the State martial law has not been unduly conspicuous, but, according to dispatches, the cities of Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Sapulpa, with their respective counties, are "under absolute martial law," with the militia in charge. Military courts of inquiry were set up in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, and the Governor announced that he would prevent the meeting of what he called "the Klan Grand Jury." In spite of the Governor's declarations, members of the State legislature have been coming to the Capital, they have discust impeachment proceedings against Governor Walton, and have declared that the fight in Oklahoma is now "a fight to determine whether the Governor is a dictator or whether this is a State of executive, judicial, and legislative government." A group of editors representing eleven Oklahoma papers met on September 19 and issued a similar declaration, calling upon the legislators to "meet immediately." On the same day the Governor sent word that he is ready and has the men and money to keep Oklahoma under martial law for a whole year if necessary.

Such are the short and simple outlines of the struggle that has been convulsing Oklahoma, as reported in press dispatches.

Turmoil in Oklahoma

Governor Walton continues his determined fight on the legislature and threatens to have the legislators shot down if they attempt to convene Wednesday this week. His arbitrary and dictatorial methods will as surely fail in Oklahoma as such methods did in Texas a few years ago when a governor was impeached in this state. The probabilities are that Oklahoma will have a new governor before a great while.

Raleigh Sentinel 9-27-23

The bitterness that has been engendered is manifest in the newspaper attacks upon the Governor in his State. For the most part the anti-Walton press admit that there have been floggings and that the Ku Klux Klan is an evil influence in the State, but they have come to the conclusion that their Governor is a still worse evil. For instance, the editor of the Muskogee Phœnix declares that it has always opposed the Klan, but that the Governor is insincere and "exaggerates conditions to make his proclamation of martial law seem necessary." "J. C. Walton is no more above the law than the empire he condemns," we read in one Phœnix editorial. According to the Oklahoma City News:

"Oklahoma is suffering from two distinct menaces.

"Each menace threatens the rights that make a people free.

"One menace is the Ku Klux Klan.

"The other is usurpation of unconstitutional power by J. C. Walton."

Governor Walton declared martial law in Oklahoma County, in the opinion of the Tulsa Tribune, "for the express purpose of preventing the members of the State legislature from meeting and the Grand Jury from functioning freely." The Tribune is against "invisible government," and would like to have the law take its course against any officials who may be controlled by the Klan but, it observes, "Governor Walton has by his latest acts precipitated an issue far more fundamental than that of his scrap with the Ku Klux Klan; he literally has challenged the processes of elemental American constitutional government."

International Newsreel photograph

"THE KLAN IS FOR LAW AND ORDER"

So declared N. C. Jewett, Grand Dragon of the Oklahoma Realm of the Ku Klux Klan, in barring masked parades in Oklahoma in accordance with Governor Walton's orders.

The same conviction that the Governor is doing things even worse than those which he condemns is exprest by such nearby newspapers as the Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram, the El Dorado (Ark.) News, and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Farther away the same conclusion has been reached by papers like the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Detroit Free Press, Grand Rapids Press, New York Evening Post, Baltimore Sun, and Springfield Republican. "The Walton remedy is worse than the disease," is the way the Philadelphia Public Ledger puts it."

Governor Walton has stated his own case to the press as follows:

"There exists in this State a self-styled 'invisible empire' which assumes the functions of a political government, and whose ambition is to make the political power of this State subservient to its domination.

"Two governments can not exist in this State at the same time. This so-called 'invisible empire' has gained control of prosecuting officers, sheriffs, the police power and jury commission in many counties. Testimony has been taken before the military court, which shows that hundreds—some women—have been whipt, beaten and mutilated—remember the word mutilated—in an inhuman, horrible and unprintable manner. . . .

"For the public safety, for the right of life and liberty and right of trial by jury, to save the sovereignty of this great State, I placed it under martial law. I know of no other method to conquer the invisible empire."

The Tulsa World, which Governor Walton has spoken of as his only press supporter, declares both Governor and Klan a menace to the State. But, it says, "as between supporting a constitutional head of a State who usurps authority, and an unconstitutional and secret organization which usurps authority for the purpose of defying the constitutional authority, the decision ought to be easy for every straight-thinking man and woman."

If Governor Walton is supported by only a minority of the Oklahoma press, he would seem, however, to have a majority of the press with him throughout the country. In a State which has had a struggle with the Klan, the New Orleans Item says:

"Regardless of nice distinctions raised by lawyers the Governor of Oklahoma will have the hearty sympathy and support of sane and respectable opinion throughout the United States."

The Rebellion in Oklahoma

Norfolk Journal & Guide 10-13-23

All good citizns regret the conditions which led up to the declaration of martial law in Oklahoma by Governor Walton, and the extreme measures he adopted to control the situation, many of them unconstitutional and tending to arouse the indignation of the people of the State to the point of rebellion. His claim that outrages by members of the Invisable Empire threatened the life of law and order and legal process in the State was well grounded enough, and he may have been within his authority in using a show of force to prevent the legislature from meeting for the purpose of impeaching him without his calling it together, but in overriding the ruling of the courts and attempting to prevent an election which he had previously called because he claimed that it was ordered in an irregular way, he alienated the sympathy and support of many in the State who had been his friends and supporters. But there is a division of opinion about the whole subject among the thoughtful people of the country, and general regret that in Oklahoma and other Stat s the Invisible Empire has become an active political agency. It is generally conceded that the Klan is so strong in Indiana that it may control both the Republican and Democratic parties, the chairman of the Republican State Committee being compelled to resign not long ago because it was discovered that he belonged to the Klan.

Norfolk, Va.

Strangely enough, the Klan appears to be growing in strength in the Northern and Western States, while interest in it appears to be growing less in the Southern States, where the order originated in the days of Reconstruction.

DRASTIC ANTI-KLAN RESOLUTION TABLED

Commercial Appeal 10-17-23

Will, However, Come Before Oklahoma Lower House.

Memphis Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 16.—A resolution providing for an investigation of every member of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature to determine whether he belongs to the Ku Klux Klan and authorizing the summary expulsion of all members found to be Klansmen, probably will come up for consideration by that body at its next session Wednesday. The resolution, introduced by J. P. White (Dem., Bryant County) Monday afternoon was before the House just three minutes, being tabled through a suspension of the rule providing that all resolutions shall be carried over one day before being considered.

Representative White's resolution declared the klan abridges the constitutional right of freedom of religion, the charges were brought on account of his recent fight against the Ku-Klux Klan.

And we find a chorus of newspapers scattered throughout the country singing the same tune, among them being such representative journals as the Wichita Beacon, Kansas City Journal, Topeka Capital, El Paso Times, Wichita Eagle, Omaha World-Herald, Columbus Ohio State Journal, St. Paul Dispatch, Jacksonville Florida Times-Union, Louisville Courier-Journal, New York World, Brooklyn Eagle, Washington Post, Newark News, and Philadelphia Record.

Many papers seize upon the occasion to condemn the Ku Klux Klan. Says the Houston Chronicle, for instance:

"Just so long as it plays the rôle of a holier-than-thou organization, just so long as it claims the right to intimidate and discipline people because of its peculiar make-up, and just so long as it presumes to tell lawfully constituted authority what to do, or step in and do it for lawfully constituted authority, there will be such upheavals as we are witnessing in Oklahoma."

Finally we note what Klan representatives have to say. The Western American, a Ku Klux Klan paper of Portland, Oregon, pays its respects to the "slander and self-evident grandstanding" on the part of Governor Walton, and in Texas Colonel Mayfield's Weekly (Houston) says:

"The chief magistrate of the Sooner State is imbued with the hallucination that in the capacity of Governor he is able to make laws to suit his individual notion, and from whose ipse dixit there is no appeal.

"This old thing of rushing out with loaded rifles every time two or three citizens get together in fraternal association, and threatening to kill them all, will speedily reach the point of national disgust, and end in the Governor's retirement back to the brush from whence he came."

Ku Klux Klan—1923. Oklahoma.

GOVERNOR WALTON of Oklahoma belongs in the category of those who should be loved for the enemies they have made. Oklahoma, like several other states, has recently been the scene of much lawlessness. Night riders in costumes resembling those of the Ku Klux Klan have used the whip and tar brush, particularly in Tulsa County. The governor has accordingly placed this county under martial law; and announces that he will keep it there as long as seems necessary. Though the Ku Klux disclaims responsibility for the disorder, it is terribly pained that the governor should have been so drastic. It has appealed to the War Department to make him behave, but Secretary Weeks politely replies that the Constitution does not permit federal interference. The Ku Klux's Grand Dragon has thereupon resorted to even more desperate measures: he accuses Governor Walton of wanting a seat in the Senate. This may be a terrible crime in Oklahoma; but from the distance from which we write, Governor Walton looks like the sort of man who would improve the Senate considerably.

MUSICIANS who contract to sing or play in Enid, Oklahoma, find a curious clause in their papers—"Subject to the approval of the K. K. K." In this same Enid—whose chief boast is an annual export of $3,000,000 worth of poultry and eggs—is published the Fish Hook, organ of the Ku Klux Klan. The Fish Hook appears to disapprove of William Allen White; at least it refers to him as a "little self-styled cheese-smelling demagogue" who "likes a dollar so well that if a fly were to alight on a dollar of his money he would catch him and scrape his legs." The sage of Emporia being in Colorado, the staff of his Gazette seized the occasion of the Fish Hook's outburst to comment: "The downtrodden and oppressed force on the Gazette that has to live with this old whangdoodle and listen to his preterbacious scandulations have felt for some time that this town ought to have the truth about him. . . . The culternacious old hypochloride certainly can't fire the whole force when he comes back, and so we are giving the people of this man's town the truth" (as seen in Enid, Oklahoma). They reprinted the Fish Hook's saw-edged remarks, and—if he didn't compose the accompaniment himself—William Allen must have roared when he read it. If Enid were capable of learning tolerance it might well ask William Allen White to compose correspondence lessons for its citizens. But perhaps correspondence courses, like music, would be "subject to the approval of the K. K. K." in Enid.

Oklahoma Legislature to Pass on Klan Issue

BY ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

OKLAHOMA CITY.—The klan issue in Oklahoma has been put up to the state legislature by the latest political maneuver of Gov. J. C. Walton, who has issued a call for a special session of the legislature which he dispersed by force of arms a week ago.

The call for a special session limits the legislature to consideration of klan outrages. The governor has the power thus to limit the members although precedent in Texas has established their right also to consider the matter of impeachment.

The vote which gave Walton the greatest majority ever given to any candidate for governor turned against him in the recent election and voted for the legislative call by a majority three times that which Walton once received.

OKLAHOMA'S governor (p. 73) and Johnstown's mayor (p. 74) are black knights on our chessboard. Both have sowed the dragon's teeth; both are reaping the traditional harvest. But both are significant because they dramatize the clash of ill-balanced forces whose field of battle stretches far beyond the Oklahoma capitol or the steel mills of Johnstown.

VILLAGERS DIVIDED AS OKLAHOMA JURY STARTS MOB PROBE

Anadarko Factional Fights Lead to Threat Of Troop Movement

Associated Press Report.

ANADARKO, Okla., July 9.—A grand jury ordered by Governor J. C. Walton to investigate masked violence in Caddo county, was empanelled here late today and started its inquiry with virtually the entire citizenship of the county viewing its activities from two opposing positions.

Local residents declare that sentiment never has been so divided as today. Divergencies that appeared more than a year ago with the organization of units of the Ku Klux Klan here were accentuated Saturday evening when two public fist fights among four supporters and enemies of the klan brought from Frank Hefley, chief of police, a threat to ask for State troops if the incident is repeated.

Both encounters were staged on the steps of the post office, resulting from arguments over the klan. Large crowds, representing both factions, witnessed them. Police interference is believed to have prevented more serious trouble.

Opponents of the klan about a month ago formed an organization known as the "loyal blues." Its announced purpose was to combat the klan locally. It is not known how many members either organization lists but both are conceded to be strong. No outward activity has been attributed to either the klan or the "loyal blues" since the organization of the latter society.

The grand jury constitutes the second step in the State's investigation of alleged mob violence in Caddo county. A court of inquiry conducted recently by an assistant State attorney general failed to throw light on the reported whipping of Claude Nathan, son of a well known merchant here.

Ordering the grand jury a few days later, Governor Walton warned citizens and county officials that he would place the county under martial law if another whipping was reported to him. He declared the county was "on the verge of the same thing" which he said existed in Okmulgee county when he invoked military rule there with the declaration that lawless bands had been operating for months.

OKLA. GOVERNOR, ONCE OPPOSED, FAVORS EDUCATION

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Proof of the fact that the authorities in southern and semi-southern states can boost Negro education if they want to is found in the co-operation which Negro leaders in Oklahoma have got from the governor of the state, Jack Walton. Walton is known as a semi-radical, and bears the Farmer-Labor political stamp. He was at one time mayor of Oklahoma City, fought the Ku Klux Klan to a standstill there, came out for governor, opposed the Klan, its candidates and all the old-line politicians, and was successful.

His career in regard to Negroes has been exceptional, in that at one time Negroes were so bitterly opposed to him that they refused to permit him to address any of their meetings, or to support him in any way.

The man responsible for a change of attitude on their part is Dr. Isaac W. Young, president of Langston university, formerly a practicing physician i nthis city. Walton became concerned over the Negro attitude and called Young, with ten other leading Negroes, into conference. It was found out that the race in Oklahoma did not know the mayor, at that time. Young and the men with him carried Walton's message to their people, assuring them that the Farmer-Labor man was just as much their friend as he was the friend of other persecuted groups.

Since his election to the governor's chair, Walton has proved it. He has stood behind Young at Langston university. For the first time it is now an accredited institution. Walton has told Young, who is himself a man of the first rank, to go the limit in putting the school over. One of the improvements at Langston is an enlarged faculty. One of the new men brought to the school is Dr. Arthur Wallace. Dr. Wallace is secretary. Through Young, Walton is keeping an eye on Negro schools throughout the state. Young's plans with the governor include pushing the entire state of Oklahoma out of the slough of educational backwardess, in regard to Negroes, that is found in the south.

WALTON ASSERTS HE WILL EXTEND RULE OF MILITIA

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 23.—Further extension of military rule was threatened today by Gov. Jack Walton as the State entered its second week under martial law. Walton announced he would impose military rule on counties where he has been unable to obtain prosecutions for floggings and other acts of lawlessness, which he attributes to the Ku Klux Klan.

New York

Additional troops are to be mobilized immediately at various points throughout the State, but Walton refused to indicate where they would be sent.

Climax of Fight Near

With N. C. Jewett, grand dragoon of the Klan in Oklahoma, free on $1,000 bail on a charge of inciting riot, and the goverinor charging that the majority of the House of Representatives are Klansmen, the climax of the fight of the fiery executive against forces of the invisible empire is believed imminent.

The Legislature has been called to meet on Wednesday to impeach the governor, and the governor has announced that he will use troops to disperse such a meeting on the theory that it is rebellion against the authority of the State.

Representative Claims 85 Members of House Will Attend Extra Session of House

OKLAHOMA, CITY, OKLA., Sept 21.—The called meeting of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature here next Wednesday [illegible] an attempt at an "unlawful assembly," because 68 [illegible] the house also an mem[illegible] the Ku Klux Klan, Gov. J. C. Walton declared here tonight in stating that he would oppose the session.

"There will be no meeting of the legislature, the klan is whipped," said the governor.

INVADE SECRET MEETING.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., Sept. 21.—Deputy sheriffs invaded the secret meeting of the Ku Klux Klan at the San Antonio speedway where an initiation and barbecue was being held early tonight and served injunction writs upon five alleged members of the Klan.

The injunction which was issued at noon by Judge Robert W. B. Terrill, upon application of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a corporation with headquarters in Atlanta, restrained the San Anotnio Klan from conferring the second degree.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 21.—Charges of riot were filed here tonight against N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm of the Ku Klux Klan.

Jewett was charged with implication in the flogging of E. R. Merriman, who, it is alleged, was whipped a year ago.

The information against the Grand Dragon was filed in Justice court by County Atorney J. K. Wright on the basis of evidence gathered by the military court sitting here.

Dr. A. A. Maupin, a witness called before the military court testified that Jewett had stated to him that he (Jewett) was the one who applied the lash to Merriman. Dr. Maupin testified that he was a former member of the Klan.

MILITARY COURT ACTIVE.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 21.—Military courts in Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Shawnee dug into flogging cases and Ku Klux Klan activities today while Governor J. C. Walton made plans for combatting the impeachment movement against him.

Early tonight the governor had not reached a final decision as to the course he will pursue when members of the lower house attempt to convene next Wednesday to hear charges against him.

Advertiser

During the day Governor Walton contented himself with giving out an opinion written by Paul Nesbitt, state highway commissioner and a former speaker of the house, which held that the legislators have no power under the constitution or statutes to assemble without the executive's call.

Walton did not indicate whether he intended to execute his threat to jail the lawmakers should they defy him.

The claim that 85 of the 107 members of the house would be present for the session Wednesday was made today by representative W. I. Cunningham, of Sapulpa.

That 116 whippings had been uncovered during the military court investigation at Tulsa was the statement tonight of officers of the court. Two additional floggins were revealed today it was stated.

With the indictment of six Tulsa county citizens today by the Wagoner county grand jury on charges of participation in the flogging of Ben Wagner, a Wagoner county farmer, the number under indictment in this case grew to 16.

Military authorities today invaded Pottawatomie county and as a result of their work with civil officials three men were arrested, charged with implication in the flogging of L. C. Sowers, an insurance man at Shawnee. The county and military authorities convoked a joint court of inquiry which it was announced would continue to function until the situation in Pottawatomie county is "cleaned up."

Work of the military court in Oklahoma City grew to such proportions that three separate courts were formed to hear testimony.

County Attorney Wright, who filed the charge against the grand dragon, admitted to the military court that he had paid the membership fee in the Klan, according to the record of the court.

Jewett, Dr. Maupin charged in his testimony today before the court, warned local Klansmen at a meeting some months ago that there had been too much talk about activities of the Klan. The grand dragon Maupin alleged, told the Klansmen that "the persons who had been doing things around Oklahoma City were liable for both McAlester and Leavenworth penitentiaries."

Dr. Maupin in his testimony before the military court charged that Jewett had stated to him regarding the Merriman whipping:

"I will have you know that I am the man who laid that on. I led the party. I knew what I was doing. I am the fellow who held the whip and put it on his back and made him confess."

Merriman had been charged by Jewett with maintaining an intimacy with a married woman, Dr. Maupin testified.

The flogging of Merriman, it is alleged took place on March 7, 1922.

Ordered To Leave.

The complaining witness is believed to be Ellis R. Merriman, a laundry wagon driver, who is alleged to have been ordered to leave the city in March, 1922.

County Attorney Wright with his assistant, Mont Powell, and the complaining witness were closeted with Col. W. S. Key, military commandant, for nearly an hour. A few minutes after they emerged from the council room the announcement of the filing of the charge against Jewett was made by Wright.

Grand Dragon Jewett recently voiced the declaration that "Governor Walton and all his cohorts will never be able to break the power of the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma."

Three Men Are Held.

SHAWNEE, OKLA., Sept. 21.—Three men are being held here early tonight as the result of disclosures made at the initial session of the court of inquiry composed jointly of civil and military authorities, investigating activities of floggers in Pottawatomie county.

The court continued in session well into the night, promising a wide spread "clean up" before the inquiry is completed.

The three men, Lewis Shult, manager of a local commercial telegraph company; Ernest Brundage of Oklahoma City and Lafayette Evans, of Shawnee, were arrested in connection with the flogging here on the night of June 21, 1922, of L. C. Sowers, a local insurance man. Shult, according to members of the court, admitted he participated in the affair and implicated four others besides Brundage and Evans.

LAWYER GIVES OPINION.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 21.—In answer to queries as to his final stand on the convening of a special session of the lower house of the legislature next Wednesday without his call, Governor Walton today made public a statement written by Paul Nesbitt, state highway commisisoner and former speaker of the huose, holding the house members have no right to convene themselves.

Military Court Launches Inquiry Into Acts of Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma City—Martial Law Not Yet in Evidence in Other Points Than Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

(By The Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 17.—The Oklahoma City police department, taken over by the military late yesterday, was returned to civil authorities today when Mayor O. A. Cargill served notice on Col. W. S. Key, military commander in charge of the city, that unless Ray Frazier, chief of police, was reinstated at once, the entire police force would be retired by the city and the task of policing the city would be left in the hands of the military.

The mayor's ultimatum followed a called meeting of the city commission. Orders were issued by the mayor at the same time to the members of the police force to be prepared to leave their posts at 2:30 p.m. unless the department had been restored to the regular authorities. The mayor declared that should the action of Col. Key in surrendering military control over the department be rescinded by Adjutant Gen. Markham or Gov. Walton he would carry out his plans for the walk out and then put the matter to a legal test.

(By the Associated Press.)

HENRYETTA, Okla., Sept. 17.—The Ku Klux Klan constitutes "an anarchistic force in Oklahoma" and must be driven from the state, Gov. J. C. Walton told an audience of perhaps 1,000 persons, many of then delegates to the state labor convention here today.

"The fight on the klan is no longer a religious affair. The organization is attempting to control the government of the entire state," the governor declared.

"Martial law is necessary for the entire state because the klan is in control of all counties." he asserted.

"The only reason there have not been floggings in Oklahoma City as elsewhere in the state is because "when I was mayor, I gave the police orders to shoot into any hooded mob," the executive said.

"The movement to take the pardon and parole power from the governor is being made for no other reason than as retaliation for the conviction of floggers in Tulsa. I have sent four men to the penitentiary from Tulsa and 100 more are on the way. They will not be pardoned or paroled."

Frequently Cheered.

Gov. Walton was frequently cheered by his auditors.

It was raining hard when the governor's train arrived in Henryetta but in spite of the downpour, a big delegation met him and he rode from the train to the auditorium behind a band and at the head of the labor union parade.

Barclay Morgan, prominent Henryetta business man, one of the speakers who preceded Walton, made an attack upon the Ky Klux Klan and spoke of the governor as "the man who will drive the klan out of Oklahoma."

Morgan cautioned people to "be careful what you say, for we are sitting on a powder keg." He declared the klan "is a dastardly mean organization, born in sin and conceived in perdition."

The Tulsa World is backing him in his fight against the invisible empire, "though nearly all the other editors, reports and newspapermen in Oklasoma are members of the klan," the governor asserted.

Explaining his Saturday night declaration of "absolute martial law" for Oklahoma City, he said that such action was necessary to "stop the klan grand jury that had been called" to convene today.

The governor charged that the real purpose of the Oklahoma City grand jury was to launch "a counter attack on my fight against the klan." He declared the charges against him that he had misused state funds in having state employes check signatures on an initiative petition was a subterfuge.

The governor branded Campbell Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission, who circulated the grand jury petition as a man "attempting to crush organized labor from the inside instead of the outside."

The governor declared that "warrants could be issued in 800 cases charging forgery in connection with the signing of those petitions. There are that many names on the petition that are not the signatures of the purported signers."

Executive Issues Drastic Instructions on the Eve of Effort to Impeach Him.

BLOCK SOLONS' PLAN BY FIXED BAYONETS

Oklahoma Legislators Forbidden to Attempt Special Session "at Any Place."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Oklahoma City, September 24.—Adjutant-General B. H. Markham tonight was ordered by Governor J. C. Walton to "use all force of arms necessary" to prevent the session of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature called for noon Wednesday.

All citizen soldiers of the state between the ages of 21 and 45 were directed in the order to hold themselves in readiness "with such arms as they possess or can obtain to come to the assistance of the sovereign state of Oklahoma when ordered to do so by the governor."

With issuance of the military order all doubt was removed as to the executive's determination to prevent the house session which has been called by his legislative opponents to consider his impeachment.

The adjutant general was ordered to use all military forces of the state if necessary to disperse the assembly.

Governor Walton reiterated his charge that the proposed meeting would be an unlawful assembly "dominated and controlled by the so-called invisible empire, commonly known as the Ku Klux Klan."

He declared that since the Ku Klux Klan was proclaimed an enemy of the state of Oklahoma under his martial law proclamation of September 15, the session therefore would be in defiance of the laws of the state and an attempt to break the peace.

Bans Any Meeting.

As a precaution against any attempt of the legislators to meet elsewhere should they be barred from the house chamber at the state capitol, the governor also directed Adjutant-General Markham to disperse the meeting at "any other time or place in the state of Oklahoma."

"The troops will be ordered to shoot to kill if necessary to prevent the assembly," Governor Walton told newspapermen. "I hope, however, that no such excessive measures will be necessary."

"All male citizens of the state," between the ages named are meant in his order to citizen soldiers to be ready for duty," Governor Walton explained.

The governor denied he intended taking action in the federal court to determine the legal status of the proposed meeting.

He likewise denied that he had sought federal aid in his war on the Ku Klux Klan.

"Whenever the government steps in, the issue is theirs" the executive asserted. "I would like for them to take over this fight, because its a bear on my hands, but until they do, the state of Oklahoma is fully capable of looking after it."

"Within twenty-four or thirty-six hours all the house members in favor of the session will be in Oklahoma City and then action will be taken," said McBee.

Pressed for an indication as to what the legislators intend to do Wednesday in the face of the executive's orders to the military to prevent their convening, McBee was evasive.

"It would be a mighty poor class of citizens, who would fail to do their duty because the governor issued bombastic statements," he said.

In reply to a question, the house leader said he did not believe there would be any court action on the part of the hot[illegible] members between now and Wednesday noon.

SOLONS PLAN EASY WALK TO LEGISLATIVE PORTALS.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Steeled for action, a majority of the members of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature were gathered in Oklahoma City tonight awaiting the zero hour of Wednesday noon when they expect to face guns and bayonets in their attempt to convene and consider the impeachment of Governor J. C. Walton.

That guns and bayonets in the hands of national guardsmen, posted before the bronze doors of the house chamber at the capitol, will be waiting the legislators was the promise of the governor.

That house members will go peaceably to the state house and attempt to assemble, offering no resistance in case their way is blocked, was the firm declaration of Representative W. D. McBee, who is in charge of the session plans.

All the troops needed will be on hand to prevent the house from meeting, Governor Walton stated, reiterating that an attempt on the part of the legislators to convene would constitute an unlawful assembly of Ku Klux Klansmen which is forbidden under martial law.

Three Persons Are Mob.

Three or more persons constitute a mob within the meaning of Oklahoma statutes and the executive indicated that all groups of three or more persons gathering around the entrance to the house chamber Wednesday would be dispersed. Whether arrests will be made was not revealed, the matter being in the hands of Adjutant General B. H. Markham, who is maintaining silence as to his plans of action.

Indicating his determination of purpose, Governor Walton gave the newspaper corps a friendly warning not to congregate in groups of more than three when they go to the "front." Military authorities, however, agreed to issue passes to the correspondents so that they can pass through the lines.

The house members do not plan to go to the capitol in a body and in this was seen tonight theory that there would be no wholesale dispersion by the military. If the legislators walk singly or by twos to the door of the house chamber and, finding their way barred, depart, it is not expected that the military will interfere.

This procedure, it is suggested, would establish, without a collision with the military, the fact that Governor Walton had prevented the session. The legislators then would have ground for action in the courts, which they plan to bring, if interfered with, to test their rights.

Governor Walton declared he would welcome a court test of his power to block the gathering.

Want Walton To File Suit.

Among some legislators, it was felt that the governor would not carry out his threat to prevent the session, but their optimism was not borne out by Walton's expressed attitude.

These men urge that the governor permit the house to meet and then test the legality of the session in the courts. It is suggested that if the house were permitted to organize, a witness could be summoned before the bar. Then habeas corpus proceedings could be instituted in behalf of the witness attacking the regularity of the session. A court decision on this point would settle the entire matter, it is held.

This procedure has been urged upon the executive by several advisors, it is understood. That the question will have to be finally fought out in the courts is the only point upon which both sides to the controversy agree. Neither side, however, seems to care to assume a defensive position in advance.

W. E. Disney, of Tulsa, an anti-Walton leader in the house, asserted upon his arrival here today that the "forces opposing the meeting of the house at noon Wednesday are weakening."

Calls McBee "Kleagle."

"Friends of the governor have been turning heaven and earth throughout the last five days, trying to scare the members off" Disney said. "All imaginable methods have been resorted to, to intimidate the representatives, but without success. Every one of the original signers of the call will be on the job Wednesday."

"We will have a good majority when the roll is called. We are going to meet in the regular meeting place of the house of representatives. The governor's bluff is called. There will be no lawlessness. We will walk right in and go to work."

Representative McBee declared the legislators who plan to be present were not a "klan mob nor an anti-klan mob," but were champions of the "great American class of people who are not of either of these factions."

Governor Walton, in a statement today, referred to the Stephens county representative as "Kleagle McBee."

The first concerted action among the house members will come tomorrow night when they caucus for preliminary organization and to choose officers. It is understood that an appeal will be made to the people for funds to carry on the legislative fight.

FLOGGERS ATTENDED SERVICES AT CHURCH.

Tulsa, Okla., September 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The whipping of Norman Chesher, a young married man of Mounds, Tulsa county, by masked men, who 15 minutes before had attended church services at Mounds in a body was described in testimony before the military court of inquiry here which was made public tonight by an officer of the tribunal.

Mrs. Chesher, wife of the victim, testified she did not witness the abduction, but learned of his experience "when he returned home late at night with his clothes torn and his back a mass of bruises." She said he did not identify any of his assailants.

"His health was broken by the flogging and other mistreatment he received that night," she said. "He never has been well since and now is in Hot Springs, Ark., under a doctor's care."

"He told me that he had been hit about twenty-five times with what he thought to be a harness tug. The men accused him of not supporting his widowed mother, of carrying a gun, and of selling whisky. He told them his mother died when he was three years of age; that he had never carried a gun or sold whisky. Then they told him they would whip him on general principles."

Drawn By Announcement.

Herbert Bilbro, Mounds business man and another witness, was near the church when Chesher was kidnaped, having been drawn there "by an announcement earlier in the day that the Ku Klux Klan would visit the church." He said he saw about twenty-five figures, all wearing white robes and masks, marching down the street toward the church.

"A moment after they entered," he said, "a large touring car came speeding down the street turned around and dashed past my car, drawing up to the curb directly across the street from the church. Two men jumped out, grabbed Chesher, shoved him into the back seat, jumped inside themselves and the car was driven rapidly south.

"When it passed me I saw five occupants, all disguised by tall black caps.

"About that time, masked men began to come out of the church. They entered automobiles and followed the one that contained Chesher."

Two other witnesses were said to have given similar testimony in substance.

William L. Perry, a farmer near whose place the whipping was administered, told of having been within 150 feet of the scene while the lashing was being applied.

"I heard them say 'we are going to teach you how to live a better life,' he testified. "I was about as far as from here across the street when they took the fellow out of the car."

The witness added that he heard one of the floggers admonish the victim "put this in the paper, and if you have any friends that are crooks tell them to leave town."

To File Ouster Suit.

As the military continued today developments in the Tulsa situation were seen in Oklahoma City where Attorney George Short sought permission to institute ouster proceedings in the supreme court against Harry W. Kiskaddon, Tulsa's commissioner of fire and police. The high court granted the application.

The application of the attorney general followed formal notice served on the military commander here Saturday that quo warranto proceedings would be filed in the supreme court next Thursday seeking the removal of the military from the sheriff's office and the restoration of the county police power to Sheriff Sanford. Both questions are expected to be settled this week.

Commissioner Kiskaddon refused to comment on the action or to answer charges of "third degree methods" laid at the door of his administration by the attorney general.

MASKERS BURN THREE TULSA HOMES

Tulsa, Okla., September 24.—(By The Associated Press.)—Testimony describing the burning of three houses in Tulsa in one night by a party of masked men was heard by Governor J. C. Walton's military commission this morning as investigation into hooded band activities was resumed, a high officer of the commission declared in an interview with newspapermen.

A wedding ceremony performed in the center of a field in Creek county, adjoining Tulsa county, while the bridegroom was chained to a gas engine, with pistols leveled at his head was another case heard by the military commission this morning.

The principals in the wedding were Chester Cagle, 20 years old, of Tulsa, and a local woman who made her home with her father.

Minister Testifies.

The Rev. H. G. Cook, of Tulsa, read the services uniting the couple he testified after he had been rushed into Creek county by men he had never seen before. He defended his action by declaring that the ceremony was necessary to give the expected child of the woman a name.

Cagle was kidnaped from the streets of Tulsa two hours before the ceremony. Two men stopped a city water wagon of which he is a driver and told him he was under arrest for speeding, he testified. They threw him into a closed car, tied a black bag over his head, and drove off from the city. His captors told him he declared, they belonged to the "invisible empire."

He denied he was guilty of the charge against him and a few days after the impromptu ceremony, his mother sued to have the action annulled. He told the military he had been warned not to take such action. The suit still is pending.

DECLARES GUARDSMEN ARE KLAN MEMBERS.

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 24.—(By The Associated Press.)—A statement declared that "ninety per cent of the members of the Oklahoma national guard are members of the Ku Klux Klan" and that "all that would be necessary to stop martial law in Oklahoma would be for N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm of the klan, to call out klan members of the guard" was issued here today by Dr. G. S. Long, representative from Tulsa county in the state legislature. Dr. Long, an admitted member of the klan, made it plain, however, that such action would not be taken by leaders of the organization.

"The klan oath is a rededication of a man's loyalty to the constitution of Oklahoma, the constitution of the United States, the government of Oklahoma and the government of the United States," he asserted. "And so long as Governor Walton exercises his authority as governor of Oklahoma, klan members of the national guard will remain loyal to the orders of their commander-inchief."

'Clear the Room,' Shouts Military Commander, When Alleged "Klan" Legislators Hesitate About Leaving—Portion of "the House Journal" Given Out by Legislative Leaders.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 26.—Wholesale removal of county officials in all counties, where they are proved to be under Ku Klux Klan control, is the sweeping state governmental reform Gov. J. C. (Iron Jack) Walton contemplates it was indicated tonight.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 26.—Undaunted by their first skirmish with military forces of the state who drove them from the capitol today, members of the lower house of the Oklahoma Legislature prepared tonight for the next move in their attempt to meet and consider the official acts of Gov. J. C. Walton.

Despite the fact that the sixty-six members were dispersed by National Guardsmen when they gathered at noon before the barred doors of the House chamber at the capitol, the legislators contended tonight that the House formally was convened and that it now is in recess pending the call of the presiding officer.

A statement by Representative W. D. McBee, a leader in the assembly move, declared that the proceedings at the state house constituted a meeting of the house, notwithstanding its interruption by troops acting under orders of Governor Walton.

With the statement, Representative McBee made public what he declared to be the official journal of the House of Representatives. It detailed the brief action which terminated in the clearance of the capitol corridors by the military.

Prevented from meeting or even caucusing, the House members tonight pinned their hopes for protection against the military authorities upon the efforts of a legal committee which is preparing court proceedings to mark the next stage in the conflict.

That there would be no immediate attempt to assemble again in defiance of martial law regulations was the promise made late today by House leaders to Adjutant General Baird H. Markham.

Observers predicted that the solons would await a court ruling before essaying another assembly.

Representative W. E. Disney, chairman of the legal committee, said tonight that the court proceedings "could not get under way before morning. He refused to indicate what form the action might take or whether it would be instituted in the state supreme court or the United States district court here.

May Reach Injunction.

It is expected, however, that an injunction will be sought against Governor Walton with the possibility that national guard officers will be made parties to the suit.

Attorney General George F. Short, who perforce will assume the task of opposing the action in behalf of the state when the court battle begins, told newspaper men that several types of legal action might be filed under existing laws. He added that he did not know what to expect. The nature of the proceedings, he said, would determine the place of filing.

The "Journal of the House," designed to show that the session was regularly called today and that it was dispersed is expected to be made the basis for the suit.

The journal, written on stationery of the local hotel where the legislators make their headquarters, describes the procedings as follows:

"Corridors of the hall of representatives. September 26, 1923, 12 noon.

66 Members Present."

"Representative Charles S. Brice, ascertaining that 66 members of the House of Representatives were present, called the House to order, at which time Colonel William S. Key intervened and commanded that the House of Representatives disperse, after which he read his order from the governor of the state of Oklahoma, authorizing such command.

"Representative Stovall: 'Will you please explain the order, Colonel Key.'

"Colonel Key: 'The order which I have just read is self-explanatory.'

"Representative Stovall: 'You have the entire military force of the state at your command, do you?'

"Colonel Key: 'I refuse to answer the question.'

"Representative Disney: 'Did you state that you would not answer any questions?'

"Colonel Key: 'No, sir.'

"Representative Disney: 'Are you dispersing us as members of the House of Representatives?'

"Colonel Key: 'Yes, sir.'

"Representative Disney: 'Very well, Sir.'

"Colonel Key: 'Please do us the courtesy to move on.'

"Representative Boyer: 'Am I dispersed as a member of the Legislature?'

'Clear the Room."

"Colonel Key: 'I refuse to answer any individual questions, the orders have been very explicit.' (Turning), Major McCarty, please see that the room is cleared.,"

But this unembellished record drew no picture of the tense scenes attending the clash between legislators and the grim faced soldiers.

Crowded in the rotunda on the fourth floor of the capitol, the House members, a small army of newspaper correspondents and possibly a hundred spectators from administrative offices in the building milled around waiting for the test.

With rifles on their shoulders, two privates stood post before the massive doors of both the House and Senate chambers and held the crowd back at a safe distance. Officers wearing service revolvers stationed themselves at vantage points.

A buzz of conversation arose from the crowd and there was little hint of the stern moment approaching. It was plain, however, that the air of gayety and banter on the part of some of the House members was simulated. Then the hands of the clock swung to noon.

Memphis

The House Is in Session.

Suddenly above the noise arose a voice—that of Charles S. Brice of Mc-Alester, speaker pro-tempore. It came from the rear of the crowd that pressed up to the armed barrier to the hall of the House.

"As it is noon the House is in session—" Brice began.

"You are commanded to disperse." This sharp command interrupted Brice and the crowd turned and saw Col. W. S. Key, military commander of Oklahoma County, step to the speaker's side.

There was a shuffling of feet as the assembly moved forward to face the officer, who stood across the open court in the center of the rotunda.

Then his officers sprang into action to hold the crowd in place.

With a semblance of order restored Col. Key began reading an order forbidding the House members to convene.

"I, as military commander of the district of Oklahoma County, forbid this attempted meeting and direct that you disperse immediately," he concluded.

A tense moment ensued. Paused each legislator waited for another to lead the way.

Another order to disperse was rasped out by Col. Key, and officers under his command began moving through the assembly repeating their chief's injunction. The crowd wavered, then broke, and within five minutes the rotunda was deserted.

A crowd of approximately 3,000 persons denied entrance to the building sent up a loud cheer from a field across a street as the first of the legislators appeared on the capitol steps following the failure to convene.

Women waved flags and hundreds of automobile horns raised a raucous greeting.

Guards patrolling the approaches to the building made no effort to stay the demonstration until the throng pressed forward to meet the legislators. Then they ordered it to disband.

Movie men ground frantically at their cameras as the strange scene passed before their lenses. They, too, had been barred from the building.

With the departure of the legislators, the crowd melted rapidly and followed in their wake.

To McBee's Hotel.

The House members went immediately to a downtown hotel, where an unofficial headquarters is maintained in the suite of Representative McBee.

Within a short time a member of Col. Key's staff arrived and instructed Representative McBee that no caucuses would be permitted. McBee assured the guard officer that there will be no attempt to hold either a caucus or assembly.

A score of Gov. Walton's secret service operatives were scattered through the hotel, and three of them took up posts before the door to McBee's rooms. A guard captain also was stationed in the corridor. For a brief period both the secret service men and the captain stopped visitors to Mcee's suite, allowing only one person to enter as another departed.

In the middle of the afternoon a flurry was created when one of the governor's policemen arrested Campbell Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission, and one of Walton's most bitter political enemies. It was charged that Russell had been circulating copies of a cartoon attacking Walton. He was booked at the police station on charges of disorderly conduct and inciting to riot and was released immediately on bond of $20. Russell returned to the hotel.

When legislators appealed to Adjutant-General Markham to have the state policemen removed from the hotel, declaring that they were being shadowed and intimiated by "Governor Walton's gunmen," they received prompt action.

Colonel Key appeared in the lobby of the hotel and issued an emphatic ultimatum to John Glenn, in charge of the operatives.

Glenn withdrew his force immediately.

The governor's secret service force is made up of police who served under him as mayor of Oklahoma City and former peace officers of the state noted for their gunmanship. They are paid out of a fund voted by the last Legislature for the "extraordinary protection of the state." Buck Garrett, former sheriff at Ardmore and one of the most picturesque figures in the state, is a leader of the force. Governor Walton's home has been constantly guarded by these secret service men since the beginning of the governor's fight on the Ku Klux Klan.

"They Shall Not Meet."

Charging that the Ku Klux Klan dominates one-third of the counties in Oklahoma and has a big influence in many others, Governor Walton declared tonight:

"Martial law over the state will continue until this legislative bunch gets off my back and we can get into those counties to straighten out the klan officers and klan courts so that every citizen, regardless of race, creed or color may enjoy the rights to which they are entitled under law."

"The Legislature," the governor reiterated, "shall not meet."

Pressed for an expression of his attitude in view of the attempt of the solons to assemble at the state capitol today, Governor Walton said:

"The Legislature is dead. It only can be revived in regular biennial session, or by a special call from the governor. Any attempt to convene itself is a direct violation of the constitution. It is done."

Informed by newspaper men that several score of women followed the legislators to the state house and cheered them as they entered, the executive said:

"I expect nothing better of the legislators. Any organization that will hide behind a mask also will hide behind a skirt."

Says They Are All Klansmen.

He has declared that all of the House members who signed the call for the extraordinary session are members of the Ku Klux Klan, and that they are attempting, by impeachment proceedings to halt his war on the organization.

Governor Walton let it be known tonight that he had several conferences recently with members of the klan; and that the "better element of the organization, even some of its officials," have approved his fight against mob violence and masked depredations in the state.

The governor asserted that no action contemplated by the adminis- writ of mandamus, although he tration in the legislative conflict. vouchsafed that he had employed "The matter is entirely in the hands legal staff of 14 in an advisory capacity of Adjutant General Markham," he said.

Questioned as to the possibility of a court action by the legislators the governor said he is not subject to a

KLAN FLOGS NAKED WOMAN

Blindfolds Woman, Strips Her of Clothing and Whips Her into Unconsciousness, is Charge.

Kansas City Star

Broken Barrow, Ok., Oct 8.—Mrs. Annie Pike, according to testimony given and sworn to before Governor Walton's military court was taken out of bed from her home to a lonely spot on a country road, stripped of the one piece she wore, and lashed until she was sensless. Mrs. Pike has been seriously ill ever since the beating was administered to her several days ago.

Kansas City, Mo.

Mrs. Pike, in recalling the tragic incidents, was near to fainting. She told that she had previously been arrested and convicted of making beer at her home. She paid the fine, she said, and ceased making the intoxicating stuff at her home However, she stated, a number o masked men came to her door an commanded her to open it. Joe Hardman, a roomer at her home, opened the door and admitted the men. They came into her bedroom, Mrs. Pike stated and told her to get out of bed. When she hesitated to get out of bed in her night clothing before the men, they jerked her out, she says, and cursed several times.

Woman Relates Cruelty.

"They jerked me out of bed into the middle of the floor," said Mrs. Pike. "I recognized them, and they pushed me towards the front door I told them to wait until I could get my dress, and they told me I didn't need any dress. When I reached to get some clothing one man threw a gun on me. I recognized him as Leon Barth. I grabbed a quilt and wrapped it around me and they handcuffed us both and put us in the car and blindfolded us. When we left the house we went west on the pavement, but I don't know where they took us." Mrs. Pike stated that the car was full of men, and that there were two men standing as guards on the fenders of the car. They finally arrived at the designated spot, she says, and the man handcuffed to her was commanded to get out of the car. They said they were going to make a man out of him, Mrs. Pike said.

After a short time, Mrs. Pike said she heard the man holler, and heard the rapid lashes being applied. After badly beating the man, the Klansmen came back to the car she said, and began talking to her. She said she strove hard to recognize some of the voices. She finally recognized the voice of a man she knew named M. C. Williams. "Please help me, Mac," Mrs. Pike said she asked the man whose voice she recognized. "You're right, it's me," the man replied, Mrs. Pike stated, but added that he could not help her, and refused further to talk to her.

Beats Woman Insensible.

The Klan members then commanded her to get out of the car, said Mrs. Pike, and to sit down. Her knee had been sprained, she explained to them, and she could not obey their command. "Let's beat her standing up," one of the brutes said, according to Mrs. Pike. Mrs. Pike said they then tore the one piece remaining from her, and began whipping her. She screamed so loudly, they tried to stifle her cries, beating her all the while and commanding her to "shut up." The lashes came more rapidly, said the woman and she felt herself sinking. "I didn't know anything until I was back in the car, and when I came to myself I was all wet with blood and someone asked if my heart was beating," said Mrs. Pike. "They then asked me if I wanted a drink of water. Her jaws were locked as a result of the beating, and she refused the later, she said.

According to her testimony, after the beating, she was taken back in the car, and several of the men attempted to talk to her. She still was near unconsciousness, she related, and said nothing sensible. She said further that her life was endangered as a result of the beating, and that the effects will be with her for a long time yet. Mrs. Pike was accused of making beer at her home here. She had previously been arrested for the crime, but paid a fine and ceased making the stuff, she said.

Tells of Complications in Fight on Ku Klux Klan

Times-Picayune

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 13.—Reviewing his stand on the fight being waged in Oklahoma on the Ku Klux Klan, Aldrich Blake, who was removed from office as executive counsellor yesterday by Governor Walton, issued a statement here today as follows:

10-14-23

"To the people of Oklahoma:

"Early in the primary campaign for governor of Oklahoma I cast my fortunes with J. C. Walton. I had never met Mayor Walton but he had been elected as the standard bearer of the farmers and laborers of the state and I have always stood primarily for their interests.

"The fundamental issues were economic and industrial just as they are today in Oklahoma and throughout the world.

New Orleans,

"Concretely, these issues resolve themselves into this proposition: The farmer produces a ton of cabbage and receives therefor $7. The laborers consume a ton of cabbage and pay $198 for what the farmer sold for $7. The problem of expenses is to reduce the spread between $7 and $198. This purely economic question has been temporarily lost sight of in a political question, which is: Who shall rule in Oklahoma, the people functioning through a representative form of government, or what is known as the invisible empire functioning through dragons and cyclops who receive their orders from Atlanta, Ga.

"This issue is now defined in Oklahoma and there is no middle ground.

"On July 15, 1923, I was offered and accepted the office of chief counsellor to the governor of this state. For months I had warned the governor against the operations of this hooded order, called the Ku Klux Klan. Not only had I read the hundreds of letters complaining against mob violence but I had seen the most sinister attempt made to fill the capitol and state institutions with men who favor allegiance to the 'empire.' I saw a Legislature supposed to be filled with representatives of a sovereign people, docilely submit whenever the affairs of the 'empire' were at stake.

"This Legislature gave the health department the greatest appropriation in its history and the klan members boasted that they put this over because the health commissioner was a klansman. You had but to be a klansman and all was well.

"On August 14 the battle opened when the governor placed Tulsa county under martial law. From the beginning I urged a straight out fight on the klan. I had hoped to see this fight conducted on a high plane with the personal issue eliminated but this soon became impossible. A huge accumulation of political entanglements and embarrassments and acts of administration detail which I have been powerless to prevent, together with a number of extemporaneous interviews given by the governor to newspaper men, rallied his political enemies. Side issues of every conceivable nature were injected into the fight while the governor himself was surrounded by advisers and appointees who differed on the fundamental questions as to who should rule.

"All men have their limitations, and in no unfriendly spirit I must say that the governor also is a man of limitations. It became rapidly apparent that he could not rally the entire anti-klan forces. Retreat for the governor was necessary. Others of his advisers convinced him that my fight against the klan was not in the best interest of his administraton and he was finally prevailed on to relieve me of my position as chief counsellor. This of course, was his own affair and I have no criticism to offer. I had tried to serve Governor Walton intelligently, industriously and honestly and with the utmost loyalty, bearing always in mind that a public official owes a higher duty to the people of the state than to any single individual. In performing the service I was obliged to say things and give advice which often pained me but I was dealing with the personality of J. C. Walton and had to be governed accordingly.

"The klan fight must still go on. With the personal issue at last eliminated, the path is clear. The klan already stands condemned by public opinion in Olahoma. It now remains to translate that public opinion into law and to see that the laws are enforced.

New Orleans

"I am glad to be free to continue the fight unhampered and I now promise that it will be carried into every precinct in the state. As a public official I am proud of my part in this vital struggle to crush the invisible empire. As a private citizen I am only too eager to do what I can to rally the anti-klan forces and to save the state from rule by hooded mobs and secret organizations."

Military Court of Inquiry Starts Work in Oklahoma City.

BY ROYS GATEWOOD.

(Copyright, 1923, By the Fort Worth Record and the Universal Service.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 17.—Gov. J. C. Walton made the power of martial law felt in Oklahoma today.

Memphis Press

While the governor was speaking at Henryetta today, charging the Ku Klux Klan with "anarchy and rebellion," the military court of inquiry here began its official investigation.

Armed guards stand at the great doors of the chambers of the Senate and House of Representatives, bayonets fixed. No one is allowed to pass. That is to prevent physically, if necessary, an extraordinary session of the Legislature in an attempt to impeach the governor.

Reinforcements of national guardsmen are being brought in. No reason was given for this at military headquarters. But the military shows indications of uneasiness over the tensity of feeling here, growing out of martial law.

Machine guns command the streets bristling from public buildings. During guard mounts there was some jeering from spectators.

Plans for emergency mobilization at any point in the city were drawn up today. Guardsmen are stationed night and day at the siren of the local gas corporation. Five blasts of the whistle will be the signal for all units to mobilize at central points and warn that trouble has broken out.

Strict Supervision.

Memphis Press.

The militia continues to exercise strict supervision over every branch of the government in the city and county. The power of the sheriff is nullified.

9-18-23

Judge George W. Clark, presiding judge of the district court, did not organize a grand jury. Instead he swore in the jurors as a petit jury, for trial of civil cases alone.

An artillery unit of the National Guard, stationed at Enid, was ordered mobilized today and will entrain tonight for Oklahoma City. These troops will be stationed at Capitol Hill and the big guns will guard the statehouse.

Full pressure of martial law was being felt in the city tonight. Regular street car service was ordered stopped from 11:30 to 5 a.m. Streets must be cleared of pedestrians at midnight. Persons finding it necessary to be out after that hour must obtain a military pass or be subject to arrest and court-martial.

Main roads entering the city are being patrolled.

Reports reached military headquarters today that the Ku Klux Klan scored a coup in getting records of the organization out of the state. According to the report, secret files were loaded on an airplane and carried outside the state. The military court of inquiry, it is said, expected to seize these records.

The military court at its opening session interrogated Campbell Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission and bitter enemy of Gov. Walton.

OKLAHOMA SOLDIERS HALT HOUSE SESSION

Chicago Daily News 9-26-23

Dramatic Scenes as Legislators Are Ordered Out of State Capitol.

Chicago, Ill.,

FIGHT TO COURTS NEXT

[By The Associated Press.]

Statehouse, Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 26.—Oklahoma's "rebel" legislators were dispersed by the military at noon to-day when they attempted to convene a special session of the lower house to seek the impeachment of Gov. Walton.

There was no violence or bloodshed.

The house members gathered before the entrance to the house chamber were given a firm and curt order by Col. W. S. Key, military commander of the city, not to attempt to assemble.

There was a momentary pause, armed officers moving through the crowd barked out orders to "leave the building" and without a word the house members began to depart from the rotunda.

Within five minutes the scene of the clash between the solons and the military was cleared. At 12:05 p. m. all of the legislators had left the corridor.

Driven Out of Hotel.

Members of the legislature went from the capitol to their headquarters in a local hotel. They were met by about ten of Gov. Walton's armed operatives in civilian clothes and informed that there could be no session of the house of representatives in the hotel. Several leaders of the movement left immediately for another hotel.

Court action will be their only recourse leaders say, and Gov. Walton declares he will welcome a test of his action in the courts.

The governor's office, which was open early in the morning, had been closed before the arrival of the house members. Gov. Walton remained at his residence throughout the morning. Several other offices closed as the noon hour approached.

More than a score of girl employes gathered along a ballustrade on the fifth-floor rotunda to watch from this vantage place the developments below.

A dozen officers with service revolvers strapped to their belts moved through the crowd gathered before the house chamber.

Boyer First "Rebel" to Appear.

Representative Frank M. Boyer of Tulsa and Marshall Smith of Hominy, were the first house members to enter the capitol. By 11 o'clock a dozen had arrived.

The wide corridors of the capitol were virtually deserted save for the lone members of the legislature, the military and newspaper men. The functionaries of the scores of administrative offices were excused from the day's work in order that the number within the building might be kept at a minimum and also because of a holiday declared in observance of "Oklahoma City day" at the state fair here.

At 11:49 a. m. the legislators grouped themselves within twenty-five feet of the door to the house chamber. New sentinels were posted by the military, and Adjutant General Markham took his position at the entrance to the chamber.

Sixty-Five Names on Call.

The call for the session was formally filed with the secretary of state five minutes before noon. It bore sixty-five signatures.

Col. R. A. Sneed, secretary of state, declared he would file the document in the archives of the state where it will become part of the state's history—"the most glorious public document in the history of Oklahoma, a new Magna Charta of American Liberties and a rededication of the state to the principles of constitutional government."

Sixty-three signatures had been attached to the call for the sesion a quarter of an hour before the time set for convening. Fifty-four constitutes a majority of the house. James M. Thompson of Garvin, and J. G. H. Windle added their names to the call after arriving at the statehouse.

All Serene on Surface.

There was little except the presence of the guardsmen to indicate that the gathering was unlike any other meeting such as occur frequently at the capitol. Legislators awaiting the hour of noon laughed and chatted with state officials and newspaper men.

Every one, once admitted to the building, was given full freedom of all the structure, except the legislation chambers.

Many legislators looked up friends in capitol offices and spent the minutes visiting with them.

With the atmosphere charged to a fever pitch, Charles S. Brice, speaker pro tem of the house, attempted to call the house members to order.

Brice had barely raised his hand and said: "Gentlemen of the house——" when Col. Key, stepping up, broke in and in a loud voice called on every one in the crowd to remain motionless.

Reads Order of Prohibition.

He then read the order prohibiting the session.

The order was as follows:

"Pursuant to special executive military order, issued by Gov. J. C. Walton of Oklahoma and commander-in-chief of military forces of said state, addressed to the adjutant-general, forbidding the gathering or assembly in a pretended session of any members of the Oklahoma legislature at the statehouse in Oklahoma City at 12 o'clock noon of Sept. 26, 1923, or at any time or place within the state during the present period of unrest, it becomes my duty, by direction of the adjutant-general, to enforce the provisions of the governor's order. Now, therefore, I, William S. Key, as military commander of the district of Oklahoma county, forbid this attempted meeting and direct that you disperse immediately."

"Dispersed as Legislature."

When Col. Key had completed his reading, D. A. Stovall of Hugo, representative from Choctaw county, asked the military commander if he had "the full force of the state national guard behind the order." Col. Key made no reply.

9-26-23

W. M. Disney, representative from Muskogee, then asked if the gathering was being dispersed as a legislature or as individuals.

"You are being dispersed as a legislature," Col. Key responded.

The doors of the house chamber never were opened and throughout the entire proceedings none save the military approached nearer the chamber than the military guard stationed about twenty feet in front of the main entrance.

The house members left the capitol almost in a body for their caucus headquarters at a downtown hotel.

Chicago Ill.

Dispersal Scene Unprecedented.

The scene that attended the dispersal was unprecedented.

House members and newspaper men were grouped as closely as possible to the entrance of the chamber, when Brice, from the back of the crowd and across the open court that pierces the rotunda, suddenly made an effort to call the session to order.

There was a shuffle as members sought to gain places of vantage. The sharp command of the guard commander to "Stand where you are" arrested the movement.

Women and girls who had fringed the crowd about the house entrance were caught in the midst of the floor as the members faced about and all stood silently while the order was read.

Then in groups of twos and threes the crowd scattered.

For a moment the situation took on a threatening aspect. There was determination written on the face of Col. Key as he issued his command to the legislators to disperse at once. He spoke in a harsh voice that left no doubt as to his determination to carry out the orders of his superiors.

Coolidge Bars Use of U. S. Property.

A telegraphic appeal by Gov. Walton to President Coolidge last night asking that the government prevent the use of the local federal building for the session brought a quick response from the white house that regulations prohibit the use of government buildings except for United States business. The governor acted to forestall such an attempt after reading a news item in a local publication which quoted Federal Judge Cotteral as saying he saw no reason why his courtroom in the federal building could not be used by the lawmakers. The judge categorically denied the statement attributed to him.

The governor's appeal to the president said that the situation had arisen over activities of the Ku-Klux klan.

GUNMEN FLOCK TO SEE STRIFE.

Noted Plainsmen of Oklahoma's Early Days at Capitol.

BY PAUL R. LEACH.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 26.—Not many soldiers were in sight outside the capitol building to-day, but nearly 100 of them, with almost as many officers as enlisted men, stood about on the fourth floor, where the session chambers are located. Outside the east door and within the corridors strolled alone many men in great stetson hats, with decided bulges at their waistbands—the governor's gunmen in plain clothes, they are called.

Hundreds of curious townsfolk, released from work, since this is a half-holiday, Oklahoma day at the state fair, would have gone into the statehouse to see the ruckus. But they were told to move on, reminded that the state of Oklahoma is under martial law, and that general orders forbade congregating in public places.

There are said to be a hundred or more of the governor's gunmen in town, ready to throw lead wherever desired, at the zero hour, or thereafter.

Whether there are a hundred of them cannot be verified, but a lot of the old timers who are alive to-day because they packed at least one gun—some of them two—and knew how to use the things, really are here. Several of them came in from the plains last night, picturesque in their three-gallon hats, their cow-man walk, their quiet blue or gray eyes, and their straggly, long mustaches. The Oklanoma gunman is somewhat different from the Chicago gunman. Here the gunman is the sort from which movies and "hair-on-the-chest" short stories are made.

For instance, there is Col. Zack Mulhall of Mulhall, friend of Roosevelt, plainsman in this state since '79, born in a prairie schooner, ardent supporter of Jack Walton. Col. Mulhall invited four newspaper correspondents to his room in the Huckins hotel for a drink of something into which he put lemon juice—and stirred it with the barrel of his old forty-five Colt. There are no notches on that gun. The colonel said he wouldn't mark up a good gun that way. But he is entitled to several notches, his best friends say for him.

Pawnee Bill on the Job.

Then there is Pawnee Bill. Who hasn't heard of Pawnee Bill, Wild West show man, Indian scout, plainsman? His real name is Gordon Lillie and he wears a hat similar to Mulhall's and the prettiest boots you ever laid eyes on.

Then there is Frank Canton. Canton says he is here just as a spectator, but he would be disgraced if he died in a bed. He has many notches on his gun, won when adjutant-general of the state some years ago. The Seminole Indians rioted because of the draft in the early days of 1917 and instead of calling out the militia and declaring martial law, Canton was sent down alone. He settled the uprising, also alone.

Then there is Buck Garrett of Ardmore, sheriff of that county when Clara Smith Hamon was acquitted there. He is of the more recent generation, but they say he swings a wicked six gun, and is entitled to notches—some say four, some say ten. Bill Durant of Durant, once a chief of the Choctaw nation, former speaker of the house, now an employe in the land office, likewise, is here, but Bill says he is a spectator, and, besides, he has not carried a gun for years and years.

One of Pershing's 100 Heroes.

Nash Millikin is here, too. Nash hails from Marietta and is also of the younger generation. He was one of Gen. Pershing's personally picked 100 heroes out of the world war. They say he can shoot the eye out of a gnat at ninety yards.

These spectacular ones are seen on the streets or visited in their hotel rooms. Seen talking to them are other grim-looking men with three-gallon hats, some of them with trousers over their boots. They are pleasant and affable men to talk to, tell some whacking good yarns when you can start them, and they say that they just happen to be in town.

Best Physical Clash.

Russell it was who precipitated the first physical clash since the troops came to the capital. He was circulating hand bills picturing the governor as a man drunk with power and military rule. He was knocked down by R. A. Clark, son of a former police chief here. It was understood he was brought before the court to ascertain whether his circular would intend to incite riot and inflame public opinion.

Adjt. Gen. E. H. Markham flew over from Tulsa in an airplane today and went into conference with Col. Key on the military situation. It is not probable that general headquarters will be moved from Tulsa to Oklahoma City.

Gov. Walton is under protection of special guards, threats having been made against his life.

James Mathers, former county attorney of Ardmore and an associate of former Sheriff Buck Garrett of Ardmore, who is now chief of state special agents, reached here with 14 men said to be special guards under personal direction of the governor, but over whom the military officers have no jurisdiction.

Tonight Company H, National Guards, located at Frederick, Okla., was being mobilized under orders from the governor to be ready to move on 10 minutes' notice.

Civil Authority Superceded by Military as Statewide Martial Law Begins to Creep Over Oklahoma—First Violence Results in Promise of Controversy Over Grand Jury—Fiery Cross Blazes

9-17-23

Associated Press Report.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 16.—Statewide martial law took a definite form tonight when Oklahoma City, leading the way for the remainder of the State, passed under the virtually complete control of the military.

The first disorder growing out of the imposition of martial law here occurred tonight when Campbell Russell, former chairman of the State corporation commission, and a bitter political opponent of Governor J. C. Walton, was knocked down in front of a downtown hotel, by Leo Clark, son of W. J. Clark, former Oklahoma City chief of police under the governor's administration as mayor of the city.

Russell, who circulated a petition which resulted in the calling of a special grand jury to investigate alleged misuse of State funds by the governor, was distributing pamphlets attacking the executive's decree of Statewide martial law when he became engaged in a controversy with Clark.

Both men were taken to the police station by regular police and released. Russell preferred charges of assault against Clark. Several score persons witnessed the clash.

Forbid Grand Jury Meet.

The grand jury, which Russell succeeded in having called for Monday, was forbidden tonight by military authorities.

When informed of the intention of the military to prevent the grand jury's meeting, District Judge George W. Clark asserted that the jury would be convened and that the military authorities could then order its adjournment.

"The grand jurors will meet," Judge Clark declared. "The governor may deliver his order. Then I shall see what can be done about it."

Across the street from the court house a machine gun, mounted on the roof of a restaurant, is trained on the windows of the grand jury room.

General orders embodying the essential regulations under which the State capital will live during the suspension of civil authority, were issued by Lieutenant Colonel W. S. Key, in command of local troops.

Streets and highways of Oklahoma county in which Oklahoma City is located, must be cleared between midnight and 5 a. m., according to the order. Persons whose employment make it necessary for them to be abroad during the interval between these hours must obtain passes. Carrying of firearms is forbidden unless by virtue of permission by the commanding officers. Sale of firearms and ammunition is also prohibited.

Plan Indignation Meetings.

Public assemblages called "for the purpose of creating opposition to the enforcement of martial law" are banned, as is also publication of articles having a tendency "to incite to riot or violence or obstruction of the military."

Order governing the conduct of business, operation of public untilities and agencies that "contribute to the welfare of the people" will be issued from time to time as the situation warrants, according to Lieutenant Colonel Key.

Simultaneous with the issuance of the general orders it was announced at military headquarters that a special district court grand jury scheduled to meet Monday to investigate alleged misuse of State funds by Governor J. C. Walton would not be convened.

Brigadier General Alva J. Niles, who assumed direction of the martial law enforcement in Oklahoma City last night, pending the arrival of Lieutenant Colonel Keys, surrendered command to the latter today.

Early tonight machine guns were mounted around the city hall, the police station and the county court house in Oklahoma City.

Supervision of the Sheriff's office was assumed by the military, but Sheriff Tom Cavnar was not removed. No other county offices was taken over. A report that the Ku Klux Klan had removed all files from its State headquarters here to a place outside the State was current, but the headquarters were deserted and the report could not be confirmed.

Crowds that braved a steady rain milled about the streets watching the few manifestations late in the day of the military occupation. They were not molested by the guards.

Fiery Cross Blazes.

While machine guns frowned on strategic centers here tonight and officers of the Oklahoma National Guard completed plans for putting the city under complete martial rule pursuant to a proclamation of Governor J. C. Walton, in which he announced the intention to drive the Ku Klux Klan from the State, a huge electric cross, nearly 30 feet high, blazed from the top of a downtown building, the symbol of the klan.

The cross was erected recently by the klan when it became apparent that the governor was directing his military action against that organization. Similar crosses, it was announced, were erected in other cities of the State.

Observers tonight saw the possibility of serious financial difficulties in the way of the governor's military program. The last legislature appropriated $1,000,000 for the extraordinary protection fund of the State this year. It is known, however, that the governor has established from this fund the secret service organization with which he investigated conditions in the State prior to the martial move. It is believed that this organization, which is extensive, will make necessary the expenditure of virtually all this amount.

The executive department was allowed $200,000 for a deficiency fund. Of this amount only $80,000 remains unexpended. A. S. J. Shaw, State treasurer, has announced that he will not approve deficiency warrants when the $200,000 limit is reached.

Governor Addresses Hot Telegram to Editor

Houston, Tex.

9-17-23

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Sept. 16.—The editor of the Muskogee Daily Phoenix tonight made public the following telegram which he received tonight from Governor J. C. Walton, governor of Oklahoma.

"E. K. Bixby,
"Editor Muskogee Daily Phoenix,
"Muskogee, Okla.

"I understand your yellow paper of issue of September 15 made statement if I went to Okmulgee I would be whipped. You are hereby advised I leave tonight for Okmulgee and will be in that city several hours Monday unaccompanied or unassited by any troops. I am sending editor of Okmulgee Democrat copy of this also advising him of my proposed visit there and asking him to give same publication. Please publish in prominent place on front page of your contemptible periodical.

"Jack Walton, Governor."

In making public the telegram; Bixby declared that his newspaper had made no statement to the effect that if the governor went to Okmulgee he would be whipped. "Friday was Governor's day at the Mid-Continent Jubilee, held in Okmulgee," he said, "and the governor was to have been an honored guest. He did not appear. The next morning the Phoenix published a news story, emanating from what it considered a reliable source, that several members of the Ku Klux Klan had made arrangements to flog him if he arrived."

There was no evidence of martial law in Muskogee tonight. Headquarters company of the 180th infantry, stationed here, is in Tulsa. Armories of a machine gun company, a motorcycle corps and a battery of heavy artillery all are dark. While officers of the units decline to discuss military subjects, members declare that they received orders to be in readiness.

Late tonight no military censor had appeared at the office of the Muskogee Daily Phoenix. Dr. A. E. Davenport, State health officer, in delivering the governor's ultimatum Friday night to C. C. Lydick, secretary of the chamber of commerce, threatened the Phoenix with a censorship that would "not be a circumstance to what he did to the Tulsa Tribune."

To Investigate Everything About His Regime.

10-15-23

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—At least a full week of intensive investigation, with possibly every member assigned to some committee, faced the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature tonight.

Preliminary details virtually complete, the house was ready to begin tomorrow the real work of its impeachment program looking to the trial before the senate of all elective state officials who may be found delinquent.

Will Look Into Everything.

It is expected that special committees will be named, probably tomorrow, to investigate the state penitentiary, the state reformatory and other institutions. One committee has already left Oklahoma City to conduct an inquiry at an unannounced place, and a general committee to check the records of all state departments has gotten well into its work.

Heads of every bank in the city have been before this committee. Aldrich Blake and Dr. E. T. Bynum, deposed executive councilor and state bank commissioner, respectively, have also been questioned.

Alleged Reason for Publicity.

Thus far committee sessions have been private, but a movement has appeared in the house to make all hearings public.

Political foes of Gov. J. C. Walton have challenged this attempt as coming from his followers who, they say, seek information as to the investigation of his office in order to prepare a defense should a bill of impeachment be drawn against him.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 25.—Federal buildings in Oklahoma will be barred to members of the State legislature for their proposed special session, Governor J. C. Walton was advised tonight in a telegram from Bascom C. Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge.

"Use of federal buildings for purposes other than business of the United States government is contrary to regulations," Secretary Slemp telegraphed Governor Walton.

The telegram added that the custodian of the Oklahoma City federal building had been instructed not to permit the building to be used for "any unauthorized purpose."

Houston, Tex.

Associated Press Report.

OKLAHAMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 25.—A general order was issued by Adjutant General B. H. Markham forbidding the convening Wednesday of a special session of the State house of representatives, was served late today on house members gathering here for the session.

As the order was served, each member asked if he was being served as an individual or as a legislator. Upon being told the service was in their capacity as legislators, each asked the name of Major J. J. McCartney, in charge of the service detail, and then took the names of witnesses to the service. This was regarded as indicating that the way was being paved for court action to test the adjutant general's authority.

Thirty-five thousand men in the State have volunteered for service in the Oklahoma national guard during the legislative crisis, Governor Walton announced tonight.

The executive made it plain, however, that he anticipated no necessity for calling the volunteers to duty.

More Guardsmen Coming.

Another unit of guardsmen will be brought to Oklahoma City early tomorrow to aid troops already stationed here in blocking the called session of the legislature at noon, the governor added. Because of the military censorship over troop movements, Governor Walton declined to say what battery had been called.

The executive made light of reports that there would be bloodshed and violence when the legislators attempt to meet tomorrow.

"Why, I could take a cap pistol and drive all of those fellows into the Red river," the governor said jocularly. "I don't think there will be the least bit of violence."

Copies of the adjutant general's order were posted on the house and senate doors.

Despite its issuance the opinion gained strength tonight that the stage had been set for the attempt tomorrow to convene the extraordinary session, at which opponents of Governor J. C. Walton have promised to seek his impeachment.

Authoritative sources which could not be revealed expressed the belief that a "gentlemen's agreement" would prevent any danger of bloodshed.

It was indicated that the refusal of the military to give the legislators access to the chamber would involve nothing more than the formality of a guard officer informing the house members that they were not permitted to enter the doors.

Expect Arrests.

Then, it is believed the representatives will leave the capitol, later assembling at some unannounced location where they will convene and where some of their number probably will be arrested.

This maneuver, it is believed would be intended to prevent a public spectacle which might invite violence by onlookers not identified with the guard.

It is believed that guard officers even may be informed of the intended location for the second convening. Reports that he had stated that he knew of no reason why the legislature should not meet in the United States district court room in the federal building were denied tonight by Federal Judge John H. Cotteral.

"We stand where we have always stood; we will meet pursuant to our signed call," Representative W. D. McBee of Stephens county, in charge of the session plans, said tonight.

"Wednesday noon will find us at the capitol unarmed and unguarded."

Plans for holding a caucaus tonight to organize the house were cancelled, the legislators deciding to wait until the body is regularly convened before electing officers.

Charles S. Brice of McAlester, speaker pro tempore, will call the session to order, it is understood. Election of a regular speaker and adoption of a resolution vacating the organization elected during the last regular session will follow, it is expected.

9-26-23

The General's Order.

The adjutant general's order forbidding the session follows:

"Special Order No. 158: Pursuant to a special executive military order issued by J. C. Walton, governor of Oklahoma, as the commander in chief of the military forces of said State, addressed to the undersigned, Baird H. Markham, adjutant general, forbidding the gathering or assembling in a pretended session of any or all of the members of the legislature at the State house in Oklahoma City at 12 o'clock noon on September 26, 1923, or at any other time or place within the State during the present period of unrest on the grounds that such gathering or meeting is an unlawful assembly in violation of the provisions of the constitution and the laws and calculated to bring about a reign of anarchy and bloodshed, now, therefore, I, Baird H. Markham, as adjutant general under the order above named hereby forbid such meeting at the legislative halls in the State capitol on the date named above or at any other time or place within the State while the said order is in effect. Any attempt to hold such meeting or session of the legislature under the present conditions will constitute a violation of both the civil and military law now in force in this county and State and such attempted meeting or session will be dispersed.

"(Signed.) Baird H. Markham."

Telegram Appeals To Coolidge 'in Behalf of Americanism'

Houston, Tex.

Associated Press Report.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 25.—President Coolidge and attorney General Daugherty were appealed tonight by Governor J. C. Walton to use their good offices to prevent members of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature from convening in any federal building in the State.

In a telegram sent the president and the attorney general, Governor Walton said that the afternoon newspapers stated that permission to use the federal court room here for the proposed assembly had been granted by Federal District Judge John H. Cotteral.

Newspaper men called to the executive's attention the fact that Judge Cotteral had denied the statement attributed to him in a local newspaper that he saw no reason why the legislators could not assemble in the United States district court room.

Plan Rumored. 9-26-23

"Well, such a plan has been rumored at any rate," Walton replied.

"If the legislators meet on federal property then the government has the baby on its hands to raise," the governor said.

The telegram dispatched by the executive to President Coolidge and the attorney general follows:

"Unmentionable mutilations have been inflicted upon numerous citizens of this State, and scores of others have been taken from their homes at night and beaten and flogged in a most unmerciful way. This State is now under martial law by proclamation issued by me and military courts are now sitting in Tulsa and in Oklahoma City investigating these barbarous acts.

"These courts have taken testimony much of it coming from the lips of klansmen themselves, showing that each and all these atrocities have been committed by members of the so-called Knights of the Ku Klux Klan or the Invisible government or the Invisible Empire. I have authentic information showing that a great majority of the members of the house of representatives of the Oklahoma legislature are members of the so-called invisible government. These klan members of the house constituting a majority of its membership in collusion with high klan officials are attempting to hold a session in Oklahoma City with the avowed determination of impeaching me and thereby halting my investigating and prevent subsequent exposures which will show the inner workings of this un-American mob organization, known as the Ku Klux Klan.

Meeting Illegal. 9/26/23

"A meeting of the legislature of this State or any branch of it in extra session without the call of the governor is unlawful and unauthorized by the constitution and laws of this State. The only purpose of this unlawful assembly is to further complicate matters and give aid and comfort to the klan.

"I will not permit this assemblage in the capitol and the afternoon newspapers state that permission to use the federal court room here for its meeting has been granted by Judge John N. Cotteral, judge of the Western district of Oklahoma.

"In view of the conditions existing in this State at this time and in the light of exposures already made and given to the American public, I appeal to you in the name of the people of Oklahoma and true Americanism to use your good offices to prevent this unlawful assemblage in any federal building in this State."

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-ONE FLOGGING CASES ARE SHOWN

Montgomery Advertiser

STORY OF MERCHANT WHIPPED SUNDAY REVIEWED BEFORE MILITARY COURT

Pasture Near Tulsa, Oklahoma Lashing Grounds, Declares Witness; Woman Says She Was Given "More Than Twenty Lashes"

9-23-23

TULSA, OKLA., September 22.—A story of a merchant whipped with the lash on a Sunday night following his seizure by masked men as he walked home from church with his wife, was told in a record of the military commission of Tulsa county made public tonight through the Associated Press.

Assertions that county civil officers ignored the identification of whippers by those who suffered were heard today by the military court.

The Anderson pasture on the Jenks road between Tulsa and Broken Arrow was mentioned as the scene of many floggings.

When the military commission adjourned for dinner tonight, a total of 121 cases of personal violence had been bared since its investigation began here August 14, following Governor J. C. Walton's declaration of martial law throughout the country.

The testimony of B. M. McLendon, a former school superintendent of Alsuma relating the story of the Sunday night whipping of J. S. Lawhorn, a Jenks merchant, on June 4, 1922, told of the whipping ground, mentioned the gate which frequently was guarded and described the whip which was carried in the machine known to have often led the way to the secluded spot.

"This strap," the witness said in describig the whip applied to Lawhorn, "was about four inches wide, about three feet long and has a bolt in the handle, wrapped with tape—regular car tape—with about seven or eight or ten slits about five or six inches long in the end."

Women Are Witnesses.

Several women who have appeared before the military in the past two days told of personal experience with floggers. One young married woman who was accompanied to the military headquarters by her husband without summons, told of how sh. had been given "more than twenty lashes" by a masked band, none of whom she could name.

Lawhorn, who was a leader in a movement in Jenks to have several teachers in the county school investigated as to their fitness and training, was said by McLendon to have withdrawn his name from a public petition seeking that end after his experience in the darkness of the June Sabbath.

M. T. Moore and W. W. Wilcox, of Tulsa, were named by McLendon as two men connected with the Lawhorn case.

McLendon's statement was sworn to before a notary public and later was made the basis of a military information filed against Moore.

It mentioned by name a "Mr. Meriwether," who, when told of Lawhorn's activities in the school affair, declared according to the testimony he had told, "that—to stay away from that school meeting; this makes the second time that this information has come up here against Mr. Lawhorn and—it is my orders that you get him."

This statement was made by Meriwether on June 3, McLendon testified.

Since martial law was proclaimed in Tulsa county, Meriwether has not been within the reach of the military, whose intelligence officers are now near Los Angeles, California, in quest of him.

Invited to Participate.

McLendon set forth in his statement that he had been invited to participate in the whipping party, but was prevented by an unexplained cause.

"I was asked to attend this party, and to be at Moore's at 4 o'clock p. m., or to meet them at the gate directly west of the Union Consolidate school, at Alsuma at 9 o'clock in the evening," he said.

"The nearest I remember one Friday night before the whipping happened on Sunday, June 4, I was asked by M. T. Moore if I wished to go out on a party, and the next time I was asked to attend this party was on Sunday.

At nine o'clock in the evening they were to make their arrival with Mr. Lawhorn from Jenks. If I was at this gate, I was to flash lights and they would be answered by two lights. This was the signal Mr. Moore asked me to give and he would inform the others that I was one of the parties guarding the gate.

"I didn't go and knew nothing of the whipping that night. However, the next morning I was at Hans Anderson's a neighbor, and he was talking of the whipping that some fellow had gotten that lived at Jenks. On Monday night of the same week I was at a meeting where Mr. Moore and W. W. Wilcox had a conversation about the whipping of Lawhorn from Jenks.

"Mr. Wilcox had just come from Jenks and was very much excited as he thought there were two cars following him from Jenks and were thought to be driven by Mr. Lawhorn's friends, so he stated. Mr. Moore asked Mr. Wilcox if he had caused very much of a disturbance in Jenks and if he thought Mr. Lawhorn would follow it up.

Afraid of Probe.

"According to Wilcox he believed Mr. Lawhorn would be afraid to make an investigation and that he would follow out all the requirements of the party, as he had already taken his name off the petition to hold up teachers' salaries for investigation. They discussed the meeting at Jenks as to the proceedings of taking Mr. Lawhorn.

"Mr. Wilcox said that he located Mr. Lawhorn ard wife in church and showed the men of the party that lived out of Jenks Mr. Lawhorn and his wife; and after Mr. Lawhorn left the church Mr. Wilcox again pointed him out from behind a partition back in the dark where he was hid.

"After the men of the party had gotten Mr. Lawhorn, Mr. Wilcox said he went back to his home, changed suits and hat in three minutes, and was back on the street investigating as to why all the disturbance.

"Mr. Wilcox said that after he had gone through the crowd and let them see that he was still in town and na one of the party that had Mr. Lawhorn, he went to Charlie Easterday's Ford coupe where Charlie Easterday was waiting and they proceeded to the party

"Mr. Wilcox said that he and Charlie Easterday caught up with those that had gone with Mr. Lawhorn a short way from Jenks.

"Mr. Moore and Mr. Wilcox talked of the whipping of Mr. Lawhorn and were laughing about the things that were said to Mr. Lawhorn and about his agreeing to withdraw his name from the petition on the following day; and that he had done what he agreed to that he did not have nerve enough to stand up behind his convictions when they applied the lash; that they gave Mr. Lawhorn several licks before they asked him to withdraw his name from the petition.

Begs For Chance.

"They talked of a certain man in the party who did the talking during the whipping, how he called Mr. Lawhorn—not fit to be called an American citizen; that Mr. Lawhorn begged them to give him a chance, and that they informed him that he had had a chance; that he didn't deserve the right to send his children to a school paid for by public taxes. Mr. Wilcox said that the boys from Jenks were glad to get revenge by having the right to do the whipping.

"Mr. Wilcox talked of Charlie Easterday, a fellow by the name of Leaf, Bruner, Cates and others that were present from Jenks. They also made mention of parties that came from Tulsa; I do not know their names."

K.K.K. Card and Gov. Jack Walton

9-22-23

Governor J. C. ("Jack") Walton of Oklahoma, is facing impeachment at the hands of the State Legislature for his use of troops in quelling the Ku Klux Klan. Above is shown a photographic reproduction of both sides of a membership card in the Ku Klux Klan, alleged by the Klansmen to be a record of the membership of Governor Walton.

While the card is made out in the Governor's name and bears correct details, he charges it was made out to embarrass him and that he never asked for membership and never accepted it.

9-27-23

Special To The News.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 24.—The first opportunity that J. H. Smitherman, well known and highly respected Negro of Tulsa, has had to tell the story to any constituted authority, of the atrocious acts of a masked crowd of men, said to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, perpertated toward him, was when he was called before the military court, appointed by Governor J. C. Walton, for the purpose of bringing to light the conduct of the Ku Klux Klan in the state of Oklahoma.

The court summoned Smitherman, who is a well known political leader of the state, to Oklahoma City and asked him for the facts concerning his having been kidnapped and greatly mistreated on the night of March 10, 1922. He told of having been summoned to his door on that night and when he opened the door, twelve men, eight of whom wore white masks, forced him into an automobile at the point of pistols and took him into the country where he was stripped of his clothing, handcuffed and tied to a tree, whereupon his captors accused him of registering negroes as democrats and advising them to vote against the city administration.

GIVEN A SEVERE BEATING

"After accusing me of "ungentlemanly conduct toward a white woman,'" said Smitherman in testifying before the court, "one of the men spit in my face, and two proceeded to beat me unmercifully. One would whip my naked back until he was exhausted and then another would whip me. Finally," Smitherman testified, "the man who spit in my face stuck a gun to my head and said 'I'm going to kill you,' but one of the unmasked men dissented, so they talked it over privately for a few minutes. Then the same man who wanted to kill me walked up to me, pulled a knife from his pocket and cut off my right ear.

TRIED TO MAKE HIM EAT EAR

He stuck the bleeding ear to my mouth and demanded that I eat it. I refused and he took the butt of the heavy whip which he held in his hand and beat me in the face with it until he was exhausted, all the time trying to make me eat my ear. They finally turned me loose and warned me to leave Tulsa and to leave Oklahoma or I would be killed by one of the twelve there."

ADMITTING VOTING DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Smitherman testified that he told his captors he had advised all the Negroes he could to register and vote the democratic ticket, because he himself was a democrat. "There was nothing else to do," he said he told the men. He said he denied the accusation concerning his conduct toward a white woman.

GOVERNOR WALTON'S COMMENT

In making public the story of Smitherman as related before the investigating court, Governor Jack Walton stated: "This is only one of the hundreds of such crimes committed which the civil authorities of this state refused to prosecute.

"I ask the people of this civilized world, in the presence of such testimony, if I was not justified in proclaiming martial law in the city of Tulsa?"

OKLAHOMA HOUSE BARS KLAN EXPOSE

Overwhelms Resolution to Expel Hooded Knights From Its Own Membership.

WALTON LOSES A POINT

10-16-23

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 15.—The House of Representatives of the Oklahoma Legislature, by a vote which was almost unanimous, refused today to consider a resolution calling for an investigation of the charge that a majority of the members of that Chamber are members of the Ku Klux Klan.

The measure was not even read. The Clerk had droned through the title, but the moment the meaning of the resolution was made clear, members in all parts of the House were shouting their objection. Many of them laughed loudly, while others, who made no effort to conceal their anger, were on their feet demanding the prompt and immediate death of the resolution.

Under the rules, the resolution would have remained on the table one day before it could be considered. But the House would not wait for that and a motion to suspend the rules, so as to bring the proposition before the House, immediately carried with a whoop, and was followed, not minutes, but seconds later by a motion to table it. This motion carried overwhelmingly. There was no roll call, merely a resounding chorus of loud noes, followed by a few feeble "ayes." That was the end of the proposal.

The resolution was introduced by Representatives Eastridge and White, of the Farmer Reconstruction League Organization, both of whom are reported to be in sympathy with Governor Walton. The motion to table was made by Representative Disney, Chairman of the committee which is investigating the charges against Governor Walton.

"I am not a member of the Klan, have never been and never will be," Mr. Disney, said. "And I made the motion to table bkecause, in my opinion, the whole thing was horse-play. White and Eastridge were perfectly well aware of that fact that the House will not expel a man simply because he is a member of the Klan. If the resolution had been debated we would have lost a whole doy and gained nothing. That was my sole and only reason for making the motion to table." Representatives White and Eastridge both declared that the resolution was offered in good faith as providing a way for the Legislature to purge itself of the charge that a majority of its members are members of and dominated by the Klan.

Text of the Resolution.

The measure read:

"Whereas, it is commonly reported that a majority of the members of the House of Representatives of the ninth Legislature belong to and hold membership in the Ku Klux Klan, and whereas members of the Ku Klux Klan have been convicted in the courts of our State, and the evidence leading to their conviction establishes the fact that the Ku Klux Klan is a lawless organization existing in violation of the laws and the Constitution of our State.

"And, Whereas, the Constitution guarantees religious liberty and freedom to every citizen of our State, and the various teachings of the Klan violate this provision of the Constitution; and

Whereas, the Constitution guarantees to the citizens of this State the equal protection of the law, regardless of race, color or previous condition of servitude; and the teachings of the Klan provide that only native-born, white, Protestant citizens should be recognized as qualified to engage in business and hold office in this State; and

Whereas, the Constitution of this State provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or the pursuit of happiness without due process of court, and that every person charged with violation of law shall be entitled to a fair and impartial trial, in open court by a jury of the land, and the rules and laws of the Klan, as enforced in this State, hold that the Klan has the right to secretly try and punish offenders in this respect, regardless of the constitution or law of the State;

"And whereas, it is reported that the oaths taken by Klansmen are in violation of the Constitution and law of the State and treasonable to the Government o fthe United States and the State of Oklahoma,

"Therefore be it Resolved, That the members of this House be investigated as to whether they are members of the Klan ,and if, upon investigation, it is established that any member of this House belongs to and is affiliated with the Klan that he be expelled from his office."

Walton Loses Grand Jury Fight.

The investigation of the charges against Governor Walton, certain members of the Legislature, other public officials, as well as the management of various departments is progressing rapidly and charges may be filed before the end of the week. This was the official statement from the committee room tonight.

Attorneys for Governor Walton appeared before Judge Clark in the Oklahoma County Court today and asked for the dismissal of a Grand Jury which Wednesday will begin an investigation of various charges involving the Walton Administration. Counsel for the Governor asserted that the jury had been drawn by three Jury Commissioners, all of whom, they alleged, are members of the Klan.

In the petition Governor Walton contended that L. O. Brocks, W. E. Fightmaster and D. R. Thompson, the Jury Commissioners, weer all members of a secret organization "known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, or the Invisible Empire," and that the petition for calling the jury had been circulated among "Klan members and others" by Campbell Russell, former Corporation Commissioner. Mr. Russell, the petition alleged, also was a member of the Klan.

Judge Clark refused to entertain the motion. He said that he did not believe the petition "has any place in the records of this court," as it argued for an indictment of the court, the Jury Commissioners and of the jurors, whose names have been placed in the jury box.

"An indictment preferred," Judge Clark continued, "by one who says he is informed and believes that his acts are to be investigated, and an indictment returned against him."

TEN ARRESTED IN KLAN-MOB RIOTING

The Atlanta Georgian 8-17-23

Two Shot, 62 Injured as Crowd of 1,000 Attacks Members After Meeting

Atlanta, Ga.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, August 16.—Ten arrests have been made by city and county authorities in connection with Wednesday night's riots and shooting between a crowd of local men and a delegation of visiting members of the Ku-Klux Klan.

This city was again quiet Thursday morning after an exciting night during which D. L. Gibson, klan leader, was shot in the neck, and John Di Sentis and Dominic Spinetti were badly wounded in a sensational revolver battle in Washington Street. Four automobiles, wrecked while they were parked near the heart of the city, were in garages Thursday morning.

FOUR HELD, ARMED.

Four East Liverpool men, W. W. Kelly, John Cole, Charles Marshall and Harold Green, were arrested about daybreak Thursday morning by police, who found them in a machine heavily armed. Charles Thompson and Homer Dodds, of this city, were placed under arrest for carrying concealed weapons. All are held on suspicion.

Dominic Spinetti and John Disentis are under guard in a local hospital and Frank Velta is in the county jail, all charged with shooting Gibson. Spinetti is shot in the shoulder and Disentis was shot through the left eye. Gibson claimed the men ambushed him near a railroad crossing and opened fire as he passed. He returned the fire and many shots were exchanged.

RUSH TO RESCUE.

Several machines carrying members of the klan from East Liverpool arrived here about 3 o'clock Thursday morning. The visiting klansmen stated that they came here to assist some of their number reported to have been in trouble. Finding everything quiet, they returned to East Liverpool before daybreak.

ENDS IN BATTLE.

The battle began when the klan meeting broke up at 10:45 o'clock Wednesday night. When the visiting klansmen filed from the hall to enter their waiting machines, a spokesman for the mob hailed the first man to enter his car, asking:

"Did you serve in the World War?"

"I certainly did," the klansman replied.

"Aren't you ashamed then to use our flag in this manner?" the spokesman queried, pointing to the Stars and Stripes draped over the front of the machine.

"No, indeed. I'm proud of it," was the answer.

Hot words ensued, and then a fist fight was begun. Twelve klansmen seated in the three leading machines suffered injuries inflicted by fists, sticks and stones.

QUELL FIGHTING.

Their cars were wrecked. Police and Sheriff's deputies, after more than three quarters of an hour, quelled the fighting.

Before the meeting the visiting klansmen numbering about 100, had paraded the downtown streets in 25 automobiles. Their cars were decorated with electrically illuminated crosses, and were decorated with the Stars and Stripes and klan insignia. The procession was headed by a band.

The procession drove to the klan hall, parked their machines and entered. While the meeting was in progress a large crowd gathered. In the general melee which followed, flags were torn from the cars and the illuminated crosses on practically all the machines were wrecked.

KLAN DEMANDS RESIGNATION OF MAYOR

Tense Situation Follows Rioting at Steubenville, Ohio—Another Man Is Shot.

Atlanta, Ga.

By International News Service.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, August 17.—Steubenville's klan war threatened to break out anew at an early hour Friday, when John Marvin, 22, miner, an alleged klansman, was found bleeding and unconscious after being shot twice by an unknown assailant. Marvin is reported in a critical condition in a local hospital.

Officials are of the belief that Marvin's alleged connection with the Ku Klux Klan caused the shooting. Marvin was returning home from work when he was shot from ambush.

Mayor Frank Hawkins, prosecutor Stanton Pearce and Sheriff Edward Lucas have ordered the suspension of all public meetings until the tension that now exists dies down. The authorities are dispersing gatherings on the street corners.

A large number of klansmen from other points in the state have arrived here and are conducting an investigation into the attack on the klan parade here Wednesday night.

County officials are of the opinion that the uprising by the anti-klan elements will not be continued as every effort is being made to force both sides to remain quiet.

Mayor Frank Hawkins was expected to reply today to the demand of the Ku Klux Klan made late Thursday that he resign his office for failure to prevent the riot Wednesday night in which one klansman was perhaps fatally shot, two other men wounded, one seriously and approximately 50 others injured. The klan charges that the riot was a result of lax law enforcement conditions and placed the responsibility directly upon the mayor, against whom they had waged an ineffective campaign to prevent his re-nomination in the primary election Tuesday.

Six klansmen arrested in an automobile headed towards Steubenville, armed with shotguns and revolvers, were free on bond, bail having been furnished late Thursday night by klansmen from outside points, following a meeting at Richmond, in which it was reported 1,000 members of the organization participated.

ALL SHOOT TO KLL TO STOP KLAN MARCH

Atlanta

Youngstown, Ohio, October 19.—Developments in the situation here in connection with the Ku Klux Klan and the mayoralty campaign today included a statement by J. J. McNicholas, acting chief of police, that if necessary his men will be ordered to shoot to kill to stop a proposed klan parade here.

Oct 20-23

McNicholas said late yesterday that he would not grant a permit for the klan parade scheduled here for November 1, that policemen would be ordered to disperse such a parade by peaceful means if possible and if persuasion failed would be told to shoot to kill.

KNIGHTS POURING INTO CITY

New York, N. Y.

Order Demands That the Mayor and Police Chief Resign for Lax Enforcement of Law.

Special to The New York Times.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Decision by the city and county authorities today to make a sweeping investigation into the trouble and the drifting into this city throughout the day of a continuous stream of Klansmen from Eastern Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia were the result of battles between a mob of 3,000 citizens and 100 members of the Ku Klux Klan last night and early this morning, when two men were fatally injured, several hurt and a number of automobiles wrecked.

At a late hour tonight it was announced that the Columbiana County Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will prosecute all persons implicated in last night's riot. This step is taken by the Klansmen from the neighboring county because Klansmen from East Liverpool were among those attacked by the mob. The announcement was made by Secretary R. E. Roberts, who charged that the attacking party "outnumbered the Klansmen more than 200 to 1 and set upon and beat the small handful of men unmercifully."

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan here have demanded the resignation of Mayor Hawkins and Chief of Police Carter, charging that lax enforcement of the law was responsible for last night's riots.

The most severely injured in last night's battles were D. L. Gibson, aged 3, a "dry" leader, who was shot in the back of the head near the base of the brain. He is expected to die. John de Santis, 26, one of Gibson's alleged assailants, lost his left eye when hit by a bullet, and Dominic Spinetti, 27, was shot through the left hand.

The battle began when the Klan meeting broke up at 10:4 last night after an argument between a member of the mob and one of the Klansmen over the use of the American flag which was draped over the front of the automobiles. Police reserves finally broke up the fight, which was resumed on a smaller scale again at 4:30 o'clock this morning. During the two fights twelve Klansmen suffered injuries of a more or less serious character.

Six men, Homer Dodd, Charles Thompson, W. W. Kelly, John Cole, Charles Marshall and Harold Greden, who stated that they were from East Liverpool and were members of the Klan, were arrested at 4:30 this morning while entering the city in an automobile. All were armed. Police say they came here to aid other clansmen.

A large force of deputies and the entire police force of the city is patrolling the streets tonight. Reports are that a monster meeting of Klansmen will be held either in the city or near here, and that hundreds of Klansmen who slipped quietly into the city today will be in attendance.

The following statement was issued from local headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan here tonight and signed "Officials of the Steubenville Klans, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan":

"Citizens of Steubenville were last night give[illegible] of the kind of people wh[illegible]ayor Hawkins's administra[illegible]

"Mayor [illegible]s re-nominated by the hoo[illegible]-raff, bootleggers, gamblers and [illegible]ire lawless element. and Steubenvi[illegible] being branded as the most corrupt a[illegible] lawless city in twenty States.

"The attacks on Klansmen last night were deliberately planned and premeditated. Automobiles were overturned and American flags, snatched from the machines, were torn to shreds and trampled.

"The entire police force, including the Chief, is not only friendly to this element but is antagonistic to the Klan and some of them have openly threatened members of the Klan.

"Because Mayor Hawkins has permitted his avaricious greed for power and office to pervert his mind and overbalance his reason, we publicly make known that he was one of the original members of the organization in Steubenville and was the first man banished therefrom, because he violated his oath of office and violated every promise he made to the people of tSeubenville.

"Because we feel that the outrages and crimes committed last night were a direct result of his being re-nominated we publicly brand him as a potential murderer and demand that he and his Chief of Police immediately resign.

"Citizens of Steubenville, for God's sake quit digging your own graves. Wake up to the fact that you are living in a dump hole of moral pollution and degeneracy. This city must be clean and the ~~damnable practices~~ witnessed last night must cease.

ALLEGED KLANSMEN ATTACKED BY MOB

The Constitution

Steubenville, Ohio, August 15.—A delegation of several hundred alleged members of the Ku Klux Klan, who came here from East Liverpool, Ohio and Wierton and Chester, W. Va., were attacked late tonight by a crowd of men numbering thousands after they had held a meeting in their local hall.

8-16-23

Occupants of an automobile were dragged from it and beaten up and their car, after being disabled, shoved into a side street. Other automobiles were overturned and their occupants maltreated.

The disorder continued for more than an hour and was carried on in an area of an entire city block in the downtown section.

Police who went to the scene became part of the crowd and were unable to make any headway to restore peace.

Atlanta Ga.

Sheriff Lucas and 15 deputies responded to a riot call. After 40 minutes of disorder police and county authorities restored order and rescued a number of those who had been assaulted.

Darwin L. Gibson, said to be an officer in the Ku Klux Klan here was fired upon and seriously wounded while driving through the city early this morning. Several shots were fired into his machine, one striking Gibson on the head. The shooting occurred a short time after the demonstration against the klan here last night.

Kluxer Says Klan Is Negroes' Friend

The Amsterdam News. 8-15-23

W. J. Simmons Says So Himself in Speech.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 13.—Every Negro in the United States has a right to his or her opinion, but W. J. Simmons seems to think most Negroes have the wrong conception of the fundamental plan and purpose of the Ku Klux Klan. Here is what he says:

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are the greatest friends the Negro race has ever had; they are wholly without racial prejudice or intolerance of creed; they seek only to maintain the supremacy of the white race and to inspire patriotism."

Thus said William Simmons, emperor and founder of the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan, in an address here last Thursday night before a large number of Klansmen.

"To keep the Negro in his place is our intention, not to kill him or drive him out of the country. We expect to see that he is properly treated and that he is properly cared for, but he must stay in his place.

New York

"The Klan has only exercised the privilege of any organization in this country in restricting its membership. The order has no prejudices against any race or creed. It simply stands for a principle. It aims to make immortal the heritage that came to us from the palms of our noble ancestors."

WARREN, Ohio, Oct. 18—Boys, "playing Ku Klux Klna," seized Cyril Stoddart, 10 year old son of M. H. Stoddart, as he was leaving home, bound and gagged him, dragged him half a block and tied him to a pole.

The boy was unable to free himself or to summon aid and was obliged to stay there until his captors returned hours later and released him.

Stoddart staggered home and informed his parents. He then collapsed and now is in a serious condition.

According to the story told by the boy to his parents and the police, the gang that seized him numbered a half dozen and all wore masks. As soon as the boys loosened the ropes that held him to the pole, he said they ran away. Police are working on the case.

Says Constant Efforts Are Made to Abridge Constitutional Guarantees

CINCINNATI, OHIO., Oct. 17.—The preservation of parochial schools as the foundation of Catholicism in America and their protection from those who would abolish them, has been the theme of most of the addresses delivered at the convention of the National Council of Catholic Men in session here.

Timothy S. Hogan, former attorney-general of Ohio, speaking before the convention today charged that there are constantly recurring attempts both at Washington and in almost every state in the Union to enact legislation hostile to the Catholics and laws that would prevent the members of that faith from enjoying full rights as citizens.

"I mention this because I wish that certain organizations who are proclaiming themselves 100 per cent American, who profess to conform their actions to the fundamental law of the land and who think they have a first mortgage upon the American flag would give some heed to that part of the preamble of the American constitution which looks to insuring democratic tranquillity.

"I am unwilling to believe that the American people will stand for any abolition of any private or parochial schools. We need only bring argument based on sound reasons before legislative assemblies to protect our schools"

KLAN EMPEROR WIRES LLOYD GEORGE SUPPORT

The N. Y. Times

Simmons Says He Works for Anglo-Saxon Unity, Not League of Nations.

10-24-23

CLEVELAND, Oct. 23 (Associated Press).—Appreciation of the plan outlined by David Lloyd George "for harmonizing and unifying Great Britain and the United States in purpose and ideals" is expressed in a telegram received by the former British Premier today from Atlanta and signed by "William Joseph Simmons, Emperor of the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan." The telegram read:

"May I not tender to you my deep appreciation of the plan outlined for harmonizing and unifying Great Britain and the United States in purpose and ideals. The order of which I have the honor to be the founder and responsible head, and composed of millions of native-born white Protestant citizens of this country, has as a part of its program of service the unification of the two white English-speaking nations of the world.

"Neither the League of Nations nor the International Court can accomplish the ends so earnestly desired. A simple compact between sovereign nations dissimilar in color, creed and ideals cannot be maintained. The International Court cannot coerce and restrain the nations of the earth into righteous and amicable relations.

"Your country and my country must be linked together by the ties of blood, of sympathy, of common destiny to preserve our Anglo-Saxon civilization and to safeguard the world against recurrence of war. In any event, Great Britain and the United States must be united in the deeper and finer things of democracy and determined that white men shall never engage in war against white me nywhere upon the face of the earth."

A cablegram was also received from David Gilpin, Lord Mayor of Sydney, inviting the former Premier to visit Australia. The message said:

"At a meeting of citizens of Sydney, presided over by myself, I was directed in a resolution moved by W. M. Hughes to invite you to visit Australia as the guest of its citizens. On your acceptance all transport and entertainment arrangements will be made."

In reply Mr. Lloyd George expressed appreciation and added merely that he was "unable at the moment to specify a definite date."

KU KLUX IS ASSAILED BY MRS. WINSBOROUGH

Atlanta Constitution

Columbus, Ohio, December 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—The greatest menace to better relations between the negro and whites is the Ku Klux Klan, Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, of St. Louis, superintendent of the Women's auxiliary of the Presbyterian church in the United States (south), declared in an address today before the meeting of the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches.

She asserted it is "organized anarchy," breaking up homes, terrorizing communities, torturing and slaying victims and accomplishing its diabolical purposes with covered faces." She continued: 12-14-23

"The evil which is today the greatest menace to inter-racial good-will is the Ku Klux Klan. That organization, known as the 'Invisible Empire,' under the guise of patriotism, is sowing seeds of race hatred, lawlessness and anarchy which, if not checked, will strike at the very life of our government itself. I come from a denomination which does not sanction a union of churches and state which does not intermingle politics and religion. Were the Ku Klux Klan only a political organization we might remain silent. However, important as is the political side of its activity, there is a moral and religious side which it would seem cannot be overlooked by the Christian people of America.

"Organized Anarchy."

"This organization combines all the evils which the church has been decrying for many years. Mob violence, in its naked reality is unlovely enough to repel honest men, but the Ku Klux Klan clothes mob law under the guise of benefaction. It is organized anarchy, breaking up homes, terrorizing communities, torturing and slaying its victims and accomplishing its diabolical purposes with covered faces.

"While persecuting the race from which Our Master came, they have adopted the cross as their symbol and saddest of all, have enlisted among their followers thousands of those who profess to be followers of the lowly Nazarene who came to bring peace to the world and who called all men his brethren.

"This organization is reaching its terrible tentacles into every state in the union. The time for inaction has passed. If this monster is to be crushed it must be done by the Christian people of America."

J. J. Eagan, Chairman.

The last twelve months have made a golden year in the lynching record of the country, it was declared in a statement presented to the afternoon session of the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churchs today by its commission on race relations. Indications are that 1923 will have only half as many lynchings as 1922, according to the report.

J. J. Eagan, of Atlanta, Ga., is chairman of the commission, and W. W. Alexander, of Atlanta, and Dr. George E. Haynes, of New York, are secretaries.

The statement presented by the commission told of the education against lynching carried on by the churches, of the remarkable cooperation given by the press of the country, not only in the south, but also in the north, and said that in the first six months of 1923 there were only fourteen lynchings in the United States, thirteen of them being negroes. In the first six months of 1922 there were thirty lynchings, and in the first six months of 1921 there were 33.

The total figures for the last six months are not available. Dr. Haynes said, but those at hand show that the number will be well under half of the fifty-seven lynchings which were carried on in 1922, unless some great outbreak occurs.

Dr. Haynes told of the conference held during the year of the progress made in bringing about inter-racial good-will and understanding in many cities, including St. Lous, Chicago, Toledo, Buffalo, Johnstown, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsbug, Cincinnati, Dayton, Cleveland, Youngstown, Indianapolis, Wichita, Kansas City and Hartford.

The report calls upon the churches to continue their work for inter-racial good-will and declared that the racial problems of the country can only be settled on Christian principles and ideals. In telling of its plan for 1924, the committee holds out the hope that by the churches marshaling their forces the lynching evil may be completely eliminated from national in another year.

500 Outrages In Texas Laid At Klan Doors

Atlanta Constitution

Cleveland, Ohio, December 4.—Declaring that the real object of the Ku Klux Klan is to set itself up as an invisible political organization bent on the establishment of an "invisible autocracy," Major A. W. Dalrymple, of Fort Worth, Texas, in an address before the chamber of commerce today, urged the formation of a national non-partisan, non-religious anti-klan organization to fight the klan.

Describing activities of the klan in Texas Major Dalrymple declared that the organization was responsible for 500 cases of tarring and feathering, mutilation and hanging in that state. He declared there had been 83 cases of whipping or tarring and feathering in Fort Worth, 65 in Dallas and 40 in Houston. 12-5-23

"The klan has taken over and controls the police force, courts and government in Fort Worth and Dallas, and is about evenly divided with its enemies in Houston, but they have not brought one of these offenders to justice," Major Dalrymple said.

"The only reason that men are not tarred and feathered, whipped and driven from their homes and deprived of their constitutional rights in Ohio is because the klan is not strong enough. When it is as strong here as it is in Texas those things will come."

Klan Claims 700,000 Members in Ohio and Hopes Soon to Dominate the State.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Political observers in Ohio were taking stock today of the influence of the Ku Klux Klan in Ohio as manifested in yesterday's municipal elections. Klan endorsed candidates were generally successful. There were only a few exceptions, but in Steubenville, where rioting occurred a few months ago when Klansmen invaded that city, Frank Hawkins, the anti-Klan candidate, was successful.

An anti-Klan organization was formed to combat the hooded organization in Steubenville, but generally throughout the State formation of anti-Klan organizations have been discouraged, particularly among Catholics, on the theory that the Klan movement is only a temporary wave and that it will soon subside. Attempts to organize the American Unity League, an organization designed to combat race and religious prejudice, have not succeeded to any great extent in the State because of the counsel of churchmen against anti-Klan movements.

Politicians, however, profess to see in the Klan victories in Ohio a continuation of the Klan's activities into the next State and Presidential compaign a year from now.

Klan victories in most cases were Republican victories, although many of the municipal officers elected with Klan support classify themselves as independents.

Organize at Youngstown Dinner —Kahler of Cleveland Is Reported Boomed for Governor.

N. Y. Times

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 9.—An organization of the Mayors-elect of Ohio, who received the support of the Ku Klux Klan in Tuesday's election, was formed at a dinner in Youngstown yesterday, it was announced here today by E. A. Watkins, campaign manager for Charles F. Scheible, Mayor-elect of Youngstown. The purpose of the organization, he said, is to "clean up the whole Mahoning Valley."

Members of the organization are J. H. Marshall of Warren; W. D. Cunningham of Girard; Harvey C. Kistler of Niles; Hans P. Johnson of Struthers, and Mr. Scheible, Watkins said.

Scheible, Watkins and D. E. Glosner, former Kleagle of the Youngstown Klan, were closeted with Mayor Fred Kohler of Cleveland, for an hour and a half late today. 11-10-23

Although it was denied after the conference that politics had been discussed or that the Klan was mentioned, speculation was rife that Mayor Kohler might be offered the Klan endorsement in a race for Governor. The visit, Watkins said, was "merely a friendly one," and added that Scheible wanted to discuss with Kohler the problems to be met in running a city.

OHIO BARS K. K. K. FILMS

Movie Censors Make War Also On Long Kisses, Bare Legs, Transparent Clothes and Jokes on Preachers

1-19-23. Afro American Baltimore Md

Ohio has had a motion picture censorship law for a decade. In years gone by it was only a name; now it is anathema to those producers and distributors who wish to unload upon the State their salacious trash under the high-sounding and impressive slogan, for advertising, of "million dollar features."

Censorship in Ohio has cost the industry millions. A charge of $1 is made for each reel of 1,000 feet or less censored and no film can be shown unless it has received the approval of the censors. From 20 to 50 reels are reviewed daily; eliminations are ordered in probably an average of 10 per cent; some are returned with instructions to be revised or reconstructed; some are rejected entirely.

JOKES ON PREACHERS ELIMINATED

Here is a typical order of the censors:

"Cut out all scenes of minister represented as a comic character marrying couple and all scenes of bee stinging minister on head and his head swelling."

Not so many months ago, the country was entertained by newspapers and photogravure sections of Sunday papers picturing "the most beautiful legs in the world," showing a petite feminine visitor to America. Of course she was screened and the pictures shown in many States. But not in Ohio. The censors rejected this so-called feature. It is one of the commonplaces of the silver sheet to show women with as little clothing as possible. Clothing is a requirement of the Ohio censors in approval of pictures.

KU KLUX BARRED

Pictures displaying too much of the human anatomy, bootlegging, girls smoking cigarettes, long passionate embraces, gatherings of the Ku Klux Klan, cruelty to animals, arson, crime—all these are either taboo or reduced to a minimum.

Use of the name of the Creator in a vulgar sense is not encouraged; seldom allowed. Even "hell" and "damn" are eliminated.

Scenes which are obscene, salacious, immoral or teach false ethics are not permitted.

Here are only a few of the orders of the censors in the last six months:

Cut out scene showing Jack Johnson and all subtitles referring to him.

Cut out all scenes where women are drinking.

Cut out scene of prisoner taking saw out of banana.

NO CLEOPATRA STUFF

Cut out scene of woman lying on couch and man bending over her.

Cut out scene of woman in transparent gown before burning building.

Cut out all scenes of Night Riders

Cut out subtitle, "Making moonshine where the sun shines," and cut out all scenes and subtitles relating thereto.

Cut out all scenes of girl shimmying.

Cut out scenes of girl pulling up her garter.

Cut out all burlesque scenes of Heaven.

Cut out subtitle, "Does your womanly intuition give you any idea of what is going to happen now?"

What is the effect of such scenes and subtitles on the public conscience? What of public moral? What influence will it have on the next generation?—Dearborn Independent.

OHIO KLANSMEN WIN

Lower House Defeats Measure Aimed at Ku Klux

(Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Feb. 6.—The Ohio house of representatives today declared against the state attempting to regulate activities of secret organizations within its borders. The bill, it was said, was intended to curb Ku Klux Klan activities.

By a vote of 81 to 26, the lower branch of the general assembly defeated the bill, proposed by Representative Justin Harding, republican of Warren county, requiring secret organizations, other than those organized for purely social purposes to file a list of their officers with the secretary of state and keep a roster of their membership open for official inspection.

Methodist Ministers To Debate Klan Report

Houston Tex. 2-6-23

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 5.—The Methodist Ministers' association today was to debate a resolution drafted by the law and order committee which practically endorses the Ku Klux Klan.

"We commend all there is of good in the organization," the resolution says, "and would defend it against narrow, bitter, bigoted attacks from whatever source.

"To exterminate all its principles would be to strike down some of the most cherished foundations of Americanism."

OHIO SOLONS KILL ANTI KU KLUX BILL

Houston Post Houston Tex 2-7-23

(Associated Press Report.)

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 6.—The Ohio house of representative today declared emphatically against the State attempting to regulate activities of the Ku Klux Klan within its borders.

By a vote of 26 for to 81 against, the lower branch of the general assembly defeated the bill, proposed by Representative Justin Harding, republican, of Warren county, requiring secret organizations, other than those organized for purely social purposes, to file a list of their officers with the secretary of State and keep a roster of their membership open for official inspection.

KLAN TO MAKE FIGHT FOR OHIO ORGANIZER

New York Times 2-16-23

Names of Prominent Springfield Men Found in Raid on Lodge.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Feb. 15.—A legal battle over the Klan is promised here as a result of the arrest last night of W. M. Cortner of Muncie, Ind., Kleagle and organizer of the Springfield branch of the order, following a police raid on the lodge rooms. Although there were a number of persons at the meeting only Cortner was arrested. He is held in the County Jail, charged with conspiracy to incite a riot. J. Fred Anderson, a prominent attorney and former Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has been retained by Cortner. It is announced that other attorneys employed by the national headquarters of the Klan will be sent here at once to aid Anderson.

Steps are being taken for the release of Cortner and to obtain the lodge records which were seized by the police. The records include a list of 681 names of prospective members, the police say. In this list are a large number of prominent persons, including Dr. Stanley B. Hutchings, member of the City School Board; Barton L. Minturn, former Deputy Sheriff; Forgy C. Moorehead, City Auditor; Chester S. Fess, son of United States Senator-elect F. D. Fess; Major Arthur Bland, Harry C. Copenhaver, member of the City School Board; Oscar Lannert, Secretary of the American Legion, and U. C. Flindt, School Board architect.

A number of the men on the list assert that they are not members of the Klan.

"This is not an affair of Clark County or Springfield, but a national affair," said Cortner today. "This is the first time anything of this kind has happened in the United States. Those police had just as much right to come into our headquarters as they have to enter the Knights of Columbus, the Masons or any other lodge and arrest members after raiding the place."

Justin Altschuler, City Prosecutor, said this afternoon that other arrests would follow.

According to Cortner's commission his home is at 215 East Twelfth Street, Muncie, Ind. It is signed by William J. Simmons, who was Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire, and countersigned by Edward Young Clark, who was mperial Kleagle. Thirty-four hoods and robes with the insignia of the order on the breast were confiscated by the police.

BOMBSHELL IN K K K CASE

Commercial Appeal 2-23-23

Pastor Quoted as Launching Attack on Catholics and Jews.

Memphis Tenn

SPRINGFIELD, O., Feb. 22.—The state sprung a bombshell in the W. M. Cortner case in which the defendant is charged with riotious conspiracy in Ku Klux Klan headquarters when they called Edward McDonald to the stand in police court today.

McDonald testified that two speeches were made on the night that he was initiated into the klan, which he said, was Feb. 12. One of these, he said, was made by Rev. C. O. Woodward, pastor of Broad Street Church of Christ of Columbus, whom he testified talked on Catholics, Jews and negroes. Asked what he remembered of the speech made by Rev. Woodward, Mr. McDonald declared:

"He said 85 per cent of the offices were held by Catholics; that we ought to stop foreign immigration. He said 'It's time for us 100 per cent Americans to step in and do something.'"

"What did he say about the Jews?" asked Attorney Malone for the state.

"He said the Jews were getting too strong, too. He didn't say very much about negroes," said the witness.

SEIZURE OF KLAN PROPERTY IN OHIO CALLED ILLEGAL

Atlanta Constitution

Springfield, O., February 21.—(Special.)—The search warrant by which property was seized in the raid on klan headquarters here last week in the case of W. M. Cortner, alleged kleagle and organizer of the Springfield Ku Klux Klan, was held to be invalid by Judge Golden C. Davis in police court here today during the second hearing of the case. Judge Davis ordered the property returned, but that property seized under the warrant for the arrest of Cortner was held to be legal. 2/22/23

The testimony was declared by Police Prosecutor Altschul to be such that the state's case would either "stand or fall" with tomorrow's developments. Cortner is charged with "riotious conspiracy" in connection with the organization of a branch of the klan here.

TO PROHIBIT MASKING

Bill Would Stop Public Appearance of Masked Society. 2-17-23

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 13.—A bill prohibiting masked organizations from appearing in public, was introduced in the house of the Ohio legislature tonight by Representative Justin Harding.

Mr. Harding declared his bill is designed specifically to place restrictions on the Ku Klux Klan.

VOTE, 26-81, 2-10-23 PRECEDED BY VIOLENT DEBATE

The Cleveland Ohio

Columbus, O., Feb. 6—Efforts to pass a bill intended to regulate the Ku Klux Klan in Ohio failed in the house Tuesday by the overwhelming vote of 81 against and 26 for, after a long and violent debate.

The measure, aimed at the "Invisible Empire," was drawn by Representative Harding, Republican, of Warren county, and was recommended for passage by the judiciary committee.

It was intended to require that "any society into which members should be elected, initiated or admitted in accordance with a secret constitution, secret laws, secret regulations or secret prescribed ritualistic ceremonies or for secret political purposes," should file annually with the secretary of state a complete list of its members and officers, and their addresses with a statement containing the name of the association and its regular place of meeting.

Although the bill provided that the lists and statements should be open to the inspection of any publice official, it also provided that "the lists of names shall be deemed confidential recods," and made it a misdemeanó to use them for circulariaztion purposes.

College fraternities; sororities; "associations of a purely social nature;" "fraternial benefit societies;" "any association which has a well known and conspicuously designated meeting hall, temple, room, or building in which it holds regular meetings not less than monthly and which publishes regular reports not less than yearly showing its officers and a list of members, which is furnished upon request to any public official * * * or which, if it does not publish such reports, has a roster,' which is open to public inspection; labor unions and brotherhoods were exempted.

Failure to comply, or the furnishing of incorrect lists, was to be made a felony, punishable by a fine of $10 to $10,000, or imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than one year nor more than ten, or both.

Although the author of the bill explained that it was intended to place 'as light a burden as possible" on the "legitimate and honorable fraternal organizations of the state," many members expressed the opinion that the bill was opposed by such secret orders as the Masons, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Malta and Junior Order of American Mechanics.

Representative Charles Brenner, Cleveland, with Representative Homer A. Ramey, Toledo, led the fight against the proposed law, the former declaring that thirty Knights of Pythias lodges and seventeen Knights of Malta lodges in Cleveland had protested against the Harding bill.

This same group was the nucleus of the following that last week passed a bill to compel auditors to publish a list of property exempted from taxation, both real and personal. At that time, it was charged that this bill was aimed at certain religious orders and sects.

Representative Harding, in explaining his bill, before the house today, declared that "the people of this state want to know who the men are who have turned their backs on the constitution and on modern civilization, going back into the medieval age of bigotry, intolerance and hatred, and who have adopted the methods of the feudal baron."

"Our government," he said, "is founded and organized on the principle that those who accept authority from the people must likewise accept responsibility for the manner in which that authority is exercised. The Ku Klux Klan is an organizations that takes over the functions of courts and often of the executioneer.

"It would usurp the function of government and would accept none of the responsibilities. Government must be by law and not by men, yet the followers of the fiery cross and its malignant blaze would establish a government of men and not of law, and crucify freedom on that cross."

Representative Harding shouted denials of charges that, he said, had been made against him, to the effect that he "had a personal interest."

Representative Edward F. Volk, Democrat, Bucyrus, immediately tried to kill the bill by having it laid on the table.

"If this bill is aimed at the Ku Klux Klan," he demanded, "why doesn't it say so? There is not a fraternal organization in Ohio that is not opposed to the bill."

The motion, however, lost by a vote of 103 to 3, after its author had previously tried to defer consideration of it by moving that it be passed over, but retain its place on the calendar. The house, however, insisted on taking up the measure and disposing of it today.

The vote on the bill itself was as follows:

For the bill:

Against the bill:

Ascham, Ashcraft, Atkinson, Ault, Baker, Beck, Bloom, Blossom, Brashares, Brenner, Brown of Champaign, Calvert, Chadwell, Clapp, Cooley, Cope, Cotton, Davidson, Dempsey, Dunn, Edgington, Edwards, Emmons, Evans of Cuyahoga, Evans of Jackson, Fair, Fischer, Fitch, Fleming, Fox, Frick, Frillman, Gray, Gruner, Hawkins, Hazard, Herbert, Hill of Marion, Hilt of Meigs, Holloway, Hopkins, Humes, Hummon, Hunt of Lucas, Hunt of Shelby, McClintock, McDonald, May, Miller, Orton, Osborne, Prange, Ramey, Randolph, Rebman, Roberts, Robinson of Stark, Rohe, Rose, Sanborn, Shaw, Smith, Spidel, Standish, Stevens, Sullivan of Union, Thompson, Volk, Vorys, Wlather, Walton, Ward, Wendt, Williams of Lake, and Wise.

NEST RAIDED

Springfield, O., Feb. 15—Disclosures are expected in the police probe starting today of the local K. K. K. chapter, following a raid on their headquarters. 2-21-23

W. M. Cortner, Grand Kleagle, is held without bond on a charge of conspiracy to incite riot. Names of 681 Klan members, 34 robes and secret papers of the organization were confiscated.

HALT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST KLANSMAN TO DECIDE LAW POINT

Montgomery Advertiser 2-22-23

Judge Takes Under Advisement as to Admission of Evidence

(Associated Press)

SPRINGFIELD, O., Feb. 22.—Further proceedings in the hearing of W. M. Cortner, alleged Ku Klux Klan organizer, who is accused of riotous conspiracy, depend on the decision of Police Court Judge Davis on two motions presented late today by the defense.

The defense asks, first, that evidence submitted by the state over the objection of the defense be rejected by the court; second, that Cortner be dismissed and property taken in a raid on klan headquarters a week ago last Wednesday be returned to the klan.

Judge Davis, following a conference with attorneys for both sides, said that he will announce his decision next week. He declined to set a date.

The state rested its case this afternoon, state counsel declaring that a prima facie case had been made against Cortner in the testimony already introduced and asked that the defendant be held to the grand jury.

Edward McDonald, formerly a private detective, called by the state this afternoon, said he was initiated as a klansman on February 12. On that night, he said, Rev. C. O. Woodward of Columbus addressed the assembly.

"What did he talk about?" he was asked.

"He said 85 per cent of the offices are held by Catholics; that we ought to stop foreign immigration. He said its time for us 100 per cent Americans to step in and do something," McDonald replied.

"What did he say about Jews?" asked Attorney Malone.

"He said the Jews were getting too strong, too. He didn't say much about the negroes," McDonald said.

McDonald testified that after the meeting Cortner told the members to purchase klan robes. The robes cost $6.50 with ten cents postage, McDonald quoted Cortner as saying.

Attorney Malone questioned McDonald as to Cortner's remarks on why the robes were needed.

"We were told that we couldn't do the work without the robes," McDonald replied.

Testifying further, McDonald said Cortner told the assembly that "we are going to do some work in Springfield soon. We are going to burn some crosses and they won't be paper crosses either."

The crosses were to be burned all over Springfield, according to McDonald.

Defense attorneys said today they expected to summon Rev. C. O. Woodward of Columbus as a witness.

KLAN KLEAGLE WINS IN SPRINGFIELD CASE

Defendant Dismissed and Seized Property Is Ordered Returned.

Springfield, Ohio, March 20.—Actions made by the defense to dismiss the defendant, return the property seized and to throw out all evidences and testimony offered by the state were sustained by Judge Golden C. Davis in police court this morning in the case of W. M. Cortner, Ku Klux Klan kleagle and organizer, charged with riotous conspiracy.

In sustaining the motions Judge Davis said that the prosecution might desire to take the case to the grand jury on its own initiative.

"The court earnestly desires to have it clearly understood that it will not in any sense whatsoever consider such a course as an indication of personal discourtesy or any judicial discourtesy," said Judge Davis.

"On the contrary, this court feels that such action would be fully justified because of the apparent general and widespread interest in the matter and because all the parties interested would probably feel better satisfied after an investigation and inquiry by a grand jury composed of fifteen persons than with a finding by an examining board consisting of one person.

The prosecution did not indicate what action it would take. Cortner was arrested by a police raid on klan headquarters on the night of February 14. Books, papers, regalia and other articles belonging to the Ku Klux Klan were seized.

KLANSMEN PLAN TO OPPOSE NEW LAW

Proposed Bill Aimed at Klan Brings Scheme of Retaliation

(Associated Press)

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, March 31.—Bills to prohibit New York corporations from operating in other states are to be introduced at once in legislatures of many states, according to a statement given to newspapers here tonight, purporting to be signed by G. W. Rice, grand dragon of the realm of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. The statement says the action is in retaliation for a bill said to have been introduced in the New York legislature to prohibit corporations from other states from operating in New York and particularly to prohibit a "Georgia corporation" from so operating.

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are endeavoring to give New York a baptism of real patriotism," the statement says. "Commercial interests of the nation should be aroused to prevent the New York legislature from throwing this insult in the face of the nation and arousing the indignation of those who believe in trade between the states, and believe in the very fabric of our fundamental American ideals and institutions."

1,000 KLANSMEN ARE INITIATED NEAR OHIO TOWN

Cincinnati, May 27.—One of the largest Ku Klux Klan meetings ever conducted near this city took place today in a vacant field near Middletown, Ohio, it was reported on the highest authority, being the initiation of 1,000 klansmen. Other meetings for the purpose of initiation of like large numbers in the "invisible empire" are dated, it is declared, for the near future near Hamilton, Ohio, the county seat of Butler county, which adjoins this (Hamilton) county on the north, and at Oxford, Ohio, also another Butler county town, the seat of several colleges of historic nature. Such increases as predicated will result in the Ku Klux Klan controlling Butler county politically.

Open Probe in Death of Klan Attorney

DAYTON, O., July 3.—An investigation of the death of Philip B. Smythe, 45, attorney for the Ku Klux Klan who died late Monday was started by the police Tuesday. The death certificate said Smythe died from "acute alcoholism". The police and the county coroner agreed as to the cause of death, but are trying to trace Smythe's movements for 24 hours preceeding his death.

Candidates In Ohio Cities

CLEVELAND, Ohio, August 15.—Two Republican mayoralty candidates, named in Tuesday's primaries are credited with owing their nominations to support of the Ku-Klux Klan. At Marion, Ohio, home city of the late President Harding, the Rev. Martin L. Buckley, pastor of Christian Church, reported to have had klan support, ran away from a field of four for the Republican nomination. At Newark, W. H. N. Stevens, avowed klan candidate, defeated Mayor Samuel Orr, Republican for a second term.

KLUX OFFICIAL WOUNDED IN OHIO

Shot in Head, He Also Wounds Three of His Assailants.

Steubenville, O., Aug. 16.—A tense situation prevails here and police are prepared for quick action to prevent a repetition of an outbreak last night against the Ku Klux Klan which culminated in a pistol fight between Darwin L. Gibson, said to be one of the local officials, and a group of men who fired upon him as he was driving along a darkened street.

Earlier in the night a group of about 100 men, said to be members of the Ku Klux Klan from near-by towns, was attacked in one of the downtown streets, and a score were badly beaten, while several automobiles were wrecked.

Gibson was taken to a hospital in a critical condition, as was John Desontis, who was shot through the left eye. The other two men under arrest, who received minor wounds, gave their names as Dominick Spenetti and Frank Velta.

A riot followed shortly after 25 automobiles from Chester and Weirton, W. Va., and East Liverpool decorated with American flags and bearing electrically lighted crosses on the radiators, parked along one of the principal streets and the members of the party went to an adjoining hotel for a meeting.

The disorder started when a bystander voiced his objections to the flag being used to decorate the automobiles. Words quickly led to blows.

Riot Call Sounded.

A riot call sounded by four policemen on duty at the time, brought a score of additional officers who were able to restore order, but not until a score or more had been beaten and several automobiles wrecked.

Last night's disturbance came the day after an exciting election campaign in which the candidate for mayor reported to have had the backing of the Klan organization was defeated by a close margin.

FORBID KLAN PARADE

Steubenville Authorities Say No Processions will be Permitted

STEUBENVILLE, OHIO, Aug. 16.—Under no circumstances will the parade and country exclave of the Ku Klux Klan scheduled for this city next Thursday be held, Chief of Police Blaine Harter announced tonight.

City council will meet Tuesday night and an attempt will be made to pass an emergency ordinance prohibiting processions or assemblages which might tend to cause disorder.

Ku Klux Revenge Blamed for Injunction That Halts Betting at Cleveland Races

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 28.—Betting at the Grand Circuit race meeting here, today's card of which was postponed because of a wet track, was temporarily enjoined by court order on application

David A. Edgar, who, officials of the local Driving Park allege, acted on behalf of the Ku Klux Klan. Edgar refused either to deny or affirm his connection with the organization.

Another development in connection with the race meeting was the arrest of three men charged with "doping" favorites in order to make money on long shots. They were charged with illegal possession of narcotics. The cases were set for hearing next Wednesday.

Despite the restraining order, Driving Park officials announced that the two weeks' Fall race meeting would be held Sept. 17 to 28, as scheduled.

Lawyers for the Driving Park Association told the court that the injunction was sought because the park has been denied to the Ku Klux Klan for holding a ceremonial meeting. Counsel for Mr. Edgar did not deny the statement.

Counsel for the defendants objected to the issuing of an injunction upon the ground that the petition sought to enjoin the commission of a crime. Judge Eastman overruled the objection. Half a dozen witnesses for the plaintiff testified that they had seen gambling at the driving park, both at the stands of bookmakers and at the pari mutuels machines.

Hearing to make the injunction permanent is not likely to come before the court until Autumn, as the local courts have followed a rule that all such matters go over until the Fall term of court convenes.

M. W. Price of Richmond, Va., Steve Butash of Barberton and Ernest Mayer of Cleveland, the trio arrested on charges of doping horses, have been operating at "Short Ship" and Grand Circuit races in Ohio for some time, according to the police, who said that they confessed that "doped sugar" had been given to Single G. at the North Randall (Cleveland) meet July 7, when the horse fell and received a bad cut. The prisoners are alleged to have "doped" other horses at race meets.

KU KLUX KLAN AT HARDING'S FUNERAL

Marion, Ohio, Aug. 24.—(By the Associated Negro Press).—The Ku Klux Klan got "theirs across" at the funeral of President Harding in Marion.

Next to the sidewalk stood a four-foot cross of brilliant red flower in front of Dr. Harding's house. On the cross-bar against the red were the white floral initials "K. K. K." An envelope attached to the piece announced in a bookkeeper's Spencerian hand that it was from the Marion Ku Klux Klan.

Their attention called to the Klan's flowers, members of Marion's Committee Upon Arrangements said that on the night after President Harding died 250 members of the Marion Klan paraded through the streets with black bands around the sleeves of their white regalia. Early this week, it was said, considerable feeling was aroused by the announcement that white robed, masked members of the Klan from Ohio and Indiana planned to follow the funeral cortege, and publis warning was given that any such attempt would be broken by the military.

Emperor Simmons Tells How "Klan Is Negro's Friend"

Preston News Service.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 8.—Every Negro in the United States has a right to his or her opinion, but W. J. Simmons seems to think that most Negroes have the wrong conception of the fundamental plan and purpose of the Ku Klux Klan. Here is what he says:

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are the greatest friends the Negro race has ever had; they are wholly without racial prejudice or intolerance of creed; they seek only to maintain the supremacy of the white race and to inspire patriotism."

Thus did William Joseph Simmons, emperor and founder of the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan, in an address here last Thursday night before a large number of klansmen.

"To keep the Negro in his place is our intention, not to kill or drive him out of the country. We expect to see that he is properly treated, and that he is properly cared for, but he must stay in his place.

"The klan has only exercised the privilege of any organization in this country in restricting its membership. The order has no prejudices against any race or creed. It simply stands for a principle. It aims to make immortal the heritage that came to us from the palms of our noble ancestors."

KLANSMEN ABANDON MARCH IN OHIO CITY

They Say They Do Not Want to Be "Targets for Gunmen" in Steubenville.

RIVAL BODY IS ORGANIZED

"Knights of Blazing Ring" Spring Up to Oppose "Clans and Klans."

Special to The New York Times.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 31.—The proposed march of Ku Klux Klansmen into this city on Thursday night has been called off in view of the local situation. This was announced ths evening by local officials of the Klan, whose Grand Kleagle, in making public this decision, said:

"In consdering the situation they (the Klansmen) had no desire to become targets for local gunmen."

Local and county authorities who had been feverishly making preparations to avert trouble as a result of the proposed parade said they felt greatly relieved because of the decision of the Klan.

Albert Smith, Ku Klux Klan candidate for Mayor against Mayor Frank Hawkins, today tendered his resignation as a member of the local high school faculty. Questioned as to what his plans for the future were, he replied that he intended to devote his efforts to other fields.

That the "Knights of the Blazing Ring," organized at Kane, Pa., last week when a big inaugural meeting near the city was followed by the burning of a huge circle 39 feet in diameter, are in serious mood has been ascertained here during the past few days. Organizers of the new body have been enrolling recruits by the dozens. Little difficulty, it is learned, has been found in getting members when the creed of the Knights of the Blazing Ring, which is "against all Clans and Klans," became known.

Although those supporting the Knights of the Blazing Ring will not talk regarding the purpose of that body, it is known that the letter sent to a Kane, Pa., newspaper man explaining the tenets of the order expressed antagonism to "all clans and klans." In the letter it was also stated that the Knights of the Blazing Ring "would ring the earth with justice to all ,and that justice was due every man, regardless of creed, religion, color or race."

Kane, a town in Northwestern Pennsylvania, was selected as the birthplace for the Knights of the Blazing Ring and predictions have been made in that city for the last week that the new order would soon extend to every part of the country.

Persons here known to have affiliated with the new order are known to be bitterly opposed to the Invisible Empire and all it stands for.

Situation In Tulsa Eased.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 21 (Associated Press).—The grip of martial law, imposed on Tulsa and a portion of Tulsa County by Governor J. C. Walton, because of mob activities, relaxed somewhat today, but there was no lessening o fthe intensive inquiry b yState authorities into flogging cases. Twenty of the 150 National Guardsmen sent here departed early today for their homes at Okmulgee.

Indications also were given that the military regulations might be lightened in case there are no untoward incidents. Last night no guard patrols were maintained on downtown streets to enforce the order against street traffic between 11:30 P. M. and 6 A. M.

Over night the military authorities took into custody five citizens of Broken Arrow. They were Tom Higgins, former Deputy Sheriff; Roscoe Brooks, painter; Pete Rogers, retired merchant; Jack Barth, merchant, and Jack Daugherty, jeweler. No explanation was given for thei rdetention.

The seizure of the men came after the filing of charges against Marshall Moore, a special deputy sheriff, living near Broken Arrow, in connection with the flogging in 1920 of Leonard Bagby.

GUARD AGAINST FURTHER RIOTS

Associated Press Report.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Aug. 16.—Fearing a recurrence of last night's anti-Ku Klux Klan rioting and subsequent revolver fighting in which four men were shot, Mayor Frank Hawkins tonight issued an order to police to prevent public demonstrations of any kind, the ban extending to gatherings, parades and even small assemblages on the streets.

Rumors of klan reprisals tonight were not given much credence by officials, but nevertheless precautions are being taken to meet any emergency. Authorities of the city and county said outside help would not be asked.

Klansmen from other Ohio cities arrived here today, but were said to be here aiding in the investigation into the shooting of Darwin L. Gibson, 35, local klan leader, by alleged raiders, three of whom were wounded.

Gibson is in a critical condition in a local hospital with a bullet at the base of the brain, where it can not be removed, according to surgeons.

KLAN RIOT IN OHIO.

One Seriously Hurt in Terriffic Clash at Steubenville.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 16.—A tense situation prevailed here today and police were prepared for quick action to prevent a repetition of the outbreak last night against the Ku Klux Klan which culminated in a pistol fight between Darwin L. Gibson, said to be one of the local klan officials, and a group of men who fired upon him as he was driving along a darkened street. Earlier in the evening a group of about 100 men, said to be members of the Ku Klux Klan from nearby towns, was attacked in one of the downtown streets and a score badly beaten and several automobiles wrecked.

Gibson has been active in prombiiton enforcement and was fired upon, he told police, as he was on his way home. He returned the fire and three of his alleged assailants were wounded, but he fell with a bullet lodged in the base of the brain. Gibson was taken to a hospital in a critical condition, as was John Disentis, who was shot through the left eye. The other two men under arest, who received minor wounds, gave their names as Dominick Spenetti and Frank Velta.

A riot followed shortly after 25 automobiles from Chester and Wierton, . The disorder started, police were told, when a bystander voiced his objections to the American flag being used to decorate the automobiles and words quickly led to blows.

A riot call souded by four policemen on duty at the time brought a score of additional officers, who were able to restore order, but not until a score or more had been beaten and a number of automobiles wrecked.

Last night's disturbance came the day after an exciting campaign in which the candidate for mayor, reported to have had the backing of the klan organization, was defeated by a close margin.

New Riot Averted.

A renewal of the rioting was narrowly averted at 4:30 a. m. when five automobile loads of klansmen from East Liverpool, Ohio, armed with shotguns and revolver, arrived here, expecting to lend aid to their organization.

They were met on the main street by Sheriff Edward Lucas and deputies. Guns flashed from all the machines as the sheriff halted them and he was commanded to throw up his hands. He quickly informed them of his identity and ordered them to step out of their cars and deposit their artillery with him. They complied. Eight of these men who had guns on their persons were detained as suspicious characters. The others were ordered to leave the city to prevent further trouble.

One of the men arrested in connection with the Gibson shooting is Mike Spintich, 12, who is shot through the left hand. Police believe that Gibson wounded both Desantis and Spintich in the gun fight.

Names of those injured in the rioting which occurred between 10 and 11 p. m., could not be learned, wounded klansmen refusing to give their names. In addition to the arrest of Spinetti, the authorities rounded up Frank Velta, 25, on a charge of shooting with intent to kill and he is in the county jail.

Others under arrest are Homer Dodge, Charles Thompson, W. W. Kelly, John Cole, Charles Marshall and Harold Green, all of East Liverpool, Ohio, klansmen. They are charged with carrying concealed weapons.

City and county officials were concerned today over reports that klansmen had issued a call for a great conclave here which knights from various sections of Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania are to attend. It is understood that official steps are to be taken to prevent such a demonstration, which considering the bitter and dangerous feeling here today, would, it is believed, lead to further bloodshed. A conference of city and county of ficials is to be held to enlist extra police and deputies for emergency duty.

KLANSMEN LAND IN JAIL

Arrested at Funeral of Dead Comrade, Klansmen Dressed in Regalia Hauled to Jail and Unmasked.

Springfield, O., July 1.—At Ferncliff cemetery on the outskirts of Springfield, more than 100 Klansmen were present at the last rites of a brother klansman. The Kluxers had the ever-present cross of fire, and some were dressed in full regalia. They were going through certain rites of the order when Police Chief R. E. O'Brien, with a squad of policemen, armed with riot guns, rushed in and arrested all those who were masked.

Negro Notifies Police.

It is stated that a Negro, who saw the Klansmen arriving in cars dressed in their full regalia, notified the Chief that the Klan was planning a demonstration to frighten the Colored citizens who lived in the vicinity of the cemetery.

The chief and his men waited at a secluded spot outside the cemetery until the Klu Kluxers were in full swing with their ceremony and then arrested all who were masked.

At police headquarters the men were unmasked and were informed that they were charged with disorderly conduct, and with disturbing the peace of the people in the vicinity of the cemetery. They were given the privlege to make bond. A number of the men, desiring to pose as martyrs, stated that they wanted to go to jail and that they would never seek release on bond. However, they had been in their cells only a short time when they changed their mind and "came across" with the bond money.

Arrested Under New Law.

The police let all the men out on bond, but retained some of their robes as evidence.

You will recall Illinois recently passed an anti-mask law which makes it a crime, punishable by a penitentiary sentence, to appear in public masked.

A small crowd of sympathizers with the Klan gathered at the jail, cheering and lauding the Klansmen; if they planned any violence they changed their minds quickly, as the crowd dispersed when the policemen who made the arrests appeared on the scene armed with their riot guns.

The men were at the funeral of W. F. Swigert who did of hart troubl F. Swigert who died of heart trouble in Springfield. The Klansmen, it is said, expect to fight the case and carry it to the supreme court, if necessary.

SEIZE 70 AT KLAN FUNERAL

Police Invade Cemetery to Arrest Kluxers on Antimasking Law.

[By The Associated Press.]

Springfield, O., July 7.—W. H. Cortner, Kleagle of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, and sixty-nine other members of the local klan, many of them prominent business men, were arrested by a squad of police late yesterday as they left Ferncliff cemetery following funeral services at the grave of a brother klansman.

Arrests were ordered by Sergt. Thomas Norton, acting chief, in the absence of Police Chief Charles O'Brien, who is on his vacation.

Arrests were made under the recent ruling of Police Judge Golden C. Davis that three or more persons appearing masked on the streets would constitute disorderly conduct.

A crowd of 500 assembled in front of the jail within a few minutes after the robed klansmen marched through the main entrance. There was no disorder although the klansmen were mildly cheered by the crowd.

The Trail of the Gossip.

Commercial Appeal

The serpent's tongue of the village gossip protrudes along the trail that leads to the trial of the three men in North Carolina accused of taking two women from their homes and severely flogging them. And for some reason this tongue was admitted by the court as evidence against the women. By word of gossip the women were accused of a number of sins and crimes of ommission and commission, the accusations evidently being made as an extenuation for the crime of those who in masks and hoods beat them until their bodies ran with blood. Just so by counter accusation is the husband identified as the instigator of the two women's mistreatment.

Now, without attempting in any way to pass upon the facts in the case or the guilt or innocence of any one, it must be admitted that the whole affair in the light that it appears is a shock not only to our idea of law and order but also even to our conception of the chivalry that is innate to the southern man in his relationships with women. It makes no difference whether or not the women were guilty of the offenses charged to them by the village gossips. If they were guilty the crime of their illegal tormentors was no less grave than their own. And if they were innocent the heinousness of the crime against society and against themselves is beyond appraisal.

But innocent or guilty the gossips, having being paid their reward in full, will continue to go on encouraged to the obtaining of more such rewards.

Wealthy N. C. Citizen Defies Ku Klux Klan

Courier 9-29-23

WINSTON SALEM, N. C., Sept. 27.—Defying the Ku Klux Klan, Charles M. Kooten, one of the wealthiest colored men of the state, literally took the bit in his mouth here last week, when he ordered building continued on his new home.

Wooten was warned by the Klan against building his home on property purchased from a white man, threatening him with a note and a truck check. (The truck check was intended to indicate that it was time to move.) The note read: "Take warning! A stitch in time saves nine."

DEFENSE IS CLOSED IN WHIPPING TRIALS

Three Charged with Flogging Women Under Masks Under Fire in Rebuttal

Montgomery Advertiser

LUMBERTON, N. C., July 19.—The defense late today rested in the trial of Mike Lawson, Jule Brogden and Johnson Dedgepeth, alleged members of the Ku Klux Klan, on charges growing out of the whipping by masked men on the night of April 14 of Mrs. Hattie Purvis and Mrs. Mary Watson. The state began immediately the introduction of rebuttal testimony by calling Conrad Purvis, sixteen year old son of Mrs. Purvis and Norine Watson, eighteen year old daughter of the other victim, as witnesses. 7-20-23

Mike Lawson, chief of police of Fairmont, N. C., and described by Mrs. Purvis as one of the leaders of the hooded raiders, today testified as to his movements on the night of April 14, denying all knowledge of the flogging of the women and declared he was not connected with the Ku Klux Klan in any way. Despite a severe cross examination by Stephen McIntyre, volunteer assistant to Solicitor Lawson, he clung to his statements, which purported to establish an alibi for the night of the alleged crime. Mrs. Lawson testified briefly, corroborating her husband's story.

About thirty witnesses were called by the defense during the afternoon to corroborate various details of Lawson's alibi and to testify as character witnesses. Coming mainly from Proctorville, near where the flogging is alleged to have occcurred and from Fairmont, the witnesses testified that the reputations of the three defendants was good.

The defense hammered at Mrs. Purvis' reputation by drawing out from witnesses statements that it was "not good" and "bad."

On cross examination, each witness in turn declared, under Attorney McIntyre's questioning, that he was not and had never been a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

The defense, during the trial, served a subpoena upon Mrs. Watson as a witness for the defense, announcing that she would be called to the stand by the defenadtns if the state did not call her.

Miss Nerine Watson, on the stand, identified Jule Brogden as one of the masked men who kidnapped her mother and Mrs. Purvis . . . She declared she recognized him by his eyes and the appearance of his hands. Another of the disguised men who carried a policeman's "billy", she swore was about the size of Lawson.

Said to be Klansmen

The Tuesday night following the alleged floggings, the witness testified, a party of men, who said they were klansmen, came to her mother's home, apologized to her for having called her "the biggest crook in the country". It had been testified that Mrs. Watson had been told that she was being whipped because she permitted her daughter to go to Mrs. Purvis' home and associate with men.

Miss Watson fixed the time of the flogging at between ten and ten-thirty o'clock.

The little girl was followed on the stand by her brother, Aristow, 13 years old. He gave the same description of events at the Purvis home when it was invaded by the raiders as had his sister. Both told of the little girl being struck over the head by the hooded man who carried the policeman's club and who was said by Nathlene and Aristow, as well as by Miss Watson, to be of the approximate build and proportions of Mike Lawson.

Both of the witnesses swore they were positive Brogden and Hedgepeth were members of the crowd which carried their mother off, and Aristow named P. P. Smith as another of the disguised men whom he identified. Smith, railway employe at Proctorville and Fairmont, has not been indicted in the case.

Character Attacked

Four women character witnesses produced by the defense as the last of the long string of witnesses, Mrs. H. Barnes, Mrs. Walter Nance, Mrs. K. Barnes and Mrs. I. P. Graham, declared Mrs. Purvis' reputation was "bad."

Under cross-examination, each of the four admitted that they believed Mrs. Purivs' conduct was such that she should have been punished in some way.

Efforts by the state to secure some admissions from witnesses that they were or had been connected with the Ku Klux Klan invariably met with flat denials.

The state had approximately twenty witnesses sworn when it began offering rebuttal testimony, and it is regarded as certain that if all of these are called, the case will not go to the jury before some time Saturday. The defense has not indicated to what extent it will offer sur-rebuttal testimony. Arguments of counsel and the charge of the judge to the jury are expected to consume practically a full court day.

Returns of E. R. Randolph, of Warsaw, alleged state officials of the Ku Klux Klan and V. W. Keith of Fairmant, alleged head of the branch there to the subpoenas issued for them yesterday by the state may be called for during the progress of the state's rebuttal testimony tomorrow. The subpoenas directed the reputed klansmen ot produce all records of order bearing on the flogging of the women, the roster of the Fairmont klan and the activities of H. L. Taliaferro, admitted agent of the klan, who is under charges of tampering with state's witnesses.

MASKED MOB ORDERS NEGRO TO QUIT TOWN

The Constitution

Wilmington, N. C., August 21.—Charlie Hagans, negro, merchant of Fair Bluff, Columbus county, was taken from his store Saturday night by a masked mob and ordered to change his place of business, according to word received here today.

Hagans, who has been conducting a store on the main street of the town, is moving, the advices stated. Hagans was not hurt by the mob, according to reports received here, but was badly frightened. He was examined by a physician immediately after the occurrence.

Man, Victim Of Mob, Shows Marks On Back

Courier 11-17-23

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 15.—Hayes Henry, colored, came to town last week and exhibited 28 bloody welts which he says were inflicted on him by a brutal whipping given by a masked mob when they also attempted to hang him and were prevented only by his physical resistance.

Henry, who lives in St. Mary's township, on the Rock Quarry road ten miles from Raleigh, is alleged to have been nearly killed by white men because he refused to complete cultivation of his crop with J. C. Barrington, his landlord and Cecil Barrington, the landlord's son, and Eugene Petty, a neighbor of the first two white men. The three white men have been identified by Henry as those who helped to unmercifully beat him and have been arrested and placed under $500 bail each.

The Henry whipping came as a second brutal atrocity of the week from the same vicinity. The first was the alleged beating of two white boys by a masked mob of about thirty-five men.

Mr. Henry is alleged to have said that about twelve or fifteen masked men came to his house at night and led him into the woods, tied a rope around his neck, strung him to a tree and attempted to hang him. According to his story he was raised three times until his toes barely touched the ground and held in that position for some time. After the attempted hanging he alleges he was forced to get down on the ground and was beat unmercifully. When he was taken into the jail and stripped and examined by Jailer Jordan, Deputy Sheriff Stell and Magistrate Tilley, they reported afterwards that his underclothing were drenched with blood and that blood had been drawn from 28 distinct welts on the back and chest. It was also reported that marks of the ropes were plainly visible.

Mr. Henry is alleged to have stated further that after the whipping he was taken to the home of the Barringtons and told to get on his knees and apologize, and when he refused he was again unmercifully beat until he did. After he apologized it is alleged the masked men told him he must leave the county within 2 hours or he would be hung. The Barrington son and the neighbor, Petty, are alleged to have been a member of the whipping band.

Mr. Henry is reported to have engaged H. L. Swain to prosecute the white men. Attorney Swain is said to be the son-in-law of John Curtis, a well known Negro of the neighborhood.

LABORER WHIPPED UNMERCIFULLY BY SOUTHERN WHITES

Brutal Beating of Henry Hayes in North Carolina Is Made Public

Pittsburgh Courier

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 16.—One of the most brutal whippings in this section was brought to light when Henry Hayes, a laborer in St. Mary's township, came into town and exhibited 28 bloody welts on his back and chest that had been inflicted by masked men early Thursday morning. Hayes, who lives on Rock Quarry Rd. about 10 miles from Raleigh, told how he was aroused about 3 o'clock in the morning by 15 masked and hooded men and carried into the woods, where a rope was placed about his neck and he was lifted three times completely off the ground. Later he was ordered to kneel and was beaten severely. 11-17-23

After the beating Hayes was led to the home of his landlord, J. C. Barrington and ordered to kneel and apologize (just why an apology was demanded has not been made clear) and when he refused was beaten again until he obeyed. He was later released and informed that if he did not leave the city at once he would be hanged.

Besides his landlord, Hayes identified Cecil Barrington, his son, and Eugene Petty, a neighbor. The three men were arrested and their bonds fixed at $500 each. It is expected that they will face the grand jury.

This is the third atrocity that has been perpetrated in Wake county within the last two weeks and the citizens have at last begun to demand that something be done about it. J. C. Barrington when questioned about the affair denied any knowledge of the whipping bee indulged in by the mob, but admitted that he had applied for a warrant for Hayes when the latter refused to finish cutting his crop. Solicitor W. H. Evans refused to have the warrant served. The injured man has expressed his intention of fighting the men identified through the courts of Raleigh and with that end in view has retained Attorney H. L. Swain.

The Rev. Dr. Campbell of Atlanta Speaks on Principles and Purposes of the Ku Klux Klan

Bryson City N. C.
Times

OCT 19 1923

Dr. S. F. Campbell, a Baptist minister of Atlanta, Ga., spoke at the courthouse in Bryson City Monday night on the principles and purposes of that much talked of organization known as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Dr. Campbell is making a tour of the United States lecturing in the interests of the Klan. He spoke at this place under the auspices of the local Klan and made a very interesting address. He explained very clearly the principles of the Klan and the purposes for which it was organized and the class of citizens that were opposed to the organization. The principles of the organization were described as being the principles of christianity, patriotism, fraternalism, benevolence and morality. The speaker challenged the enemies of the Klan to find any fault with its principles or to prove where in one single instance the organization had failed to live up to these principles in teaching or in practice. He called upon the people to compare the principles of the Klan with those of any other lawful and laudable organization and then tell him what was wrong with the principles of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Dr. Campbell told his audience some interesting facts in regard to the foreign and alien organizations which exist, flourish and function in this country for the sole purpose of undermining and ultimately overthrowing the government of the United States and pulling down and destroying her institutions and ideals. He told the people that the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was founded, organized and functioning for the purpose of thwarting the evil and destructive influences of these alien organizations which has permeated every branch of our government and wormed their way into every institution, and to foster, protect and preserve our American Government, our institutions and ideals.

The lecturer stated that there were three elements or classes of American citizens that were fighting the organization, viz: the uninformed, the misinformed and the corrupt. And of course the aliens and foreign born citizens of this country are up in arms against any organization which stands for purely American principles. There are, he said, many people who oppose the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan simply because they have not informed themselves as to the principles, purposes and practices of the organization, but have listened only to the misrepresentations of the natural enemies of the Klan and have never taken the time or trouble to inform themselves of the true facts. The misinformed are those who have lent a willing ear to the vituperations and false and unsupported accusations of the foreign enemies of the order and the native corrupt political and financial grafters. The Doctor explained why, and cited many instances in which, the corrupt politicians were antagonistic to the organization. He said that the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan stood for honesty, virtue, morality, true patriotism, good government, the constitution and constitutional law administered and executed by the constituted authorities and that all these things were detrimental to the selfish greed of the corrupt and covetous. He explained the white robe and mask as being a form of regalia adopted because it was different from that used by other secret and benevolent societies and that the mask was used to conceal the identity of the individual members of the organization from the public, not for unlawful or disgraceful purposes, but in order that by not being known as a member of the organization they have a much greater opportunity to assist the regular constituted authorities in uncovering vice and prosecuting criminals. The speaker emphasized the fact that in no case nor under any circumstances were the members of the Ku Klux Klan to take the law into their own hands and mete out punishment to the criminal, no matter how deserving the punishment might be. Notwithstanding the fact that the enemies of the organization have openly charged this. But, on the contrary, the principles, teachings and practices of the Klan are most emphatically against mob violence or the administration or execution of any law except by the regularly constituted authorities, but each member of the organization, according to Dr. Campbell's statements, does pledge himself to assist the authorities in any honorable way in which he can in the execution of the law and the suppression of vice. He soundly denounced any member of the Klan who would be guilty of "flogging" or mob violence and stated that theKlan would most vigorously prosecute and exclude any member proven guilty of such an act. He called upon the public to disabuse their minds of the impression that the organization stood for lawlessness and violence and to seek the true facts in regard to the Klan and learn to look upon it as an organization that stands for the protection and sanctity of the home, the preservation of our government and our American institutions.

Dr. Campbell spoke for an hour and a half and held his audience spellbound for that length of time by his eloquent address, his comprehensive arguments and his brilliant interspersion of wit.

ANDERSON TALKS ON KU KLUX KLAN

Anti-Saloon League Superintendent Says Tammany Fears Its Influence.

New York Times

OBSTACLE TO GOV. SMITH

New York

Dry Leader Accuses Foes of Trying to Link League With Klan.

9-9-23

The influence of the Ku Klux Klan was discussed by William H. Anderson, indicted head of the New York Anti-Saloon League, in an adress he delivered yesterday at the Township Methodist Episcopal Church near Hobar in Delaware County. Copies of the speech were given out yesterday for publication in this city.

The Anti-Saloon League State Superintendent repeated his charge that his "illegal" indictment was due to the fact that his propaganda was proving detrimental to the attempt of the Democrats to elect an Assembly controlled by their party, and that he had proved utterly unwilling to watch the attempt in silence as a price of imfunity from prosecution. The indictment, he added, had been brought about through perjured testimony, accepted by a "Tammany Grand Jury" and was the result of a conspiracy between Tammany Hall, Governor Smith and a "pliant" public prosecutor. He declared that by this time his indictment had become a national issue and would become a worldwide one before long unless the prosecution was dropped.

In the portion of his address devoted to the Ku Klux Klan, Superintendent Anderson said that next to the Anti-Saloon League, the thing that Governor Smith and Tammy most feared as an obstacle in the way of getting control of the White House through the Governor's election to the Presidency was the hooded brotherhood, organized as an "Invisible Empire." He added that the "Manny" Grand Jury's recommendation for a legislative investigation of the Anti-Saloon League has been inspired by the hope that the league could be tied up with the Klan through such an inquiry and that, this done, they could "tie one rock to their two necks and push them overboard at the same time and place."

Defend Ku Klux Klan.

Mr. Anderson said he was not a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and knew of no other official of the Anti-Saloon League who was. He gave as a reason why he would not become a member his imperative obligation as head of the Anti-Saloon League to keep that organization out of all controverfies not immediately conne cted with its own purposes. He added that while he undoubtedly would be charged with so doing, he was not voicing an indorsement of the Ku Klux Klan, though he spoke in its defense in the friendliest manner conceivable.

Mr. Anderson spoke in part as follows:

"It seems one of the main reasons if not the controlling reason why the Tammany Grand Jury which thereby affixed the political brand upon itself, asked for an immediate legislative investigation of the Anti-Saloon League is because Governor Al Smith and Tammany and his and its wet Republican State machine assistants have allowed themselves or somebody else to delude them into believing that such an investigation will disclose a close and vital connection between the Anti-Saloon League and the Ku Klux Klan, or at least between the Klan and the Allited Citizens of America., the enforcement organization fostered by the Anti-Saloon League in New York.

"I have known for months of the desperate effort which has been made by certain influences back of the effort to destroy the Anti-Saloon League of the dry churches to hook up the League wis the Klan or hang the Klan on the League.

"There are two things in America that Governor Al Smith fears more than anything else in his ambition to be President of the United States as the representative of the wet interests in all of their ramifications.

"The thing that he fears first and foremost is the Anti-Saloon League. It so exposed in advance the conspiracy to pass his nullification beer act of three years ago that it defeated him in 1920 for re-election as Governor in spite of Republican treachery in his behalf. Its marshalling of dry sentiment in New York and the nation to such effect that the unfavorable reaction from his approval of repeal knocked the breath out of him and the wind out of his presidential boom, is recent history.

"The next thing that he and his backers fear most is the Ku Klux Klan, for reasons which it is not necessary for me to undertake to diagram.

Linking Klan With League.

"Some alcohol-addled brain evidently conceived the notion, apparently acclaimed as an inspiration, that it would be the crowning stroke of political genius to tie the Anti-Saloon League and the Klan up together, tie one rock to their two necks and push them overboard at the same time and place.

"I am not now and never have been a member of the Ku Klux Klan. So far as I know no member of the Anti-Saloon League staff anywhere is a member. Whether the tens of thousands of individuals who give financial support to the League in this State, or the hundreds of thousands who look to it for leadership in the dry fight favor, oppose or ignore the Klan is no concern of the Anti-Saloon League which exists for just one purpose. A few of them have opposed it publicly. Whether any of them favor it I have no means of knowing. My responsibility stops with my recognition of the fact that my imperative obligation to keep the Anti-Saloon League clear of any other controversial issue prevents the possibility of my ever becoming a member.

"Nevertheless, the outrageous assault upon the American conscience and genuine American patriotism as represented in the churches which stand for dry enforcement, which has been made by Tammany as the exponent of racial and so-called religious prejudice utilized to intensify corrupt political power, an outrage of a sort that is not conceivable anywhere in America outside of New York City, is calculated to impress upon the real American citizenship with redoubled intensity the need of some instrumentality through which such outrages can be blocked, punished and made ultimately impossible. And before Tammany and its backers, journalistic and otherwise, denounce this as 'intolerance' and 'incendiarism' they will do well to recognize that it is merely defense in the open against the real purpose they have sought to accomplish in the dark.

"What the forces back of this Tammany bunch, in its effort to put a beer nullificationist with all of his incidental backing into the White House, is trying to put over on me as the representative of he agency of thousands of Protestant churches, is merely what has become an unexpectedly lurid and glaring example of the kind of thing that for years, throughout the nation, this same ungodly crew has been puting across, especially in he cities where crooked politics is dominated by influence alien in spirit if not under alien control, upon tens of thousands of humble American citizens who were unable to help themselves, or get the facts to he public.

Atack on Tammany.

"Tammany, its backers, and the wet pres object to the Klan, because they charge, the Klan wears a mask, is intolerant and punishes offenses against society outside the processes of law. But Tammany has captured the machinery of the law itself, has prostituted it ino an engine of wrong and oppression to serve corrupt ends, has attempted character assassination under the mask of pretended justice, and, so great is its intolerance of the dry churches which it and its backers secretly curse as 'intolerant,' tha tit seeks to nullify a valid law representing the majority sentiment of the nation which these dry churches reflect. And hypocritical, fanatically intolerant wet newspapers, under the mask of pretended purveying of 'news' make themselves party to the conspiracy.

"Small wonder that the Klan grows, for, to a large portion of the fair-minded public, opposition to it from such quarters creates a presumption that there must be much good in it, or else these evil forces would not be so bitter against it.

"I shall never defend or excuse lawlessness. I shall never hesitate on any proper occasion to denounce lawlessnes. It ha never been necessary to look under cover to find me. But if influences like those behind Tammany in their effort to capture control of the Government of the United States as they have already done with the Governmento f our largest city and most populous State, will try to frame the executive officer of a church movement like the Anti-Saloon League which does not wear a hood and robe, it is certain that they will not hesitate themselves to commit crime in order to lay it at the door of an organization whose use of such insignia of secrecy prevents protection of itself against either malice or mischief.

"I am not endorsing the Ku Klux Klan, though I shall be falsely charged with so doing. But I do say that the sorto f thing which Tammany and some of the very same interests which have been loudest in their denunciation of the Klan have tried to put across on five thousand dry churches in New York State as an entering wedge to trying the same thing upon some fifty thousand or more dry churches in the United States, is likely to do more to awaken American citizenship generally to the need of curbing such malign influence before it is everlastingly too late, than any other single thing that has ever been attempted.

Complains of Grand Jury.

"Further, Tammany and those influences behind it which are more afraid of the light than they have charged the Ku Klux Klan with ebing, will have only themselves to blame if the attempt to railroad to State's prison the representative of the dry Protestant churches, and the denial to him alone of inspection of the minutes of the Grand Jury which indicted him, result in driving tens and hundreds of thousands of American citizens, many of them now opposed to the Klan, to the conclusion that they must connect themselves with something radical through which they can fight such sinister influences in all fields outside of the question of dry enforcement.

"If, through over-reaching themselves, Tammany and the infuences behind it, which themselves have never yet dared come fully into the open, succeed in convincing a large part of the citizenship that the charges against the Klan have been false, and that after all it is a praiseworthy American institution, or else that an indisputably commendable American institution can be developed out of it through the processes of orderly evolution, as fo rexample, if it discards the secrecy of hood and robe and relies more upon the unassaiable secrecy of the American ballot in the hands of an awakened, intelligent, determined electorate, these Tammany enemies of the common god will have nly themselves to thank for a situation that will hasten the ultimate destruction of the political power, present and prospective, which now so intoxicates them."

POLICE AND KLAN IN ARMED CLASH

Atlanta

Lockport, New York, October 19.—Two men are under arrest and the possibility of an investigation loomed as the aftermath of an armed clash early today between police and deputy sheriffs and an initiation party of 600 Ku Klux Klansmen near Cambria center.

Those under arrest are William Lozier and Charles Turver, both of Niagara Falls. Thirteen others, including one woman, were questioned at the district attorney's office today but were not held.

Sheriff Benjamin Gould received reports from motorists that armed men, garbed in white, were stopping automobile parties on the Saunders settlement road. The sheriff, with two deputies and three Lockport policemen, investigated. When their car reached the vicinity of a field in which a klan initiation was purported to be taking place, it was stopped by two white robed sentinels.

According to the officers when the sheriff's party failed to leave as ordered, one of them was struck by a klan guard. The sentinel was felled with the butt of a revolver in the hands of one of the investigating party.

10-20-23

Shouts of the guards attracted klansmen from the field and as the sheriff started to advance toward the enclosure, the little knot of officers was surrounded. Gould and his men retreated toward the road and made a dash for their car. As the machine sped away a scattering volley of shots broke out. No one was hit.

After the sheriff's party had broken free and his car had edged its way through the lines of machines at the roadside, some of which had started in pursuit, he rushed to Lockport with Lozier and Turvier who were seized in the melee.

The prisoners were locked up and the sheriff returned to the scene with reinforcements. Several automobile loads of citizens followed. Arriving at the field the second time, the officers charged the crowd at once. The resistance broke and there was a concerted rush for the cars surrounding the meeting place. The officers said they fired no shots except at fleeing automobiles which had been commanded to stop.

Fire arms abandoned in the field were seized.

Henry H. Fletcher, in whose field the clash occurred, told the police he had rented it to an "Edward Wilson."

HIBBEN ATTACKS KLAN.

President of Princeton Says "100 Per Centers" Are Un-American.

Commercial

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Denouncing the Ku Klux Klan as striking at the rights of every American citizen, un-American and subversive of the union and solidarity of the American people, President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University today made answer to Bishop Alma White of the Pillar of Fire Church, who in a statement yesterday commending the activities of the klan, declared it would soon completely dominate Princeton University.

Memphis Com.

"I am sure that all right-minded citizens must look with disfavor upon the purposes of the Ku Klux Klan," declared President Hibben. "This organization, while professing to have as its end the upbuilding of the standards and ideals of American citizenship, tends by its express policies and practices to destroy the very essence of our national traditions. If not by its expressed policies, at least by practices in several states, it assumes that its members have a right to take the law of the land into their own hands and execute it at their own pleasure.

11-2-23

"This strikes at the rights of every American citizen, which have always been safeguarded and I trust always will be safeguarded by the processes of law. Moreover, it is un-American and subversive of the union and solidarity of our American people to excite and sustain race and religious prejudices. Such an attitude is directly opposed to the spirit of tolerance which has always been characteristic of our people, both towards our native-born citizens and the stranger within our gates."

ROBED MEN BLOCKED ROAD

And Felled Investigating Deputy Near Cambria Centre—Two Are Held.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Two men are under arrest and the possibility of an investigation loomed as the aftermath of an armed clash early today between a force of Sheriff's deputies and Lockport police, under the leadership of Sheriff Benjamin Gould of Niagara County, and an initiation party of 600 Ku Klux Klansmen near Cambria Centre, on the Saunders Settlement road, five miles west of this city.

Those under arrest today are William Lozier, Niagara Falls, a toolmaker, and a man giving the name of Charles Turver, also claiming Niagara Falls as his residence. Thirteen others, one a woman, were questioned at the District Attorney's office this morning. They were released. Lozier and Turver were held on an open charge.

Sheriff Gould received reports from motorists late last night that armed men, garbed in white, were stopping automobile parties on the Saunders Settlement road. The Sheriff, with two deputies and three Lockport policemen, investigated. When their car reached the vicinity of a field in which a Klan initiation was purported to be taking place it was stopped by two white-robed sentinels.

According to the deputies, when the Sheriff's party failed to leave, as ordered, one of them was struck by a Klan guard. The sentinel was felled with the butt of a revolver in the hands of one of the investigating party and both guards were engulfed in the rush of the deputies and policemen from the machine.

Shouts of the guards attracted Klansmen from the field, and as the Sheriff started to advance toward the enclosure, the little knot of officers was surrounded. Gould and his men retreated toward the road and made a dash for their car, which had been left with the engine running. As the machine sped away the formation of Klansmen which had blocked advance to the field broke and a scattering volley of shots broke out behind Sheriff Gould's party. No one was hit.

After the Sheriff's party had broken free and his car had edged its way through the lines of machines at the roadside, some of which had started in pursuit, he rushed to Lockport with Lozier and Turner, who were seized in the melée.

The prisoners were locked up and the Sheriff returned to the Klan gathering with reinforcements. Several automobile loads of citizens followed. Arriving at the field the second time the officers charged the crowd at once. The resistance broke and there was a concerted rush for the cars surrounding the meeting place. The officers said they fired no shots except at fleeing automobiles which had been commanded to stop.

Firearms abandoned in the field were seized.

Henry H. Fletcher, in whose field the clash occurred, told the police he had rented it to an "Edward Wilson."

No comment was forthcoming from the District Attorney's office this morning other than that an investigation might follow if complaints were lodged.

KLAN PERMANENTLY OUTLAWED IN N. Y.

N. Y. Herald Tribune

ALBANY, Oct. 12.—Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and their women's auxiliary, Kamelia, are prohibited forever from acting as an incorporation by an order obtained last week from Supreme Court Justice Rosche by Deputies Attorney-General Charles E. McManus and Edward G. Griffin. The order was filed with the Albany County Clerk's office. 10-17-23

It had been charged the Klan had attempted to incorporate to escape the Walker law, which required the Klan organizations to unmask by filing with the Secretary of State the lists of their members. It also was alleged they had changed their incorporation papers after they had been approved by Supreme Court Justice Pierce of Buffalo.

Supreme Court Justice Staley of this city sustained the contention, and on this ground the final order was granted to-day by Justice Rosche.

K. K. K. INVADES JERSEY CHURCH, COLLECTS $150

Seventy-eight in Full Regalia Sit in Pews as Two Pass Plate.

NEW YORK CITY AMERICAN
JUNE 4, 1923

MANASQUAN, N. J., June 4.—Seventy members of the Ku-Klux Klan and eight Royal Riders of the Red Robe, all in full regalia, stalked into the First Methodist Protestant Church here last evening and seated themselves in pews.

When the time came to take up the collection a Royal Rider of the Red Robe and a white-robed Klansman marched up to the front of the edifice, took a plate each and proceeded to pass it from pew to pew. They got $150, which they gave to the pastor, the Rev. R. C. Phillips.

Mr. Phillips preached on "Love and Hate," and invited one of the masked callers to speak to the congregation when he had finished. The invitation was accepted by A. H. Bell, who took off his mask and was introduced by the clergyman of the great titan of Providence No. 3 of New Jersey.

Mr. Bell said thta the Ku-Klux Klan was not opposed to Catholics, Jews or Negroes. In fact, he said, he and his followers had thought of going to a Negro church that evening and giving the pastor $50, but as it rained they had given up the project. Jews were not admitted to the organization, he said, because it was felt that they would not feel at home in the lodge rooms. A grand dragon, who concealed his identity behind his mask throughout his speech, also made a short address.

Mr. Bell prefaced his remarks by reading some verses from the Bible concerning sacrifice and service. Sacrifice and service, he said, were the foundation stones of the Ku-Klux Klan.

"The Klansmen are living sacrifices to God and the Ku-Klux Klan means nothing more than a family or a brotherhood," he said.

"Klansmen must be 100 per cent. Americans, although the newspapers and others would have you believe that our organization is anti-Catholic, anti-Negro, anti-Jew, anti--foreign born and anti-everything else. We are not; we are just Americans. We believe in the Constitution of the United States, which guarantees to ever ycitizen the right to worship according to the dictates of his heart.

"So what right have we to say anything against the Catholics or to say that we are anti-Jew?

"We don't allow Jews to join the Klan because Christ is the criterion of our character. The Jews do not recognize Christ as such ,and we think a Jew would feel out of place in our lodge rooms.

"To show that we are not anti-Negro, I want to say that before we came here to-night one of our members suggested that we go to the local Negro church and present the pastor with $50 for his good work, but the rain prevented us from carrying out that suggestion.

"We do not believe in the intermarrying of the Negro and the white races. It only takes a drop of Negro blood to make a Negro, and the way intermarrying is going on in the country now, in about five hundred years we would have an America ruled by mongrels.

"Every year there are thousands of girls lost in black dives, many of which are supported by politicians. The Ku-Klux Klan cleaned out every one of these dives in Chicago, and will do so all over the United States. Not by tar and feathers—de do not do that—but by handling the evidence we get to the proper authorities.

"We have about 4,000,000 members in the United States to-day, and every day we are growoing at the rate of about 500 to 2,000.

KLAN SPEAKER, MASK OFF, IN JERSEY PULPIT

TELLS OF ORDER'S PURPOSE

70 Hooded Members with Royal Riders Attend Services in Manasquan M. E. Church

For the first time in the history of the Ku Klux Klan in New Jersey, a member of that organization unmasked himself in public last night when a Klansman mounted the pulpit of the First Methodist Church, in Manasquan, during the services and addressed the congregation on the aims of the order.

Seventy fully masked and robed members of the Klan and its kindred body, the Royal Riders of the Red Robe, attended the service and at its conclusion took up a collection of $150, which was presented to the pastor.

The Klansmen and the Riders occupied pews especially reserved for them. At the end of the sermon on "Love and Hate" by the pastor, the Rev. R. C. Phillips, one of the robed and masked figures advanced to the pulpit. The pastor had invited him to explain the purposes of the Klan.

The speaker was introduced as the "Great Titan of Province No. 3 of New Jersey."

REMOVES HIS MASK.

Showing not the slightest hesitancy, he removed his mask. At once he was recognized as the mysterious "Mr. Bell of Bloomfield, N. J.," who on Saturday night played a leading part in the Klan conclave at Point Pleasant.

"Mr. Bell" denied that the Klan was anti-Catholic, anti-Jewish or anti-negro. He said that the organization was founded on sacrifice and brotherhood. He asserted:

"We have 4,000,000 members in the United States to-day and every day we are growing at the rate of 500 to 2,000.

"We do not allow Jews to join the Klan because Jews do not recognize Christ and we think a Jew would feel out of place in one of our lodge rooms.

DENIES WAR ON NEGROES.

"To show we are not anti-negro, I want to say that before we came here, we had intended going to a negro church and presenting the pastor with $50. The rain prevented us from doing this, however.

"We do not believe in intermarriage of negro and white. It takes only a drop of negro blood to make a Negro and according to the way inter-marrying is going on in the country now, in about five hundred years we would have America ruled by a race of mongrels.

"Every year thousands of girls are lost in black dives. The Klan cleaned out every one of these dives in Chicago and will do so all over the United States."

Before the masked men departed in closed automobiles, the "Great Titan" presented the "Grand Dragon" of the Royal Riders. The latter, however, did not unmask.

NEW JERSEY MOB LAW EFFECTIVE THIS WEEK

Alexander Bill Affects K. K. K.

Newark, N. J., July 2.—As the climax of long agitation New Jersey's first statute conceived by the Legislature as a curb on the Ku Klux Klan became effective July 4. The bill, supported by Negro leaders of the state, was introduced by Assemblyman Randolph of Essex, passed by this year's Legislature and approved by Governor Silzer. It is Chapter 147 of the 1923 laws and is entitled "An act to suppress mob violence."

"Any collection of individuals, five or more in number, assembled for the unlawful purpose of offering violence to the person or property of any one supposed to have been guilty of a violation of the law, or for the purpose of exercising correctional powers or regulative powers over any person or persons by violence, and without lawful authority, shall be regarded and designated as a 'mob,'" reads the opening section of the law.

Persons who compose mobs with the intent to inflict damage or under the protense of exercising correctional powers are made subject to a fine ranging from $100 to $1,000 and imprisonment for not less than thirty days nor more than one year for every offense. Where damage is inflicted, those participating are to be deemed guilty of a felony and subject to imprisonment not exceeding five years, and the person suffering by the acts of the mob, either to himself or his property, is given the right of action against the county or city in which the violence occurred for damages not exceeding $5,000. Survivors are given the same right of action where death is due to such violence.

Lynching and Sheriff Removal.

It is provided further that "if any person shall be taken from the hands of the sheriff, or his deputy, having such person in custody and shall be lynched, it shall be prima facie evidence of failure on the part of such sheriff to do his duty," and the Governor is to remove him from office. The official has the right of appeal to the Governor, however, and the Governor may reinstate him if evidence produced shows that he did all in his power to protect his prisoner.

Both the Republicans and Democrats in their 1921 platforms denounced the Ku Klux Klan, but in their convention declarations last fall they confined themselves to advocacy of anti-lynching legislation. Preceding the session of the Legislature the Negroes of the state held numerous discussions as to the character of legislation they should seek and in the end the bill sponsored by Mr. Randolph, the sole Negro member of the Legislature, was determined upon.

KLAN CROSS IS DESTROYED.

Metuchen (N. J.) Opponents Take Emblem and Burn It in Square.

New York
July 15 1923

METUCHEN, N. J., July 14.—A fiery cross of the Ku Klux Klan was burned by opponents of the Klan in front of the National Bank in Main Street late last evening. At about 10 o'clock word spread that a Ku Klux Klan meeting was in progress in a building known as the Old Flour Mill in LaFayette Road, near Woodbridge Avenue.

Opponents of the Klan rushed to the scene, and, they said, found a wooden cross, wrapped in oil-soaked rags, burning brightly. The crowd extinguished the blaze and carried the cross to Main Street, where, in front of the bank, they relighted it.

Outposts of the Klansmen, it was said, saw the crowd coming and the fifty or sixty Klansmen present at the meeting ran away.

KLAN INITIATES 652.

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 23.—Deputy Sheriff Joseph P. Winters, who lives in Paramusboro, brought word to Hackensack this morning of the initiation of 652 candidates of the Ku Klux Klan in a midnight ceremony in the woods near his home. Fully 2,000 members and friends of the organization from Hudson, Passaic and Essex Counties and many from New York were among the spectators, he declared.

A fiery cross was carried at the head of the parade of the candidates around the field, and when the ceremony was ended a hugh wooden cross, fifty feet high and erected on a prominent knoll, was set on fire. It was 2 o'clock before the last of about 300 autos left the field. Theodore Dunn, one of the owners of the field, said today that the man who held it said he wanted a place for a Sunday school gathering.

7 HELD AFTER KLAN MEETS.

Minister Among Prisoners Accused of Possessing Revolver.

(Special to The New York Times.)

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 23.—Seven men, including an Ocean Grove minister, arrested early yesterday morning after a Ku Klux Klan meeting on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver without a permit, were held in $200 bail each this morning for the grand jury. Bail was furnished by a local real estate man.

The minister was the Rev. John Clark, believed to have been the principal speaker at the meeting in Junior Hall. After the meeting Dr. Clark started away in an automobile with Jesse Hill of Bayonne, William Groyers of 659 Fifty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, and George Townley, William Bremble, Earl Hartpence and Delbert E. Brady, the driver, all of Plainfield.

The car was stopped by Chief of Police Kiely, who found the revolver in a pocket of the automobile. None would admit ownership of the weapon, so all seven were taken before Mayor Loizeaux, who held them in $500 bail each. Unable to get bail, they spent the night in Police Headquarters.

J. WELDON JOHNSON RAPS KU KLUX KLAN

(Preson News Service.)

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 8.—Commenting on the stand taken by the officials of the leading Protestant churches denouncing the Ku Klux Klan, James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., says in part

"The present effect of the Ku Klux Klan, 'schrecklichkeit' seems to be the union of Americans of all faiths and races against the attempt to commercialize disunion and hatred. Meetings participatel in jointly by Protestants, Catholics and Jews are now followed by a statement in The Churchman, organ of the Protestant Episcopal Church, denouncing the klan and expressing astonishment and regret that any Protestant clergyman in the West should have so lowered himself as to participate in the klan's activity. A paragraph from the Churchman's leading editorial is worth quoting:

"We can understand why the cheap ritual and the declarations of superpatriotism, characteristic of the klan, have a romantic appeal for the thousands of immature young men who are members; our understanding fails in an effort to comprehend how any clergyman can be a partner in a movement that violates every basic principle of the religion of Jesus Christ.

18 GOVERNORS ARE KU KLUX

(Preston News Service)

Newark, N. J., Aug. 30.—According to information obtained by a clever newspaper reporter at a recent meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in this section a very prominent citizen was speaker of the evening and during his address he pointed out the wonderful progress the organization had made. He declared that at present 18 governors of states are now members of the klan and that the membership now totals more than five million members in all parts of the country. As far as the reporter was able to learn several clergymen were at the meeting and made short talks.

One speaker declared that it was not the intention of the klan to make any attack on Negroes of this country. He pointed out that the Negro was incapable of self-government as has been evidenced for centuries past. It is the religious and bounded duty of the American white man to nuture and protect the Negro and to see that he stays in his place. The klan does not intend any harm to Negroes. All they want them to do is to stay in their places.

This, he declared was the plan as related to Japanese, Chinese, Jews, Turks. The klan in reality is the best friend that these people have in this country. The klan's put down general unrest and permission is to stabilize government, petuate the principles of true Americanism.

KLAN CROSS IN JERSEY CITY.

Knights of the Ku Klux Klan planted their first flaming cross in Jersey City last night on the North Street grounds, fifty feet from the Paterson Plank Road near Central Avenue. Thousands were attracted by the blazing emblem, most of them motorists on the Plank Road. A call was sent in for reserves from the Central Avenue station. When they arrived the cross was blazing brightly, but no person was near it. The onlookers watched from the road.

Fire Engine Company 14, responding to a still alarm, extinguished the blaze. The cross was about six feet high, wrapped in rags and burlap soaked with kerosene. Police were unable to learn who did it.

SEVEN MEN ARRESTED AT KU KLUX INITIATION

Plainfield, N. J., August 23.—A Ku Klux Klan initiation here last night ended with the arrest of seven men, one of whom said he was a minister, on charge of carrying firearms in an automobile. The men were held in $500 bail each and, failing to post bond, were locked up for a hearing today.

Forty policemen were called out to guard a klan meeting at a hall in the city while an initiation was being held on a hill in the outskirts. During the night klansmen in groups drove back and forth from the hall to the hill and one of these groups was searched with the result that a shotgun and two revolvers were found.

POLICE TEAR DOWN CROSSES

Harding Tributes Supposed to Have Been Fired by Ku Klux Destroyed.

(Special to The New York Times.)

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Aug. 10.—Three burning crosses, supposedly erected and fired by the Ku Klux in this place, Arlington and Kearny, N. J., as symbolic memorials to President Harding, were torn down early this morning by the police. The cross which attracted the townspeople of Bloomfield was set up on a knoll near East Passaic Avenue. The fiery torch in the shape of the cross threw its glare for miles around and was seen clearly by residents of Belleville, Bloomfield and Nutley.

Inhabitants who had been awakaned by the glare in the sky called up the police. On motorcycles the police hurried to the spot, and arrived there in time to see white-clad figures speeding away in automobiles. The police pulled down the burning cross and extinguished the flames.

A burning cross similarly was found and destroyed at Arlington, where it was raised near a cemetery. At Kearny a fiery cross was displayed at Schuyler Avenue and Belleville Turnpike. White-robed figures grouped themselves in shape of a triangle around the flaming emblem. The cross torn down by the police of Bloomfield was twenty-five feet hih and had a cross arm fifteen feet long.

ATLANTIC CITY GETS KU KLUX SCARE

FIERY CROSS BURNED

Nutter Tells Mayor "We Can Handle Klan If You Keep Police Off Us."

(By WILFRED R. BAIN.)

(Special Correspondent.)

Atlantic City, Nov. 22.—Atlantic City has officially declared war on the Ku Klux Klan! Members of the hooded mob cannot parade or assemble within the confines of Atlantic County. For some time, rumors have been circulated, telling of the deeds of the Ku Klux in various sections of the County, but since no violence was committed, no attempt was made to interfere. Instead an attitude of watchful waiting was adopted.

After announcing their determination to "test the legality of the executive's power in the matter of the fiery cross, the Klan became bolder, and on Thursday night last set up the cross, with the emblem of the K. K. K., on a section of famed beach, so that it could be seen by visitors in the large hotels, as well as Boardwalk strollers. The flaming cross attracted the attention of large crowds; others in the neighborhood who had gone to bed were awaken from sound slumber to behold the flames skyward, with the "K. K. K." clearly in view.

Colored Section Excited

As the crowds gathered, excitement ran high, among the colored section of the city, word having been passed along that someone was going to be burned alive. Meantime Police Officer Walter Castor, colored, seeing the crowd, rapped on the pavement with his nightstick and ran to the scene. Quickly following him came Police Officer John Paul Jones, white.

Castor, without hesitation jumped over the iron railing from the Boardwalk to the beach and demolished the smoldering skeleton thus daring members of the hooded mob to come out in the open and 'take him.' The crowd that had gathered around the scene, many of whom were on their way from theatres, soon disbanded, discussing the incident excitedly as they walked away.

The burning of the fiery cross on the bathing beach, followed close on the heels of utterances, by Mayor Edward L. Vader and Attorney Isaac H. Nutter, in which both verbally condemned the Klan, and defied its members to show themselves in Atlantic City. These remarks were made on the eve of the past election, while the Mayor and Mr. Nutter spoke from the same platform in the interests of Republican candidates.

Nutter Is Defiant

The Mayor told an audience of nearly 1,000 that, "I have no use for the Ku Klux Klan. You know I am a Catholic, and if they make a move in this city under my administration, they will find a warm reception—the whole police department, and if necessary the State officers will be turned against them." In his reply, Mr. Nutter outlined the activities of the Klan in the County and told the Mayor: "All we want you to do is to keep your policemen off us!"

The Mayor had previously stated that he would not issue a permit for any Klan parade here. In a formal statement issued in behalf of himself and four members of the City Commissioners, he declared that on next Thursday, the regular day for the Commission meeting, an ordinance would be introduced prohibiting exhibitions or demonstrations by the K. K. K. in this city.

Finding themselves unmolested after several exhibitions of burning constitutional rights," the Klan organ, under recent date, asserted that "Atlantic City Klansmen declare that within six months Klansmen will be parading the streets of Atlantic City, and they propose to make use of and maintain their constitutional right at the price of bloodshed, if need be."

It is stated that the Ku Klux Klan members here, number close to 5,000, most of the meetings, so far having been held in Pleasantville. They figured prominently in the recent election and are generally thought to have brought the strength to two reform candidate who lost colored citizens, in anticipation of the coming fight, are arming themselves, prepared to do or die in the attempt.

JUDGE BROCK SCORES NORTH CAROLINA KLAN

New York Age

(Special to The New York Age)

Winston-Salem, N. C.—Judge Brock, in his charge to the grand jury at the opening of Forsyth Superior court, took a rap at the Ku Klux Klan. He declared that there exists "an organization or organizations gotten together for the purpose of regulating other people's business" in their acts throughout the nation, and indeed within the bounds of this state. "They have been going around under the cover of darkness, with a mask over their faces assuming the powers that rightfully belong to the courts of the nation under the authority given them by the constitution of the United States," he asserted.

The judge declared that under the constitution every individual citizen of the nation is entitled to certain rights and privileges among which are life, liberty and prosperity, but that there are some people who are banded together in organizations and bands who would tear down the very principles of the constitution

Judge Brock declared that the bands of men who go about the country with their faces covered and under cover of darkness to remedy some wrong, real or imaginary, are a band of cowards, and should not be countenanced by any group of right thinking and lawful men anywhere. An organization such as this strikes at the very roots of the constitution.

KU KLUXER GETS 12-MOS. SENTENCE

Mask Is Torn From Klansman's Face By Intended Victim—Conviction Follows.

New York Age

(Special to The New York Age)

Raleigh, N. C.—Regardless of threats that he would be "taken care of" and that he "would hardly go back to Raleigh again to the Senate," State Senator J. R. Baggett of the 12th district has introduced a bill making it a felony for a person to appear off his own premises disguised so as to destroy or hide his identity.

Senator Baggett says, however, that he has received many letters commending the fight he is making, "and numbers of people are giving me their support," he declared.

One Ku Kluxer, Mack Moore, a Harnett county farmer, was given a twelve months' sentence by Judge Lloyd Horton, the court being held at Lillington. Moore, in his Ku Klux regalia, was charged with going to the home of J. I. Faircloth on the night of December 5, about 10.30 o'clock, telling Faircloth that because he, Faircloth, had been interferring with blockaders, some fifteen others had come with Moore to take Faircloth out with them. Faircloth covered the intruder with a pistol and tore the mask from his face.

Another masked man came to Moore's rescue, but Faircloth held them both at bay, finally driving them off. Moore was identified positively by the 10-year-old daughter and 8-year-old son of Faircloth and by Faircloth himself. Solicitor Clawson Williams conducted the prosecution and Moore is the first member of the Ku Klux Klan to be convicted in a North Carolina Court. The case was tried January . Moore was charged with conspiracy to commit secret assault and trespass.

PRISON FOR MASKED MAN.

North Carolina Citizen Gets 12 Months for Warning a Neighbor.

LILLINGTON, N. C., Jan. 10.—A sentence of twelve months at hard labor was imposed on Mark Moore, a Harnett County resident, yesterday, on conviction of conspiracy and trespass, after Ira M. Faircloth, a farmer neighbor, had testified Moore entered his house at night in a white robe and hood and warned him against utterances derogatory to the Ku Klux Klan.

Faircloth told the Court he stuck a pistol in Moore's stomach when he approached his bed and forced him to remove the robe and mask. He said he saw other masked figures in front of the house, but could not identify them.

Faircloth testified he was awakened one night last week by the noise of some one forcing an entrance into his house. Seizing a pistol which he kept under his pillow, he said, he waited until a robed figure had slipped into his room and had begun to deliver the warning at his bedside before he forced the unmasking.

WAR AGAINST KU KLUX.

What is called the first gun in the expected war against the Ku Klux Klan in the North Carolina legislature was fired in the shape of a bill introduced by Senator J. R. Baggett. This bill makes it a felony for any person to appear off his premises disguised so as to destroy his identity. The author of this bill said that he had received many abusive letters since beginning his attack upon the Klan and also letters of commendation. The New York Age

The revival of the Klan was not regarded with favor by the officials of North Carolina under the administration of Governor Bickett and efforts were made to drive it from the State. The report that one of the new judges in the Superior Court was affiliated with the Klan has given rise to much criticism. Judge Henry A. Grady, the jurist referred to, refused to deny or admit such membership, but asserted that he was not a member of any secret or fraternal order whose oath, obligation or ritual was at variance with his oath as judge or as a citizen of North Carolina. He also stated that the only purpose he had and the only feeling that would actuate him in the discharge of his duties would be to see that equal and exact justice is given to all parties regardless of their race.

The Greensboro Daily News, one of the most outspoken and fearless papers of the South, took the alleged connection of Judge Grady with the Ku Klux very seriously and was not disposed to regard his disclaimer as sufficient. The statement ascribed to the judge, that he could not understand why the public should take an interest in a private matter, referring to his connection with the Klan, was pronounced "enough to prove that he is not a fit person to preside over a court in this State." The News editor contended that "Kluckers," as it termed the members of the Klan, "by the very terms of their creed, are admittedly bigoted and prejudiced." It was asked how can one of them be expected to be a just judge in cases which are sure to involve Negroes and quite likely to involve Jews and Catholics. The logical answer to such a question is regarded as ample cause for the impeachment and removal from the bench of Judge Grady.

These exhibitions of public sentiment in North Carolina, together with the startling revelations of the state of terror brought about through the despotic rule of the Klan in parts of Louisiana, show that the war against this organization has not begun any too soon. So long as the Klan confined its campaign of midnight whippings and assassinations to the Negro population, but little attempt was made by the authorities of the various Southern States to curb its atrocities. But when, as is Louisiana and Texas, its victims actsyohi- and Texas, its vicious acts were perpetrated upon white men and women, who fell under its ban, the authorities became aroused to the danger of the situation they had permitted. Thus we find Governor Parker in Louisiana ordering out the State militia to support a legal investigation of the state of terror inaugurated by the Klan through the torture and murder of white citizens in the town of Mer Rouge.

A writer in the New York Herald, who has made a thorough study of the organization in all parts of the country, attempted to show that the Klan was dead in the South, except in Louisiana and Texas. It is claimed that the Klan was compelled to abate its outrages against the Negroes in the South, because the migration of the workers of [illegible] became so heavy as to alarm planters, who depended upon this [illegible] to raise their cotton. These employers of labor became opposed to an organization that exerted such a harmful influence upon their industry. Then the ministers of Atlanta conducted an active campaign against the Klan, which crystallized public sentiment unfavorably [illegible] the order. Nevertheless, the Klan has not dropped its doctrine of "white supremacy," which still appeals to the prevailing southern sentiment.

All these elements of dissatisfaction and self-interest have aided in warring upon the Klan, but the order still wields an evil influence in promoting racial rancor and in politics. It has been scotched in several places, but it is far from being killed. It will require all the efforts of legislators, public prosecutors and courts, newspaper editors, employers of labor and ministers of the Gospel to bring the war against the Klan to a successful issue.

L. E. Hall, Negro With Good Reputation, Tells How 40 Disguised Men Took Him From Home and Beat Him—They Accused Him of Talking Against White—Denies It.

Greensboro Daily News

Sometime between midnight of December 6 and 1 o'clock of December 7 a citizen of Columbus county was aroused at his home in Chadbourn and upon appearing at the door was confronted by a group of men wearing masks and robes, one of whom demanded that the house holder come out into the yard. Several guns were pointed in his direction. He complied, and then asked: "Now here I am. What do you want?"

"We will tell you when we take you down the road a piece," a voice said.

"Can't take him without his clothes," said someone. One of the men went into the house and brought out the clothes. The householder partially dressed, and with the guns still trained on him entered one of several automobiles standing in front of his place, as directed.

The man who was prisoner to the mob is L. E. Hall, negro, teacher, expert farmer, in the employ of the state of North Carolina, and the United States. He is an agent in the co-operative extension work in agriculture and home economics. The head of this department is Dr. B. W. Kilgore, director of the agricultural extension service. Hall is the appointee of C. R. Hudson, state agent. These field agents receive their pay in part from the state treasury and in part from the national treasury.

of Chadbourn one of the men in the car with Hall suggested that he look back, and on doing so he counted the headlights of seven automobiles (a flour sack had been placed over the head of the prisoner; the lights were visible through it.) The captive was told there were three more cars ahead. Something was said about a whipping. It was evident that there must be about 40 men in the mob.

"Good land!" said the prisoner, "does it take all these men to whip one man?" "No," he was told, "we have brought along some for witnesses." After about three miles the procession stopped, and a whispered conversation amongst the masks took place. The prisoner was told that he would be asked some questions before further procedure. The ensuing colloquy was something like this, according to Hall.

Q. Did you say that the Dyer anti-lynching bill would pass, and that for every negro lynched the white people would have to pay $15,000?

A. No, I did not say that.

Q. Well, did you not say that if the Dyer anti-lynching bill did not pass that the negroes would stop lynching by lynching a few white folks?

A. No, I never gave atterance to any such statement.

Q. What do you do around Chadbourn?

A. I don't do much of anything around Chadbourn.

Q. What kind of work do you do?

A. Extension work.

Q. Who employs you?

A. I am employed by the extension service, department of agriculture.

Q. What do you do?

A. Organize and work with negro farmers throughout the state.

Questioner. That is just what we understand. You are organizing negroes against whites throughout the state.

A. That is not so. My business is to assist farmers to do better farming and help them solve their farm problems.

Q. We did not come here to hear an agricultural lecture. Take him, boys, and whip him some anyhow.

The negro was directed to lie down on a ditch bank, and taking off and spreading his coat on the ground he did so. After which one of the masks beat him for awhile. "Haven't you anything to say?" Hall was asked. "No. I have nothing to say," was the reply. Another period of beating, with what appeared to the recipient to be a wet rope, but may have been a strap. "Now stop and let him talk," said the monitor. The prisoner said that if they would tell him what they wanted him to say he would try and say it. "We know what you are doing but we want to hear you say it," as the rejoinder. "I am not doing anything I have not told you," said Hall. They beat him some more, turned his face toward home and told him if he would go in the direction he was headed he would land there. He told them he thought the sack might as well come off his head ,and they agreed. He was able to recognize no one in the party, and to see that none of the cars bore license tags.

Hall is black, something between six feet and six-two in stature, powerfully built. He is an upstanding man, and carries himself with an air of unquestionably belonging on the earth. He says he has never harmed anybody in his life, has a conscience void of offense, and made up his mind from the first to take whatever was given him without resistance, as resistance of 40 by one—the 40 having arms, too— would be foolish. He relates his experience calmly and says he talked with the mob in his ordinary conversational tone.

There is a great variety of types among negroes of full blood, a transmission of the variety of tribal types from which they sprang. To this day some African tribes are pacific, some warlike; some proud, intelligent, bold; some mean and timorous. Hall conveys the impression that fear of man is foreign to his nature. He insiste he was not frightened on this occasion, and his manner in saying it carries conviction. He is an educated man, accustomed to address crowds, and he expresses himself with a simple, concise dignity and eloquence. He is not very widely known in the Chadbourn neighborhood, being absent most of the time amongst the farmers.

Hall has been a co-worker with Frissell, Booker Washington and Dr. Moton, and has been thoroughly imbued with the Booker Washington doctrine as to the place and duty of negro citizenship—let politics alone, be clean, strive toward intelligence, be industrious, leave the social and political structure entirely in the hands of the white man. His identity with this group, the fact that he has been an employe of the state under the immediate supervision of Mr. Hudson, who appointed him, for eight years, and that the activities of these farm agents are open records, seem to preclude the possibility of Hall's being a racio-political propagandist.

Hall says it is bad enough to be beaten, but the experience has left a question in his mind that is more serious. Washington preached. Moton exhorts. Newbold proclaims that intelligence and industry and frugality will solve the race problem "For 15 years since graduating from Hampton, there has not been a work day that I did not get pay for. Many nights and sometimes Sundays I have worked. I own the house in which I live, and eight lots adjoining it. My house is painted and has six rooms. I have a small farm. I have endeavored to mind my own business and meddle with no man's private life. If this is not the type of citizenship required of us, then what is required? If a man who 'tends to his own business is not safe with his family in a home that he has bought and paid for, then where can he be safe? These reflections are far sadder than the beating itself, because they seem to present a hopeless situation."

District Agent Hall's name is found in "Who's Who, in Agriculture," published by L. H. Bailey, of Cornell university. He was a member of the inter-racial committee ap-

N. C. Legislature Strips the Masks Off Klanners.

Richmond Planet - Richmond, Va.

(Preston News Service.)

Raleigh N. C., Feb. 21.—By a vote of 70 to 42 the North Carolina house of Representatives passed the Milliken bill which provides registration of members of secret orders with the secretary of State. 3-3-23

Commenting on the passage of the measure the Greensboro News says:

"After all, the legislature of North Carolina is not yet taking orders from any Imperial Whosiss or any Invisible Empire of Ineffable Idiots. The Milliken bill, requiring the registration of membership of secret orders, passed the house by a vote of 70 to 42, in defiance of the direct commands of the mountebanks of the ku klux order.

"This notion that any set of men by organizing in a gang, secretly or openly, can dictate to the government of North Carolina cannot be too emphatically repudiated. Most of the ku klux activities, like all of the ku klux propaganda, consists of childish mummeries that are entirely harmless; but there is a poisonous residuum in this doctrine that organized minorities may dictate to the majority; and that poison must be neutralized by the state before serious damage is done.

"The Milliken bill, by stripping away the mask of secrecy, will make the ku klux more or less responsible for their acts; which is a pretty fair assurance that ku klux outrages will suddenly cease. The nightshirters are brave enough to beat up a woman, or an unarmed man, as long as they are pretty sure that nobody will ever find them out; but if their victims could find out who are members of the order there is danger that some little shrimp might walk into a ku klux gathering sometime and catch 40 or 50 of the knights without any protection whatever. There is danger that in such circumstances the villain might lose his head and beat them all to death; which is a risk that the ku klux will never, never run."

NORTH CAROLINA BARS LAWS HOSTILE TO KLAN

But Senate Passes Measure Forbidding the Wearing of Masks to Commit Crime.

3-2-23

RALEIGH, N. C., March 1.—Taking up the various measures designed to regulate masked bands, the North Carolina Senate today voted down the Milliken bill to make secret organizations register the names of their members, refusing a substitute to make appearance in masks a disdemeanor, and then, 36 to 11, passed the Armfield bill, advocated by those who praised the Ku Klux Klan. The galleries were crowded and there was frequent applause at complimentary references to the Klan.

The Armfield bill, advocated by supporters of the Klan, declares the appearance of a masked person off his own premises for the "purpose of committing felony" unlawful and punishable by fine up to $200 and imprisonment up to two years.

The appearance of a masked person off his own premises would be prima facie evidence of misdemeanor and such appearance in company with one or more masked persons at night would be "irrebuttable evidence" of intent to commit a felony. The bill would permit secret societies which use masks to attend funerals, go on charitable errands and to wear masks in corporate towns with the consent of the mayor.

Senators advocating passage of the Milliken bill, which had been passed by the House, declared it would show that the chamber did not intend to permit the growth of an "invisible empire" to uncontrollable strength without its membership being known, and argued that the Armfield bill was an innocuous measure.

In advocating the defeat of the Milliken bill Senator Johnson, of Duplin, lauded the Ku Klux Klan as an organization standing for "Protestant Americanism, free speech, free press, white supremacy and the support of all law" and declared that the enemies of the Klan are the Knights of Columbus, backed by The Associated Press and many newspapers.

COLORED WOMEN FLOGGED ON THEIR BLOODY BODIES

The Washington Post

North Carolina Jails Under Fire of Charges; Head of Prisoners' Relief Demands Investigation.

Eagle

(Special to The Eagle.)

Raleigh, N. C., April 19.—James A. Leak, chairman of the North Carolina State Prison Board, says he will not investigate the serious charges made by E. E. Dudding of Washington, D. C., to the effect that the prions of North Carolina are the worst in the Union. D.C. 4/21/23.

Dudding, in a long letter to the press, says that not only are men mistreated in the prisons of the Tar Heel State, but that women are stripped, and flogged by men in the jail stockades, and that such punishment continues until blood flows down their backs to their knees. These savage punishments are said by Dudding to be worst than slave times, and that they follow the slightest infraction of prison rules.

Dudding aims to arouse public sentiment and thus compel an investigation that may bring relief.

One by one the conditions about which Negroes have complained in the South are being revealed as they affect white people as well.

In the old language of Frederick Douglass when speaking of slavery, one end of the rope is around the neck of the master. So today, one end of the rope of wrong and injustice in the South is around the neck of the white man himself.

Name Police Chief In Flogging Mob

(By International News Service.)

LUMBERTON, N. C., April 26.—Charged with being members of a hooded band that on April 15 last, forced two women from a Proctorville home, carried them to a negro graveyard and there stripped and flogged them unmercifully, B. M. Lawson, Chief of Police at Fairmont; John Hedgpeth and Jule Brogden, both of Proctorville, were Thursday given a preliminary hearing.

All three faced charges of first degree burglary, a capital offense in this state, after they were identified by the women victims.

The women were taken to the negro churchyard and laid across a log, where their clothing was removed and a severe beating administered,

KLAN WILL DROP SUIT AGAINST EX-KLEAGLE

Witnesses in Suit Filed by Simmons Not Available.

The Atlanta Constitution

RALEIGH, N. C., June [illegible]—The case of W. W. Guerard, former king kleagle of the Ku-Klux Klan in North Carolina, charged with embezzling $16,000 of the klan's funds, will not come to trial, Solicitor W. A. Evans announced yesterday, following receipt of a telegram from Paul S. Etheridge of Atlanta, Ga., general counsel for the Ku-Klux Klan, who advised the solicitor that the actions were brought under the Simmons regime and that under the rule of Imperial Wizard Evans the necessary witnesses for the prosecution were not available.

Mr. Evans announced that his present intention is to take a nolle prosse in the case and to tax the Ku-Klux Klan with the costs, if authority can be found for that course.

Mr. Evans' action followed a conference held at noon yesterday with Judge E. H. Cranmer and R. W. Bailey, attorney for Guerard. Mr. Bailey immediately withdrew subpoenas for state officers and other prominent citizens, which he and associate counsel had sent to the office of the clerk of the court two hours before.

OVER 40 STATES ARE REPRESENTED AT KLAN MEETING

The Atlanta Constitution

Asheville, N. C., July 16.—The Ku Klux Klan now has members in every state of the Union, high officials in conference here stated tonight. More than forty states are represented at the conference which is considering future policies of the klan. For the first time in its history, women are represented at the klan meeting, they being members of the recently formed ladies of the Ku Klux Klan. 7-17-23

The meeting here is said to be the forerunner of similar annual meetings of grand dragons and great titians for considering the work of the organization.

GENERAL FORREST SPEAKS AT MEET OF KU KLUX KLAN

The Atlanta Constitution

Asheville, N. C., July 17.—General Bedford Forrest, grandson of the famous confederate cavalry leader of the same name and head of the Ku Klux Klan that flourished during the Civil War reconstruction period, addressed the conference of grand dragons and great titans, now in session here, this morning on "the original Ku Klux Klan." 7-18-23

No place for the next annual convention of state officers will be elected at this meeting, this being left to imperial officers, although Denver Colo., Portland, Oregon and Indianapolis, Ind., have extended invitations, officials state. Reports of committees Wednesday will end the convention. Resolutions stating the principles and purposes of theorder and setting forth plans for the coming year are being framed by a special committee and will be made public before the meeting adjourns, the publicity man stated.

Endorsement and support of the women of the Ku Klux Klan, a kindred order established recently at Little Rock, Ark., were given in an unanimous vote today. Members of the Asheville klan, said to have been members of the original klan, are reported to have spoken today.

Woman's Store Bombed After Warning Letters

The Commercial

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 10.—A small country store owned by Mr. and Mrs. Zack Jackson and operated by Mrs. Jackson on the old Creedmoor road, about 12 miles from Raleigh, was wrecked by dynamite early today, according to reports brought to the sheriff of Wake County this morning.

The destruction of the store is said to have followed the receipt by Mrs. Jackson of two letters signed with the initials of a secret organization warning her to move the store, a sort of community gathering place away from that section. The writer of the letters informed Mrs. Jackson that she was an "undesirable resident."

The objection to Mrs. Jackson and her store, according to the letters and such other information as the officers here received, dates back to a neighborhood quarrel over the best way to improve the community school.

Three Men Accused of Beating Two Women Are Found Not Guilty. Taliaferro, Klan Detective, Is Less Fortunate.

(By The Associated Press.)

LUMBERTON, N. C., July 21.—Fifty minutes after the fate of three Robeson County citizens had been placed in the hands of the jury here this afternoon the defendants heard the words: "Not Guilty" which exonerated them of participation in the whipping of two white women by hooded raiders near Proctorville, N. C., on the night of April 14.

And five minutes later the trio—Mike Lawson, chief of police of the village of Fairmont, Johnson Hedgpeth, a farmer, and Jule Brogden, a mechanic, both of Proctorville—were free men, for Solicitor Thomas A. McNeill promptly nolle prossed the indictment for first degre burglary which had been returned against them at the same time as that charging the assaulting and kidnaping of Mrs. Hattie Purvis and Mrs. Mary Ann Watson, the floggers' victims.

Taliaferro Goes to Jail.

But H. L. Taliaferro, who admitted being a special investigator for the Ku Klux Klan, did not fare so well as the defendants in the principal case. Immediately after the jury retired in the flogging trial, Taliaferro, who is said to come from Atlanta, was given a hearing by Judge N. A. Sinclair, presiding in Robeson County superior court, and adjudged in contempt of court, on charges of tampering with state's witnesses in the flogging case. On each of the three counts Judge Sinclair imposed a fine of $250 and a jail sentence of thirty days, a total of $750 and ninety days in jail.

Pending arrangements for an appeal, Judge Sinclair fixed the bond for the klan detective at $5,000.

In refusing a motion to reduce the appearance bond of Taliaferro to $2,500 or $3,000 Judge Sinclair who this morning received a threatening unsigned letter, defied the forces of lawlessness which he declared are at work in this state.

Although he made no direct mention of the letter or of the similar unsigned letter received last night by Stephen McIntyer, the mast active of the lawyers for the prosecution, he referred indirectly to the McIntyre warning, which contained the following paragraph:

"Your intelligence tells you that the exposure of this warning brings an invisible, invincible hand that is mightier than the courts themselves upon your poor unworthy carcass."

Courts Accept the Challenge.

Pointing to Taliaferro, he continued: "This man professes to be the representative of an organization which has declared that it is mightier than the courts, and speaking for myself, I want to say the courts accept the challenge."

The trial of Lawson, Hedgepeth and Brogden, which came to a close late today when the jury reported an acquittal after taking one ballot, was bitterly contested from its start early Tuesday morning.

When the verdict was announced, there was no sign of a demonstration in the court room. Judge Sinclair had instructed Sheriff Lewis to have deputies stationed at various places in the crowd to prevent any manifestation of approval or disapproval. There was a slight stir as the defendants and their families realized that they had been freed of the charge that had been hanging over them since the middle of April: the two prosecuting witnesses, Mrs. Purvis and Mrs. Watson, appeared somewhat crestfallen.

Not Paid by the Klan.

L. L. Johnson, mayor of Lumberton and chief counsel for the defendants, interrupted Attorney McIntyre during the latter's hour and a half address to the jury to deny that his fee was paid by the Ku Klux Klan, as he said he understood the speaker to charge. Judge Sinclair reprimanded him for the interruption. The defense of the alleged floggers was an alibi. They produced a hundred witnesses to prove that Lawson, Hedgepeth and Brogden could not have been in the little negro church yard near Proctorville at ten o'clock on April 14, when Mrs. Watson, and then Mrs. Purvis, one after the other, were bent over a log and flogged unmercifully, according to their testimony, by a band of hooded and white robed raiders.

LUMBERTON, N. C., July 18.—Subpoenas were issued late today upon the allgeed Grand Klaliff of the Ku Klux Klan of North Carolina, and the alleged head of the Fairmont, N. C., Klan calling them to produce records of the Klan showing membership of the Fairmont klavern by the clerk of the court of Robeson county where the trial of Mike Lawson, chief of police of Fairmont, Johnson Hedgepeth and Hugh Brogden are being tried on charges growing out of the flogging of Mrs. Mary Watson and Mrs. Hattie Purvis.

The Klan is also ordered to produce all records showing the connection Chief of Police Lawson, if any, with the Klan, all records connected with the whipping, and all records showing the connection, if any, of H. L. Taliaferro, alleged agent of the Klan, also under indeitment for tampering with state's witnesses.

The subpoenas were issued against B. H. Keith, alleged head of the Fairmont Klavern, and E. F. Randolph, alleged grand klaliff of the North Carolina realm Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, at the request of counsel for the state. At the same time a subpoena was issued at the request of defense counsel against H. E. Hackett of the state's attorneys, ordering him to produce notes of an alleged private interview with Mrs. Watson at which the identification of her assailants is alleged to have been discussed.

Try To Hush Matter Up.

W. R. Surles, a Proctorville merchant who is one of the bondsmen of the three men on trial here admitted today on cross examination that he had tried to persuade Mrs. Hattie Purvis one of the victims to "hush up" the affair, "for the good of all concerned."

Stephen McIntyre, a volunteer assistant to Solicitor McNeil, conducted a severe cross-examination of the witness and asked him whose welfare he had in mind in seeking to hush up the affair. Surles replied "the community and the church."

Questions regarding H. L. Taliaferro who according to the police said he was an agent of the Ku Klux Klan and who is under $5,000 bail on charges of having attempted to tamper with witnesses, also were asked by Mr. Surles.

Accompanied Purvis.

He admitted having accompanied Taliaferro to the Purvis home when Taliaferro expressed a desire to see the place from which the floggers took the two women, Mrs. Purvis and Mrs. Mary Watson. 7-19-23

Order Is Surprise

The issuance of the subpoenas for the alleged klan officials came as a surprise to the defense and their subpoena for Mr. Hackett followed almost immediately.

Meanwhile the defense called Jule Brogden to the stand in his own defense. Brogden denied all knowledge of participation in the whipping of the two women and also testified that he never had been connection with the Ku Klux Klan. Stephen McIntyre, volunteer assistant in the prosecution cross examined Brogden closely, bringing out that Brogden married his wife when she had a living and undivorced husband. He denied, however, that the former husband, A. C. Godwin, who is since alleged to have obtained a divorce, had ever shot at him. He admitted that he had been once fined for the public use of profanity.

Questioned Closely

Brogden testified that he had lived at Proctorville since his discharge from the army about three years ago. On the night of the whipping, April 14, he said that he went to a barber shop and later to two Proctorville stores and then to his home where he remained the balance of the night.

"Ever see any kidnappers?" he was asked. 7-19-23

"Never did," he replied.

"Ever look into a mirror?" queried Mr. McIntyre.

"Many a time, but I saw only myself,' was the answer, the witness continuing, "I may be looking at a hundred now, but I don't know it."

Brogden admitted having talked with H. L. Taliaferro, alleged to be a representative of the Ku Klux Klan and who is now facing charges of attempted intimidation and tampering with state witnesses. He could not recall, however, where the conversation took place or whether it was indoors or out of doors.

Edward Young Clarke, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, came to this city from Atlanta, Ga., yesterday and appeared before the Federal Grand Jury as a witness against Marcus Garvey, the negro leader, who is to be tried on Feb. 20 for defrauding investors in the Black Star Line. Garvey is the head of the "Back to Africa" movement.

At a meeting of the Universal Improvement Negro Association here in July, Garvey, who is known as the "Provisional President of Africa," denounced the Ku Klux Klan, but in October last he made a secret trip to Atlanta and conferred there with Clarke. The Government learned of his conference recently and Assistant United States District Attorney Maxwell S. Mattuck had Clarke subpoenaed before the Grand Jury.

It is believed that Clarke told of his dealings with Garvey. Clarke promised Mr. Mattuck after his appearance before the Grand Jury that he would send here papers which might throw light upon any overtures made by the Black Star Line to the Ku Klux Klan.

"Edward Young Clarke was subpoenaed here by me from Atlanta ten days ago after the investigation into the case of Marcus Garvey disclosed that Clarke was visited by Garvey at Atlanta sometime ago in connection with Garvey's Black Star Line and the Universal Negro Improvement Association," said Mr. Mattuck. "It was my purpose to determine the nature of the conference between the so-called 'Provisional President of Africa,' and Clarke. Clarke appeared before the Grand Jury this morning and was examined by me at length as to the conference between the two men."

Garvey and three officers and directors of the Black Star Line were indicted on a charge of having falsely stated that the line intended to purchase a steamship and an excursion boat and to operate them, and also to purchase a steamship which was to operate between this port and Africa. The line was capitalized at $10,000,000, and Garvey and his associates sought to sell 2,000,000 shares of the stock at par to members of his race by sending circulars sent through the mails.

In January, a negro clergyman, J. W. H. Eason, who was to have been the chief witness for the Government against Garvey, was murdered in New Orleans. There were about fifty other witnesses on the Government's list, however, who would be able to supply the same evidence, it was said. Mr. Mattuck said he had known for some time that attempts were being made to intimidate witnesses, and that several of them had said that their lives had been threatened.

KLAN IS DENOUNCED BY 'THE CLANSMAN'

STOLE ITS LIVERY, HE SAYS

New York City N.Y.

Colonel Felder and Others Attack "Invisible" Empire at Meeting in Century Theatre.

Denouncing the Ku Klux Klan for having stolen the livery of the original order, Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," last night attacked the modern Klan as a dangerous movement in a speech at a meeting under the direction of the American Unity League at the Century Theatre.

Dr. Dixon condemned the present Klan for its persecution of negroes, Catholics, Jews and foreigners, and declared that the original Klan was founded as a weapon against a corrupt and intolerable tyranny by the bravest and noblest men of the South, among whom he mentioned Major Gen. N. E. Forrest of Kentucky, Major Gen. John G. Gordon of Georgia, the late Chief Justice Edward Douglas White of Louisiana and his own father and uncle. He said that his authorship of "The Clansman," which was dramatized for the screen as "The Birth of a Nation," had led to a belief that he was connected with the modern Klan.

"When organized a few years ago, this modern Klan sent me an invitation to join," he said. "I promptly declined, and in my letter warned the organizers that if they dared to use the disguise in a secret oth-bound order today, with the courts of law working under a civilized Government, the end was sure—riot, anarchy, bloodshed and martial law. We have already reached the point of riot and bloodshed, and unless this thing is throttled promptly we are in sight of martial law.

All Foreigners Except Indians.

"Its proscription of the negro race under the conditions of modern life is utterly uncalled for, stupid and inhuman. If the white man is superior—as I believe he is—it is our duty as citizens of a democracy to lift up and help the weaker race. The Klan assault upon the foreigner is the acme of stupidity and inhumanity. We are all foreigners except the few Indians we haven't killed. Some of us landed yesterday. Some of us a few years ago. All came as refugees from the tyranny and anguish of the Old World.

"Our fathers who landed before the Revolution blazed the way through the wilderness for the trembling feet of liberty. They built a beacon on these shores, flashing its rays of hope to all the oppressed of the earth. Shall we, their sons, meet the humble immigrant of today at the water's edge with a mask and dagger and push him back into hell? If this is 100 per cent. Americanism, I for one spit on it."

Dr. Dixon said that the Klan's proscription of the Jew was a curious revival of a malignant form of mob insanity. "Why should any man attack the Jew in this country, the home of the free and the refuge of the oppressed?" he asked. "There are but 5,000,000 Jews in this country, half of them in New York. Jew baiting has always been a form of idiocy. Jesus Christ was the son of a Jewish mother. From Jesus Christ down the ages to the last philosopher and thinker, the greatest ones have been Jews. The Jew is the greatest race of people that God has ever created."

Dr. Dixon said that when he was young he used to be worried about the allegiance to the Pope and what might happen if an army backed by that Pontiff marched against the United States. He said that the history of the United States and the loyalty and service of its Catholic citizens had answered that question.

Other Speakers Attack Klan.

Representative Walter M. Chandler attacked the Klan and gave a long list of Catholics who had served the United States, beginning with Lafayette. He declared that religious freedom was born in this country, was embodied in the Constitution and that an American who sought to violate it was a traitor.

P. H. O'Donnell of Chicago, national Chairman of the League, characterized the Klan as a treasonable organization and told what had been done to check it in Chicago by publication of the names of members, a method that he promised would soon be put into effect here.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, Chairman of the New York Central Committee of the league, who presided, attacked the reputed Presidential aspirations of Henry Ford and, though not linking him with the Klan, condemned his anti-Jewish utterances.

Letters approving the league's anti-Klan campaign were read from Mayor Hylan, Police Commissioner Enright, United States Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts and Representatives Julius Kahn of California, Ben Johnson of Kentucky and H. Garland Dupre of Louisiana.

Between five and six hundred men and women attended the meeting. Several reputed Klansmen were said to have been seen in the theatre or just outside, but they made no attempt to interrupt the meeting.

ARREST EIGHT IN BROOKLYN

Eight Brooklyn men, said by the police to have participated in a Ku Klux Klan meeting held last night at 182 Clermont avenue, Brooklyn, were arrested last week after having been questioned for two hours at Manhattan Police Headquarters by Lieut. James J. Gegan of the Bomb Squad. 1/31/23.

15,000 KLANSMEN IN YONKERS

Herbert E. Storm, forty, a day laborer employed at the Otis Elevator Company at Yonkers, admitted yesterday to police officials that he is Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan in Westchester County and declared that that organization has 15,000 members in the county.

Detectives seized Klan literature at Storm's residence, 177 Elm street, Yonkers. He said that since its organization, Nov. 10, 1921, the Yonkers chapter has met regularly twice a month and has about 800 members. He said 250 new members are to be initiated next Friday night, but refused to divulge the place of meeting.

PUBLICITY WILL KILL IT

Perth Amboy, N. J., Jan. 29.—Governor George S. Silzer attacked the Ku Klux Klan at a dinner of the San Salvador Council, 299, of the Knights of Columbus, here last night.

"There is nothing worse than this sudden revival of bigotry, this racial antagonism which is stirring against the Catholic and the Jew," the Governor said. "There is no need of immediate legislative action, as publicity will wipe it all out. If not, we shall have to pass a law asking these people to show their faces, subject to a severe criminal law of the State."

ANTI-KLAN BILL OFFERED

Hartford, Jan. 30.—An anti-Ku Klux Klan bill was introduced today by Senator Thomas McGrath of Waterbury, the Democratic leader, and referred to the Judiciary Committee for a hearing.

The bill, entitled "An Act to Prevent the Existence of Clandestinal Organizations," provides that the banding together of three or more persons whose identities are concealed by the use of masks, hoods, robes or other disguises, shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment of not less than three years or by both.

Boston, Jan. 28.—Because he recently denounced the Klan Mayor Curley, of this city, received a threat that the Klan would "get" his children. The missive is now in the hands of the Superintendent of Police.

YONKERS KLAN CYCLOPS QUESTIONED BY POLICE

Says Organization Is Growing and That Prominent Men Are Members.

1-28-23

New York Times

The Ku Klux Klan has been actively recruiting members in Yonkers for a year and has 800 members in Yonkers and 15,000 in Westchester County, according to a statement made yesterday to Captain Dennis A. Cooper of the Yonkers Detective Bureau and Public Safety Commissioner Thomas W. Tobin by Herbert Storms of 117 Elm Street, Yonkers, Exalted Cyclops of the Klan.

Storms, who is an inspector in the Yonkers plant of the Otis Elevator Company, was questioned by the authorities for an hour yesterday, but no charges were preferred against him. The police said that some Klan literature was found in his room. New York.

Storms told the police that the Klan was within the law and said he believed it had the same right to organize as the Knights of Columbus or the various Jewish organizations. He said it was not a political organization, but voted only for "the best men." It believes in good government, he declared, and is trying to get it, not by force or mob violence but by exerting proper pressure on the officials."

He refused to reveal where the Klan held its weekly meetings, but declared that some of the prominent residents of Yonkers were members and that one minister had joined the organization. Storms said that 250 new members are to be initiated next Friday night. The Yonkers Chapter, he said, is operating under a charter granted by the New York Chapter, but when it has 2,000 members it will have a permanent charter of its own.

Storms was located by the police, who traced the source of invitations sent to Yonkers residents to join the Klan. Among those who received invitations were Corporation Councel James Taylor Lewis and Dr. Leroy Burr of 2 Hudson Street.

Wizard Says Move Is Effort to Injure Klan

2-4-23

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—W. H. Evans of Atlanta, national imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, today authorized his New York representatives to denounce the local activities of Rev. Dr. Oscar Haywood, self-alleged national klokard of the klan, who arrived from the South Saturday to found "The American Protestant Movement for the Advancement of the American Protestant Church."

The imperial wizard's spokesman characterized Dr. Haywood's latest activity as "an apparent effort to use the Klan as a cloak for the estblishment of a rival organization."

In the same statement it was made plain that Dr. Haywood in challenging Rev. Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," to a public debate, was acting without the authority of the Klan's high officers, and contrary to their wishes. Of the former pastor's claims to the title of "national klokard," it was declared there was no such office.

Dr. Haywood also was characterized as merely "a lecturer whose services are employed by the Klan when desired."

When Dr. Haywood arrived here Saturday, he announced he would hold a number of public meetings to aid in building up the Klan. Later he said his mission here was to build up a distinct organization, "The American Protestant Movement for the Advancement of the American Protestant Church," of which he claims to be the founder. He said it was not an "offshoot" of the Klan, received no support from it and Klan members were not eligible to become officers in its administrative department. It was not to be a secret organization, he said.

A Difference With a Distinction.

New York Times

From out in Minnesota a reader of THE TIMES writes in protest against the mildness with which it censured the farmers who lynched certain strikers in Arkansas, as compared with the severity of its comments on the Ku Klux Klan in Louisiana.

In both States, he writes, long-continued conditions of lawlessness had existed, and in both people at last took the law into their own hands and punished the guilty. Except for the wearing of hoods by the Klansmen he can see no difference between the two organizations, particularly as the announced purposes of both are highly commendable. 1/24/23

Our correspondent is entirely mistaken. Such little sympathy, carefully qualified, as was expressed by THE TIMES for what was done in Arkansas was based on the premise that the duly constituted authorities, State and local, had failed to repress the violence of the strikers and had allowed the district to suffer from a nearly complete suspension of railway traffic through it. In Mer Rouge the Klansmen were themselves the constituted authorities, and anybody there who had violated the law could have been punished by them in a legal way. N.Y.

As a matter of fact, what they punished with greatest vigor was not illicit distilling or loose living, but talk about and against the Ku Klux Klan and resistance to the will of its officers. These were capital crimes, with death by torture the penalty.

The Arkansas farmers acted openly and assumed responsibility for what they did. Their excuse, good or bad, was that they had no other relief from an intolerable situation. In Mer Rouge, as elsewhere, the Ku Klux Klan by its secrecy and its disguises evades all responsibility as much as it can, and its members try to enforce not the law, but their own opinions and prejudices.

KLAN KLEAGLE GUILTY OF HAVING BLACK JACK

Louisville News
Louisville, Ky.

New York, Feb. 8.—(Crusader Service) Frederick Storm, of 177 Elm Street, Yonkers, exalted cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan in Yonkers and Kleagle of Westchester County, was found guilty in the police court there yesterday of carrying a black jack and was placed on probation. He is to report every Sunday to Probation Officer Matthew Lesnick for three months. 2/10/23

Storms admitted having the black jack, but said he had a special policeman's badge and a license to carry a revolver because he did detective work in the plant of an elevator company in Yonkers. City Judge Charles W. Boote told Storm he had no right to carry a black jack, and should not cary the revolver except while on the company's property on duty.

Storm astonished the residents of Yonkers last Sunday by saying that there had been a branch of the Klan there for years, and that it had 200 members. He claims 15,000 members in the county.

2/19/23

NOTHING ILLEGAL, HE SAYS

The Rev. J. C. Green Says Hylan's Order Shows "Frenzied State of Excitement."

Nothing illegal or anti-American occurred during a Ku Klux Klan initiation which he witnessed, the Rev. John C. Green, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Rockaway Beach, declared yesterday, in a sermon to his congregation on "Revelations from the Inside of the Ku Klux Klan."

Mr. Green said he had been invited to witness the initiation of a Kleagle and was escorted to a building where the initiation took place. "I was led in behind six neophytes, our eyes were covered," he said, "and was taken before the Grand Kleagle. The six men were asked if they were natiev born American citizens, if they had the best interests of the community, city, State and nation at heart, and whether they owed allegiance to any other Government and whether they believed in the tenets of the Christian religion, white supremacy and free speech."

Mr. Greene said the Grand Kleagle gave the following invocation just before the six candidates swore allagiance to the Klan:

"God gave us men. A time like this demands great minds, true hearts, great faith and ready hands; men whom the lust of office does not kill, men whom the spoils of office can not buy, men who have opinions and will ,men who love honor, who can stand before a demagogue and scorn his treacherous flattery without weakening. We need tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog in public duty and private thinking."

The candidates then knelt before the altar, Mr. Green said, and took the following oath:

"I most solemnly assert and affirm that to the Government of the United States of America and any State thereof of which I may became a resident, I sacredly swear unqualified allegiance above any other and every other kind of government in the world. I here and now pledge my life, property and vote to uphold its flag, its constitution and laws, and will protect and defend and enforce the same until death."

Mr. Green said the Klan had the same right to exist as the Knights of Columbus, the Masons and Jewish societies. He characterized Mayor Hylan's attempt to prevent the organization of the Klan here as showing a "frenzied state of excitement," and said Magistrate Dale's assertion that "there was no room for the Klan in Brooklyn" was a "bombastic version of forgotten law."

RABBI S. WISE DEFIES K. K. K. IN N. Y. SPEECH

Urges Colored Men And Women To Take Courage And Demand That Those Persons Who Murder And Lynch Shall Be Punished.

OTHER ACTIVITIES OF THE N. A. A. C. P.

The St. Louis Argus 1/17/23

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (Special)—Culmination in a night mass meeting in the Town Hall, New York City, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, held its Annual Meeting on January 2. In the election, a new member was added to the N. A. A. C. P. Board of Directors, Mr. Herbert K. Stockton of the law firm of Haight, Smith, Griffin and Deming, whose brief on the Dyer-Anti Lynching Bill was instrumental in procuring a favorable report on the measure by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

Branch efforts against segregation in schools in Philadelphia, Boston and elsewhere, and the fight against the Ku Klux Klan and the "Birth of a Nation" film were recited by delegates from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Deleware and Pennsylvania, at the afternoon meeting in the Russell Sage Foundation Building.

At the night mass meeting the speakers were Mrs. Mary B. Talbert, Spingarn Medallist for 1922 and leader of the Anti-Lynching Crusaders; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise; Dan Kelly, a white Texan, who was sent to Kirvin, Texas, by the N. A. A. C. P. to investigate the burning to death of three Negroes; and James Weldon Johnson, who reported on the fight for the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill and asserted a renewed fight for its enactment would be carried on.

Rabbi Wise in the course of his address, uttered a stinging rebuke and challenge to the Ku Klux Klan, and characterized as a discreditable to the American people, the failure of the Senate to enact the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill.

"I was warned against coming to this meeting," said Rabbi Wise. "I may say to you that I am indifferent to what any member of the Ku Klux Klan may say about me or about my people. Their hatred is my honor; their dispraise of my people is its coronation."

Rabbi Wise closed his address with an impassioned appeal that colored men as well as white, continue undaunted the fight against oppression He said:

"I come to you tonight as a Jew and a Jewish teacher because I know as few men have had cause to know how injustice hurts, how it galls and how long continued oppression may degrade. I know—without uttering a word of bitterness or of hatred, for I feel none against my oppressors and my people's oppressors—my chief business in life is to move my people to stand erect, to lift their voices to the skies and to know that no matter what the world without may do to them they must keep their souls undefiled.

"I come to you tonight a son and teacher of one of the earliest and oldest races in history who have achieved high culture; I come to you the scion of a race which gave to the Western World its Bible, old and new, its patriarchs, its kings, its prophets, its evangelists—the race which gave to the world Abraham and Moses and Elijah and Isaiah and Jesus and John and Paul, the race which gave to the world the things of the spirit by which it lives; and I say to you, members, sons and daughters of the newest, in many senses, of the races who have been suffered to emerge from the darkness, I bid you have courage and fear not. To you I speak the word of Isaiah to my people, 'Fear thou not, my servant; fear thou not, my servant.'

"There shall be a minimum of justice and liberality laid at your door, and on the other hand those Americans who, like you and me, love our country, who that America and even- justice must be inter- able terms—we stand with we will support you, we will with you, lawfully in the ican way, not in the lawless of the lyncher; we will fight you as men and women un- this shame shall have been ed, until lynching shall for- r have passed from the vo- bulary and the life of the American people.

"And you, sons and daughters of the Negro race, will render a great service, a supreme service, to your and my America if instead of bowing your backs beneath the yoke of this foul and fiendish oppression, you say to America: 'We are men; we mean to live as men. Our wrongdoers shall be punished and utterly punished under and by the processes of the law; but lynching shall not be the portion of any man, white or black, who lives under the American skies."

Mrs. Mary B. Talbert announced for the Anti-Lynching Crusaders, that all of their work had been done without drawing any of the funds contributed and that those funds were to be turned over intact and entire to the National Asssociation for the Advancement of Colored People for the anti-lynching campaign.

Before the close of the meeting, Mr. Johnson announced the gift by Mr. Philip Peabody of Boston of $1,000 to the N. A. A. C. P.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—A warning to members of the Ku Klux Klan that they must give up their allegiance to the "invisible empire" or get out of Brooklyn was issued today by District Attorney Dodd of King's County and Magistrate Dale.

The warning was voiced at the arraignment of eight alleged members of the "inner circle" of the klan, who were arrested last night by members of the bomb squad after they had attended what their counsel admitted to have been a klan meeting. They were held in $1,500 bail for further examination—seven on charges of possessing blackjacks and one on a charge of having a bottle of whisky in the automobile in which all were arrested.

First Persons Rounded Up.

The first persons rounded up by the police since Mayor Hylan's order to drive the klan from the city gave these names in court:

Alfred C. Clarke, John F. Collins, a chauffeur; Ellsworth B. Morse, an assistant manager; William D. M. Simmons, advertising manager of a large typewriter manufacturing concern; John M. Gilmore, a photographer; Thomas Jones, a salesman; Charles T. Mulford, a bank clerk, and Robert Fischer, 19, claiming to be a student at Pratt Institute.

Counsel for some of the defendants demanded an immediate hearing, but Magistrate Dale refused until he was told of the presence of the blackjacks in the car after the men had departed from the meeting, which, it was learned, was held in a building owned by a Masonic organization and occupied in the daytime by the Brooklyn traffic court. William Haddon, superintendent of the building, said the owners had leased the hall to a group known as the Brooklyn Circle Club, and that he never thought the organization was part of the klan.

Admits Klan Meeting.

Magistrate Dale asked M. F. Matheson, as counsel for the majority of the prisoners, whether it was a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan.

Matheson had a short talk with one of the prisoners.

"I am informed," he then told the court, "that it was an open meeting of the Ku Klux Klan designed to acquaint members and any others interested with the aims and purposes of the klan," he said.

"Who is the leader of the klan here?" asked Magistrate Dale.

"I think it is Clarke," was the reply.

Magistrate Dale turned to Clarke and asked if it was true that he was the leader, the grand cyclops.

"Well, that is my robe the detectives took from the car and are holding over there," was the answer.

Before fixing bail Magistrate Dale conferred with the district attorney's office by telephone. He said he had been requested by District Attorney

Unity League to Make Public List of Members and Organizers.

The American Unity League, through Thomas B. Felder, chairman of its New York Central Committee, announced yesterday that it would presnt to Mayor Hylan and Police Commissioner Enright within a few days the names of some of the New York city residents who have joined the Ku Klux Klan, together with the names of the members of the organizing staff in charge of klan activities. The names will also be published in the League's organ, Tolerance.

"Ithin the last two weeks, the League has obtained evidence as to the persons helping to promote the Klan movement here as well as lists of the members initiated," Colonel Felder said. "Financiers, State and national legislators, political bosses and leaders in religious, social and professional life are included in New York's Klan membership."

Difference of opinion developed yesterday as to whether the meeting at Castle Hall, 149th Street and Walton Avenue, The Bronx, was really a Klan meeting. Lieutenant James J. Gegan and a dozen detectivse of the bomb squad were at the hall, although they did not obtain entrance to the meeting room. It was said, however, that the detectives considered they obtained a line on Klan activities in The Bronx. No regalias were worn.

S. Gracie, manager of the hall, denied that it was a meeting of the Klansmen but one of the "National Civic Association."

Klan Is Formed in Middletown.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Jan. 10.—A Klan of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, was established here formally last night, according to well authenticated reports. Prospective members were summoned to a meeting and charged with secrecy both as to its place and with regard to all circumstances of the session. State officials of the Klan, among them Major E. D. Smith, King Kleagle, who attended the first meeting in this city, are known to have been at the organization session.

Formation of a Klan here has been under way since a meeting several weeks ago when some prominent men became interested in the organization. It is asserted that these men have signified their intention to do all in their power to promote its interests here.

THOMAS DIXON SCORES MODERN KU KLUX KLAN

Atlanta Constitution 1-24-23

New York, January 23.—Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," vigorously condemned the modern Ku Klux Klan in an address last night and declared it had stolen the livery of the original order. He was one of several speakers at a meeting called by the American Unity league to discuss ways and means for combating the hooded organization.

He said that when the modern klan was organized a few years ago, he declined an invitation to join, warning the organizers that "if they dared to use the disguise in a secret oathbound order today with the courts of law working under a civilized government, the end was sure—riot, anarchy, bloodshed and martial law."

"We have already reached the riot and bloodshed," he said, "and unless the thing is throttled promptly we are in sight of martial law."

The original klan was founded as a weapon against a corrupt and intolerble tyranny by the bravest and noblest men of the south, he said, but the prescription of the negro races by the modern klan is inhuman.

DIXON DENIES HIS CHILD.

Surprises never cease. Now here come Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," denouncing the Ku Klux Klan and refusing to allow the Baltimore branch of the organization the right to call itself the Thomas Dixon Klan. In a statement published last week in the New York "Globe" Mr. Dixon said:

New York Age New York N.Y.

"When I wrote 'The Clansman,' I wrote it as a story and I tried to depict as accurately as possible conditions as they existed in the South at the close of the Civil War. I did not even claim to be in sympathy with the South of the Reconstruction era. I merely reported conditions.

Jan 25, 1923

"Today no such situation confronts any part of the country. The carpet-bagging period is ended and the courts and the laws of the nation are functioning properly.

"Therefore, I think it is exceedingly dangerous to have an active organization such as the Ku Klux Klan appears to be. It is revolutionary for this order to take in its own hands the administration of the law. I cannot express my disapproval of the Klan in too strong terms."

In spite of Mr. Dixon's statement, he is father of the modern Ku Klux Klan. It was his writings and his moving picture plays which made possible the re-birth of the organization. Mr. Dixon's claim that the old order was a chivalrous body which rendered a great patriotic service to the country is all bosh. The old Klan was just as pernicious as the new one.

Whether it is fear of the consequences of his labors or a remaining sense of decency which causes Mr. Dixon to denounce and renounce the modern Ku Klux Klan we do not know. However, he will have great difficulty in getting away from the fact that it is his own child.

Captives Locked up on Suspicion of Felony Charge—Blackjacks Are Found in Their Car.

Dallas Texas

New York, Feb. 8.—Crusader Service)—Eight Brooklyn men, said by a police to have participated in a Ku Klux Klan meeting held last night at No. 182 Clermont Avenue, Brooklyn, were arrested at 1 o'clock this morning, after having been questioned for two hours at Manhattan Police Headquarters by Lieut. James J. Gegan of the Bomb Squad.

The specific charge against each man is suspicion of felony. This is the first time that arrests have followed a meeting of any alleged Klan group in New York City.

Lieut. Gegan says the men were among seventy-five who gathered in the room occupied by the Brooklyn Traffic Court in the Clement Avenue address. The meeting, it is said, was announced merely as a meeting of "The Marine Circle," but Gogan says he has information it was a gathering of Klan No. 2, New York.

2/10/23

After being questioned for two hours police say Collins admitted that one of the blackjacks was his property. The other men denied knowledge of the second blackjack. Collins was charged with possession of a blackjack. One man was charged with possession of booze.

Clark, police say, is a dancing instructor. They allege room in No. 182 Clermont Avenue from 7 in the morning until 7 at night. After this hour it is rented to social and fraternal organizations and other bodies.

Brooklyn Klan No. 8, is said to have made its headquarters in the court-room for a year or more, using one or more assumed names to deceive the public officials.

The bench from which the Judge hands down his decisions in daytime is the same bench, police say, from which the King Kleagle issues his orders to his knights after dark.

Even the Traffic Judge's gavel is said to be used by the Cyclops.

The men who attended last night's meeting entered in twos and threes, all muttering passwords at the door to a guard, police say. The men eventually placed under arrest were the first to leave the meeting. The others came straggling out, one and two at a time, as though no meeting of any significance had been held. Only the detectives, lurking in the shadows, had an inkling of its nature

Last night's arrests were the culmination of a watch kept on the activities of the members of the "Invisible Empire" in the city for weeks. The Bomb Squad had been kept informed of every movement made by the "Knights." When the Grand Kleagle of New York State mounted the platform before his brethren one of Gegan's men was said to be among the seventy-five who listened to him.

KLANSMAN CHARGES FAKE RIOT STAGED TO SCARE PRISONERS

Claim Members of Order Ill-Treated When Arraigned in Court

Montgomery Ala

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Paul S. Etheridge, imperial counsel of the Ku Klux Klan, today charged in a statement that attendants in the Gates Avenue Court in Brooklyn had staged a fake riot outside the cell of eight alleged klansmen arrested Thursday night, in order to intimidate them.

Frank Burke, a court attendant, and other officials flatly denied the charges of Mr. Etheridge, who asserted that members of the order were being persecuted in New York City, and that Magistrate Dale had no right to denounce the Klan at the arraignment of the prisoners on charges of having blackjacks and whiskey in the automobile in which they were arrested.

Describing the riot alleged to have been faked, Mr. Etheridge said:

"The treatment of the men, from the time they were locked in their cells in police headquarters, was not that which is ordinary accorded convicted criminals.

Montgomery Ala

"The attendants at the Gates Avenue Court endeavored to scare or intimidate the men by staging a fake riot outside their cell, throwing bottles and cans down the corridor in front of the cell, one attendant even making a telephone call to police headquarters for reserves in order to quell 'a mob of 2,000 people outside the court who are trying to get at these Ku Kluxers'.

"Another attendant in negro dialect shouting 'let me get at these Ku Kluxers; I'll tear them to pieces."

"The action of Magistrate Dale is regarded by the Klan as one of the most astonishing evidence of official bias and prejudice against the organization that has ever come to its notice When the eight men were first arraigned the actual charge against them the charges constituting only misdemeanors, were not the subject of the magistrate's speech, for Judge Dale, instead of delivering any opinion concerning the charges themselves, launched into a vehement denunciation of the Ku Klu Klan, simply because it was inferred that the eight men had earlier in the event attended a Ku Klux Klan meeting."

KU KLUX KLAN PREACHER EXPELED.

The Rev. Oscar Haywood, D. D. Klokard for the Ku Klux Klan, who came to New York to enlist local Protestant clergymen in the army of the Invisible Empire, was expelled on Wednesday night from his nominal post as evangelist of Calvary Baptist Church. Thus the long advertised show of strength between Dr Haywood and the Rev. John Roach Straton, D. D., pastor of Calvary passed with a complete victory for the latter.

National Baptist Union

The board of deacons voted unanimously to cast out Dr. Haywood, who virtually had dared Dr. Stration to meet the issue. The expulsion took the form of the following resolution:

2-3-23

"Resolved that the resolution of June 26, 1918, and June 29, 1921, recognizing the Rev. Oscar Haywood, D. D., as evangelist or general evangelist of Calvary Baptist Church be hereby rescinded and his name be omitted from the church calendar so long as Dr. Haywood is employed in work incompatible with his position as an evangelist of this church."

"The passage of this resolution unanimously," said Dr. Straton last night, "both by the board of deacons and Calvary Church in regular business sessions is a sufficient answer to Dr. Hayward's unfounded and unfortunate statement that I was afraid to bring the matter to a conference of the church or to make a public statement that I intended to press the matter no further.

"Then Dr. Haywood said, further: 'The former he is afraid to do, the latter he is too proud to do. Once the matter is brought to an open meeting the church will split on its pastor, and not on me. Calvary Church knows that it has received naught but good at my hands. Calvary Church knows that it has received mortal wounds at the hands of the present pastor."

"These unfounded and unfortunate statements which have been made about this church have been given wide circulation throughout America. I feel therefore that it is proper to make this statement with all modesty, but for the truth's sake and for the world's sake.

GRAND JURY PROBES KLANSMAN'S ACTION

Clarke Called to New York to Tell of Alleged Secret Visit

2-8-23

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Edward Young Clarke, imperial klaliff of the Ku Klux Klan, came here today from Atlanta and testified before a grand jury concerning a secret visit he was alleged to have received last October from Marcus Garvey, self-styled provisional president of Africa and head of the Black Star line, who is under indictment on a charge of using the mails to defraud investors.

The nature of the present grand jury proceedings remained tonight shrouded in mystery. All that Assistant United States Attorney Mattuck would say was that the government ten days ago learned of Garvey's alleged visit to Atlanta and that Clarke was subpoenaded to tell of his dealings with Garvey.

Garvey was arrested January 12, 1922, on a charge of using the mails to defraud and the next month he was indicted with three other officers and directors of the Black Star Line ,capitalized at $10,000,000. His trial is now on the calendar.

Garvey's name next appeared in the news when he was ordered by supreme court jury to pay the Pan-Union Corporation $8,508 for non-delivery of a cargo of liquor to Cuba.

Last August Garvey again was in the public eye when, dressed in a colorful uniform, he led a parade through the Harlem Black Belt. A few days later police were called to maintain order at a meeting of Harlem negroes at which speakers criticised Garvey's plans for establishment of a negro republic in Africa.

The same month the charge was made that Garvey had formed an alliance with the Ku Klux Klan, but delegates and deputies of the Universal Negro Improvement Association, of which Garvey is "potentate" sitting as a jury, dismissed this charge.

Late in August Garvey's wife entered a suit for divorce, refusing to admit the validity of a decree which Garvey claimed to have obtained in Missouri.

Last month Rev. J. W. H. Eaton, pastor of a negro church in New Orleans was shot and killed when on the eve of his departure to testify at Garvey's trial, he left his church after voicing criticism of the plan of the "provisional president" for an Africa for Africans. Investigation of this shooting was ordered by Mr. Mattuck.

When dismissed after the examination, Clarke promised Mr. Mattuck he would send here from Atlanta any papers that might throw light on the alleged overtures by the Black Star line to the Ku Klux Klan. He intimated he would return immediately to Atlanta.

The Urban League's Important Work

To the Editor of the BROOKLYN LIFE.

Sir—How many of your readers included among their charitable gifts for 1922 any contributions to the betterment of conditions for the negroes, or to the improvement of inter-racial relationships? From the records of the Brooklyn Urban League, I should say that more did than in the previous year, and that considerably more did than in 1920. The number of supporters, while still relatively small, has been showing a steady growth.

The activities of the Ku Klux Klan, which, despite its newly acquired anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic biases, is primarily anti-Negro, has had considerable to do with arousing a more general sympathy for the colored minority. But the main cause of the increasing interest in the race problem is undoubtedly the heavy migration from the South. This migration has had several significant results. In the first place it has proved that, in the great majority of cases, the Negro can be developed into a valuable member of Northern industrial society. In the second place it has greatly overtaxed housing facilities, and for that reason has intensified problems of health and morality. And in the third place the migration has brought the North face to face with the facts of inter-racial relationships.

The Urban League movement brings to the handling of these facts the point of view and experience of representative members of both races who meet together regularly to develop and direct a constructive program designed to promote the best interests of the entire community regardless of race, creed or color. It has been from a half dozen local organizations in the East to forty Urban Leagues in as many cities throughout the country, affiliated with each other through the National Urban League.

The Brooklyn Urban League has been particularly successful in its work in the Children's Court, but it is also the clearing house for health work, housing complaints and other matters of importance to the welfare of our growing colored population. In addition, it supervises the activities of Lincoln Settlement. To carry on its work through 1923, the League will require $9,500, and it is our earnest hope that a greater number of Brooklyn citizens than ever before will feel disposed to include the welfare of the Negro in their charitable budgets this year, and will express this interest by supporting the Brooklyn Urban League.

TELLS OF KLAN FIGHT OVER HOBOKEN LEADER

Newspaper Says Pastor Sent There From Atlanta Had to Return to Headquarters.

2-15-23

Well-known residents of Hoboken, among them a lawyer who was an army officer during the war, and a physician, are members of the Ku Klux Klan, according to an article in The Hudson Observer yesterday, which tells of "a spirited struggle between George B. Apgar, King Kleagle, who lives at 527 Washington Street, Hoboken, and the Klan authorities at Atlanta over the leadership in Hoboken." The article also details alleged activities for the Klan of "a certain A. N. Moore."

The newspaper charges that the Hoboken realm has 135 members, headed by Apgar, and says that the Atlanta heads of the Klan, after demanding Apgar's resignation, sent the Rev. R. P. Fowler, a retired minister, to replace him. Fowler, according to the newspaper, returned to the South after the Hoboken Klan had passed a vote of confidence in Apgar.

The bomb squad has begun an investigation of letters apparently referring to the Wlan, which were found in the bedroom of Warren Donnelly, a salesman who committed suicide some time on Tuesday night at 37 Lafayette Street, Brooklyn. One of the letters, marked confidential, and signed John Doll 88 Pineapple Street, Brooklyn, asked Donnelly to attend an "instruction" meeting at 182 Clermont Avenue, Brooklyn.

Innovators Only in Secrecy.

One of THE TIMES correspondents gives what he thinks the answer to the question recently propounded in this column—what is the matter with the people of Mer Rouge that they should be acting in a way so utterly un-American? He says that there is nothing peculiar to themselves in their mental condition. "The thing that is wrong with them is the thing that is wrong with the whole country—a craze for interfering with our neighbors and regulating their lives for them."

New York Times

That is an answer, but is it the answer? Early in American history—at its very beginning—the desire and the determination to do such interfering and regulating was strongly displayed, and while the venerated forefathers did not put on hoods, either white or black, when they undertook the reforming of a neighbor, the consequences to him frequently were not much less severe than have followed like activities in Louisiana. From that time till now, Americans never have been notably tolerant of differences of opinion on matters that deeply interested them.

New York

Ku Klux Klansmen are unlike the rest of us, now and in the past, chiefly in that they lack the courage of their convictions—work in the dark and evade, when they can and to the extent of their power, all responsibility for their efforts to make other people observe their own standards of propriety.

Disorderly Conduct Cases Dropped Against Eight Men in Brooklyn.

2-22-23

New York, February 21.—Magistrate Golden in Brooklyn today dismissed charges of disorderly conduct lodged against eight men alleged by the police to be members of the Ku Klux Klan. The men were arrested on the night of January 26 after they were said to have attended a meeting of the klan in a room serving in daytime as the Brooklyn traffic court.

Detectives said they had found a hood, robe, blackjack and bottle of whisky in an automobile in which the men were riding. Magistrate Golden promised counsel to ask the police to return the hood and robe. Two of the men were held for violation of state prohibition laws and for carrying concealed weapons.

Dr. Crandall Enlists Uptown Lions to Fight Ku Klux.

2-14-23

Dr. Ernest Crandall, director of lectures for the Board of Education, told 200 members of the Uptown Lions yesterday at a meeting at the Hotel Marie Antoinette that the Ku Klux Klan now had 1,450,000 members. "Connecticut is leading in the race to top the list of members in Northern States, and now has 45,000 robed Klansmen," Dr. Crandall said. "his menacing organization is getting stronger every day, and something must be done to check its activities."

S. H. Peterson, President of the Lions, announced that all the members of that organization were ready to join in fighting the Klan. The members present joined the American Unity League under the auspices of which Dr. Crandall spoke.

ASCRIBE TO KLAN ATTACK ON SMITH

3-1-23

BOAST OF FIRING CHURCHES

Missives Call Governor Jesuit Pawn and Laud Ku Klux as Protestant Champion.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—During the last forty-eight hours legislators have been deluged with letters, bearing no signature but generally attributed by the recipients to the Ku Klux Klan, in which the burning of Catholic churches and institutions is boasted of. The Klan set up as a champion of American principles and the Protestant faith and a general appeal made to the Legislature "to guard against Jesuit schemes for the mastery of America."

Governor Smith, "groomed as a democratic presidential candidate in 1924" is assailed as a pawn in the "Jesuit" game. The Governor, when a copy of the communication was shown to him this evening, read it through with knitted brow but declined to comment.

Three letters, all anonymous and the last of a series mailed in Brooklyn, have been received by the legislators since the introduction last week by Senator Walker of a bill which would require the Klan and other secret organizations to file lists of their membership with the Secretary of State. The first of the communications was received by Senators and Assemblymen when they returned to the Capitol on Monday night. The last, received this morning, contains approximately 2,000 words.

Until this latest missive was read, the lawmakers had paid no attention to the communications. Tonight, however, Assemblyman Jesse of New York City made it known that he would call the attention of the Legislature to the letters and demand an investigation with a view to revealing their source.

One of the communications was in the form of a circular, headed "The Assassination of Abraham Lincoln the Foul Work of the Roman Catholic Church."

This contained what purported to be quotations from utterances of Lincoln, attributing the Civil War to Jesuits. Like the other communications, this was mimeographed.

The attack on Governor Smith was contained in the missive which reached the capital today. This began with quotations from a book bearing the title "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome," the author being the Rev. Charles Chiniquy, described as a former Roman Catholic priest of Canada who turned Protestant "and became the firm friend of Lincoln." In his book the former priest describes what he calls a "papal plot to destroy Protestant America."

"'Al' Smith, Governor of New York, a Tammany Hall Roman Catholic politician, is being groomed as Democratic Presidential candidate in 1924 and his propaganda for this purpose is already seen in the daily press," said the attack.

"The Jesuit schemes for mastering America, by starving out what they call 'the godless public schools' in favor of parochial schools, where papal idolatry and criminal ignorance are bred and by subverting our political institutions to the domination of Roman priestcraft, seemed until lately to be on the crest of the wave.

"But, lo! at the blackest hour, what is this strange light which gleams in the gloom like a flaming torch, causing hundred sceptred 'Princes of the Holy Roman Empire' in America to tremble on their cushioned thrones, sweating in an agony of fear? Whence comes this flaming torch of truth that ignites Roman Catholic churches, academies and nunneries, fills the land with patriotic anti-Catholic literature and inspires millions of aroused Americans to organize for action to destroy this triple-headed beast which threatens America's life.

"A wave of Protestant, Anglo-Saxon Americanism is beginning now to gather force. It shall mount and mount, higher and yet higher, increasing its strength into irresistible might, until at last it breaks in a torrential flood that shall sweep every disloyal and Christ-hating Jew from the face of our beloved land, washing it clean and pure as a fit habitation for Christ and His followers.

"Under the guidance of the King of Kings, Christ, who is always watching over His people, the Ku Klux and its allies are 'fighting fire with fire.' The Roman Catholic and the Jew are notoriously lawless. The Klansman is law abiding, and he is executing the law of God, who says to evil and evil's mouthpieces, 'Thou shalt surely die.'"

Harold Taylor Just Returned From Liberia Tells How Government Fights Klan

3-2-23

DEATH SENTENCE DENIED

Commissioner Puts Them To Hard Labor for Six Months Without Food

New York City, March 1.—Writing specially for the World, Harold Taylor, who arrived here from Liberia on a business trip told this week how a former Boston man has risen to the important post of High Commissioner in the Liberian Republic.

This high commissioner is W. A. Stuard, who migrated to Africa with his father some thirty-two years ago. At the age of fifty he President King's right-hand man and is assigned to the special task of keeping order among the civilized tribes of he back country.

Describing his visit to Commissioner Stuard at a trading post on the Pau River, several hundred miles in the interior, Mr. Taylor said:

"He was a tall, massive black man of about fifty years, whose every exposed part showed scars. His right hand was warped and stiff, the result of a gunshot wound. His left hand was ghastly. Once, he said, a native had lunged at him with a knife. He had grasped the blade, and it had split his palm to the bone. The wound had healed, but every finger had remained clenched, save one. This one he used for typewriting, and he could scamper over the keys with it in as lively fashion as any typist. He told me that he was a native of Boston, U. S. A., that his father, who had been a bank watchman in that city, had migrated with his family to Africa. The young Stuard, 18 years old at the time, had entered the service of the Liberian Government, and for thirty years had been employed in ruling over the tribes.

RECEIVES KINGLY VISITOR

His constabulary attendant came in.

"'The King of the Greboe people is outside,' was the announcement.

"I was deeply impressed. The Greboes were one of the most powerful and warlike tribes along the Pau River, and their King was renowned as an old fire eater. When he deigned to appear at Monrovia, the capital, the dignitaries of the republic exerted themselves, with bows, banquets and flattering ceremonies, to placate him. I prepared myself for a ceremonious reception of the monarch.

"The Commissioner continued his typewriting for a while, and then arked in his Boston Negro dialect:

"'What does the old scoundrel want?'

"I trembled. I hoped he wouldn't use any such tone with the King.

"'He says he is on a state visit,' he attendant replied.

"'Send him in!' Commissioner

"In a few minutes a huge old man in a white robe stalked in. Half a dozen ministers of state followed him. The Commissioner did not turn, but continued to type. The King stood near the door with an xpression of astonishment and anger. I got up, and felt like jumping out of the window. It seemed an hour before Stuard spoke.

"'What do you want?' he growled, never turning.

"The King stood silent, his body growing rigid. The Commissioner swung around. The eyes of the two men met. The old monarch drew himself up with a superb expression of barbaric pride and nobility. The Commissioner showed his teeth in a nasty grin.

"'What do you want, damn you?' he snarled.

"The black King's eyes gaped with astonishment. He advanced a few steps, with an air of majestic forbearance.

"'We never meet, massa,' he spoke in the pidgen English of the district, 'I want say hello.'

"Commissioner Stuard did not look at him again, but spoke to the constabulary man.

ORDER KING FLOGGED

"'Take him out and give him twenty-five,' he bawled, and returned to his typing machine.

"Twenty-five! That meant twenty-five lashes, the usual punishment for delinquent carriers. I thought it was all a nightmare, but the attendant called several of his fellows and they dragged the howling King outside. I watched them throw him down, bare his back, and give him twenty-five lashes with a bamboo rod. When the sounds told that the operation was over, Stuard, still at his typewriter, yelled:

"'Bring him back here!'

25 MORE FOR LYING

"'And now,' he howled, when the cringing King had been thrust into the room, 'are you going down to Monrovia, and complain to the President and make trouble for me?'

"'No, massa,' the monarch whined

"Stuard turned to the attendant.

"'For lying like that,' he growled, 'give him twenty-five more.'

"They gave him twenty-five more, and then the Commissioner ordered the monarch and his court to be put to work as convicts for two weeks.

"'I know these natives,' he said to me contemptuously. 'That old rascal has been up to some deviltry, and, because I am new on the job, has come down her to pull wool over my eyes.'

"Several days later the word came that the Greboes had been on cattle raids. When the King and his ministers were released they went back to their tribe, and told how they had browbeaten the new Commissioner, but the old King ordered the cattle raids to cease, and kept the Greboes severely at peace, with the result that the trouble in the district soon quieted down.

"The episode did not end there, however. The politicians down in Monrovia seized upon it to make trouble for Stuard.

DEPRIVED OF DEATH PENALTY

"They could not get Stuard deprived of his Commissionership, but they did get him deprived of his right to the death penalty. No longer could this terrible Pro-Consul order the spectacular hangings that are quite a feature of Liberian life and are necessary to public peace in the jungle. He could give a miscreant six months at hard labor, and no more. It was under this disadvantage that Stuard took a large hand in the affairs of African secret societies.

"Black immigrants to Africa took from the United States with them the American fancy for mystic organizations, lodges. Now, lodges are susceptible of strange flowerings. The Ku Klux Klan is an instance. In Africa the lodge system has taken on marvellous guises. Frightful monstrosities have developed.

"There are the Gi-Gi, or Water Leopards, the most hideous Mafia order in the world. It has vengeance for its object, and spreads death throughout Liberia. Any member may demand and get the death of any non-member he chooses. The Water Leopards, through some native superstitution, always snare their victim in the water. They take him to shore. There he is confronted with the man who demanded his death, so that the vengeance of his spirit may be borne by this one. They cut off his hands and feet, and throw him back into the river to drown.

THE AFRICAN KU KLUX KLAN

"There is another society of leopards, these far more horrible than the Water Leopards. They are the Human Leopards. The mystic rite that this order celebrates is the act of cannibalism. Every member upon joining is required to give two relatives, parent, brother, wife or child, to a loathsome secret banquet at which he is the host.

"Stuard conducted a savage war upon the Human Leopards. He laid hands upon one of the leaders, a wealthy chief, who had sacrified a wife and son to his initiation. A fierce insquisition of the man led to the catching of fourteen other Human Leopards and the woman whose employment it was to prepare the ghastly food. A grand ceremony of hangings was in order, but the Commissioner had been deprived of the life and death right. Stuard was not a man to be baffled by such a difficulty. He sentenced the prisoners to six months at hard labor, and ordered that the only food given them should be an emetic every morning. Day after day a crowd gathered outside of the prison yard and watched the lingering death of the wretches.

Deprived of Homes, Dying of Exposure, Starving, According to Letter From Chattanooga, Tennessee -- Ku Klux Klan Said to Be Active

New York Amsterdam News 3-7-23

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York, today made public portions of a letter received from a person actively connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church in Chattanooga, Tennessee, in which startling charges are made of the driving out of Negroes from Georgia towns, and confiscation of their property, including houses, automobiles, crops; and the death of numbers of the fugitives from exposure and hardships suffered on the flight. The name of the writer which is signed to the letter is withheld because it is feared the person's safety would be endangered were the name made public.

The letter says in part:

For the last month or two the white people have been putting the Negro to flight out of several towns in Georgia—about the time their crops were ready for gathering they began—some were run away from home with their crops standing in the fields ready to gather—hence white people went to their houses and gave them notices to leave in so many days and on other instances notes were written and signed by, as indicated, K. K. K., and intimidated them so that lots of them left their homes furnished just as they were while they were at home. Some with their houses cleaned up, beds made up and everything done as though they were at home—they left their homes with nothing but what they were wearing and a suit case and sometimes not that.

One family had to flee through the rain, snow and cold, wade and swim the streams and at last arrived here in Chattanooga for everyone of that crowd to die except one, in less than two months, from exposure they received in making their escape from their pursuers. One man who had a nice automobile drove up to a filling station where he had always lived, to have his car filled, the man in charge asked him who the car belong to, and he replied that it belonged to him. Then the oil man ordered him out of his own car saying that it no longer belonged to him—telling him that he got no oil from that station to move a car that belonged to him, and told him to leave the country. For weeks it was a most pitiful sight to see people travelling over this city by droves almost—through the rain and cold—with little bundles, suit cases, early in the morning and late at night, forlorn, hungry, cold and nowhere to go. They slept anywhere they could get to sleep and ate anything they could get—an organization contributed toward their food for several weeks.

Several hundred of these people settled here in Chattanooga and its vicinity, mostly in South Chattanooga. Athens, Ga., almost all the colored people were run away and they were run out of Jessup, Ga., around in the neighborhood of northern Georgia near Summerville, and Lafayette, which is near the line of Chattanooga.

KLAN OFFICIAL ARRESTED

Careless Handling of High Explosives Would Have Killed Hundreds

(Crusader Service)

New York, Mar. 8.—A big cache of modern military arms and ammunition was discovered and seized in New York late yesterday afternoon and the authorities began an investigation in which their suspicions, at first directed toward the Irish rebels turned to the Ku Klux Klan.

According to a high officer of the Police Department two of the biggest New York officials of the Klan were taken in custody for investigation. This officer, who refused to be quoted by name, said that the police were asking them to throw light on a theory that the arms and ammunitions had been secretly assembled for "some warlike purpose of the Klan."

Two circumstances, the police informant added, led to the immediate course of the investigation toward the Klan. One was that Wilson D. Bush, described as Grand Cyclops of the Klan, was said to live at 225 West 25th street, immediately behind that in West 24th street, in which the military material was found. The other was that the second man whom the police said they were questioning, W. D. Moore, of 445 West 25th street, lives within a block of where the cache was discovered.

RENTED A WAREHOUSE

Further, Moore was said to have rented recently a warehouse in Hoboken within one block from that in which the arms and munition were said to have been stored before they were removed to New York, whither part of them were transported a month ago while the rest were moved yesterday.

The first discovery made by the police was that one hundred and seventy-five cases of high-powered ammunition, including enough hand grenades to wreck a big section of the city.

A single vigilant policeman, suspecting nothing more startling than hootch, was responsible for the discovery. Police officials, who looked over his find, heaved a sigh of relief, realizing that a great disaster might have ensued had the explosives stored in the basement of a tenement with twelve families living over them, suddenly let go.

HAD BEEN HANDLED CARELESSLY

They regarded it as singularly fortunate that no such disaster happened, particularly because the deadly missiles in their light wooden boxes had been tossed about as if they really had been canned goods, as those who handled them pretended that they were. The grenades, most dangerous part of the stores, had been handled with the most striking carelessness. They were stuffed loosely into suitcases with no wrapping or packing to prevent the jar that might have set them off with force enough to wreck everything in their path.

The heavy store of explosives was seized in and in front of the three-story tenement at 265 West Twenty-fourth street. Included in the 275 cases were thirty-two of Winchester cartridges, .38 and .45 calibre pistol cartridges, and a large quantity of deadly hand grenades.

KLEAGLE GETS GUN PERMIT.

Tells Yonkers Judge His Intimate Friends Are Klansmen

Informing City Judge Charles W. Boote of Yonkers that three-fourths of the Ku Klux Klan members in that city were the Judge's friends, Frederick Storms, King Kleagle of the Klan for Westchester County, asked and obtained permission yesterday to indulge in weekly revolver practice to improve his marksmanship. Storms, who is on probation for carrying a revolver and a blackjack, reports to Judge Boote every Sunday.

"How's the Klan progressing?" Judge Boote asked.

"We're doing pretty well," Storms replied. "Getting new members all the time. You may not know it, Judge, but three-fourths of our members are intimate friends of yours."

Storms then asked permission to carry a revolver to Peckham's Lake, on the outskirts of Yonkers, every Sunday, so that he could resume revolver practice.

"I don't think that you would ever kill anybody," said the Judge.

"Not unless in self-defense," said Storms. "The only way I would kill anybody is with kindness."

Storms explained that he had never displayed his revolver, and that nobody ever knew he carried one until the police searched him. Judge Boote told him that he could carry the revolver for his weekly practice.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31.—The bill supposed to have been introduced in the New York state legislature designed to prohibit corporations in other states from operating in this state, particularly a "Georgia corporation" could not be identified tonight from an announcement supposed to have emanated from the Ku Klux Klan.

Bills recently were introduced in the legislature providing for publication of membership rosters of secret organizations and this was taken as directed at the klan but legislation curbing corporations along lines suggested in the purported klan announcement tonight could not be found in legislative records. 4/1/23.

Ku Klux Klansmen Coming Into the Open

P. & A. Photos

NEW YORK HERALD
MARCH 18, 1923

THE remarkable and unusual photograph reproduced above shows hooded members of the George Washington Klan, K. K. K., as they attended services last Sunday night, their identity concealed, at the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Newark, N. J. This is one of the very few occasions in which the Klan has so appeared in this part of the country. Their entrance into the church caused a sensation in the congregation. The Klansmen were welcomed by the minister, the Rev. Paris E. Greenly, who introduced the "exalted cyclops" to the congregation. The photograph reproduced at the right shows the "exalted cyclops" occupying the pulpit of the church, from which he addressed the congregation. The picture at the bottom of this page shows the members of this same Newark Klan attending the funeral services of one of their members recently in Fairmont Cemetery, at Newark. Twenty-five members of the Klan entered the cemetery and went to the grave. Their appearance was a surprise to the mourners.

THE Ku Klux Klan is losing ground in the South, where the people realize it is not needed for the negro and care very little about the fight against the Catholics and the Jews. It is losing steadily in Texas. It is gaining substantially in West Virginia, Maryland, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, New York, New Jersey and other middle Western and Northern States.

The Department of Justice has no intention of moving against the Klan now. President Harding has manifested no special interest. Assistant Attorney-General John H. Crim sent the Attorney-General, before he became ill, the names of more than 300 Federal employees who belong to the Klan and recommended that he ask the President to dismiss them from the service. That report is still on the desk of the Attorney-General.

The Klan seems to be growing faster in New Jersey than in any other State.

Senator Watson says there are 300,000 members in Indiana. Senator Reed believes there are 150,000 in Missouri.

LYONS AND THE KLAN.

Causes of Indiana Republican State Chairman's Sudden Recovery.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of April 3, commenting upon the action of Hon. Lawrence Lyons, Chairman of the Indiana Republican State Committee, in resigning his membership in the Ku Klux Klan and publicly denouncing that vicious organization as un-American and subversive of the Constitution, you call upon Mr. Lyons to now perform a much "harder task" and explain why he—"presumably not an unsophisticated person"—ever joined the Klan in the first place.

Having asked the question—both a pertinent and proper one—I assume you would like to have the answer to it. If so, I can give it to you substantially in the language of Mr. Lyons himself, for I happened to have been present in Chicago when Mr. Lyons, in company with some friends, one of them Mr. Thurman, also a prominent Indiana Republican, now Collector of Internal Revenue, and a probable candidate for Governor, called at the headquarters of the American Unity League, wrote out his resignation and also his letter denouncing the Klan.

All of which he did in the face of the fact that there are today 261,000 Klansmen in Indiana (they claim over 300,000) and at least 2,000,000 in the United States, which is a million less than the Klan claims. These rather impressive, not to say startling, figures should be taken into consideration in connection with what follows, and Mr. Lyons be given some credit for political as well as moral courage in now taking a stand against the Klan, despite its rather formidable political strength, particularly in Indiana.

I am sure I violate no confidence when I publicly repeat Chairman Lyons's reasons, for joining the Klan, which he did about six weeks ago. His reasons for resigning have been widely published already and have attracted much attention. He said it was "politics" that got him into it, and "fool politics" at that; that quite a number of his political friends and advisers "insisted" that as State Chairman of the Republican Party he should join the Klan "for party purposes," and they "over-persuaded" him, against his personal inclinations, to go into it. Their reasons for this were that it was necessary to "offset what the Democrats were doing"; that the Democratic leaders were "joining the Klan right along" and that it was up to Lyons to "get in with them, too." He further said that he didn't realize until he was initiated just what sort of organization he was joining; that he "hadn't been in it ten minutes" before he was "ashamed of himself" and realized that he had been made "the goat." Also that the Klan was a wholly "un-American" and probably "unlawful" organization.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Had a City for Victim.

One commentator on the recent savage beating down in Macon of a man whose ideas of propriety were not those of certain persons as yet unidentified, says of them that "in effect they have tarred and feathered Macon."

The statement lacks accuracy in one respect, as tar and feathers were not used in the instance, but it is essentially true and might have been extended to cover the whole State of Georgia, that part of the country, or even the whole country.

For the disgrace of every lynching extends far.

Whether or not the behavior of the man and woman involved in this case justified reprehension is a question wholly irrelevant to the issues involved. If it did, the treatment they received is no less without excuse than it would have been if they were paragons of all the virtues. If they had violated any laws, the courts of Georgia would have punished them in the way and to the degree which has been decreed by the Georgia Legislature. And if the people of Georgia think the present laws dealing with certain offenses are inadequately severe, it is within their power to pass new laws of whatever sternness they consider right.

What is intolerable is that a few individuals, with no authority and no responsibility, should assume the right to say what others shall or shall not do and to punish as they see fit any violation of a code written in no statute book—of a code which they well know could not be written in such a book, in Georgia or anywhere else. The city and the State were lynched in the sense that their reputation was injured wherever the news of what was done may go, and the injury is reparable only by the prompt bringing to justice of those who inflicted it.

Their Method That of the Klan.

At present writing there seems to be no clear proof that the men who flogged BRIGHT were members of the Ku Klux Klan. They went about their work without the disguise of gown and hood, and no doubt the Klan officials will repudiate them. But the work itself is exactly such as the Klan often has done, and the doing of it would have been in accord with the purpose for which the Klan was organized and exists.

Its members pretend to be the upholders of virtue and defenders of the law; really they are banded with the object of enforcing their own opinions and prejudices on everybody, and they insolently profess to do what the law cannot or will not do in the way of maintaining respect for itself and morality. Inevitably, as at Mer Rouge, they are obliged, sooner or later, to make criticism of themselves or resistance to their decrees a crime punishable with death. Civilization wanes in exact ratio with the increase of their power, and wherever they can act with impunity the result is a state of terrorism verging rapidly into anarchy.

To get one part of the truth about the Ku Klux Klan one only has to read the charges exchanged between two factions of the organization now engaged in litigation to secure control of its finances. To get the rest, read the fast following stories of the Klan's midnight activities on lonely roads.

PROMISE TO UNMASK KU KLUX IN JERSEY

Police Say Fiery Cross Incident Will Lead to Full Hudson County List.

POSTAL MAN NAMES GROUP

C. S. Wolf to Be Paroled and Warrants Issued for Klansmen Who Used His Car.

New York Times 4-11-23

As a result of their investigation connection with the arrest yesterday Charles S. Wolf, an employe of the Post Office at West New York, the police in Hudson County said yesterday they would obtain a complete list of members of the Ku Klux Klan in the county. Wolf, arrested at Cliffside, was said by the police to have been the driver of an automobile containing four or five young men who posted flaming crosses, in violation of law, at four points on the brow of the Palisades on Monday night. New York Times

The first of the crosses, made of beams wrapped in waste soaked in oil, appeared at Twelfth Street and the Boulevard in West New York, and Charles L. Munch of Jersey City, who happened, by took the license number of a small automobile containing the men who, according to Munch, placed the cross. Munch notified the Boulevard police, who put out the fire about the time fiery crosses of similar design appeared at Eighteenth Street, West New York; Thirty-first Street, North Bergen, and at Palisade Avenue. The flames were visible in Manhattan. A truck, according to Munch, had been employed to carry the crossed beams.

Wolf told the police that friends had invited him to meet them at the Sjoberg Print Shop, 448 Seventeenth Street, West New York, early on Monday evening and that when he reached the shop he found a dozen or more members of the Junior Order of American Mechanics among the young men present. He was asked, he said, to take over the organization of a Klan in Grantwood, where he lives. When he declined this task he was asked to employ his automobile in the posting of the crosses, to which he assented.

Under the direction of the young men, whose names he gave to the police, he said he drove to Eastern Boulvard and Eigheteenth Street and witnessed the placing of the first cross by young men who sprang from behind a stone wall. He denied witnessing the posting of the other crosses.

Wolf was arraigned before Recorder Miles, and upon the advice of Chief Leonard Marcy of North Bergen was turned over to Chief of Police Hanley of West New York, who said Wolf probably would be paroled after a full statement had been taken, while warrants would be sought for the men Wolf had named.

KLAN METHODS IN MIAMI

Miami is a thriving town in Florida, largely made so by the investment of some thirty-one million dollars of Northern capital. Like most communities of its kind, the town is divided into a white side, occupied solely by whites, and the colored section, where the Negroes live. The latter class is largely made up of mechanics, and the majority are hard-working and industrious.

The election for mayor developed some opposition among the whites to the present incumbent, although his administration had been of a character to enlist general approval. In order to prevent the Negro voters from supporting him at the polls, thousands of printed circulars, adorned with skull and cross-bones, were scattered in the Negro section. They read:

BEWARE!
Negro Citizens, as long as you keep your place, we will protect you,
BUT
Beware! The Klu-Klux-Klan is Again Alive! and EVERY NEGRO who approaches a polling place next Tuesday will be A MARKED MAN
This is a white man's country, boys, so save your own life next Tuesday.
KLU-KLUX-KLAN
Miami Chapter

P. S.—Don't think for a minute that we don't know you. A white man will be at every polling place with his book. DON'T GET IN THAT BOOK!

This is the method of municipal politics that makes Florida safe for Northern investors. And yet Florida and the rest of the South invite Northern capital to come within the clutches of the mob.

KLANSMEN CONTROL MOVIE PICTURE FIRM

Men High in Councils of K. K. K. Are Executives.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Men identified with Ku Klux Klanism are the executives of the Cavalier Moving Picture Company, incorporated in Delaware, $10,000,000. The Rev. Oscar Haywood, removed from his clerical office in Calvary Baptist Church because of his activities in that church for the klan, is the treasurer. Also he is author of the first scenario proposed for production by the Cavalier Company. "A Portrayal of the Life of Abraham Lincoln," is its title. Incidentally it presents the life story of J. Wilkes Booth who killed President Lincoln. This is Mr. Haywood's maiden effort as a scenario writer.

Ricord Gradwell, owner of Producers' Security Corporation, number 516 Fifth Avenue, has a contract to market the Cavalier films—if on completion he approves of them. He is not affiliated with the klan. Dr. C. Lewis Fowler, a kickard, a paid lecturer of the Ku Klux Klan, is president and is in charge of the Cavalier offices in the Tubes Concourse Building, Jersey City. Major J. E. D. Smith of Buffalo, vice-president, was kleagle of the klan for this state.

Roscoe Carpenter of Lyons, Ind., and the Hotel Martinique, is secretary of the Cavalier Company and originator of its purpose. He said tonight he is not identified with Ku Klux Klan and more than a year ago began promotion of production of films glorifying Americanism. He interested William J. Bryan in that scheme, Will Hays, and other men widely known, he said.

Said Husband Set the Ku Klux Klan On Her

Charged with disorderly conduct by her husband, Mrs. Rose Jones told Magistrate Simms in the Washington Heights Court Monday morning that her husband, Henry, had set the Ku KluxKlan on her.

Mrs. Jones, who is separated from her husband was charged by him with having stopped paying her rent and throwing the burden on him. The magistrate refused to issue a summons.

"Let her talk," suggested Jones' counsel. "And you will see why we brought her here."

Mrs. Jones then told a rambling incoherent story of her marriage and how her husband had been going around with other women. These women she said, followed her everywhere and set the Klan against her. "One day," she said, "they came up the fire escape and threw a white cube, twelve by twelve, through my window. I did not know what it was then. Next day I saw in the papers where they had captured some dope peddlers. After that they tried to trap me through a radio wire in my home at 218 West 133d street. I reported the matter to the anti-Ku Klux Klan."

Magistrate Simms suggested that Mrs. Jones be taken to Bellevue for observation.

"That's exactly where they want to take me" said Mrs. Jones. "They say I am crazy."

Survey Shows Whites Now Victims of Mob Violence

N Y C CALL
APRIL 25, 1923

Mob violence is now directed chiefly against white persons, even women, as contrasted with the previous record chiefly against Negroes, according to a report just issued by the American Civil Liberties Union, which points out that in the 103 cases of lynching, tarring and feathering or flogging in the last six months of 1922, "over two-thirds of the victims were white men and women." Among the 32 Negroes in the record 20 were lynched. "When a mob goes after a Negro, in most cases," the report states, "it does not stop short of death."

Presenting the striking facts of mob violence in the United States, the Civil Liberties report notes "a marked increase in the number of cases," and claims that "the violence is in most cases the result of an organized campaign of terrorism and lawless assumption of power by private organizations, notably the Ku Klux Klan."

Stating that "Texas leads all the other states in floggings and tarring and featherings," the Civil Liberties report claims that the increase in mob violence "is the product of the class feeling and prejudice aroused by the war. The dominant group behind organized mob violence is that of 'white, Protestant and Gentile' Southerners centering in the Ku Klux Klan with the object of class supremacy, private vengeance, and fantastic notions of enforcing the 'moral code.'"

While most of the mob violence in the last two years took place in the South and Southwest, "there were scattered cases throughout the West, and a few cases in the East," the report states. "The record totals nearly 800 victims at the lowest count, not including riot victims, thus averaging over one person a day. Of these, 102 persons were lynched, 33 whites and 69 Negroes; 63 persons were tarred and feathered, 61 whites and only two Negroes; 167 persons were flogged, 126 whites and 41 Negroes; and about 460 persons, chiefly aliens and I. W. W.'s, were deported from local communities by mobs."

Commenting on this total, the Civil Liberties report states that "the killings by mobs in fact total more than 102, if account is taken of the election riots in Florida, where 30 to 60 Negroes lost their lives, and of race rioting in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where 30 were killed."

New York State Legislature Passes Bill That Gives Secrecy a Blow

New York, May 11.—Secrecy, the Ku Klux Klan's ace in the hole, has been made a violation of the law in the state of New York. The assembly adopted the Walker bill making it obligatory for all secret organizations to file with the secretary of state a full list of the names of their members, together with the oaths, aims and purposes of the organizations, Friday night and the bill has already been signed by Governor Smith. Chicago Tribune

5-12-23

The bill was popularly known as the anti-Ku Klux Klan bill and was introduced in the legislature with the idea of breaking up that organization in this state by exposing to the public the names of those who are affiliated with the K. K. K.

When the bill had finally passed, Senator Walker, who introduced the measure in the senate at the behest of the New York World, said that it would be an ideal example for the various states to adopt, thus exposing throughout the country those men who fear to let the world see their faces or know their names.

Assemblyman Henri W. Shields, our lone representative in the assembly, was brought to the capitol from his home in Harlem, where he had been confined several days suffering from a severe cold, to vote on the repeal of the Mullan-Gage act, the state prohibition enforcement act. Mr. Shields' vote made just enough to force the repeal through, 76 votes, the number necessary to repeal, being cast to wipe the law from the statute books of New York state.

NEW YORK'S ANTI K. K. K. LAW.

New York Times 5/14/23

Effective methods of handling the K. K. K. have proved to be a puzzle to most states. Even the United States Government has admitted its inability to cope with the situation. When the Congressional investigation of the Klan was abandoned, the Government admitted that not only did it not want to handle the situation, but that it did not know how to do it. The State of Louisiana has tried grand jury indictments and law proceedings against members of the Klan charged with crimes. But it has not succeeded in securing convictions. Without question it is a difficult problem. The question of dealing with a closely organized, powerful and secret organization is not an easy one. Under such conditions the authorities are always working in the dark.

It appears to us that New York State has taken the most practical and effective means of dealing with the Ku Klux Klan. The legislature has passed a bill requiring all secret and fraternal organizations to file with the Secretary of State their constitutions and oaths, and lists of their members. The Ku Klux Klan, such as it is, cannot exist except as an absolutely secret organization. Under the glare of publicity which the New York law shed upon it, the organization must either dissolve or become entirely changed in its nature.

New York has pointed the way, and if every state will pass a similar law, the Ku Klux Klan can be destroyed or changed into something as innocuous as the many fraternal organizations which exist in all the states and do more or less good.

PASTOR UPHOLDS KU-KLUX KLAN'S STAND ON SCHOOLS

Rev. L. P. Armstrong Reads Pamphlet Purported to Be From "Imperial Wizard."

"The public school system of this country is a part of the Constitution of the United States, and those who would persist on denominational schools in its stead are creating a dangerous state of affairs, both for the denomination they would perpetuate and for the public in general." This statement was made by the Rev. Lynn P. Armstrong, pastor of the Beverly Presbyterian Church, Beverly rd. and E. 8th st., who spoke last night in his church on the "Facts and Fancies Regarding a Much-Advertised Clan."

"The combination of Church and State has always been a dangerous thing," he continued. "We have each the right to worship God as we please. There are certain things fundamental in the training of the American public school that have helped to mold and weld together our democracy more than any other factor. An institution that teaches them religion along with their other studies is an entering wedge to ask for the public money to support religion. And I am against any denomination that asks for State money to support it. There is going to be a day when such moneys will be asked for, and at that time there will have to be a show down. And that denomination (and it doesn't make any difference whether it is Presbyterian, Methodist, Roman Catholic or what it is), the denomination that asks for moneys is going to spoil its own institution. I do not want any Church to fail. I do not want America to fail. It will be their own fault if they do."

On this matter of the public school the Rev. Mr. Armstrong was fully in accord with the tenets of the Ku-Klux Klan, embodied in a pamphlet given to his young son at school, which was purported to have come directly from H. W. Evans, the new imperial wizard of the Klan.

No Fight on Catholics.

The pamphlet read in part as follows: "Section 3. The knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, regardless of statements made to the contrary, either through ignorance or with deliberate intent to misrepresent it, has not made, is not making and does not intend to make, any fight on the Roman Catholic Church as a religious institution, but it will unalterably and unequivocally oppose any move of the Catholic Church or of any other Church, individual or organization, which attempts to bring about a combination of Church and State in the United States.

"The Ku-Klux Klan does oppose the attitude of the Catholic Church on our public school system, believing that the public school as an institution should be protected from its enemies regardless of who they may be.

"The Ku-Klux Klan concedes to every man the right to worship God as he sees fit and in his own way, or to worship Him not at all, and while it adheres strictly to the tenets of the Christian religion, it seeks no quarrel with any individual or organization because of religious difference."

Quoting again from the pamphlet, the pastor read:

Article II, Section 1—The objects of this order shall be a common brotherhood of strict regulations for the purpose of cultivating and promoting real patriotism toward our civil government; to practice an honorable clanishness toward each other; to exemplify a practical benevolence; to shield the sanctity of the home and the chastity of womanhood; to maintain white supremacy; to teach and faithfully inculcate a high spiritual philosophy through an exalted ritualism, and by a practical devotedness to protect and maintain the distinctive institutions, rights, privileges, principles and ideals of a pure Americanism.

"Institution of Justice."

"Section 3—This order is an institution of chivalry, humanity, justice and patriotism. * * * Its peculiar objects being: First, to protect the weak, the innocent and the defenseless from the indignities, wrongs and outrages of the lawless, the violent and the brutal; to relieve the injured and oppressed; to succor the suffering and unfortunate, especially worthy widows and orphans. Second, to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States of America and all laws passed in conformity thereto, and to protect the States and the people thereof from all invasion of their rights thereunder from any source whatsoever. Third, to aid and assist in the execution of all constitutional laws and to preserve the honor and dignity of the State by opposing tyranny in any and every degree attempted from any and every source whatsoever, by a fearless and faithful administration of justice; to promptly and properly meet every behest of duty without fear and withoout reproach."

On the mooted question of the negro, which is said by the enemies of the Klan to engage a great part of its attention, the pamphlet read: "The Ku-Klux Klan is not the enemy of the negro. It opposes, and will continue to oppose, the efforts of certain negro organizations and periodicals which are sowing the seeds of discontent and racial hatred among the negroes of this country by preaching and teaching social equality. We believe it is possible for the races to live together in peace and unity only upon condition that each race recognize the rights and privileges of the other. Yet we hold it is obligatory upon the negro race, and upon all other colored races in America, to recognize that they are living in the land of the white race and by courtesy of the white race, and that the white race cannot be expected to surrender to any other race, either in whole or in part, the control of its vital and fundamental governmental affairs."

At the beginning of his address the Rev. Mr. Armstrong warned his hearers against swallowing whole the contents of newspapers.

"The press in its printing of the news about the Klan is both right and wrong," he declared. "When the newspaper is thrown at your door at night it is like a net full of fish, some good and some no good. You must pick and choose."

"The present chaos in Florida," said the pastor, "where the whipping boss—that relic of medievalism and slavery still exists, and is lent the sanction of a Senator of that State—gives rise to serious consideration by thoughtful citizens that perhaps there is good reason for the existence of the Klan, or some organization to right the terrible wrongs going on.

"And we don't have to go to Florida or any other remote State to find ample reason for some agency to change the ideas of some of the citizens of this country as to what this country really stands for." And at this point he read from The Eagle of May 12 the address of Luke O'Reilly, lawyer, who spoke at the annual Communion breakfast of Court Angela No. 79, Catholic Daughters of America, given at the Elks Club on Saturday morning, April 12.

"Mr. O'Reilly declares," read the pastor. "'I will not support the Constitution of the United States as it now stands because it violates the law of God. Think of the despicable amendment recently attached to this Constitution. Were Governor Smith to die tonight, Lieutenant-Governor Lunn, a Socialist, an atheist, would then guide the destinies of our State.'

"As a matter of fact," the Rev. Mr. Armstrong declared, "I have known Mr. Lunn for some 20 years. He is far from being an atheist. He was ordained a Presbyterian minister and was assistant pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church. Mr. O'Reilly must be aware of this fact at the same time he is deliberately goading on the Catholic Daughters of America to greater political activity. Those reading that article are liable to believe it, not pausing to remember that it is what an individual says to gain his point."

Not a Klansman.

The speaker declared that he was not a member of the Klan and that he knew nothing more about them than what was contained in the pamphlet, purporting to come from their Imperial Wizard.

Mr. Armstrong emphatically stated at several times during the address that he had no quarrel with the Catholic Church or any other organization or race.

"But the fact still remains," said the pastor, "that on the question of Prohibition I have not known a single Catholic priest who has come out in favor of the 18th Amendment. There have been several Protestant ministers who openly opposed it and we have disagreed every time we met."

The pastor further stated that he was of the opinion that the many atrocities laid at the door of the Klan were simply the work of their enemies trying to discredit the organizatoin and mislead the public. "The newspapers help this along," he said, "but it will not do any harm. If it is a good organization it will hold together; if not, it will disintegrate. Time will prove its worth."

The church was filled to capacity.

KU KLUX ORDER ALSO MAY DON MASKS

More Than 800 Persons Attend Organization Meet.

More than 800 persons crowded the auditorium of the Morris High School in The Bronx last night for an organization meeting of the Knights of Liberty—Race and Justice League, Inc., with headquarters in the Knickerbocker building, which Anthony J. Padon says he is organizing to fight the Ku Klux Klan. Padon told his hearers that he was once an organizer for the Klan, but was discharged when he protested against the methods of the organization.

Besides Padon, the speakers were Alderman Peter Donovan, George W. Harris, a negro Alderman, Rabbi Katz and Louis Weitz, who said that the newspapers did not print the truth about the Klan. Therefore, he said, it would be necessary for the league to establish its own magazine, to which members may subscribe.

Padon said that his organization will have three degrees of secret ritual, and eventually may have robes and masks. Its officials will bear titles, he said, like those of navy officers, and life memberships will cost $10 each. Padon said that anybody who does not like the Ku Klux Klan is eligible for his organization.

Speakers Differ on Methods of Combating Klan

A Phillip Randolph, editor of the Messenger Magazine, and J. A. H. Hopkins, executive secretary of the Committee of Forty-Eight, disagreed on methods of combating the Ku Klux Klan, in a discussion the other night before the Harlem Forum Congregation, 251 Lenox Ave.

Randolph saw in the Klan, the direct result of class conflict. He said, "Whenever you have a ruling class trying to maintain their rule and a subjected class trying to emancipate themselves you find such an organization as the Klan. The Klan spirit is world wide and the causes which produced it are world wide. But I believe that the economic factor is the chief cause. I can see there are other causes.

"Bankers and financiers do not oppose the Klan. If the class in power can create in the colored man inferiority of feeling and in the white, superiority of feeling he can keep them apart.

"Klan Spirit Spreading"

"Large masses of Jews, Catholics, Negroes, etc., are working people, and it is easy to pit them against one another, lest they unite. The old slogan says, "Divide and Conquer." I believe that the Klan spirit is going to spread and grow. We are in for a period of terrorism, because the workers are going to grow in power and the ruling class will become panic stricken."

On the other hand, J. H. Hopkins repudiated force. He said, "Mr Randolph suggested that Jews, Catholics, and Negroes organize and suppress the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Randolph believes in the doctrine of force. I frankly disbelieve in it. My principal indictment of the Ku Klux Klan is their doctrine of force. It is all through the world.

Imperialism Responsible

"The spirit of imperialism is responsible for the doctrine of force. It arises from the control of a powerful minority. It is based on the doctrine of self-interest. If the Ku Klux Klan were not affecting anyone but Catholics Jews and Negroes, I would be inclined to say that they ought to settle it themselves.

"But the spirit of the Ku Klux Klan is world wide. We ought to inquire into our homes to see if imperialism and self-interest are ruling there. Apparently the world is gone mad today on the doctrine of force. Reprisals and inflicting punishment is going on in Europe. In Florida the thing has been going on for years.

People in Dungeons

"In New Jersey when we investigated prison conditions there a few years ago, we found people in dungeons, deep down under ground. They were in the dark, chained, and were there for weeks and months. One man was chained there for eight years.

"One cannot appeal to self-interest by right unless it is for the good of the whole community. I appeal to the principle as laid down by the greatest politician who ever lived—Jesus—of two thousand years ago. Love neighbor as self, fair and square. At that time few believed it. Now about all believe it, but do not practice it and they get into trouble.

"I have been pretty thoroughly in on prison systems, railroads, banks, and I know that we do not practice the golden rule. Congress would not listen to you.

"A new spirit is coming that is going to rally and go into the fight, not beating other fellows with their own weapons, but with the ballot. Never use any weapons of offense which you would blame your opponents for using. If you drop to this level you are as bad as he is," concluded Hopkins.

A Law That Appears to Be Futile.

One of the oddest laws ever passed was that enacted by this year's Legislature and supposed to bother or annoy in some way the Ku Klux Klan. It is a law to the effect that certain unknown persons must come forward and say who they are, under penalty of prosecution.

The Secretary of State has been quoted as saying that if these unknown persons do not file lists of their names, it will be up to the District Attorneys of the various counties to prosecute them.

So there is a job for District Attorneys. Drawing an indictment against certain persons unknown for the crime of not revealing their identity will be a task for the ingenuity of legal draftsmen.

Meanwhile the Ku Klux Klan, against whom the legislation is said to be directed, is holding public meetings all over the State, attended by thousands; and newspaper reporters are invited to be present and tell all about it.

As to what it is all about, the most definite statement that has been made recently of its purposes is that the members are expected to do something to prevent Catholics and Jews getting positions as public school teachers or any other public office or employment, and to make life uncomfortable generally for Catholics, Jews and negroes.

Now it must be obvious that so far as concerns interference with the laws regulating qualifications for teachers, the Klan could not do anything effective without coming out into the open. As to public elections, they are of course a free-for-all, and secret society candidates have to run the risk of being defeated at the polls by anti-secret society candidates. The darker side of the Klan organization—the assaults, whippings and murders of persons whom they choose to regard as morally undesirable, the intimidation and terrorism which have been exercised by the order in certain parts of the South—has not yet been displayed in the North; and if the Klan should ever get bold enough to do those things here, every one of such acts would be a violation of criminal law for which a punishment is already provided.

In Louisiana the Klan was found to be so strong that it terrorized the jury trying some of its members for murder, so that no conviction could be attained. It is thus evidently something in the nature of the Mafia or Black Hand, able to afford protection to its members engaging in criminal acts. But it is impossible to believe that the people of the North, where education is diffused, would submit to such terrorism. It has always been difficult to understand the passive way in which rural Southerners yield to all kinds of outrages by White Caps, Night Riders, Ku Kluxers and like gangs. The principle of self-defense would be exercised up here quite vigorously, it is safe to say, and the authority of the law is much more drastic. Our officials would be pretty sure to do something more than merely stand and look on. Right here in New York a good many gangs have thought for a while that they controlled things by their own bravado and by the support of politicians; but they have all come a grief.

No organization can permanently defy the laws against crime.

But a law requiring unknown persons to make themselves known seems to be the height of silliness. Suppose they do make themselves known; what would be gained? Suppose they say—as they do say—that they refuse to make themselves known; what can be done about it? Suppose the Secretary of State had a list of all the Ku Kluxers in the State, from Aaron Adams down to Zachary Zane, what would he do with it and who would ever look at it and what use would it be in the prevention and prosecution of crime if anybody ever did look at it?

These questions are unanswerable.

The pretended anti-Ku Klux Klan law appears to have been a piece of legislative humbug.

KU KLUX KLAN ASKS TO BE INCORPORATED

Files Certificate at Albany as a "Benevolent Fraternal Society."

REGARDED AS EVASIVE MOVE

Legal Authorities Say Klan Cannot Avoid Membership Publicity Required by New Walker Law.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 1—In what many persons here regard as an effort to evade the new statute which would compel the Ku Klux Klan to come out into the open and file with the Secretary of State its membership oath, as well as a full list of its officers and members, representatives of the "invisible empire" came to the capital today and filed with the Secretary of State a certificate of incorporation as a "benevolent fraternal society."

Incorporation was sought by the Klan under Article 3, Chapter 40, of the Laws of 1909. The Walker bill directed against the Ku Klux Klan and similar organizations, which has become a law within a week by Governor Smith's approval, amended that statute by providing for publicity of "every existing membership corporation and every existing unincorporated association having a membership of twenty or more persons, which corporation or association requires an oath as a prerequisite or condition of membership." Exemption is provided for labor unions and benevolent orders mentioned in the benevolent orders law.

It was the opinion of legal authorities here that the attempt of the Ku Klux Klan to come in under this exemption would prove futile. At the office of Attorney General Carl Sherman it was stated that that object could be obtained only through a special act of the Legislature adding the name of the Klan to the list already named in the benevolent orders law.

While adopting the characterization of a patriotic, secret, social and benevolent organization, lawyers said tonight that the Klan could be confined to incorporation under the membership or education corporation law, and, under the circumstances, could not benefit in any way under the exemption provided by the Walker act.

A certificate of incorporation in effect identical with that of the Klan was filed on behalf of the "Kamelia, Inc.," the women's branch of the Klan.

Klan Defines Its Purposes.

The certificate filed by the Ku Klux Klan sets forth the following purposes of the organization:

"The purpose and object of the corporation is purely benevolent and social, and there shall be no profit or gain to the members thereof.

"The particular objects for which the corporation is to be formed are:

"To confer and initiate ritualistic degrees and fraternal obligations, words, grips, signs and ceremonies under which there shall be united only male persons of sound health, good morals and high character; and to exercise such rights, powers and privileges as are now generally extended to men's fraternal orders under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York.

"To encourage and promote mutual benevolent helpfulness between the members of the association and provide a medium for sociality between the members thereof by grove meetings and otherwise.

"To bring together in this association a body of patriotic Americans and to administer to its members an oath of allegiance to the Government of the United States and States and the State of New York, and to require a pledge from them to uphold, protect and defend the flag, the Constitution and the constitutional laws.

"To adopt and amend constitutions and by-laws for the regulation of the general purposes and welfare of the order and of the subordiante branches of the same.

To Hold Real Estate.

"To own and control all paraphernalia, regalia, stationery, jewelry and other material needed for the proper conduct of its affairs; to publish such fraternal literature as is needed in the conduct of the business of the corporation; to buy, hold and sell real estate and personal property suitable to the purposes of the corporation, and to sell, exchange or sublease the same or any part thereof or to mortgage or create liens thereon; to borrow money and secure the payment thereof by mortgage or deed of trust and to appoint trustees in connection therewith, pursuant to law in such cases made and provided; to execute promissory notes; to have and to use a common seal; to sue and be sued, and to do and perform all these things and exercise all rights which under the laws of the State of New York are conferred upon corporations of like character."

The certificate gives Buffalo as the site of the Klan's State headquarters. Its annual meetings are fixed for the first Monday in April.

Five directors are provided for in the articles of incorporation. The names of those to serve in that capacity until the first annual meeting of the Klan are E. D. Smith, H. H. Kattau and Karl M. Hyde of Binghamton and George C. Bryant and Kennely G. Scott of Buffalo.

The five directors signed their names as incorporators. Two other incorporators are L. V. A. Preuster of Niagara Falls and J. B. Mincher of Buffalo.

In both certificates of incorporation an alteration is made through which the words "men's fraternal orders" and "women's fraternal orders" are substituted for list of organizations named in the benevolent orders law which, in the Klan's certificate, includes Masonic organizations and the Sons of the American Revolution, and in that of the "Kamelia," the Order of Ladies of the Eastern Star, Colonial Dames and Daughters of the American Revolution.

Claims Right to Charter Subordinate Bodies.

The articles of incorporation reserve to the petitioners the right "to issue decrees, edicts and certificates of charters of organization to any subordinate bodies of 'this benevolent fraternal society' in this State whenever the same shall be deemed desirable in the conduct of its business."

Unless it should prove that under its articles of incorporation the Klan can edge its way into the benevolent order category, it would be required, under the Walker act, to file its oath and list of officers and members with the Secretary of State within ten days.

As far as known, this is the frist time the Klan has sought incorporation, although it is understood here that steps looking to incorporation were taken some time again in Oregon, where the Ku Klux Klan is strongly represented.

KLAN WILL NEVER REVEAL NAMES, STATES KLEAGLE

Eastport, N. Y., May 27.—The Ku Klux Klan will never reveal the names of its members, the king kleagle of the order for the state, declared to 8,000 klansmen at an initiation of 1,287 "aliens" near here early today. His remarks were directed at a measure signed last week by Governor Smith, requiring all secret orders to file with the secretary of state the names of members.

The king kleagle, unmasked and without robe, attacked the law as unconstitutional, declaring it was "aimed at one organization."

He described himself as "Major Johnson, U. S. A., retired."

NEW YORK.—The Ku Klux Klan, according to its New York "King Kleagle," will not obey the state law compelling it to unmask.

There are millions of Catholics and millions of Jews in New York state. The mayor of New York is a Catholic. The governor of New York state is a Catholic. Many hundreds of city and state officials are Catholics, and many more hundreds are Jews. Members of the Jewish race and adherents to the Catholic religion, by and large, have pretty well dominated political and official matters in this state for many years.

That is why the law, signed a few days ago by Governor Smith, compelling the publication of the membership lists, oaths, and such like, of the Ku Klux Klan and similar orders, will be enforced.

The Kluxers have until June 2 to comply with the law. If their New York roster is not by that time in the hands of the secretary of state there will be a roundup of the membership throughout the state. Just what form the roundup will take has not been disclosed. But it will be effective, because the state attorney general, acting under orders from the governor, is getting ready to compel the various district attorneys to do their part.

KLUX FLOWERS ON GRAVE

OF A WORLD WAR VETERAN. LEGION HEAD REMOVED IT. MAYOR GOT IT, PUT IT BACK BUT WITHOUT CARD ADVERTISING THE KLUX

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N. Y., May 31, 1923.—A wreath from the Ku Klux Klan, removed from Memorial Rock by the Local American Legion commander, has been restored by order of the village authorities.

Samuel W. Ellis, Legion commander, personally took the wreath from the spot at the foot of a bronze statue of a doughboy, where it had been placed Memorial Day, and carried it to the police station. He did this on the ground that those who place the wreath sought advertising through the attached card, which was inscribed:

"From Roockville Centre Ku Klax Klan."

The incident stirred and divided the little town, however, half of the citizens siding with the klan and half with Ellis. The former finally persuaded the local police there would be "trouble" if the wreath were not restored.

A compromise was reached. The flowers were put back, minus the card.

Sees Ford as Ku Klux Nominee for President

(Crusader Service)

NEW YORK, June 15.—Henry Ford, as a candidate for President, would get the support of the Ku Klux Klan because of his energetic stand against foreigners and Jews, according to Joseph Levenson, leader of the James G. Blain Club, a Republican organization in the First Assembly District, in a talk at the club rooms last Saturday night.

"The Immigration Bill is part of the Ku Klux Klan movement in America, an anti-foreigner movement, aiming to defeat all candidates for office who are sympathetic with the immigrant, the Jew, the Catholic, and the Negro," said Mr. Levenson. "Ford has advocated that policy. He has not denied that he contributes money to the support of the Ku Klux Klan.

FEAR ANTI-KLAN LAW MAY PROVE FAILURE

Paragraph in Benevolent Order's Statute Is Said to Provide Loophole for Klansmen.

SMALLER BODIES EXEMPTED

Some Authorities Believe New Act Will Apply Only to the Grand Lodge's Roster.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 8.—The Walker law, supposed to deal in drastic manner with the Ku Klux Klan, may turn out to be a "flivver," it was said at the Attorney General's office tonight. Its legality is not in question, but it is thought there may be a loophole through which the Klansmen may escape having their names filed with the Secretary of State.

The Grand Lodge of the State will be forced to comply with the provisions of the new statute, it was pointed out, which is an amendment to the Benevolent Orders law, but the discovery of an insignificant paragraph in the Benevolent Orders law has cast doubt on the successful operation of the new law, according to the view taken at the Attorney General's office.

The Walker act provides that "every existing membership corporation and every existing unincorporated association having a membership of twenty or more persons, which corporation or association requires an oath as a prerequisite or condition of membership, other than a labor union or benevolent order mentioned in the Benevolent Orders law," shall file with the Secretary of State copies of its oath, constitution, by-laws, rules, regulations, membership roster and list of officers.

The part in the Benevolent Orders law that it is believed may nullify the Walker act is contained in Subdivision 11 of Section 2. The law specifically lists several benevolent orders that were named through special act of the Legislature, and then includes "any subordinate lodge, tribe or other body of any benevolent or fraternal order or society incorporated under and pursuant to the laws of this State."

This section is believed to be the possible loophole of escape for the Klan from the publicity that would follow its strict compliance with the spirit of the law.

The order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and its sister order, the Kamelia, already have filed their corporation papers with the Secretary of State. Those who think there is a loophole in the law say that when a demand is made for the membership roster the Grand Lodge might reply: "Our membership consists of Albany Lodge, Troy Lodge, Buffalo Lodge," and so on, and a demand on the subordinate lodges for their membership list might bring the reply: "We are not included in the provisions of the Walker act. We are protected by Subdivision 11 of Section 2 of the Benevolent Orders law, because the Grand Lodge is incorporated under the terms of that law."

KLAN DEFIES N. Y. MAYOR

To Parade in Complete Regalia, Says King Kleagle.

[By The Associated Press.]

New York, June 22.—The Ku-Klux klan will parade in New York with complete regalia in defiance of Mayor Hylan's threat to break up any such demonstration with police, King Kleagle Johnson of New York state announced to-day.

"We have complied with the provisions of the membership corporation law and other laws and have a right there," he asserted.

KLAN DEFIES MAYOR

Will Parade in New York in Full Regalia Despite Hylan Threat

"We have complied with the provisions of the membership cooperation law and other laws and have a right there," he asserted.

More than 1,000 candidates are reported to have been initiated at a klan meeting at East Islip, Long Island, last night, at which 25,000 members are estimated to have been present.

GARVEY CASE DEATH THREAT

Missive Signed "Ku Klux Klan" Attacks Federal Prosecutor.

In compliance with the Federal rule regarding the deportation of undesirable aliens, Assistant United States District Attorney Maxwell S. Mattuck yesterday sent to the Department of Labor in Washington a full report of the case of Marcus Garvey, self-styled "President of Africa," who recently was convicted of using the mails to defraud investors in the stock of the Black Star Line.

Garvey, who is a native of the West Indies, came here last in 1921, from Jamaica. He was sentenced by Judge Julian W. Mack to serve a term of five years' imprisonment, pay a fine of $1,000 and costs of his prosecution. Since Garvey's conviction Mr. Mattuck has received threatening letters which Post Office inspectors are trying to trace. One signed "Ku Klux Klan," in part, says:

"This is to inform you that I, a member of the Klan and a leader of the same, have found you to be very unfair and as worthless a vagabond that the State has ever had in its service in the manner you handled Garvey's case. It's not that I am interested in him, but in the principles that the organization stands for, and of which he is the head. I don't care for him because I am white."

Then follows a threat to kill the Prosecutor.

N Y C EVE WORLD
JUNE 1, 1923

Ku Klux Defiance.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

In an article published in most of the New York newspapers this morning on the Ku Klux Klan and its open defiance to the law of New York State which requires that all secret organizations list with the Secretary of New York State the names and addresses of all their members, I noticed that at Greenport, L. I., yesterday afternoon the Klan's speaker said in part: "As the Catholics do not permit Protestants to teach in their parochial schools, I do not think Catholics should be permitted to teach in public schools. I believe also that Negroes and Jews should be prohibited from teaching in public schools."

Did he not know that public schools are not "Protestant" but non-sectarian? Therefore, I think that no one, no matter what his religion, should be prohibited from teaching in public schools if he be capable.

The Ku Kluxers voice their disapproval of the Walker law. If they do not want to comply with the laws of the State let them get out of New York State and stay out.

KLAN FAILS TO FILE ITS MEMBERSHIP LIST

Though Time for Filing Under Benevolent Order Law Expires at Noon Today.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 22.—Tomorrow is the last day on which membership corporations and unincorporated associations having a membership of twenty or more which require an oath as a prerequisite to membership can file membership lists with the Secretary of State under the recent amendment to the Benevolent Orders law.

Up to the time the Secretary's office closed tonight the Ku Klux Klan had not filed its list. It was stated that thus far the only corporations affected which had filed the list of members, constitution, by-laws, &c., were the National Fraternity of Alpha Chi Rho, of which Otto P. Sieter of New York is President; the Gamma Eta Gamma Fraternity of Oneonta and the National Sugar Brokers' Association, which has its principal office at 82 Wall Street, New York.

The intent of the amendment to the Benevolent Orders law, which is known as the Walker law, was to bring publicity to the Ku Klux Klan. The Klan, however, has declared that it will not obey the law. The Secretary of State's office is only a filing office and any prosecution is up to the Attorney General's office.

It has been asserted that the Klan is relying on that part of the Benevolent Orders law which specifies the organizations that are not required to file their membership, which includes "any subordinate lodge, tribe or other body of any benevolent or fraternal order or society incorporated under and pursuant to the laws of this State."

The Klan, it is said, probably will file only its Grand Lodge officers, claiming that the section does not require it to file the memberships of subordinate lodges. The Klan and the Order of Kamelia recently filed incorporation papers with the Secretary of State.

No opinion has been asked of Attorney General Sherman as yet, but it is understood that one will be forthcoming when the law is questioned.

The Walker amendment was signed May 22, and the thirty days in which these organizations have to file their lists will expire at noon tomorrow, when the Secretary of State's office will close.

KU KLUX DEFY LAW CALLING FOR NAMES AND ATTACK SMITH

NEW YORK HERALD
MAY 28, 1923

Thirteen Meetings of Klan Decide Upon Ignoring Walker Statute.

GOVERNOR IS TARGET

Big Gathering at Greenport Guarded by Police, but No Clash Occurs.

EASTPORT RALLIES 8,000

Robed Figures Assemble From Many Parts of State to Denounce Measure.

The Ku Klux Klan has decided to let the State of New York gather and file, if it can, the names of its members. The Walker law, recently signed by Gov. Smith, but which does not go into effect until Saturday, has it that all names of members of secret organizations shall be recorded for public perusal in the books of the Secretary of State.

In twelve open air klaverns on Saturday night and one yesterday afternoon in Greenport, L. I., auditorium, the Ku Klux Klan not only decided to ignore the new legislation, but to concentrate a political barrage upon the hopes of Gov. Smith to the end that whatever his ambitions may be—whether to be United States Senator or even President—he will have a unanimous klan against him.

When the Greenport meeting opened the big building was well filled, but at no time was any attempt made to interfere with the gathering. Police were stationed in front of the hall, but there was no need for their services. The meeting was the second within five weeks at Greenport. Only one man, a stranger to the district, was on the platform, and he conducted the meeting. He was neither garbed nor hooded.

Catholics Not Wanted.

Just before the close of the meeting half a dozen strange men marched down the center aisle and immediately proceeded with the distribution of cards, which the speaker asked those present to sign if they wished to join the Klan. He added:

"We don't want Catholics, Jews or negroes to sign any of these. The Klan does not want Catholics any more than the Knights of Columbus want Protestants."

He referred to parochial schools and said: "As the Catholics do not permit Protestants to teach in their parochial schools, I do not think Catholics should be permitted to teach in public schools. I believe also that negroes and Jews should be prohibited from teaching in public schools. They should teach in their own schools."

On one occasion when the speaker referred to Samuel Gompers, saying, "A better understanding should be had between labor and capital," a man in the rear of the hall cried out, "What's the matter with Gompers?" the speaker said: "He's a Jew, but he's all right."

At Eastport, L. I., and at Port Jervis two large klonklaves were held Saturday night. At the former gathering, beneath an electrically lighted fiery cross, 8,000 robed Klansmen pledged themselves to defy the Walker law and fight Mr. Smith. At Port Jervis only 350 Knights were in klonklave and they were less willing to give voice to their feelings in the matter, although many of them, as individuals, said:

"Personally we shall not volunteer our names, and inasmuch as our headquarters are movable and secret, where is the State going to find the lists?"

Style Law Inoperative.

The Walker law does not, the Klansmen insisted, outlaw the Klan if Klansmen's names are not on file in Albany. They say that their lawyers have scanned the new legislation and have decided that inasmuch as the State will be unable to find any person within its jurisdiction upon whom punishment may be inflicted if the names are not forthcoming, the law becomes inoperative so far as the Klan is concerned.

Various of the Knights at the Eastport klonklave seemed to be anxious that the reporters take away with them these sentiments:

That the law requires that the Klan, as well as other secret societies, file the membership at Albany and prescribes a punishment for neglect to do so.

That the various exalted cyclopses and their clerical forces are unknown by the public and, therefore, cannot be sought out and levied upon for their records.

That while such defiance of law may be somewhat inconsistent with the professed patriotism of the Klan, the K. K. K. oath binds every knight to be loyal to that oath and his fellow citizens of the Invisible Empire and, therefore, the Klan feels justified in defying the Walker law.

That the Walker law is an offshoot of the very thing the Klan is fighting. (The knights balked at being more specific on this point.)

That the Americanism of the K. K. K. is ideal and as such must be adhered to and forced into general recognition just as Benito Mussolini's Fascisti grew to be the Italian law by destroying opposition rule.

That the first real test of klannishness has been forced upon the Klan by the Klan's enemies and that the Klan will not back down.

That in the coming fight the Klan expects to be denounced as law defying and inconsistent, but that the ends sought justify the means adopted.

Several of the Klansmen were asked whether they would go ahead with their program of forcing others to observe the law while they themselves purpose defying it. To this they replied that the prohibition law is a national thing and a part of the national Constitution, whereas the law they purpose ignoring is class legislation of a State.

At the Eastport klonklave upward of a thousand "aliens" (non-members) were admitted to citizenship in the Invisible Empire. At Port Jervis 100 were initiated. The Eastport klavern rang with the words of a speaker, who was applauded for saying:

"Al Smith, by signing the Walker bill, barred himself forever from the Presidency of the United States. The Klan pledges itself never to reveal the names of its members. We shall fight to the last breastworks to prevent disclosure of our membership."

The meetings at Port Jervis, Syracuse, Schenectady, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Rochester, Middletown, Binghamton, Elmira, Hornell and Centerport were smaller than the Long Island gathering. The Port Jervis klonklave was held on the Jinks farm, on the Huguenot road, three miles out of Port Jervis. An hour before the Klan assembled a tall cross was fired at Point Peter, overlooking the city. That was the call of the Klan. Only thirty of the knights at the Port Jervis klavern wore hoods and gowns. It was explained that the dealers in the official raiment of the Klan were weeks behind in deliveries.

STATE TO PROSECUTE IF KLAN DISOBEYS NEW ANTI-MASK LAW

Prompt Action Expected After Defiance of Walker Act at Eastport Klavern.

8,000 HEAR SOLEMN PLEDGE OF SECRECY TO MEMBERS

Attack Made on Smith for Signing Bill.

Should the Ku Klux Klan fail to meet the provisions of the Walker anti-mask law, which it will to all appearances, officials will take immediate steps to prosecute the secret order and its officers, it was stated to-day.

District Attorneys and Sheriffs of the greater city and Long Island declared they will take every possible means of carrying out the law which provides for the filing with the State authorities the names of all members of the klan.

Determination of officials is the aftermath of a series of klaverns held throughout the State Saturday night and yesterday. Two of these took place on Long Island, one at Eastport and the other at Greenpoint. The latter, held in an auditorium yesterday afternoon, resolved itself into an attack on Roman Catholics, Jews and Negroes.

A lone speaker, without the usual habiliments of the klan, addressed the meeting. He did not divulge his name. Cards, presumably of membership, were given out and the audience was asked to sign them.

"We don't want Catholics, Jews or negroes to sign any of them," the speaker explained. "The klan does not want them. I am not a member of the klan myself but I agree with its principles. The klan does not want Catholics in its organization any more than the Knights of Columbus wants Protestants."

Denounces Parochial Schools.

The mysterious speaker then launched into a bitter tirade against parochial schools. He said Protestants are not permitted to teach in them, so all Catholic teachers should be barred from the public schools. The Jews and negroes, he went on, should be limited to their own institutions.

It was said to-day that the Klan, made bold by its mounting membership on Long Island, is preparing to treat, with disdain, the Walker law. This was given credence by the attack made on Gov. Smith and the law at Saturday night's gathering at Eastport.

About 8,000 Klansmen attended this klavern and more than 1,000 new members were received. The ceremonies were witnessed by newspapermen invited by the order.

In an open lot about a mile from the town proper and surrounded by hundreds of automobiles, the reporters looked on while the "aliens," as the incoming members are termed, were initiated into the mysteries of the Klan. A fiery cross, mounted on a forty foot pole and topped by an American flag, flared during the ceremonies.

Clergyman Talks to Klan.

This meeting was graced by a hooded figure, introduced to the other hooded figures as the King Kleagle of New York State, who explained that eleven other klaverns were in progress throughout New York. Then he introduced as the speaker of the evening "one of the most prominent clergymen of the country," but he neglected to mention the individual by name.

A short, heavy-set man, attired in riding breeches, corduroy jacket, puttees and a somewhat dilapidated felt hat, climbed to the table around which the klansmen and candidates for membership were clustered. Across the face of the new arrival a handkerchief had been drawn, hiding his features. He outlined as the fundamental principles of the Klan "Free speech, free press, free public schools and the eternal separation of church and State."

The king kleagle followed the "minister." He did not explain why he had elected to attend this klavern in preference to the others held elsewhere. He plunged at once into the Walker law.

"Al Smith by signing that bill barred himself forever from the presidency of the United States," he declared. "The law is unconstitutional because it is aimed at one organization. The klan pledges itself to its members never to reveal their names."

The speaker next described the order as "charitable and benevolent, one which will fight to the last to prevent public disclosure of its membership."

When the address had been concluded, the new members formed in a semi-circle around the table and received the oath. This consisted of a series of expressions of fealty to the klan. Then the meeting broke up. The cross was darkened, the flag brought down and the big line of automobiles started away.

State Ready to Enforce Law

District Attorney Le Roy M. Young and Sheriff A. W. Biggs, of Suffolk County, when told about the meeting to-day, said they are ready to enforce the Walker law to the letter. A similar expression was made by Secretary of State James A. Hamilton and other State officials. It is believed highly probable that Gov Smith may direct the Attorney General to take action in the matter.

While the Eastport meeting was in progress another was being staged at Pompton Plains, N. J., a few hundred feet off the Pompton-Newark Turnpike. It is said that approximately 1,000 members were initiated into the order there.

100,000 KLANSMEN PLAN PARADE HERE

Report From Informed Circles Avers Demonstration Will Be Held Next Month.

ROBES ALREADY ORDERED

Will Appeal to Courts in Case Hylan Refuses Permit—Deny "Mob" in New Jersey.

A parade of white robed, hooded Klansmen in New York City is scheduled to take place next month. In this demonstration 100,000 members of the organization are expected to be in line, each lodge in the immediate vicinity of the State contributing a quota of marchers.

This was the statement made yesterday by a person believed to be in the confidence of the higher officers of the fraternity in this State. The information came out as the result of the statement made by New York State King Kleagle Johnson at last Thursday's convocation near East Islip, L. I.

The gathering out on Long Island brought out slightly fewer than 25,000 Klansmen to initiate a class of 900 candidates. It was the biggest turnout of the organization in this State and all the paraphernalia of the Klan was displayed in an open field nine miles north of the small village. In addressing the candidates, after the Klan oath had been administered, King Kleagle Johnson said that a big parade was due for this city. This was regarded in the light of a gesture at the time. But yesterday the person who predicted the 100,000 paraders emphatically denied that the King Kleagle had indulged in "bluff."

Planned for This Month.

The parade, it was said, was originally set to be held this month, but a hitch developed. It was reported that an order was placed for 200,000 of the robe-like uniforms of the Klan, but the manufacturer was unable to deliver the garments on time. The employes of this garment maker are now working night and day in the effort to have the order completed in time for the parade to be held on an early date next month.

The person who discussed the reported demonstration of the Klan's growth and strength in this city and in communities nearby, admitted that the organization expected that its application for a permit to hold the turnout would be refused. The Klan officials, it was said, were ready for a stiff fight from Mayor Hylan, "but his Honor's efforts to that end will be futile."

If the permit is refused and the Mayor takes other steps to prevent the parade, the Klan will appeal to the courts. The organization might sue for a mandamus, but it was predicted yesterday that such a suit more than likely would result in defeat for the paraders. The municipal authorities, it was pointed out, might argue that the parade, stirring religious or racial feeling, might develope disorder among the spectators.

Plan to Have 25 Bands.

The present plans for the parade, however, have progressed to the point where the sponsors are debating on music. Just now, the officials think that twenty-five bands will fill the bill.

Not denying that the Klan contemplated a parade here, Dr. H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, wired a statement from Washington declaring that the Klansmen would never parade in defiance of law and order. His message read:

"I note from the papers today a statement to the effect that the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will participate in a parade in the City of New York in defiance of the constituted authority of that city. This statement is erroneous. The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will hold no parade in the city of New York or elsewhere in open defiance of the duly constituted officers of the law. All members of the Ku Klux Klan are bound by the following provision of our oath. 'that I will at all times in all ways and in all places help and assist the duly constituted officers of the law in the proper performance of their legal duties.' To this obligation all Klansmen are bound. The Klan will not parade in New York City in defiance of law."

Some interest was manifested yesterday in the status of the organization under the recently enacted Walker law which requires secret organizations to file with the Secretary of State a list of their membership. The time for filing this list expired at 5 o'clock Friday evening, and the Klan has not yet forwarded a roster, according to officials. The organization, however, has filed papers of incorporation and this, in the opinion of some persons, will enable it to remain outside the Walker Law. The Walker measure, it developed, exmpted benevolent organizations, and the incorporation of the Klan sets forth that the brotherhood is a benevolent unit.

Attorney General Sherman or any District Attorney has power to test the validity of the Klan's claims in its incorporation papers, but there came no hint yesterday that such a move was in contemplation.

Denies Mob in New Jersey.

The action of the New Jersey Klan in protesting to Governor Silzer the actions of an alleged mob at Plainfield on the night of June 6, yesterday brought forth a denial that anything but law and order had obtained in the New Jersey city on that night. The denial was the form of a letter to the Governor by Mayor Charles E. Loizeoux.

"I noticed in an issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES dated June 17, 1923," wrote Mayor Loizeaux to the Governor, "that resolutions from the New Jersey Klansmen were forwarded to you, protesting against what they term 'outrages by organized mobs.' This resolution, I understand, states that 'on the night of June 6 in the city of Plainfield, a mob of 300 men attempted to force its way into the Junior Order Hall and break up another protested meeting, and failing hurled bricks and rocks through the windows in an attempt to injure the men inside. Failing in this, the mob gathered outside the entrance to the hall and attacked the speaker, an eminent divine, as well as others when they left the meeting.'

"I do not know who the signers of this resolution are, but I want to go on record as expressing my dislike and disapproval of the aspersions thrown on the city of Plainfield by this inference that it is not governed properly, and that law and order are ont maintained in this city. I was present during all the time the meeting was in session, and when those who were in the hall left. No one attempted to force an entrance into the hall and no one was molested when he left the hall. It is true that some stones were thrown, but this was done by some half-grown boys from behind obstructions, and they were driven away by the police as soon as they created this annoyance.

"There was a number of people on the street in front of the hall, drawn by curiosity. Plain clothesmen were scattered in the crowd, and the whole reserve force of the Police Department was held in readiness only a short distance from the place of the meeting, and could have been used at a moment's notice if the occasion arose.

"It is not fair that this city should be stigmatized as a place where non-rule is permitted, for under no circumstances would any such disturbance as that stated to have occurrede in this city be allowed. In order that this report may be given os much publicity as the untrue statements set forth in the aforementioned resolutions, I am sending a copy of this to our local paper, as well as THE NEW YORK TIMES."

N. Y. ANTI-KLAN LAW MAY PROVE FAILURE.

(Crusader Service.)

Albany, N. Y., June 11—The Walker Law, supposed to deal in drastic manner with the Ku Klux Klan, may turn out a "flivver" it was said yesterday at the Attorney General's office. Its legality is not in question, but it is thought there may be a loophole in the Benevolent Order's Statute through which the Kluxers may escape having to file their names with the Secretary of State.

KLAN FAILS TO FILE MEMBERSHIP LIST

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Ku Klux Klan has failed to file with the secretary of state at Albany a list of its members as required by the Walker law passed at the last session of the legislature, aimed at the Klan. The last hour for filing the list was 5 o'clock last evening.

Secretary Hamilton said the klan's act in filing papers of incorporation under the benevolent orders act presumably gave it a basis for refusing to reveal its membership. Under the Walker law benevolent organizations are exempt from filing names.

Decay of Democracy

N Y C CALL
JUNE 13, 1923

AT Troy 25,000 so-called citizens of the United States, imagining themselves "100 per cent Americans," assembled May 31 and watched 1,000 candidates initiated into the "Invisible Empire," which is sworn to maintain Protestant, white, native-born American supremacy, against Jews, Catholics, Negroes, foreign-born and radicals. This ghost of the old Know-Nothing movement, aping the names and mask of the traitorous Ku Klux terrorists of the Reconstruction era, is so far removed in spirit and aspiration from the founders of this republic, that it instinctively calls itself an "empire." The editor of this paper is a Protestant, white, native-born American whose ancestors served with Washington at Valley Forge; and if ever he was ashamed of his degenerate countrymen it is when he beholds them responding to reactionary appeals to race prejudice, fanaticism, narrow provincial nationalism, and toryism, while with abject meekness they permit the yoke of capitalism to be bound more and more heavily upon their backs. These yokels strain at gnats while swallowing camels. They have already been euchred out of every inherited birthright of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; all that the capitalists have left for most of them is the grand and glorious privilege of selling their bodies to some corporation so long as they can make themselves useful to their masters. And now, lest they begin to display some rudimentary brains and perceive the source of their discontent, their masters fasten to their noses this Ku Klux propaganda in order to keep them wandering in the swamp of conservatism.—Miami Valley Socialist

First Fiery Cross to Appear In City Illumines the Bronx

Casts Its Glare on Cabaret Patronized by Both Negroes and Whites—Police and Motorists Beat Out Flames.

N Y C SUN JULY 12, 1923

The flaming cross of the Ku Klux Klan added itself to the many advertising illuminations of New York last night. It was the first time the symbol had ever appeared within the precincts of the greater city, where Mayor Hylan recently declared it would never be tolerated.

The Bronx, of all places, was where the cross was erected. The exact spot was in Van Cortlandt Park, on the municipal golf course, 200 feet from Jerome avenue. The cross spoke its fiery message to the dark skies and to a few surprised motorists at about 1 o'clock this morning.

It was within easy sight of Dash's Inn, a cabaret at Jerome avenue and 213th street, presided over by "Sandy" Thompson, and patronized by a large number of negroes. If the purpose of the cross was to frighten these folk it certainly accomplished its end. Another theory of the erection of the cross on the golf course was that it was either a new type of "hazard" or else a beacon to enable followers of the ancient Scottish game to practice "mashie pitches" and putts at night.

Beat Out Flames.

The cross was rudely constructed of two planks draped in white cheese cloth which had been saturated with kerosene. It stood five feet high and was set six inches deep into the preciously smooth turf of the golf links and was supported by a small pile of rocks. Motorcycle Policeman McGrath of the Wakefield station headed a party of motorists and others attracted to the unusual scene and charged across the green and quickly battered the cross down. and extinguished the flames. Police from the Kingsbridge station arrived and the vicinity was searched.

According to the story of one witness of the Klan's advertising campaign in the Bronx there were a half dozen figures kneeling around the cross when the first alarm was sounded and they quickly scurried away and escaped in the direction of Gun Hill road. Whether these celebrants of the Klan's midnight mass were shrouded or not could not be determined.

May Have Been Race Warning.

There was a belief by some that the cross was a warning against the fraternizing of negroes and whites in the Bronx. The Thompson cabaret that received most of the red glare from the K. K. K. torch was often patronized by both blacks and whites. Recently in the Bronx a white girl in a party of negro joy riders was injured in a motor car crash.

The remains of the charred and broken cross were taken to the Wakefield police station where they will gladly be returned to the real owners if they come and identify them.

SHERMAN GETS ORDER RESTRAINING KLAN

Order and Associated Kamelia Have Thirty Days in Which to Appeal.

Times 8-22

ALBANY, Aug. 21.—The order signed by Supreme Court Justice Staley, restraining the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and their sister order, the Kamelia, from exercising any corporate rights or privileges under the certificates of incorporation heretofore filed with the Secretary of State, was received in the Attorney General's office today.

Copies will be filed in the Albany County Clerk's office by Deputy Attorney General McManus and served on the Klan's attorney, George Lepine of Unadilla.

The Klan and Kamelia have twenty days beginning with tomorrow, when it is believed the order will be served on Mr. Lepine, in which to answer the complaint, which was filed with the original papers before the proceeding applying for a temporary injunction was begun, and thirty days in which to make an appeal from Justice Staley's order.

KU KLUX KLAN MEETING ENDS IN STREET FIGHT

Elmira, N. Y., August 15.—After a street fight which followed a public meeting last night at which Ku Klux Klan principles were explained the Rev. Nicholas Cosaboon, of Buffalo, and several other persons who had been speakers were escorted to their train by police. 8-16-23

The trouble started when a heckling crowd surrounded one of the klan delegates as he left the hall. One of the delegates was struck in the face.

State Will Not Prosecute Ku Klux Klan; Attorney General Finds Walker Law Useless

According to information brought here from Albany yesterday and backed by high authority there is scant prospect of any prosecution being instituted against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan for failure to comply with the provision of the Walker Anti-Klan bill.

Attorney General Carl Sherman, after careful inquiry, is said to have reached the conclusion that the Klan is within the law in not filing with the Secretary of State a roster of its membership, minutes of ts meetings and copies of its constitution, oath and by-laws.

In other words Mr. Sherman believes, as a result of his investigation, that the Walker law, which sought to unmask the Klan by attempting to force it to file certain information with the Secretary of State, has failed in its purpose and that it would be bad policy to initiate a State-wide prosecution against the organization unless he has an open and shut case against it.

Failure of the Klan to comply with the intent of the Legislature in passing the Walker act, Mr. Sherman is said to have been advised, does not provide the State with a weapon of any great power against the Klan.

Since the Klan and its sister organization, the Kamelia, were incorporated under the Benevolent Orders law with the Secretary of State, and the organizations failed to file the information sought to be obtained by the Walker act, the Walker act has been studied by the Attorney General's office to see to what use it could be placed. On this point Mr. Sherman is said to have received a final report from his deputies.

It became apparent some time ago that the Walker act was not without flaws, and it was also apparent that the Klansmen were fully aware of the loopholes in the law by the open way in which they defied the State to prosecute them.

Its Records Stolen, Ku Klux Klan Alleges; Asks Court to Stop Magazine Publication

New York Times

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and Hearst's International Magazine clashed yesterday, when the Klan, through its President, H. A. Evans, brought an equity injunction suit in the Federal District Court against the International Magazine Company of 119 West Fortieth Street. 7-21-23

The Klan alleges that the magazine wrongfully and without consent of the society, obtained certain letters and other documents which were in the possession of the Klan. It asks the Court to require the company to answer its complaint, and, pending the issue of a permanent injunction, asks that the company be enjoined from publishing any letters or other documents, and that the company further be reequired to surrender all papers wrongfully taken. The hearing has been set for Tuesday.

Albert Massey of 152 West Forty-second Street, attorney for the Ku Klux Klan, said that the bill of complaint alleges that the articles appearing in the magazine were founded on private papers and documents stolen by an employe in the Atlanta headquarters of the Klan and sold to the International Magazine Company for $3,000.

Massey did not deny the authenticity of the articles. He is the first attorney of record to appear for the Ku Klux Klan in the courts of this city. He said he is not a member of the Klan.

Affidavits have been filed alleging that Rhodes McPhail, who had charge of the propagation department at Atlanta, went through the files of the Klan to which he had access and extracted many documents. According to the bill of complaint, these documents and other private papers were brought to New York by Samuel N. Castleton, an Atlanta attorney, who, it is alleged, got in touch with Louis R. Glavia, a writer for the magazise. Other affidavits allege that Glavis and Castelton made several attempts to sell the material and finlly succeeded in disposing of the papers to the defendant magazine.

KLAN MADE OUTLAW ORGANIZATION IN N. Y.

ALBANY, Aug. 21.—Denouncing the alterations made by the Ku Klux Klan in its incorporation papers as "not only an illegal and unauthorized act, but also an imposition and fraud upon the court," Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley at Elizabethtown granted an injunction sought by Attorney-General Sherman to prevent the Klan and its sister organization, the Kamelia, from operating as a corporation in this State.

KLAN FRIGHTENS NEGROES.

Blazing Cross on a Mountain Causes Panic at Middletown.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., July 11.—A big cross blazing late last night from the top of a mountain near Chester terrified the colored population, some of whom dropped upon their knees while others ran wildly about, believing it to be an omen of evil. An all night vigil was kept to protect their homes and families.

Members of the Ku Klux Klan in full regalia were in evidence.

The cross was 40 feet in height, with a cross bar measuring 20 feet. It burned for 45 minutes.

The Klansmen are believed to have come from local Klans which are active throughout sections of the county.

GRAND MASTER OF MASONS LEADS DENUNCIATION AT PATRIOTIC-RELIGIOUS SERVICE AT GOSHEN, N. Y.—GOVERNMENT NOT EXCLUSIVELY A "WHITE MAN'S GOVERNMENT"

Evening Telegram 7-11-23

Goshen, N. Y., July 5, 1923:—Catholics, Jews and Protestants joined last night in a patriotic-religious Independence Day service and heard Supreme Court Justice A. S. Tompkins, grand master of the Masons of this State, counsel the Ku Klux Klan to love its neighbors and raze the barriers it has erected against races and creeds.

The ceremony was held in the Presbyterian Church, under auspices of the Knights of Columbus, with Rev. Father J. H. McGinnis presiding. Justice Tompkins, a Baptist, was the principal speaker. Catholic ushers shepherded the one thousand Methodists, Episcopalians, Jews and members of other denominations who filled the pews and aisles and overflowed onto the street.

Justice Tompkins adjured his hearers to stand together against the klan as they had fought together in the World War.

"The great menace to our republic today is on the inside, not the outside," he said. "Our democracy cannot endure unless all classes, creeds and races are allowed to live and work and worship freely and peaceably.

"Our Government is not exclusively a white man's government, or a Protestant government, a Jewish or a Gentile government."

Refuse Charter to Ku Klux, New York, as Fraternal Body

The Montgomery

ELIZABETH, N. Y., Aug. 14—Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley tonight granted an injunction sought by the state of New York restraining the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan Inc., and the Kamelia, Inc., its sister organization from acting as chartered benevolent fraternal organizations in New York state. 8-15-23

Declaring that the statues clearly intended a certificate of incorporation "should be approved in the form in which it was filed and filed in the form in which it was approved," Justice Staley held that the act of incorporators of the Klan and Kamelia in altering the certificates of incorporation after approval and before filing was "not only an illegal and unauthorized act, but also an imposition and fraud upon the court."

THE KU KLUX SPIRIT

"THE Ku Klux Spirit" is the title of the new and most important pamphlet just written by J. A. Rogers, a young Negro author. The pamphlet gives a brief outline of the history of the Ku Klux Klan, past and present.

Speaking of the Klan today, Mr. Rogers says:

"A great deal of the blame for the revival of the Klan must be laid on the popular writers, who gave the old Klan a clean bill.

"A nation, being but the individual multiplied, functions in fundamentally the same manner. Once permit the course of a disease in any part of one's body, because that part is thought to be not vital, and the blood-vessels will carry the germs to the heart, which will in turn send them to the other parts of the body, where they will at once lay siege to the weaker parts. Similarly, once permit the course of an injustice to any group in a nation because that group is little thought of, and in time, the evil will be conveyed by the arteries of trade, politics and other inevitable intercourse through the nation, where it will attack the weakest of the favored group and the next weakest, and the next, accumulating power until it becomes the dominant force in the nation. Prejudice for the Negro has exerted a profound influence for evil on the political, social and economic life of the white peoples of the United States, particularly on those who have indulged most in it--the poorer ones.

"Secret societies in the past have dominated the organized government of nations. One called the "Heimgericht" practically ruled Germany for more than a century, committing atrocities similar to those of the Klan. What has happened may happen again.

"The present Klan thrives largely because many of those whom it opposes sympathize with it in its attack on certain groups. For instance, many foreign-born Protestants think the Klan does well to fight the Catholics; many Catholics that it does well to fight the radicals; the radicals that it does well to fight the Negroes and certain Negroes that it does well because it creates a division among the whites."

MR. COOLIDGE'S OPPORTUNITY.

Although new to the office of President, Calvin Coolidge has shown conclusively in his message to the Knights of Columbus convention at Montreal that he is opposed to the political activities of the Ku Klux Klan, which with its bogus platform of Americanism would discriminate against Catholics, Jews and Negroes. Few political leaders, unless of the Catholic or Jewish faith, have dared thus boldly to commend an organization which the Klan had opposed. President Coolidge commended the Knights of Columbus as in every sense a patriotic order, which has ever shown its steadfast devotion of American principles and American ideals.

This commendation implies a thorough repudiation of the program and propaganda of the Klan, which seeks to bar Catholics, Jews and Negroes as unworthy of the status of full fledged Americans. The same commendation extended to the Catholics for their work in war charities would apply to the other classes of citizens proscribed by the Klan. And all of these sent their "dearest and best to bear the brunt of battle," as the President truly said.

It may then be accepted as a fact that President Coolidge, in his insistence upon the supremacy of law, is opposed to the domination of the Klan spirit in the affairs of the country. His opportunity to prove his words by action will come in the final adjustment of the matter of the Veterans' Hospital at Tuskegee, where the Klan spirit is rampant. He has only to insist upon the carrying out of the pledge given by his predecessor to man this hospital with a colored personnel and to afford them the full protection of the Federal government in caring for the disabled Negro soldiers committed to their care.

Another matter that will require the President's attention is the number of avowed members of the Ku Klux Klan now in the service of the government, their first allegiance being given, of course, to the secret hooded order. According to a well informed Washington correspondent, an official investigation of this organization, authorized by President Harding, showed between 300 and 500 names of postmasters, United States marshals and other Federal employees, who had taken the oath of allegiance to the Klan. The departments at Washington are also said to be infested with Klan members. Officials of the Department of Justice held that this was not only improper but in conflict with the oath administered when they undertook to serve the United States Government.

A state judge in Texas, less than a year ago, removed a county sheriff from office because the sheriff was proved a Klan member. This judge held that the oath of allegiance to the Klan invalidated the obligation entered into by the sheriff to serve the State and that he thereby became ineligible to hold office. Whether this opinion was sustained by the higher courts of Texas, we do not know, but it certainly had the ring of good law and equity.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the Ku Klux Klan of today is a revival of the organization of Reconstruction times, which achieved its ends by midnight marauding, intimidation and assassination. This band of masked murderers was formed by General Nathaniel B. Forrest, a Rebel general who became notorious because of his massacre of the garrison of Fort Pillow, after its surrender. The Ku Klux Klan is to America what the Thugs were to India or the Mafia to Italy. It should be stamped out of existence as contrary to all law and order.

In dealing with this menace, President Coolidge will have an opportunity to renew his adhesion to the principle that the law must prevail over anarchy and rebellion.

Court Denies Petition Of Klan Against Hearst

LETTER THREATENS LIFE OF JUSTICE TOMPKINS

'Beware K. K. K.,' Says a Missive, Sent Also as Warning to Two Policemen at Goshen.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., July 27.—Threats that Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins was "marked" were contained in an anonymous letter received at Goshen by Policeman Samuel Van Gelder. "Beware the K. K. K. When we go to Goshen we will go with some force of men and arms," the missive said.

The letter, which was directed to Policeman Van Gelder, in addition to threatening Justice, also warns Van Gelder and Patrolman David P. Clark, saying:

"Beware! Take notice! X Injury X Death! Keep your nose out of our business, and if you don't we're going to get you both, and that before long. We will get you when you least expect it, and will do same to Clark. Judge Tompkins thought he was — smart to speak to the Micks and Jews in Goshen. Well, we have him marked. We're going to get him."

Supreme Court Justice Tompkins, formerly head of the Masonic lodge in the state, a short while ago addressed members of the Knights of Columbus in the Presbyterian Church at Goshen. Officials are of the opinion that because of this activity, Justice Tompkins received reference in the letter.

It is written on two folded sheets of paper with pencilled script.

Law Compelling Klan to Unmask Will be Enforced, Smith's Stand

N. Y. WORLD
MAY 28, 1923

Tacitly Accepts King Kleagle's Challenge That Order Won't Obey—Refuses to Engage in Controversy—Showdown Comes Saturday.

PROSECUTORS PROMISE ACTION ON VIOLATIONS.

More Klux Rallies Held—1,000 "Aliens" Initiated in Jersey as Show of Strength.

Gov. Smith tacitly accepted yesterday the challenge to State authority flung down by the King Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan in New York, who early yesterday morning, as told in late editions of The World yesterday, told 4,000 gowned Klansmen and 789 initiates in a field near Eastport, L. I., that the Ku Klux Klan will not unmask.

The State's Chief Executive would not, however, engage in a controversy with a person or persons unidentified. He took the firm attitude that the Walker law, requiring the Klan to file the names of its members with the Secretary of State, was placed upon the statute books to be enforced.

Time Limit Up Saturday.

The Walker law was signed by Gov. Smith last Wednesday. It gives the Klan ten days, ending next Saturday, to reveal its membership. There can be no violation, therefore, before Saturday, and official cognizance cannot be taken of Klan threats not to obey the law until these words are carried into actual disobedience.

The Klan was not singled out by Gov. Smith as an organization which must especially obey the Walker law, but he did make it unmistakably clear that if that organization failed to comply with the statute its violation would be promptly placed before the Attorney General for swift and sure prosecution.

Secretary of State James A. Hamilton reiterated that unde. the provisions of the Walker law, sponsored by The World, organizations must file certificates of incorporation and lists of membership by June 2.

"Once in my office," he added, "these papers become public documents."

Prosecutor Ready.

"If the provisions of the law," he continued, "are not fully complied with, it will be up to the local authorities to take action. These would be the District Attorneys of the various counties."

And District Attorney Le Roy M. Young of Suffolk County, which includes Eastport, where Saturday night's meeting was held, seemed imbued with the same notion that the Walker law was to be enforced. As soon as an official complaint of a violation and information in support of it shall be received he promised an immediate investigation, with swift prosecution if warranted by the facts.

Sheriff A. W. Biggs of Riverhead, seat of Suffolk County, which had in addition to the Eastport meeting a gathering of the Klan at the same time at Centerport, stood by Mr. Young. He was ready, he declared, to guarantee prompt action whenever Mr. Young gave the order.

More Meetings Held.

In Orange County, where meetings had been reported at Port Jervis and at Middletown, District Attorney J. D. Wilson felt the same way. He was inclined to doubt, however, that the Klan had made or would make much headway in that county and said the first information he had received about the meetings was that furnished to him by The World.

The Klan continued yesterday to hold further meetings and to supply added information regarding those held early yesterday morning in what it evidently desired to make an impressive demonstration of its strength. Chief among the supplemental news was reported a big meeting at Pompton Plains, N. J., where 1,000 "aliens" were initiated. This meeting was attended by a Paterson, N. J., reporter, who was escorted by two Klansmen in a closed automobile to and from the field where it was held. The guards, of whom there were 100, each armed with a large club and many carrying pistols, would not allow him, even with his escort, to approach close enough to hear.

Aside from the guards at the New Jersey field who roughly turned back all not having the grip, password and countersign, there was little attempt at secrecy. It was announced that the affair was in charge of Federal Rock Klan of Butler, N. J., and was attended by members from throughout Northern New Jersey and New York.

One of the "aliens," as the candidates for initiation are termed, was "doubted" at the ceremonies. He was taken before the Exalted Cyclops, who said:

"As we give every one a fair and square deal, we will investigate these charges carefully."

The "alien" was then led, weeping, to a side of the field, with a guard on either side of him.

100 in Hoods Visit Church.

Another feature of the demonstration was the visit paid last night to the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Point Pleasant, N. J., by 100 Klansmen in full regalia. This is the second church visit by Klansmen in that town, the first taking place a week ago, when hooded men attended the Central Methodist Episcopal Church.

The occasion of last night's visit was a memorial service for soldier and sailor dead, invitations to which had been sent by the church's pastor, the Rev. L. S. Moore, to fraternal organizations as well as the organizations of veterans. There had been reports throughout the week that the Klan would attend the meeting and the church had an overflow congregation.

The choir was singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" when the Klansmen marched up the aisle behind a standard bearer carrying the American flag. Dr. Moore conducted the service as usual and at its close, asked if any member of any organization wished to speak.

A Klansman then went into the pulpit and after placing his hand on the Bible spoke of the Klan's aims, which, he said, were to uphold the Constitution and the flag. He said the mask was worn to protect Klansmen from persecution by those of "another organization," but did not specify the organization he meant.

Audience Applauds.

Six hundred people of Greenport, L. I., greeted in the Opera House there yesterday afternoon the reputed minister who opened the meeting at Eastport, where the Kleagle cast down the gauntlet to the law-enforcing powers of the State. The speaker again refused to give his name, nor did he directly refer in his speech to the Klan.

Just before the meeting closed, six men, strangers in the town, marched down the centre aisle and distributed cards, which the speaker asked any one wishing "to hear more" of the unidentified organization, to sign.

"We don't want Catholics, Jews or Negroes to sign any of these," he shouted.

The six strangers then collected the cards at the door as the audience, which had applauded vigorously, departed. Chief of Police Howard and citizens of Greenport said there was a strong sentiment in favor of the Klan there, but that they knew of no local conditions which might stimulate its activities.

SAYS KLAN ALTERED INCORPORATION PAPERS

New York Times

Justice Pierce Swears that "Material Changes" Were Made After He Approved Them.

James 8-14-23

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 13.—"Material changes" were made in the incorporation papers of the Ku Klux Klan after they had been approved by Supreme Court Justice Pierce of Buffalo, according to the Justice's affidavit read into the court record today by Assistant Deputy Attorney General Griffin, who is endeavoring to have the incorporation voided. At present the Klan is incorporated as a benevolent organization and therefore cannot be forced to make public the names of its members.

Mr. Griffin cited statutes to show that it was immaterial, when changes had been made, whether they lessened or added to the strength of the certificate of incorporation. An attempt had been made, he said, to foist a fraud upon the State.

George M. Lepine, who appeared for the Klan, read into the record a statement taken from the statutes which he said showed that actual fraud must be proved.

Supreme Court Justice Staley, before whom the motion was argued, stated that he would announce his decision within a day or two.

Go-Getter Salesmen—at $8 a Hood—Swell the Klan's Ranks in North

New York and New Jersey are having demonstrated to them the perfected sales method of the Ku Klux Klan.

First the salesmen introduce themselves to the community through the medium of other organizations, generally those that emphasize "Americanism." Then they send out by mail invitations to learn more about the Klan. Then they post similar invitations in railroad stations, Post Offices and stores.

When half a dozen members have been secured, they enter churches in their regalia, tendering purses of money to the pastor or to some church organization. Occasionally this is varied by a gift of money to some family in distress. This stage is marked by the burning of crosses on vantage points in the neighborhood.

Finally comes the "public initiation," to which newspapers are invited to send reporters and photographers and to which every Klan member and sympathizer within easy travelling distance is all but ordered to come, so that the display will be as impressive as possible. From this time on the sales drive is pushed at highest pressure.

This method "put over" the Klan in the South, the West and on the Pacific Coast. It was worked out by the salesmen themselves, to whom $8 out of every $10 membership fee goes.

Staley Enjoins the State Ku Klux Klan From Acting as Chartered Fraternal Body

The New York Times 8-15-23

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley tonight granted the temporary injunction sought by the State of New York restraining the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and the Kamelia, Inc., its sister organization, from acting as chartered benevolent fraternal organizations in New York State.

"The Attorney General of the State is authorized by Section 1217 of the Civil Practices act," said Justice Staley in his decision, "to mantain upon his own information an action against one or more persons who act as a corporation within the State without being duly incorporated. In such an action the final judgment, if favorable to the plaintiff, must perpetually restrain the commission of the act complained of, and a temporary injunction to restrain such act may be granted upon satisfactory proof by affidavit that the defendants are acting or threatening to act for and in behalf of a corporation not legally constituted.

"The sole question involved in this motion for a temporary injunction is whether the alleged membership corporations, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and the Kamelia, Inc., have been duly incorporated in accordance with the stautes of the State. It appears from the papers submitted that on May 31, 1923, proposed certificates of incorporation of the alleged corporations herein referred to were approved by leges as are now generally extended to certain fraternal organizations specifically named in the certificates.

"Subsequent to the approval of these Justice George E. Pierce of Buffalo. The certificates, at the time of approval, authorized the alleged corporations to exercise such rights, powers and privi- certificates by Justice Pierce and prior to their filing in the office of the Secretary of State, certain alterations and deletions were made therein, whereby the particular organizations named in the original certificates were deleted, and in place thereof were inserted the words: 'men's fraternal organization' in the Ku Klux Klan certificate and the words 'women's fraternal organization' in the Kamelia certificate.

"The primary purpose of the creation of a corporation is to secure the legal right to exercise some powers and to enjoy some privileges conferred by law upon corporate entities.

"The powers and privileges of a corporations are vital and constitute its very life, and these are conferred by its charter or certificate of incorporation. An alteration of the specifications of the powers as set forth in its charter increasing them from a definite limitation to a broad, indefinite scope, is obviously one which effects a material change in the extent of powers thereby granted.

"The certificates in question were filed and are recorded not in the form approved by Justice Pierce, but in a form subsequently altered by the incorporators, or some of them.

"The statute clearly intended that a certificate of incorporation should be approved in the form in which it was filed and filed in the form in which it was approved. To alter such a certificate after its approval without the consent of all the incorporators and the approving Justice, in a manner involving a material change therein, is not only an illegal and unauthorized act, but also an imposition and a fraud upon the court which cannot under the requiremets of the statute be tolerated or excused."

KLAN IS ENJOINED BY NEW YORK COURT

The Atlanta, Ga.

Elizabethtown, N. Y., August 14.—Supreme court Justice Ellis J. Staley tonight granted an injunction sought by the state of New York restraining the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and the Kamelia, Inc., its sister organization, from acting as chartered benevolent fraternal organizations in New York state. 8/15/23

Declaring that the statutes clearly intended a certificate of incorporation "should be approved in the form in which it was filed and filed in the form in which it was approved," Justice Staley held that the act of incorporators of the klan and Kamelia in altering the certification of incorporation after approval and before filing was "not only an illegal and unauthorized act but also an imposition and fraud upon the court."

New York, August 14—Federal Judge Winslow today denied the petition of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., of Georgia, for a preliminary injunction restraining the International Magazine company, controlled by William Radolph Hearst, from publishing articles by Norman Hapgood regarding the klan.

New York Kleagle Also Defers Binghamton Parade of 7,000.

Special to The New York Times. 8/15/23

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The Ku Klux Klan will obey the injunction order granted by Justice Staley, Major E. D. Smith, Grand Kleagle of New York State, announced today as the result of a conference of Klan officials held here.

Major Smith explained that the charter of the Klan had not been revoked but that the order only enjoined the Klan from operating as a benevolent or fraternal organization.

Recently Major Smith conferred with the Commissioner of Public Safety and Corporation Counsel of Binghamton relative to permission allowing 7,000 Klansmen to parade in this city. Major Smith said there would be no parade at present as the result of the injunction, but he could not say whether one would be held later. He did not believe the order prevented groups of citizens assembling in an orderly manner as long as they complied with the law and did not interfere with the rights of others.

NEW YORK OUTLAWS KLAN

NEW YORK.—Every member of the Ku Klux Klan in New York state has become an outlaw by the decision of Supreme Court Justice E. J. Staley at Elizabethtown, in which he denounces the alteration of the klan's incorporation papers as "not only an illegal and unauthorized act but also an imposition and fraud upon the court." Justice Staley has granted an injunction sought by Attorney General Sherman to prevent the klan and its sister body, the Kamelia, from operating in this state as a corporation. Bulletin 8-26-23

At the court hearing the klan incorporators admitted that they had altered the papers between the time they were approved by Supreme Court Justice Pierce of Buffalo and the time they were filed with the secretary of state. The words "men's fraternal orders" and "women's fraternal orders" were inserted in the incorporation papers in place of the "Ku Klux Klan" and "the Kamelia."

The purpose of the klan in incorporating was to evade the drastic provisions of a law passed by the last legislature to compel the klan to make public its membership list, oaths, and constituton and by-laws. Chicago, Ill.

Now that the incorporation papers have been declared fraudulent and the organizations have been temporarily restrained from acting as benevolent societies, the klansmen can be prosecuted by the district attorneys of the several counties.

According to the attorney general's office, any attempt to file the altered papers a second time will be fought to the last. This statement was made because it is believed the klan may attempt to secure the approval of some supreme court justice to the altered papers and then file them a second time with the secretary of state.

POLICE RAID CHICAGO KLAN

CHICAGO.—Local headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan have been raided by the police and an injunction prohibiting further meetings served on Willam J. Smmons, founder of the klan. The injunction is the result of the civil war inside the national klan organization, and was issued on petition of the Atlanta faction, which now opposes Simmons.

Imperial Wizard Evans, who succeeded Simmons as head of the organization, set forth in his petition that the defendants had been suspended from the klan and had been active in a secessionist movement in behalf of the Knights of the Kamelia, a similar society.

TOLEDO KLAN MOBS RADICAL

NEW YORK.—Salvatore Rose, speaker for the Proletarian party, who, with his wife, was seized by a mob actively assisted by a squad of city police at a street meeting in Toledo, O., the night of August 7, taken in an automobile 23 miles out of town and rescued from being hanged only by the last-minute intervention of a policeman member of the mob, will bring suit for damages against the city of Toledo, officers of the Amercan Civil Liberties union have announced.

The Civil Liberties union, in a communication signed by the acting chairman, Robert Morse Lovett, has demanded that Mayor B. F. Brough of Toledo prosecute the members of the mob immediately.

After calling attention to the fact that members of the mob robbed Rose of more than $100, the letter says:

"In this case the lawless offense is all the more disgraceful because it was plotted in advance, and was thus more than the passing hysteria of a mob; and also because it was participated in by the law-enforcement officers themselves, working in conjunction with a vicious element in the local Ku Klux Klan."

KLAN RIOTS

ELMIRA, N. Y.—Street fights in which many were injured followed a meeting here of the Ku Klux Klan. Speakers from Buffalo, including an evangelical preacher, who addressed the klansmen, were rescued from an enraged crowd by the police, escorted to the railway station and hurriedly shipped out of town.

The klan under a recent law of the state legislature is an outlaw organization in New York state.

STEUBENVILLE, O.—Ku Klux Klan riotng here, in which four men were shot, has started an exodus of neighboring klansmen to Steubenville to strengthen the klan forces in the event of further fighting. The local klan leader, Darwin L. Gibson, who is charged with responsibility for the riot, was one of the men shot. His condition is critical. The klan threatens to take revenge.

Mayor Frank Hawkins has placed a ban on all public meetings and demonstrations.

Six klansmen, who came here from East Liverpool, have been arrested for carrying concealed weapons.

AMARILLO, Tex.—E. E. McDonald, a local railroad worker, kidnaped from his home by five men said to be Ku Klux Klan members, has returned. He is in the hospital here suffering from the severe beating received at the hands of the rowdies.

Two suspects have been arrested by the police.

The governor has ordered an officer of the Texas Rangers to the scene.

Claims Exemption From Membership as Benevolent Order.

NEW YORK, July 12.—A cross, flaming and white shrouded was discovered burning in Van Cortlandt Park early today.

Negroes who lived nearby and fled with the news to the police reported seeing seven men and a girl near the cross when it burst into flames.

State Attorney General Sherman is said to have concluded that the klan is within the law in not filing with the secretary of state a roster of its membership, minutes of its meetings, and copies of its constitution, oath and by-laws as required by the Walker law passed by the last Legislature.

The klan and its sister organization, were recently incorporated under the benevolent orders laws of the state. Such orders are exempt from the Walker law.

TAMMANY ARRAIGNS DRY LAWS AND KLAN

Speakers Denounce Volstead Act and Its Enforcement—Cheer Smith for President.

GOVERNOR AVOIDS REPEAL

Delivers Typical Fourth of July Oration—Gallivan Criticises Harding for Prohibition Stand.

Denunciation of the Volstead law and the manner of its enforcement, of the Anti-Saloon League and the Ku Klux Klan, all this coupled with praise for Governor Smith as the man who had showed a way out of the present prohibition muddle, ran like the red thread through most of the oratory at the Fourth of July celebration at Tammany Hall yesterday.

Governor Smith was present and was down on the program for one of the "long talks." What the Governor had to say, however, he managed to say in fewer words than were contained in some of the "short talks" that were made by other speakers. The Governor steered clear of all controversial topics and delivered a typical Fourth of July oration, in which he called for renewed allegiance to the Constitution and the flag, hailed the United States as the great land of opportunity for rich and poor alike and inveighed against the malcontents who denied this as enemies of the Republic, boring from within, who would bear constant watching if they were not in the end to undermine the great free institutions of America.

An audience that filled every seat in the spacious Wigwam in Fourteenth Street cheered Governor Smith, himself a Sachem of the Tammany Society, to the echo, when he was presented by John R. Voorhis, the venerable Grand Sachem. New fuel for the enthusiasm of the crowd was afforded when Representative James A. Gallivan of Boston at that moment jumped to his feet and waving his hat, cried:

"Three cheers for the next President of the United States."

The audience cheered lustily for a fraction of a minute while Governor Smith drank a glass of water preparatory to beginning his address. He listened smilingly to the ovation, but before he began his speech he said:

"You must remember that this is not the Democratic National Convention."

This was greeted with renewed applause and cheers, which this time, however, came mingled with laughter. There was some more cheering when in the course of his address Governor Smith referred to the fact that some of the brightest pages in American history dealt with the election of men of humble origin to the highest office in the gift of the people.

Gallivan Criticises Harding.

Representative Gallivan was one of the "short" talkers, and by the time he got the floor the audience had thinned out considerably. Governor Smith himself had left to keep an appointment at Kings Park, L. I., where he was to officiate at the breaking of ground for the new Veterans' Memorial Hospital. But there was no doubt that the Massachusetts Congressman was the most popular orator of the occasion. He followed up his proposal of Governor Smith for President with a straight-from-the-shoulder attack on Volsteadism and the Anti-Saloon League, and even took President Harding to task for some White House correspondence relating to the repeal of the Mullan-Gage State Prohibition Enforcement act. He praised Governor Smith for his courage in approving the repeal bill.

"I am a Democrat and a regular guy, and I do not mind giving some good advice to the present occupant of the White House, even though he is not of my political faith," said Congressman Gallivan. "Apparently our honored President has, under prohibitory tutelage, surrendered for the moment to its violence and lawlessness and has forgotten the standards of official conduct and utterance which we expect from the occupant of the White House. For us has criticised, censured and threatened the Chief Executive of a sovereign State, as truly supreme and independent within his sphere as the President is within his.

"I sincerely trust that President Harding will stop, look and listen before he goes much further. He is nearing a political railroad crossing and if the water wagon he is now riding comes into collision with the locomotive of public opinion he will be spilled and injured. It is of more importance to him to preserve the dignity and honor of his high office by guarding the integrity of the Constitution and all that it means than to curry favor with the evangelical enemies of law, order and American liberty, with the bigots, bullies and blatherskites of prohibition and Volsteadism. If the President elects fellowship with the fanatical foes of the Constitution and the liberty of America, he can only expect to earn political annihilation and oblivion.

"Thank God, one great and fearless American arises above the fury, yes, and the filth of prohibition—Governor Smith, of New York—who tells the Administration in Washington to enforce its own laws at its own expense, and if it cannot do so, to change the law, a law which is as wicked as it is absurd, as harmful as it is hypocritical. Every sane American has applauded Governor Smith and his courage and dignity with which he formed his approval of the repeal act. Only the parasites and mercenaries who live on profits of prohibition thunder and threaten.

"Governor Smith of New York, by his sanity, sound Americanism, political courage and outspoken contempt for the pharisees and mercenaries who are seeking to wreck this republic, with all its splendid traditions and achievements, has made himself the most talked of man in America, and displayed to the admiration of his country a fearlessness and character of leadership we would like to see in the White House.

"New York may well be proud of him; he is a worthy son of a great state. It will be wiser and safer for President Warren Gamaliel Harding to look to Albany, N. Y., for guidance than to seek counsel in the Cave of the Winds located in Westerville, Ohio, where the Anti-Saloon League and the Ku Klux hatch out their eggs of evil."

Smith Derides Power of Wealth.

Governor Smith in his speech praised the high courage of those who took their lives in their hands when they signed the Declaration of Independence and declared that present-day Americans must emulate their example if liberty is to survive.

"In spite of the fact that our Government is built upon principles that admit of no discussion, human frailties have raised enemies without and within," he said. "We can take care of our enemies without, but we must keep a sharp eye on the enmies wtihin.

"They are divided into two classes, the ignorant and the wilful. Education and its progress will take care of them both. They build their hopes of success upon the popular fallacy that people can be made to believe that there is in this country a ruling class.

"No man—no set of men—rules this country. That argument is an appeal to popular prejudice and passion and the thought that they seek to plant in the minds of the gullible is that wealth is a ruling force in this country. Nothing could be further from the truth. Wealth does not rule this country. Wealth has very little to say on Election Day. On Election Day we are all alike. In front of the ballot box the humblest and poorest rank with the millionaires. If ever a country in the whole world was ruled by the plain people that make it up, it is the United States of America.

"Ours is a land of equal opportunity and that means that opportunity is accorded to the rich and the poor alike and as a cold matter of fact no man of great wealth has ever been elected President of the United States. Some of the brightest passages in our history record the elevation to high office of men from humble surroundings.

"Liberty is an elusive thing. It isn't a thing you can lock up in a bureau drawer. It is something that must be guarded and protected. As eternal vigilance is the price of the soul's salvation, so it is the price of our liberty. Let us therefore on this day as a lesson and an inspiration to the youth of the country once more proclaim our allegiance to the immortal document—to the Constitution that sustains it and the Flag that represents them both. And when we retire to our homes let us thank Almighty God for his watchful care of our country since its discovery and let us pray for His blessing upon our future, asking it all in the name of His Divine Son who gave the world the greatest lesson and example of the equality of men."

Mention of Wilson Brings Cheers.

United States Senator Matthew M. Neely of West Virginia who delivered the other "long talk" at the exercises made the only reference to Woodrow Wilson that occurred during the exercises. There was a time while Mr. Wilson occupied the White House that the mention of his name in Tammany Hall would have been received with frosty silence or at the most with polite applause. Yesterday it evoked a storm of applause—perhaps the most spontaneous outburst that occurred during the celebration. The reference was made in the course of an apostrophe to the Democratic party as the party "founded by Jefferson, vitalized by Andrew Jackson and immortalized by Woodrow Wilson."

Senator Neely early in his speech asked whether the Declaration of Independence was the repository of a living principle or merely a memorial of a principle or merely a memorial of a militant spirit that has perished, and then proceeded to answer his own question in the negative, subsequently denouncing two forms of "tyranny" as existent today. One of these, he said, was industrial—the twelve-hour day in the steel mills—the other political, exemplified by the blind subserviency of public officials to partisanship. He appealed to Tammany to lend its aid in putting an end to both.

"The American Iron and Steel Institute solemnly reports that it is not feasible to eliminate the twelve-hour day," he said, "but why should the wolf be permitted to sit in judgment when the lamb is on trial? When did the question of liberating slaves become a matter of feasibility? Shall we permit a contest between right and wrong to be determined by the expediency of the case? Shall we countenance the contention that the profits of an industry have preferential rights over enslaved humanity? Or that it is more important to pay dividends to the holders of stock in steel mills than it is to preserve human life and protect the very flesh and blood of the nation?

"Let us keep this day holy by declaring that every one beneath the Stars and Stripes shall be independent of the tyranny of the twelve-hour day. Let us declare that humanity's voice shall be heard in every industry; that every inhuman practice shall be abandoned; that every slave shall be liberated, and that in no walk of American life shall our independence have been declared in vain. Let us by force of public opinion if we can, but by the force of legislation if we must make 120,000 free men out of as many twelv-hour day steel mill slaves.

Senator Neely Attacks Lodge.

In discussing the evils of blind submission to partisanship, Senator Neely took as his text the action of the Republican majority in the United States Senate at the time the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations Covenant were up for ratification. He called attention to the change of front on the part of Senator Lodge, who from an advocate of the League principle became leader of the opposition to the Covenant.

"We condemn the partisanship that makes men party slaves and incites them to sacrifice principle and spread false and dangerous propaganda in order to win an election," he said in this connection. "We abhor the blighting partisanship that made hosts of prominent Republican officials, with venomous tongues and poisoned pens, attack President Wilson during his last two years in the White House more bitterly than any other man was ever before or since assailed.

"We view with alarm the partisanship that made the dominant party in the Senate, when its majority of one was out of prison on bail, denounce the greatest of Presidents in the morning, revile him at noon and sing a song of hate against him at night, for no other reason than that he was a Democrat, and as such was winning fadeless laurels for his party by the same token that he was achieving undying international fame for his country.

"How deplorable is the spectacle of a venerable, scholarly stateman leading the murder squad in its assassination of the League Covenant, when only a few years before he had expressed his real sentiments and voiced his real convictions about the League in a public address. How unfortunate that there was an appeal from the distinguished gentleman patriotically sober to this same gentleman partisanly drunk."

One of the "short talks" was made by Congressman Henry B. Hawes of Missouri, whose denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan and the Anti-Saloon League as most dangerous among the minority groups in the country won him applause. Speaking about the Klan, he said:

"Flinging defiance in the face of statutes to preserve the peace, they have the impudence to arrogate to themselves the term '100 per cent. American.' One hundred per cent. Americanism does not wear either mask or disguise. It seeks the sunlight, not the darkness. It shows bright in the noonday sun, that all men and women may see. It is not afraid."

Another "short talk" was delivered by Congressman Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee. State Senator Thomas I. Sheridan, who represents the district in which Tammany Hall is situated in the upper House at Albany, read the Declaration of Independence. This recital is part of the Fourth of July ritual of the Tammany Society. The Sixty-ninth Regiment Band played and a Tammany quartet sang patriotic airs. Tammany Leader Murphy was not in attendance.

STATE OFFICIALS AWAIT NEXT MOVE BY KLAN

The New York Times 8-16-23

District Attorney Here Not to Take Criminal Action if Injunction Is Violated.

ALBANY, Aug. 15.—The issuance of the temporary injunction against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and its sister order, the Kamelia, is interpreted by George W. O'Brien, Deputy Attorney General, as an invalidation of the certificates of incorporation granted to the organizations by the Secretary of State, Mr. Hamilton.

What the next move, if any, will be, is not known here. The Klan and Kamelia may carry the case on appeal to the Appellate Division, and further appeal might be made to the Court of Appeals, but the next step must be made by the hooded orders, as the Attorney General's office has attained its objective.

New York, N. Y.

Ferdinand Pecora, Acting District Attorney, said yesterday that the decision of Justice Staley enjoining the Ku Klux Klan from operating as a corporation in this State would not cause the District Attorney's office here to take any action against the organization. As he understood the case any act of the Klan in violation of the injunction would be punishable by contempt proceedings and not by criminal action.

Albert Massey, of 142 West Forty-second Street, who appeared for the Klan in its suit against Hearst's International Magazine Company, said yesterday that he would appeal from the decision of Judge Winslow denying an injunction which would restrain the company from publishing articles about the Klan.

"An appeal from Judge Winslow's decision will be taken at once to the Circuit Court of Appeals, following which the case will be tried on its merits as soon as it is reached on the calendar," he said. "The Klan is seeking to establish the fact that the letters and documents used in the series of articles, and which are alleged to have been stolen, are the property of the Klan, and therefore cannot be legally used for any purpose by anyone except authorized officials of the Klan."

Urges Klan to Lower Its Racial Barriers

GOSHEN, N. Y., July 12.—Catholics, Jews and Protestants joined last night in a patriotic religious Independence Day service and heard Supreme Court Justice A. S. Tompkins, grand master of Masons in this State, counsel the Ku Klux Klan to love its neighbors and abolish the barriers it has erected against races and creeds.

SMITH WILL ENFORCE LAW TO UNMASK KLAN DESPITE ITS THREAT TO PUNISH HIM

N. Y. EVE. WORLD
MAY 28, 1923

Ku Klux Continues Meetings All Over State and New Jersey.

PROSECUTORS READY

Promise Quick Action—100 Hooded Men Visit New Jersey Church.

Intimations came to-day from District Attorneys, in reply to the public defiance of the State and Governor of New York by the Ku Klux Klan, that the Walker law requiring the names, constitutions and by-laws of certain organizations be recorded for public scrutiny will be strictly enforced. Nothing can be done now because the law does not take effect until next Saturday.

The Ku Klux Klan held meetings last night as well as Saturday night in many parts of the State from Niagara Falls to Eastport, L. I. At least one big meeting was held in New Jersey. The King Kleagle of the Klan in New York told 4,000 robed Klansmen and 798 initiates in a field near Eastport on Saturday night that the Ku Klux Klan will not unmask.

THREATEN TO PUNISH SMITH POLITICALLY.

While Gov. Smith, who signed the Walker law last Wednesday, has not singled out the Klan as an organization that must especially obey the law, the Klan has singled him out for political punishment, "particularly so far as his Presidential aspirations were concerned." The Governor tacitly has accepted the challenge to State authority, letting it be known that the Walker law wa splaced on the statute books to be enforced.

Secretary of State James A. Hamilton reiterated that under the provisions of the Walker law organizations must file certificates of incorporation and lists of membership by June 2.

"Once in my office," he added, "these papers become public documents."

"If the provisions of the law," he continued, "are not fully complied with, it will be up to the local authorities to take action. These would be the District Attorneys of the various counties."

And District Atorney Le Roy M. Young of Suffolk County, which includes Eastport, where Saturday night's meeting was held, seemed imbued with the same notion that the Walker law was to be enforced. As soon as an official complaint of a violation and information in support of it shall be received he promised swift prosecution if warranted by the facts.

SUFFOLK SHERIFF READY FOR PROMPT ACTION.

Sheriff A. W. Biggs of Riverhead, seat of Suffolk County, which had in addition to the Eastport meeting a gathering of the Klan at the same time at Centreport, stood by Mr. Young. He was ready, he declared, to guarantee prompt action whenever Mr. Young gave the order.

In Orange County, where meetings had been reported at Port Jervis and at Middletown, District Attorney J. D. Wilson felt the same way. He was inclined to doubt, however, that the Klan had made or would make much headway in that county.

The Klan continued yesterday to hold meetings and to supply added information regarding those held early yesterday morning in what it evidently desired to make an impressive demonstration of its strength. Chief among the supplemental news was reported a big meeting at Pompton Plains, N. J., where 1,000 "aliens" were initiated.

This meeting was attended by a Paterson, N. J., reporter, who was escorted by two Klansmen in a closed automobile to and from the field where it was held. The guards, of whom there were 100, each ramed with a large club and many carrying pistols, would not allow him, even with his escort, to approach close enough to hear. It was announced that the affair was in charge of Federal Rock Klan of Butler, N. J., and was attended by members from throughout Northern New Jersey and New York.

The 800 automobiles used by the Klansmen and the candidates were parked so that their headlights threw a glare over the field. At one end of the field was a forty foot cross covered with burlap, and at the other end an altar with a smaller cross burning above it. It was at this altar that the candidates were initiated. One candidate, it appeared to the newspaper man, was rejected at first. He was led away from the altar and was seen to put a handkerchief to his eyes as though weeping. Then he was led back, the cyclops read the oath and he subscribed to it.

Another feature of the demonstration was the visit paid last night to the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Point Pleasant, N. J., by 100 Klansmen in full regalia. This is the second church visit by Klansmen in that town, the first taking place a week ago, when hooded men attended the Central Methodist Episcopal Church.

The occasion of last night's visit was a memorial service for soldier and sailor dead, invitations to which had been sent by the church's pastor, the Rev. L. S. Moore, to fraternal organizations as well as the organizations of veterans. There had been reports throughout the week that the Klan would attend the meeting and the church had an overflow congregation.

The choir was singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" when the Klansmen marched up the aisle behind a standard bearer carrying the American flag. Dr. Moore conducted the service as usual and at its close, asked if any member of any organization wished to speak.

A Klansman then went into the pulpit and after placing his hand on the Bible spoke of the Klan's aims, which, he said, were to uphold the Constitution and the flag. He said the mask was worn to protect Klansmen from persecution by those of "another organization," but did not specify the organization he meant.

Six hundred people of Greenport, L. I., greeted in the Opera House there yesterday afternoon the reputed minister who opened the meeting at Eastport, where the Kleagle cast down the gauntlet to the law-enforcing powers of the State. The speaker again refused to give his name, nor did he directly refer in his speech to the Klan.

Just before the meeting closed, six men, strangers in the town, marched down the centre aisle and distributed cards, which the speaker asked any one wishing "to hear more" of the unidentified organization, to sign.

"We don't want Catholics, Jews or Negroes to sign any of these," he shouted.

The six strangers then collected the cards at the door as the audience, which had applauded vigorously, departed.

In openly defying the new State law, the Klansmen say their lawyers have investigated the measure and have found that as the State will be unable to find any one within its jurisdiction to punish for not producing the names of Klan members, the law will be inoperative so far as the Klan is concerned. In regard to this inconsistency with the professed patriotism of the Klan, it is said Klansmen attemptey to justify it on the theory that their oath prevents their compliance with the law; that the end justifies the means. Some of the Klan spokesmen had no ready answer when asked how they could try to force others to observe the law when they didn't themselves.

The recent murder of Jessie Pickema, nineteen years old, in Paterson, and other crimes there led in the Lief Bricksen Klan No. 1, Realm of New Jersey, to send a resolution to city officials there Saturday night threatening to take the law into their own hands if attacks on women and robberies and hold-ups did not cease.

After recounting the crimes that had occurred there, the resolution demanded "immediate and adequate measures to apprehend all persons guilty of the atrocious crimes that have recently been committed and immediate steps to close up the gambling houses, saloon and rotten dance halls, and immediate steps to rid this city of dope peddlers, bootleggers, burglars, highwaymen, degenerate and the criminal element generally."

"Resolved, That each and every member of this Klan be required to be on the streets and about the city without regalias, as much as possible, day and night, on the outlook for crime; that they take the name whenever possible of the guilty party or parties, in all cases wherein disregard of the laws are observed, to be later reported to this Klan; that whenever a Klansman observes a woman or a young girl alone upon the street at night he be required to afford protection in case of annoyance."

KLAN MEETS IN WARWICK

N. Y. Times 8-18-23

Hundreds Watch Initiation Ceremony on Orange County Farm.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Over 100 members of the Ku Klux Klan, arrayed in the robes of the order, conducted initiation ceremonies on a hillside near Warwick last night, while hundreds looked on from a distance.

The ceremonies were held on the farm of Luzern Decker. A huge cross cast shadows over the white-robbed members and candidates. The initiation was followed by a long lecture from one of the high officers.

It is said to be the intention of the Klan to establish at least a dozen branches of the Invisible Empire in Orange County before the end of the year.

KU KLUX KLAN LOSES TWO COURT BATTLES

The Commercial Appeal 8-15-23

Enjoined From Acting as Benevolent Unit in New York.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Federal Judge Winslow today denied the petition of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., of Georgia, for a preliminary injunction restraining the International Magazine Company, controlled by Wm. Randolph Hearst, from publishing articles by Norman Hapgood regarding the klan. 8-15-23

The klan charged that the articles by Hapgood were based on records unlawfully taken from the Atlanta headquarters and sold to the magazine for $3,000. Counsel for the defendant asserted that information contained in the articles was obtained from the department of justice.

Judge Winslow held that the "unpublished letter or documents" which the klan desired withheld from publication were not specifically identified and said that the record before the court did not justify the issuance of a preliminary injunction.

(By the Associated Press.)

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky., Aug. 14.—Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley, tonight granted an injunction sought by the state of New York restraining the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and the Kamelia, Inc., its sister organization from acting as chartered benevolent fraternal organizations in New York state.

Declaring that the statutes clearly intended a certificate of incorporation "should be approved in the form in which it was filed and filed in the form it was approved," Justice Staley held that the act of incorporators of the klan and Kamelia in altering the certificates of incorporation after approval before filing was "not only an illegal and unauthorized act, but also an imposition and fraud upon the court."

A recently enacted state statute provides that secret organizations, other than benevolent and fraternal organizations, must file their membership lists with the state officials. It was in order to avoid filing these lists that the klan sought to be incorporated as a fraternal organization. The judge, in his decision, said that it had been shown that subsequent to the approval of the certificates of incorporation by Justice G. E. Pierce of Buffalo, and prior to their filing in the office of the secretary of state were altered in such a way as to effect "a material change in the extent of power granted thereby."

"The certificates in question were filed and are recorded not in the form approved by Justice Pierce, but in a form as subsequently altered by the incorporators or some of them. The statute clearly intended that a certificate of incorporations should be approved in the form in which it was filed and filed in the form in which it was approved. To alter such a certificate after its approval without the consent of all incorporators and the approving justice, in a manner involving a material change, is not only an illegal and unauthorized act, but also an imposition and a fraud upon the court which cannot under the requirements of the statute be tolerated or excused

GETTING ACTIVE HERE

Freeport, L. I., Feb. 19.—Four flaming crosses, symbols of the Ku Klux Klan and its sponsorship of Protestant white supremacy, supposedly planted after dark and ignited by members of the Ku Klux Klan, burst into flame in conspicuous places in Freeport, Lynbrook, Long Beach and Rockville Center tonight. The Fire Department of Freeport and Lynbrook were called out, that of the latter narrowly escaping disaster on the Long Island Railroad tracks. At Long Beach and Rockville Center the crosses were isolated.

The cross here was set in a hole dug across Main street from the Municipal Auditorium, where at the time it burst into flame a meeting of Nassau County Negroes, in commemoration of the birth of Frederick Douglas and Abraham Lincoln, was in progress. The flaming cross failed to disturb the meeting, although at its close organizers for a militant Negro organization with headquarters in New York City were very successful in signing up recruits.

Long Island City Newspaper Receives Letter on Gain in Members.

The claim was made yesterday that the Ku Klux Klan has 1,200 members in Long Island City. The Hunter's Point Community Council Adopted resolutions denouncing the Klan a week ago, and a local newspaper quoted John Sullivan, its President, as having characterized the Klan's activities as un-American and against the Constitution. This newspaper received yesterday a letter, signed "One of the K. K. K.," which read in part as follows: 3/16/23

"Well, we are in Long Island City and won't get out for J. Sullican. We are an order strong in Americanism and are doing things in Long Island City for the benefit of the people. People ask why do we bar Cahtolics. Why do the Knights of Columbus bar Protestants? Every knock is a boost.

"We have gained over 1,200 members in the vicinity of Long Island City. So, J. Sulivan, please bear this in mind; you are in America and not in Ireland."

NEGRO LEADER GETS KU KLUX NOTE

BROOKLYN N Y TIMES
MARCH 19, 1923

Writer Denies Klan Aims to Intimidate Race, But Rather to Protect From Mob.

Freeport, March 19.—In January John E. Robinson, then editor of the New Amsterdam Daily News, published in Manhattan, and who resides at 3 Waverly place, Freeport, started propaganda for the establishment of what he termed the civic rights of the negro race in this county and State, and representation in State, county, town, village and school district government. He urged the formation of the Nassau County Negro-Get-together Movement looking toward that end. In Freeport several meetings were held, the negro voters soldifying themselves togetner, and an invitation was extended colored men to attend a banquet and mass meeting in the Freeport Auditorium on the evening of Lincoln's Birthday.

There were several hundred negroes at that meeting, and at 11 o'clock that same night flaming crosses were found burning in this and a number of other villages in the county. Many people said the burnings were supposed to be a deterrent to the Negro-Get-together Movement. Saturday Robinson received the following letter through the mail, the postmark on the envelope showing it was mailed at Freeport:

"Dear Sir: From press announcements and general gossip the impression seems to prevail that the 'flaming cross' discovered across street from the Auditorium, where your organization held its celebration and dinner, was the work of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Possibliy it was, but I can say truthfully it was with no intention of intimidating the negro to the extent that the newspapers have tried to indicate.

"The Klan is anti-Jew, anti-Negro, anti-Catholic, and anti-foreign born, but its operations against these elements are purely for the sake of the principles for which the organization stands. It is against the negro on general principles, but it recognizes his Americanism.

"The Klan was organized to uphold and maintain one hundred per cent. Americanism, and it operates in secret to accomplish the work it has sought out to do. It opposes the Jew because of his religion, and the Catholics because of their affiliation with the Roman Church. The foreign-born, besides being mostly of a different religion, are from their ideas and views found to be antagonistic to the principles of our government.

"The Klan is very different from that which began its operations shortly after the Civil War. The present organization is for law and order, and the upholding of the Constitution of this government.

"It would stand between the negro and the mob, for the protection of life and limb. The Klan opposes a negro representation in government on one point only. Your race being in its infancy, it should be content to be governed by members of a race, which have proven to be your superior. It, however, with lal due fairness, appreciates your efforts to make better the general standing of the negro in Freeport and in Nassau County. He should come in possession of some of the things you have publicly announced that he is entitled to.

"Your leadership for your people will show results if it is your desire to lead them right. You should have representation in the Village of Freeport, but you are a little ahead of your time.

"K. K. K.

"Invincible Order No.——."

Robinson says he would like to meet any member of the Ku Klux Klan in public debate on "The Negro Race."

NEGROES FORM UNION TO FIGHT KU KLUX

Freeport Colony Organizes Protective Association as Result of Linoln Day Affair.

FREEPORT, L. I., March 26.—A new organization which promises to play an important part in the civic and political life of the entire county was launched in the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church, on Henry street, Freeport, it was learned to-day, when the Long Island Colored Union was organized. A representative gathering of colored people from Montauk Point to Jamaica were present.

Chairman John E. Robinson announced that the purpose of the new organization was to further the interests of the colored citizens on Long Island along political lines and protect them from alleged violence threatened by the Ku Klux Klan.

FIRE ON CROSS.

He read a letter received by him purported to have been sent by the Ku Klux Klan which admitted that the klan was responsible for the flaming cross which was fired on the night of Lincoln's birthday when the negroes were having a celebration in the Freeport Auditorium.

A proposition was rejected to form a Nassau County Colored Republican Club on the ground that although a large majority of the negro race were favorable to the principles of the G. O. P., that political body had failed to protect them from alleged acts or threats of the klan.

ELECT OFFICERS.

The gathering decided to organize an independent organization or union to include every colored voter on Long Island east of Jamaica. Permanent officers elected were:

President, John E. Robinson, Freeport; vice-presidents, S. S. Williams, Amityville; Mrs. Rosalie Young, Rockville Centre; Joseph Tredwell, Hempstead; recording secretary, H. C. Jones, Freeport; corresponding secretary, R. M. Bryant, Amityville; treasurer, Addison Scarborough, Amityville; chaplain, P. White, Freeport; sergeant-at-arms, J. S. Ku Klux Letter Threatens A Judge in New Mexico

LAS VEGAS, N. M., July 11.—Judge David J. Leahy, presiding in the trial of Carl A. Magee, Albuquerque editor, on charges of contempt, announced in court this afternoon that he had received a threatening letter today signed "K. K. K."

"The letter," Judge Leahy announced, "was postmarked Las Vegas. This is what it said:

"'You old Irish Judge, you better go back to Ireland if you don't like this country. You try to send men to jail for telling the truth. I will be in your presence. I am from Texas.'"

LAS VEGAS EDITOR DENOUNCES JUDGE NEAR TRIAL'S END

Expect Decision Today in Contempt Case; Both Sides Rest

KU KLUX ANGLE CAUSES FIGHT

Associated Press Report.

LAS VEGAS, N. M., July 12.—The case of Carl C. Magee, Albuquerque editor, charged with contempt of court will be decided by District Judge D. J. Leahy here soon after court convenes tomorrow morning. This was decided upon late this afternoon, when both the prosecution and the defense announced that they rested.

Cross examination of Magee was completed this afternoon.

Magee said he had published certain editorials about a certain political machine here and criticised the district court in that he "knew he was putting his head in the lion's mouth."

"I meant that if this court is right, then I am wrong," he said. "I think I am right, and I urged a court of impeachment to prove it. I meant that conditions here are rotten. I have contempt for the methods of Judge Leahy in this court."

As to his statement earlier in the day in which he said he thought an investigation of the courts of Judge Reed Holloman of Santa Fe and Judge H. P. Owen at Las Lunas was desirable, Magee declared that he did not place those judges in the same class with Judge Leahy.

"My only criticism of them," he said, "is pernicious activity in political affairs."

Fred Wilson, an attorney for the defense, apeared in court today with a black eye, the result of a street corner meeting last night with O. O. Askren, chief counsel for the State in the Magee case. Askren showed no sign of the street encounter.

The attorneys had engaged in a scuffle following a verbal bit pertaining to the Ku Klux Klan angle that had been injected into the Magee trial yesterday. Askren this morning was fined $10 in police court on his own statement that he was guilty of technical assault. The fine was remitted.

One Man Rule.

Efforts of the defense this morning were along the line of attempting to show the existence of an alleged political machine in San Miguel county, as charged by Magee in his newspaper, the Albuquerque Tribune. Magee, in his writings which resulted in contempt charges being filed against him, asserted that Secundino Romero, former sheriff and now United States marshal, dominated the affairs of San Miguel county politically, including the district court.

Expenditures of various county officials were offered in evidence, some of which, the defense will attempt to prove, were passed upon and paid in a manner that at times was irregular and improper. Such exhibits as had bearing upon the district court, Judge D. J. Leahy admitted in evidence. The defense met a stumbling block at this point when it was learned that some former county officials for whom subpoenas had been issued were not in court and could not be found.

Stand for Rights.

When the prosecution objected to the admission of some of the evidence proposed, Attorney Hanna, chief of the defense, declared to the court:

"We have a right to attempt to prove that conditions in San Miguel county were rotten."

The district attorney was placed on the stand by the defense and questioned at length as to certain vouchers and expense accounts that had been paid him in connection with his office. Particular reference was made to charges for auto hire wherein it was stated on the stand by the district attorney himself that he had used his own car. He said the items charged represented wear and tear of his car. The county sheriff, also called as a witness, testified as to charges he had made for trips on which he had used his own automobile.

R. H. Hanna, chief counsel for the defense, served notice that he would not be forced to ask for a continuance of the trial if some of the witnesses subpoenaed, particularly Secundino Romero, were not brought to court.

Charge Close Alliance.

"I hope Romero is not in hiding," Hanna said.

"Don't you know he is not hiding?" asked Judge Leahy.

Magee was placed on the stand for cross examination. He reiterated his statements and writings to the effect that in his opinion the district court of San Miguel county was in too close alliance with politicians and political machines.

Magee said he had been tried before for civil libel but never before for criminal libel, of which he was convicted recently.

Asked, if in event he was eventually sent to prison, he expected to be pardoned by Governor Hinkle of New Mexico, Magee smiled and said that he had no information on that subject. Magee declared that he was going to keep up his fight for what he termed the rights of the public if he had to remain in jail "until I rot."

Magee said that district judges in New Mexico should be given to understand that they must break with political machines.

"I know I was the victim of a political machine when tried and convicted of libel and that an effort was being made to railroad me. I think the sentence showed venom against me by the court and was too severe. I should be tried in a court of justice, not one of injustice."

Asked by the prosecution whether in his opinion other courts in New Mexico should be investigated Magee replied in the affirmative. In a general way, he declared, he said he thought the district courts of Judge Holman at Santa Fe and the district court of Judge H. P. Owen at Los Lunas might properly subjected to an investigation.

Asked if his writings and utterances concerning the courts were not impelled by anarchistic ideas. Magee was emphatic in his denial that this was true. "I never appealed to direct action in my life," he said. "I have, however, urged action through the proper and orderly action of the public in its desire to obtain its rights."

Asked what he meant in an editorial headed: "Never slipped a cog," which dealt with alleged conditions in San Miguel county, Magee said that he meant the district court of that county when he wrote "that men were intimidated by the copper-rivited machine" which he claims to be in existence.

Crowd of 5,000 Break Up Meeting of Ku Klux Klan at Perth Amboy

The Montgomery Advertiser 8-31-23

Montgomery, Ala.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Aug. 30.—A crowd of 5,000 persons broke up a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in Odd Fellows hall tonight, 75 policemen and 150 firemen being unable to drive back the throng that stormed the building. Firemen drove trucks into the mass of people, but to no avail. A hurry call was sent for state police in Trenton.

Patrolmen fired shots in the air, threw gas bombs and swung their night sticks while the firemen turned streams of water on the fighting throng.

Police Chief Tonneson then ordered his men to throw tear gas bombs, and thirteen of these, the town's entire supply, were exploded. The crowd fell back, but advanced again, hurling more stones. It was then that a riot call was sounded and 150 firemen dashed to the scene.

Mob Keeps On.

The leaders of the mob were knocked down by patrolmen when they first started to advance toward the hall, but after they had been carried away another attack was started. This time stones were thrown and all windows in Odd Fellows Hall as well as many others in nearby buildings were broken.

After the firemen had run their apparatus directly at the surging mass of humanity and had failed to disperse the crowd they attached hose lines to every available hydrant and drenched the rioters with several streams of water. Daunted for a few seconds the crowd fell back. Several of the more sturdy however, braved the water and cut the hose lines with axes and knives while those in the crowd threw stones at the firemen.

As one man darted from the crowd some one shouted, "that man has a gun." A patrolman seized him, shoved him into an automobile and hurried him to the police station. Other cars, loaded with men, followed, but the prisoner was rushed through the station and locked in a stable at the rear. After searching the station those who had followed returned to the scene of the fight.

As some of the Klansmen broke away from the fighting mass, they shouted "we're coming back—10,000 strong."

"All right," came the answer. "we'll be waiting for you 20,000 strong."

Leaving Threat Behind That They Will Return "10,000 Strong." Wild Riot Occurs at Perth Amboy, Where Klan Formerly Met Similar Fate—Police Say Arrests Will Be Made.

(By The Associated Press)

PERTH AMBOY, N. Leaders of Mob Felled.

The leaders of the mob were knocked down by patrolmen when they first started to advance toward the hall, but after they had been carried away another attack was started. This time stones were thrown and all windows in Odd Fellows Hall as well as many others in nearby buildings were broken.

Cut Hose Lines.

After the firemen had run their apparatus directly at the surging mass of humanity and had failed to disperse the crowd, they attached hose lines to every available hydrant and drenched the rioters with several streams of water. Daunted for a few seconds the crowd fell back. Several of the more sturdy, however, braved the water and cut the hose lines with axes and knives, while those in the crowd threw stones at the firemen.

When one man darted from the crowd some one shouted "that man has a gun." Patrolmen seized him, shoved him into an automobile and hurried him to the police station. After searching the station those who had followed returned to the scene of the fight.

As some of the klansmen broke away from the fighting mass, they shouted "We're coming back . . . 10,000 strong."

"All right," came the answer, "we'll be waiting for you . . . 20,000 strong.

The klan meeting had been widely advertised, Chief Tonneson took special precautions against possible trouble as the result of a somewhat lesser disturbance at a meeting several months ago. He stationed uniformed patrolmen and plain clothesmen on the inside and outside of the hall and at seevral other points in the vicinity.

The klansmen gathered soon after 8 o'clock, donned their robes and began their ceremonies. Soon little groups began to form in front of the building, the number being augmented until it was estimated that 5,000 persons were in the crowd. The men in the front ranks demanded admittance to the hall and when they were refused the fight began.

Chief Tonneson declared, after quiet had been restored, that he knew the instigators of the trouble and promised the arrest of prominent men.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Aug. 31—Klansmen themselves precipitated the riots Thursday night at Perth Amboy in which 200 klansmen were besieged all night long, in Odd Fellows' Hall by a mob of more than 5,000, according to the local police who have arrested three of the klansmen, two being charged with inciting a riot and one with carrying a concealed weapon.

Memphis Sem.

Invited the Rioting.

When the Knights of the Invisible Empire assembled in the hall at 8 o'clock in the evening no crowd had gathered, but after the klansmen, practically all of whom came from out of town, had begun their meeting they stationed two of their number as guards at the foot of the stairway. When several members of the lodge of Odd Fellows started up the stairway to their own locker rooms they were barred out by these two guards who flourished pistols.

Word that the klansmen in session had posted armed guards spread like wildfire throughout the city and men began hurrying to Odd Fellows' Hall, which is located in Smith Street, facing down King Street, in the heart of the business district. An attempt was made by a group of men to force their way up the stiarway, but they were held at bay by the two armed guards. Word was then sent to police headquarters, asking for the arrest of the armed men. By the time the first squad of policemen had arrived, however, the two guards had retreated to the head of the stairway and several hundred men were milling about the foot of the stairway overflowing the sidewlak.

In order to clear the crowd from the big double doors leading to the stairway, the police hurled tear bombs, which quickly cleared the walk and the police rushed in. They were headed by Lieut. William H. Calvin, who left a squad at the doorway and led another squad upstairs to the room where the 200 klansmen were in session.

9-1-23

According to policemen who accompanied Lieut. Calvin, the scene which greeted the eyes of the police was pathetic. Although only a few stones had been hurled through the windows at this time, the 200 klansmen were huddled together in the middle of the room, their faces a picture of panic. As the police squad came through the door they turned terrific faces toward the officers and one of the knights rushed forward and flung himself on his knees in front of Lieut. Calvin, begging him to save his life. All of the others beseeched the policemen to tell them if they could save them.

Scene of Deep Pathos.

Lieut. Calvin sent for the three patrol wagons possessed by the city and managed to crowd 34 of the klansmen into the vehicles. They were rushed down the stairway and through a lane in the crowd, cleared with more of the tear bombs. As the klansmen clambed into the patrol wagons they flung themselves flat on the floor on top of each other screaming to the police who rode outside, to save them.

The crowd opened up with a fusillade of rocks and stones as the klansmen darted from the doorway across the sidewalk and pursuing in automobiles kept stoning the patrol wagons half the way to South Amboy, where the fugitives were taken for safety.

As the night grew older the crowd grew greater until it was estimated by the police as more than 5,000. Practically every window in the three-story Odd Fellows' Hall was broken by rocks thrown from the street, but practically no damage was done to the inside of the building.

The remaining 170 klansmen left the hall after the first batch had been safely taken to South Amboy. They were sneaked down a fire escape in the rear of the building, where they jumped into the waiting police patrols. The mob quickly discovered them and rained a storm of stones at the knights as they dodged down the fire escape.

Three Klansmen Held.

The men arrested were Harold R. Marford 24, a farmer, of New Monmouth, N. J., released on $2,000 bail for hearing Sept. 5, on a charge of inciting to riot, and William Gray, 22, of Red Bank, mechanic, held in default of the same bail on the same charge.

Marford and Gray are said to have been the two guards of the klansmen posted on the stairway, both were armed with pistols when arrested. Marford proved that he is a deputy sheriff of Monmouth County, and Gray showed a permit to carry a weapon. The third man arrested was Murray A. Chittlesk, 29, a chemist, of Old Bridge, N. J., alleged to be also a klansman, who was arrested in a street fight. He is being held in default of $2,000 bail on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon without a permit.

DETROIT, Aug. 31.—Regardless of the new state law which prohibits wearing of masks in public, a crowd estimated at 2,000 persons, wearing robes gathered in a field near here last night. A squad of deputy sheriffs who attempted to press through guards at the entrances to the field, was turned aside.

A huge fiery cross lighted the assembly. One of the men at the entrance to the field informed deputies the meeting was being held on leased grounds and was not subject to the public masking law. The deputies returned to Detroit without making any arrests.

Atlantic City Elks' Lodge Votes to Expel Members of Ku Klux Klan From the Order

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 18.—The Atlantic City Lodge of Elks, 276, last night authorized expulsion from the organization of members of the Ku Klux Klan. This is said to be the first action of its kind by a fraternal order.

Exalted Ruler Eugene G. Schwinghammer, an attorney of this city, declared that the action was the forerunner of a national campaign in this direction.

"The principles and practices of the Ku Klux Klan are in direct variance to the precepts on which the Order of Elks was founded," he said.

The action followed the weekly meeting of the lodge, which adopted a resolution condemning the Klansmen and forbidding any member of that body from membership in the Elks. The resolution points out that a member of the Klan cannot consistently take the obligation of the Elks and at the same time be aligned with any other organization opposed to men who are already members of the Elks. It was explained today that this refers to the enmity of the Klansmen toward Catholics and Jews, both of which are represented in the membership of Elk lodges throughout the country. As a result of the action several Klansmen will be expelled.

Exalted Ruler Schwinghammer announced that a secret committee was conducting a rigid investigation of the entire membership of 1,700 to ascertain if certain reports were founded on fact. According to general report, the Ku Klux Klan is organized particularly strong in this county.

Asked to Declare Klan Illegal

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 17.—Declaring the charter of the Ku Klux Klan of New Jersey, recently incorporated, is illegal, William J. McFadden, a New York lawyer, today requested Attorney General McCran to render an opinion. Mr. McFadden contends Secretary of State Martin had no right to grant the charter.

He asserted the Klan could not be chartered for non-pecuniary purposes and the Klansmen openly discriminated against a race that forms an integral part of the citizenship.

JERSEY KLANS WOMEN IN OUTDOOR INITIATION

Weird Night Ceremony Staged Near Allenwood, at Which 434 Are Made Members.

MANASQUAN, N. J., Aug. 18.—An open-air initiation of candidates at which 434 women were received into the Ladies of the Invisible Empire was held last night, ending at midnight, in a field near Allenwood. This is said to have been the first outdoor initiation by the women's branch of the Ku Klux Klan in New Jersey, although the women's organization has been active for months.

Gathered at the field were 700 "Loties," as the Ladies of the Invisible Empire are known, 900 Klansmen and a scattering of spectators from the countryside attracted to the field by the glare of headlights of several hundred automobiles.

The women formed in a square in the middle of the field inside of which the candidates stood. The Klansmen formed an outer circle about them all, and behind the Klansmen was parked a great ring of automobiles, the headlights brightening the whole scene.

The central figure of the ceremony was the Grand Counselor, said to be the wife of a Klan leader of Bloomfield, N. J. The candidates then were marched to the Grand Counselor, bowed before her, she administered the oath. The procession was led by a woman who bore a fiery cross, followed by two others in red, white and blue robes, and another carrying a Bible.

BOUND BROOK, N. J., May 3.—The klavern staged by the Ku Klux Klan of New Jersey on Hobbs's Farm at Middlebush, N. J., last night is the first of a series of similar gatherings to be held in this State, according to the police of Central New Jersey towns. As a result of the Pillar of Fire incident in Bound Brook on Tuesday night—some members of the Pillar of Fire congregation are also members of the Klan—State and local police are on the watch for a serious outbreak here. 5-4-23.

Several small meetings of Klan bodies were in progress in various parts of the State tonight, while a special meeting of the Knights of Columbus was held in Somerville, the county seat of Somerset County, it could not be learned whether others had been held in other towns. Persons familiar with the activities of the bodies thought that special meetings of the K. of C. had their significance. The Pillar of Fire congregation at Zarephath has bitterly attacked this organization in its publication, which are sent to subscribers throughout the country. N.Y.

It was learned definitely from persons who attended the meeting of the Klan on Hobbs' farm night that the gathering had been called several weeks ago in an effort to show the strength of the Klan in New Jersey. In the last few months, it was explained, several thousand new members have been admitted to the order. Nearly 1,000 members were initiated during last night's klavern.

A meeting of members of the Klan was scheduled at Peapack in Sourland Mountain range, where the hooded organization is particularly strong, for late tonight, but newspapermen were unable to learn whether it had been held.

Three Klansmen from Peapack, according to the local police, engineered the escape of the Klan organizer and two speakers from the Pillar of Fire Temple on Tuesday night just as they were to have been arrsted for inciting to riot.

Recorder Andrew D. Flammer of Bound Brook, who held two members of the pillar of fire sect for the Somerset County Grand Jury on charges of assault following the riot of Tuesday night, said today that he had definitely established that the Klan meeting had been arranged by members of the pillar of fire group, in spite of their repeated denials.

A. L. Wolfram, Treasurer of the pillar of fire colony at Zarephath, who acted as Chairman of the meeting on Tuesday night, told the Recorder, according to the latter, that the meeting had been held merely to discover whether there was any merit in the K. K. K.

Wolfram admitted to reportes that the pillar of fire body had distributed handbills throughout Bound Brook announcing the meeting which resulted in riot, and said today that the sentiment of the members of his sect was heartily in accord with Klan tenets.

State troopers and members of the local police in other towns through which the parade of Klan automobiles passed on their way to and from Hobb's farm, were today endeavoring to identify members of the New Jersey Klan by means of automobile license numbers taken by policemen. As each of the cars carrying members of the Klan was marked on front and rear with a white ribbon or a white handkerchief, it was an easy matter for the police to list the numbers.

They pointed out, however, that they were making the lists solely for their own information, as there was no action that could be taken against the organization.

Hobb, whose few acres of farmland was the scene of the Klavern, said today that he was not a member of the Klan and had no intention of joining.

"Four men drove up here in an automobile several weeks ago," he explained, "and offered me $100 for the use of my property for one day. They did not give me much information as to what they wanted to do with it except to assure me that it would be well taken care of. I reached an agreement with them, and then heard from them again. I did not get their names and I do not know who they are."

It was said tonight that another large gathering of the New Jersey Klan forces had been scheduled for Saturday night somewhere in the vicinity of New Brunswick.

KLAN IS DEFENDED IN TWO CHURCHES

Robed Members Attend Baptist Service at Lakewood—Upheld at Freeport Service.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., June 17.—Seventy-seven members of the Ku Klux Klan, in full regalia, tonight attended service at the First Baptist Church here, occupying ten rows in front, which had been reserved. Led by the American flags and the customary fiery cross, the Klan paraded from the ball park to the church under protection of State and municipal police. Occasional hissing was heard en route, but the handclapping was more pronounced.

The Klansmen mobilized at the Lakewood High School, dressing in the basement, and they returned there on the second parade which followed their church attendance. The hooded knights disappeared in a dozen automobiles which had brought them. The license plates indicated that they came from Manasquan and Point Pleasant. Wilfrid H. Jayne, Lakewood District Prosecutor, took the numbers of the cars as they entered town as identification in event of trouble, but none developed.

The Rev. George Pierce of Point Pleasant, filling the First Baptist pulpit during the illness of the pastor, welcomed the Klansen as "an organization which, as far as I understand, stands for high American principles."

He offered the platform to any spokesman the visitors might have, and a six-foot figure, masked and robed, who said he was the "Grand Titan of the Third Realm of New Jersey," detailed the ideals of the Klan at length. He emphasized the Klan was "anti" nothing except "anti-wrong." He denounced "outrages" other Klansmen had suffered at Perth Amboy, Bloomfield and Plainfield.

FREEPORT, L. I., June 17.—The Ku Klux Klan was the subject discussed at the Two Flag Day exercises held here tonight. At the First Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Walter E. Thompson, speaking on "The Constitution and the Flag," defended the Ku Klux Klan organization. A search hrough the organization's literature, said the pastor, had revealed nothing to cause people to become uneasy in regard to the Klan's activities.

Less than two blocks away, in the Elks Club, Captain Irving O'Hay, of New York, assailed the Klan in his address. "The Klan is un-American," he said, "because it spreads race and religious prejudices."

FORD IS ASSAILED BY JEWISH BODY

He Is Accused of Being Financial Backer of Ku Klux Klan — Candidacy Called Insult.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 28.—After an exciting scene in which the name of Henry Ford was hissed and hooted, delegates attending the annual session of the Independent Order B'Rith Abraham, today adopted a resolution criticizing him for his alleged attacks on Jews of the nation, assailing his presidential aspirations and accused him of being the financial backer of the Ku Klux Klan. The measure was passed without a dissenting vote after speakers sponsoring it had been loudly cheered.

The resolution declares, "be is resolved, that the order of B'Rith Abraham, now in session, go on record as follows:

"That the delegates assembled condemn Henry Ford for his attitude against the Jews as un-American, and that his candidacy for president is an insult to the fundamentals upon which this country is based.

"Further, be it resolved, that this convention accuses Ford of being the financial backer of the hooded Ku Klux Klan, who approves of their unpatriotic exploitations against the Jews, Catholics, negroes and foreigners."

Acting Grand Master Morris M. Green, of New York, discussing the measure, declared:

"We feel that Ford is behind the Ku Klux Klan—that he is their sponsor, and we are glad to join with our Catholic brethern in fighting him and it."

Copies were ordered sent to all member bodies asking co-operation.

Fred L. Savage, imperial klaliff of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, declared Monday night, when the above dispatch was referred to his attention, that the statement that Henry Ford is, in any way lending financial support to the organization is "absolutely untrue."

1,000 KLANSMEN IN JERSEY PARADE

Guests Watch Exercises From Special Bleachers Near Point Pleasant.

500 WEAR ROBE AND MASK

Women on Horseback Lead Delegation of Ladies of Invisible Empire.

By searchlights and flares 2,000 invited guests in special bleachers witnessed the open air district meeting of the Ku Klux Klan of New Jersey which was held last night as advertised, a half mile out of Point Pleasant, at the Clark's Landing picnic grounds on the Manasquam River. Many of the guests, invited from groups said to be ineligible to membership under the "fiery cross," were told by the "Grand Dragon" that the Klan did not entertain prejudices of race, creed or color as commonly supposed.

A parade preceded the meeting, half the 1,000 Klansmen marchers wearing robes and masks, with a delegation representing the Ladies of the Invisible Empire as the principal novelty. The meeting closed in an extensive show of fireworks. There was no disorder, the grounds being policed throughout by 100 Klan guards, specially chosen ex-service men who had seen service in front-line trenches during the World War.

The conclave drew Klansmen from all parts of "Province No. 3, Realm of New Jersey"—Monmouth, Ocean and Middlesex Counties—where there are 1,600 members, from Point Pleasant to Asbury Park. Membership had recently jumped, it was said, the "Ladies" gaining 300 in three weeks, in local reaction against the annual influx of "resorters" setting in from New York City and up-coast points.

Point Pleasant itself remained little stirred during the day by the announced activity of the Klansmen, a flutter of interest appearing only when a surplus of strangers began to arrive on late afternoon trains. By the time the parade started, about 8 o'clock, some Point Pleasanters were seen to be preparing to go to bed.

The parade, which was thought to be the first open review of the organization in New Jersey, was granted a special permit by Mayor Parker of Point Pleasant borough. Four robed horsemen made the arrowhead of the procession. There was a patter of applause when it appeared in sight of the bleachers rigged up for the occasion at Clark's Landing. A standard bearer with a fiery cross was followed by a brass band. Behind came dragons supreme, dragons grand, "great titan," "exalted cyclops," all attended with guardsmen running plentifully to the drawn sword.

Comment revived through the stands as the Grand Councillor of the Ladies of the Invisible Empire appeared on horseback, followed by three women standard ebarers. The Seacoast Council, the local auxiliary which was said to have been formed within the month, passed in well-kept "cross" formation. The Royal Riders of the Red Robe had a strong representation, this being an order of the Klan which armits foreign born.

Initiation rites were performed after the address of the Grand Dragon.

FORD IS CHARGED WITH BACKING KLAN

Order of B'rith Abraham Passes Resolutions Condemning Him for Antagonistic Attitude.

CONVENTION HISSES NAME

500 Delegates in Biennial Gathering at Atlantic City—Morris Green Re-elected Head.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 28.—Henry Ford was charged with being the financial backer of the Ku Klux Klan today at the biennial convention of the Grand Lodge Order of B'rith Abraham at the Hotel Jerome.

The charge was embodied in a resolution which was unanimously adopted. When Mr. Ford's name was first mentioned there were groans and hisses.

As spokesmen for a membership of 35,000 the 500 delegates put the order on record with the resolution, which read in part:

"Be it resolved that the order of B'rith Abraham, now in session, go on record as follows:

"That the delegates assembled condemn the attitude of Henry Ford for his attitude against the Jews as un-American and that his candidacy for President is an insult to the fundamentals upon which this country is based.

"Further be it resolved that this convention accuse Mr. Ford of being the financial backer o fthe hooded Ku Klux Klan, who approves of their unpatriotic exploitation against the Jews, Catholics, negroes and foreigners."

Discussing the resolution, Acting Grand Master Morris M. Green of New York said: "We feel that Ford is behind the Ku Klux Klan, that he is their sponsor, and we are glad to join with our Catholic brethren in fighting him and the organization." The resolution was introduced by H. Murray Perkolsky, Assistant Corporation Counsel of the City of Boston.

The convention also passed a resolution that the age limit for members be reduced from 21 to 18 and that unmarried women, unaccompanied by male members be admitted to membership. Hitherto a woman has not been eligible unless accompanied by a near male relative.

PLAINFIELD MEN BREAK UP KLAN MEETING

The Richmond Planet 7-16-23

(Preston News Service.)

Plainfield, N.J., June 13.—It is claimed that disturbance punctuated with throwing of stones, marked the meeting held here by the ku klux klan of Franklin county. The city officials appealed to the large crowd to uphold the law and not disgrace the name of the city whereupon the crowd dispersed. It was reported that the officers requested the klan to abandon the meeting and their wishes were complied with.

A number of citizens are of the opinion that many of the officials are klansmen and that the meeting was not broken up. Strong sentiment is developing against the klan and it is openly stated that unless the officials of the city put an end to the klan in the city citizens will take the law into their own hands.

Bloomfield (N.J.) Officially Regrets Egg Throwing During Parade.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., July 3.—The Bloomfield Town Council decided today, over the protest of Mayor Frederic R. Pilch, to send a letter of regret to the Ku Klux Klan because eggs were thrown at the Klansmen during their parade on the night of Flag Day, June 14. Mayor Pilch had granted permission to the Klansmen to march on condition that they remove their hoods, as they did.

"As far as I gathered from the sense of our meeting," said Chairman Charles H. Demarest of the Police Committee, who drafted the letter, "it was that we regretted any egg throwing took place on streets of Bloomfield, in view of the fact that the Mayor had granted permission to the Klan to parade without their masks."

Mayor Pilch, who protested against sending the letter to the Klan, which had demanded an apology, is Past Master of Bloomfield Lodge, F. and A. M., Councilman Edward J. Hughes, the only Roman Catholic member of the Council, also objected.

KLUX ON GAY PARADE ARE GIVEN EGG BATH IN N. J.

Pittsburgh Courier 7/21/23

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., June 30—Citizens of this town have found a humorous cure for the Klux disease. They tried it out yesterday with great effect on a gang of 250 chronic Kluxers who participated in the Flag day parade here. It's nothing less than a shower bath of slimy, ancient eggs alternated with exclamation marks supplied by home-made grenades of decayed vegetables.

The attack came suddenly. The King Kleagle was marching haughtily at the head of his little Kluxers when out stepped the van of the attacking force and, with slow-raised arms violently brought forward and downward peppered the King Kleagle with the contents of a dozen or more ancient eggs. After that, the fruit of the hen swished thick and fast through the putrid air and the Kluxers took to flight to save the few clean spots that were left of their unmasked faces. But lo, the crowd pursued, and Klan gowns were sullied by contact with dusty streets, and Klan hoods and robes were torn to shreds.

FINDS OFFICE IN RED AND 'K. K. K.' ON DOOR

Mrs. Elizabeth Schulz, Closter (N. J.) Real Estate Agent, Blames Enemies.

Special to The New York Times.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., June 14.—Excitement in the Town of Closter, eight miles north of here, following the unexplained act of men who painted the real estate office of Mrs. Elizabeth Shulz there a bright red, with white crosses on each side of the building and tacked this notice near the front door:

"You will get the next coat of paint if you don't get yourself out of town.

K. K. K."

Mrs. Shulz said she did not believe the Klan had anything to do with the act for there was no such organization within twenty miles of Closter.

"I have been in business here for many years," said Mrs. Shulz. "I have made many friends as well as enemies. I believe that there are some people who begrudge me my success. Some little time ago I had occasion to transfer much of my business from a closter concern to an organization in Hackensack. I believe that this has been held against me.

"The first word I had of this outrage was at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning when Florence Hubbard, my assistant, opened the office. She phoned me immediately. I was just getting ready to leave the house when the younger of my two boys, Eugene, also phoned me. He was crying and said that the school children had been guying him. I cam as quickly as I could and this is what I found."

Although plainly nervous, Mrs. Shulz refused to admit fear and said she would not leave Closter under any consideration.

"I don't care what they to me; I don't care if they hit me on the head; I'm going to stick," she declared.

Many citizens of Closter expressed sympathy for Mrs. Shulz, among them was the Rev. J. A. Hammond of the First Congregational Church, who sent the following message:

"Dear Mrs. Shulz—Every citizen should be quick to denounce the cowardly act that was perpetrated on the Shulz real estate office last night. The greatest injury done is on the fair name of Closter. A self-respecting community does not tolerate that kind of thing and, when it happens will try to bring the guilty parties to justice. The victimized family will discover a host of friends and sympathizers after such an outrage. Probably K. K. K. had nothing to do with it.

"It is unfortunate that K. K. K. through its supposed method, which is secrecy (will not affirm or deny) offers the temptation to hoodlums to do such things in its name. K. K. K. affirm your innocence.

"Yours for a good community,

"J. A. HAMMOND."

PARADE ON MAIN STREET

Klan Police With Clubs Keep Order While 700 Men Take Oath.

NEW YORK HERALD JUNE 3, 1923

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., June 2.—What officials of the Ku Klux Klan say is the largest ceremonial the organization has ever held in this part of the country was staged on the Clark's Landing picnic grounds on the edge of town to-night, when nearly 300 men were initiated into the Invisible Empire. Four hundred of them live in Point Pleasant and environs. Prior to the ceremony there was a parade of 300 Klansmen through the town.

The visitors were escorted to two long wooden seats for the initiation. In front of the altar the Kaliff stood, garbed in white and hooded. Back of the altar were six more hooded figures, the Kolkard, Kladd, Exalted Cyclops, Night Hawk and Kludd.

The Grand Dragon told the audience that every year 87,000 white girls were abducted and imprisoned for life by Chinese, Negroes and Japanese.

"If the Klan had no other reason for existence, that would be enough," he said. The native born gentiles should run the United States and the future welfare of the country is in their hands. The Klan has no hostility toward Jews but believes the gentiles should stand together for gentile civilization.

"I believe the Klan has the right to organize to protect these things and the American public school system—the supreme achievement of America."

It is estimated that 2,000 persons were present at the initiation. Invitations were sent broadcast. Many members of the Catholic Church and Jews were asked to attend in order "to show them," it is said, "that the Klan is not as hostile to them as has been supposed, and that it is purely American."

The parade, which was headed by four robed Klansmen on horses, started through Main street about 8 o'clock. Hundreds of persons on the sidewalks looked curiously at the masked marchers. Immediately following the horsemen the paraders carried a fiery cross. A brass band blared forth quicksteps. Following the Supreme Dragon—as the hooded official who marched in rear of the bass drum was said to be—came a detachment of Royal Riders of the Red Robe, an organization of foreign born, who are affiliated with the Klan.

The picnic grounds where the initiation was held are on the Manasquan River, a mile or so from the sea. Automobiles were parked about the field, which was divided into three sections by wire cables. There was a speaker's stand in each of them, and at the back of the field the letters "K. K. K." blazed in electric lights. It was all very open to the public without the least attempt at concealment.

As the parade turned into Arnold avenue toward the picnic grounds the headlights of the automobiles which lined that thoroughfare for a mile illuminated the marchers and the trappings of the horses. The inclosure about the park was lined ten deep with spectators and perfect order was maintained by a police forcemen of Klansmen, all armed with clubs and wearing bands about their arms with the letters "K. P." An American flag fluttered in front of the illuminated cross. The grand stand was crowded and there appeared to be more women than men in the crowd. Dr. Oscar Heywood, lecturer of the Klan, was conspicuous among the participants.

The rumor swept through the grand stand that the real reason for the demonstration was to discourage Jews from coming to Point Pleasant and adjacent resorts this summer.

More than 250 white-robed members of the organization were showered with eggs, precipitating a rough and tumble fight, which became a rich. The klansmen marched in a procession which had been organized by the James T. Boyd Council of the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

Jersey Governor Answers Plea For Protection Against "Mobs."

TRENTON, N. J., June 18.—Members of the Ku Klux Klan must shed their masks if they wish their grievance appeals listened to, Gov. Silzer declared today in connection with letters broadcast by the klan protesting against disruption of their meetings by "organized mobs." The governor said he had not received the letter the klan announced it had sent to him on the subject.

"If the Ku Klux Klan leaders will appear in person with their masks off and show a real grievance they will receive consideration and action," the governor said.

WANAQUE, N. J., Jan. 2.—The eulogy of the Ku Klux Klan by the Rev. Alexander S. Van Dyck, pastor of the Wanaque Reformed Church, Sunday evening, following the presentation of $25 by three masked Klansmen during the service, has caused much comment here.

Just before the sermon three in the hooded regalia of the Klan entered the church. One carried a white cross about three feet high, another an American flag, and the third, who first knelt in prayer before the altar, presented Mr. Van Dyck an envelope containing $25 and a nate which read:

"Reverend Sir: The Federal Rock Klansmen through this committee present to you a personal donation of $25 with the season's greetings.

"It being our purpose to follow the teachings of Christ and assist all Protestant churches in this great work and further the uplift of each community, therefore we would ask that you be kind enough to bring to our attention through Lock Box 224-A, Butler, N. New Jersey Governor Deplores All Racial Antagonism

"There is nothing worse than this sudden revival of bigotry, this racial antagonism which is stiring against the Catholic and the Jew", theGovernor said. "There is no need of immediate legistative action, as publicity will wipe it all out. If not, we shall have to pass a law asking these people to show their faces, subject to a severe criminal law of the State. If this bigotry does not end in the near future I shall be the first to oppose it in this state, not for political purpores, but for the good of others."

A resolution condemning the Ku Klux Klan and asking the President to take steps to suppress the Klan was passed last evening at a meeting of the Crotona Lodge of the Independent Order of B'rith Abraham, Southern Boulevard and 163rd St. Dr. Meyer Kopfstein, former Rabbi of Adath Israel, in addressing the meeting, denounced the organization.

Survey of State Shows Lack of Interest in Many Towns—Silent in Trenton.

Membership in the Ku Klux Klan in New Jersey is quite widespread, but comparatively inactive, according to a canvass by a news agency, made public yesterday. The assertion of a Hoboken newspaper that the Klan was well organized and active there led to the survey, which showed that two other principal points of Klan activity were Paterson and Bayonne.

In each case, a report on Klan activities was obtained from an editor of a local newspaper. The following are the answers of the editors consulted in each city with the names of their papers:

Newark (Star-Eagle)—We have not had any stories of the Ku Klux Klan here in a year, except one about three months ago. There is an organization here, but judge it does not amount to much in membership.

Jersey City (Jersey Journal)—The Ku Klux Klan is not extensive in Jersey City. We have never heard of it out in the open.

Paterson (News)—The activities of the Klan here are confined to giving donations to charitable institutions. Money was presented to the Florence Crittenton Home at Eighteenth Street and Sixteenth Avenue, and to the First Baptist Church, the Rev. Frank McDonald, pastor. I think there are prominent people connected with the Klan here, although their activities have not been in the open.

Elizabeth (Times)—The Ku Klux Klan here is very quiet. Nearly a year ago it gave a church $25. It has disappeared from public view since then. Donald Bate, who was organizer in this section of the State, left and went to Florida after he had been thrown out of the order by W. A. Clarke, King Kleagle, at Atlanta.

Weehawken (Hudson Dispatch)—The Klan, if here at all, is very small. We have never been able to find it.

Passaic (Daily News)—No demonstrations here. We know of no activities.

Trenton (State Gazette)—There are no evidences of the Ku Klux Klan here.

Long Branch (Record)—There is at present time no active organization. I say that from my own actual positive knowledge. Over a year ago a Klan was organized with about fifty members. Apparently it was never completed. Within the last two or three months other organizers have come here, but, so far as I have learned, without success. I know that there is a Klan at Asbury Park, however, in good running condition.

Perth Amboy (Evening News)—I never saw any traces of it here.

New Brunswick (Home News)—If it exists here, it is so quiet that it is not worth considering. We have had no evidence of it whatever in a year.

Camden (Courier)—About a year ago an organizer came here and formed a branch of the Ku Klux Klan. He got about 100 members. The organization fell flat, however, after it had been pounded pretty hard for three or four months. The organizer went over to Philadelphia, and was driven out of that city. The Klan seems to have disappeared from Camden County.

Atlantic City (Gazette Review)—It has been said that a Klan exists here, but we can find no indication of it. Certain threatening letters received on K. K. K. stationery were really written on letter heads which had been cut off, apparently above a previous letter, and so were probably not written by authentic Ku Klux Klan members at all.

Bayonne (Evening News)—There are evidences that the Ku Klux has a fair sized organization here. A certain doctor is believed to be its examining physician, and another man well known about the town is supposed to be its organizer. The newspapers have received letters from certain persons attacking others for their criticisms of the Klan.

Asbury Park (Press)—The Ku Klux Klan has never shown any public signs of activity here, although it is believed several local people are members of it.

Hackensack (Record)—It has been reported that a Klan exists here, but we have never been able to locate anyone who will admit it, except one man who was not a regular resident of Hackensack, and he has since moved away. It is understood that about a year ago fifteen Hackensack men were initiated at East Paterson, but they have shown no signs of activity since then.

Call Meeting to Plan for Care of Negroes from South

The Newark Welfare and Civic Organization will hold a mass meeting tomorrow night in Roosevelt Memorial Temple, 324 Washington street, to complete plans for the reception and care of Southern negroes who are expected here in a migration in fear of the Ku Klux Klan. The meeting will be addressed by welfare workers.

In response to the publication of the purposes of the organization, letters proffering assistance and employment are being received by Rev. S. L. Corrothers from individuals in parts of New Jersey and New York. Homes have already been found for girls and several small families with remunerative employment. Appeals are being sent out for gifts of cast-off clothing and household articles, which will be put in condition and distributed to the needy.

PATERSON, N. J., March 5.—Six men wearing the white gowns and hoods of the Ku Klux Klan entered Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church by a read door during services Sunday night and presented a purse of $100 to the Rev. Irving C. Starr, the pastor. One of the visitors read the principles of the Klan, and another recited a piem, "God Give Us Men!"; a third handed the pastor an envelope containing the money and a note, which read:

"We offer this contribution to show our appreciation of the pastor, who has on many occasions preached on pure American ideals for which the Ku Klux Klan stands first, last and all the time. We hope you will accept this small gift in the spirit in which it is given.

"LEIF ERICKSON KLAN NO. 1.

Mr. Starr praised the Klan in an interview after the services. "The Klan is against nothing except lawlessness and other things anti-American," he said.

Colored Woman Asks Aid of Judge in Seeking Protection

MAILED FROM AMBOY

With a terrified look, Mrs. Eliazbeth Sinclair, colored, of 559 Pennsylvania avenue, rushed into police headquarters today, dashed past the desk sergeant and other policemen and made her way to Judge James Brown, who was preparing to leave the bench for lunch.

Her eyes wide open and panting for breath, she motioned to the judge to look at a slip of paper in her hand.

"My daughter, Esther got this in the mail this morning," she told the magistrate.

Glancing over the letter, Judge Brown saw that it was a threat to the girl and the entire city and signed by the K. K. K. It was postmarked Perth Amboy and read:

"Our eyes are on you and we are convinced that we owe that we give your kind. We are giving you warning that we will clean up the city."

hree K's were signed to the document. The woman said that her daughter was one of the contributions to the fund to defray expenses of the prosecution of the murders of Dr. J. W. Eason, a colored preacher.

Comforting the woman with remarks that the girl has little to fear, Judge Brown told her that he would notify the police and they would protect her. The judge said that the police department here is one of the finest and the girl and her mother can feel assured they will be guarded. He said it appeared as a joke on the girl.

40 KLANSMEN INVADE CHURCH IN NEWARK

New York Times

Enter as Choir Sings 'Onward Christian Soldier' and Are Greeted by Pastor.

3-12-23

Astonishment was expressed in official circles here yesterday over the boldness of the Ku Klux Klan in sending forty hooded and gowned Klansmen to a public service in the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Newark, N. J., Sunday evening. Belief was expressed that, although the Klan has a large membership in New York City, nothing of that kind could happen here without police interference.

The forty Klansmen entered the Newark church, which is at New York Avenue and Ann Street, while the choir was singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." They marched up the main aisle and one of them, later introduced as "the Exalted Cyclops," mounted the pulpit and shook hands with the pastor, the Rev. Parris C. Greenley. The latter read a text and introduced "the Exalted Cyclops," who, without removing his mask, said:

"This is a white man's organization for exalting the Caucasian race and teaching the doctrine of white supremacy. This does not mean, as some would have you believe, that we are enemies of the colored and mongrel races, but does mean that we are organized to maintain the solidarity of the white race.

"This is a Gentile organization, and as such has as its mission the interpretation of the highest ideals of the white Gentile people. However, we sing no hymns of hate against the Jew.

"It is a Protestant organization and its membership is restricted to those who accept the tenets of true Christianity, which is essentially Protestant. We can say to the world that our fathers founded this as a Protestant country and our purpose is to establish and maintain it as such. While we will support energetically the principles of Protestantism, we will also maintain the principle of religious liberty as essential for the future growth and development of this country."

The speaker denied that any Klansmen had been concerned in the Mer Rouge murders in Louisiana and asserted that nowhere did Knansmen violate the law or take it into their own hands.

The pastor followed the address with a sermon on "Americanism" without mentioning the Klan by name. Headmitted after the service that the visit of the Klansmen had been expected and that arrangements for it had been made with him in advance.

The New York City police were reported yesterday to have accurate information concerning the Klan membership in the city and to estimate it at about 16,000. There were said to be thirty policemen who are Knansmen, including a Lieutenant and two destectives. Denial was made of the report that five police Captains were Klansmen or that any high public officials in New York City were known as Klansmen to the police.

KLAN THREATENS BOY WITH ROPE AND KNIFE

Masked Men Accuse Him of Stealing $50 Ku Klux Gift to His Mother.

INNOCENT, HE DEFIES THEM

Youth Is Finally Freed—Raiders of West Belmar Known—Will Be Arrested, Police Say.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 9.—A month ago a stalwart figure in the robe and hood of a Klansman stalked through the streets of West Belmar to the home of Mrs. Bessie Titus, handed her $50 and, without a word, disappeared. A few days later Mrs. Titus, who is separated from her husband, discovered the gift money was missing. She needed it badly.

George Titus, her 18-year-old son, was in bed in the home of William Rademan, manufacturer of knitting goods at West Belmar, at 9 o'clock last night, when an automobile stopped at the door. Four men got out. Rademan, who answered the doorbell, say that the men were masked. He hesitated about opening the door, but a stern voice commanded him to throw it open. He complied.

"We want to talk to young Titus," said the spokesman for the four, twirling a pistol menacingly by its trigger guard. Rademan, uneasy, though he recognized the men in spite of their masks as residents of West Belmar, was about to turn to get young Titus out of bed when three of the masked men pushed past him and went to the young man's room. When members of the Rademan family protested against the invasion of their home after the hour of retiring, the spokesman made a gesture or two with the pistol and silenced them.

"Get up, we want to talk to you," one of the men told the frightened youth. When Titus had dressed he was escorted from the house to the automobile, where a fifth man had been waiting at the wheel, and the car drove off at a rapid rate. According to Titus' story today, the machine sped away in the rain in the direction of Shark River Hill, five miles from Belmar.

Threatened to Hang Him.

There was no mention of the purpose of their visit dudring the trip, the group sitting silently about their prisoner, but when the car stopped Titue quickly found out what was wanted. A mystetrious "Mr. Bell" had visited him during the afternoon, representing himself as a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and had examined the boy closely as to what became of his mother's $50. When he left he had told Rademan why he had called, and assured Rademan that the boy did not steal the money.

"But the five men accused me right away," Titus told Detective Davenport. "They told me that the $50 had been a gift of the Ku Klux Klan for my mother because she was expecting a baby. They said they had felt sorry for her because my father and my mother had separated and wanted to help her.

"They charged me with taking the money, and said that if I did not confess they would hang me to a tree. One of them pointed to the tree. A rope was dangling from it. Another told me that after I had been hanged 'until I was dead,' they would cut my body down and toss it into Shark River.

"A third man came toward me with a long knife and, poking this in front of my face, said he would cut my throat if I did not admit that I took the money. How could I confess to something I didn't do? They kept me on top of the hill for a while, questioning me about my family. I guess I was there for about two hours. Then they pushed me back into the automobile and drove through New Bedford, about a mile from home. They said I would surely be killed if I told any one what had occurred."

Gives Names of Raiders.

Rademan got in touch with County Detective Charles O. Davenport this morning, and demanded that the county authorities start an immediate investigation looking to the arrest of the men who invaded his home. Rademan bears an excellent reputation in the community and befriended the Titus boy when his parents separated, so that he might continue his course at the local high school.

Rademan gave the county authorities the names of the men he said he had recognized, and was insistent that something be done immediately so that further raids on homes might be prevented. Davenport said tonight that he expected arrests in connection with the Titus affair.

The Ku Klux Klan appears to be strong in West Belmar. Several local meetings have been held, and recently the Klan appeared in the order, when hooded Klansmen walked down the aisle of the Methodist Church and handed a sum of money to the pastor. Several days before the gathering of 10,000 Klansmen at Hobbs's farm at Middlebush, N. J., last week, a day after the riot which broke up the meeting of the Pillar of Fire congregation at Bound Brook, several telephone calls were recevied by Ocean County newspapers informing them to be "on the watch" for hte big Klan meeting.

None of the informants of the local newspapers would say where the meeting was to be held or when. Several times it has been announced here that the local Klan planned parades, but each time the police were reinforced, following the threat of the Chief of Police to publicly unmask the paraders.

BIG KLAN MEETING TONIGHT.

Time and Place of Jersey Gathering Is Kept a Secret.

A large public demonstration by the Ku Klux Klan in New Jersey, similar to the gathering held last week on Hobbs's farm, near Middlebush, is scheduled for tonight, athough neither the time nor the place of the meeting could be discovered last night.

Telephone messages were received by newspapers in several Jersey towns yesterday, informing them of the meeting, but no hint of the spot selected was included in the "tip." The messages, in several cases, came from persons who notified these newspapers to be on the lookout for last week's meeting, which was held, as secretly scheduled, at Middlebush.

Members of the Klan, through an elaborate secret system, are notified of initiations and other gatherings by mail over the telephone, and the messages are couched in Klan language.

Just where tonight's meeting will be held, if indeed one is to be held, probably will not be discovered until within a few hours of the meeting, and will be indicated by the converging of automobiles upon a given point. Last week about 700 automobiles containing from two to eight persons each unloaded Klan members from all parts of New Jersey.

FREEPORT, L. I., May 9.—A donation of $25 from the Ku Klux Klan was received yesterday by Mrs. Gordon Lindsay, M. D. of 12 Rose Street, Freeport, who was in charge of the Salvation Army campaign for funds, held here last week, it was learned today.

According to Mrs. Lindsay, who is a prominent physician here, a strange man called at her home yesterday, and inquired "whether it was too late to make donations to the Salvation Army?" After she had informed him that contributions would still be accepted, the man gave her an envelope and hurriedly walked away. The envelope contained $25 in bills and a note bearing the words: "From the Ku Klux Klan."

KLAN INITIATION FEATURED BY MASS FIGHTS

Fiery Cross Draws Crowd of 10,000 to Midnight Ceremony.

Brawls Frequent.

By International News Service.

MIDDLEBUSH, N. J., May 3.—Hostilities between Klansmen and anti-Klansmen broke out again early Thursday after the initiation of 860 into the mystic order on the Hobbs farms, a mile from here, before a crowd of 10,000 klansmen and spectators.

Klansmen returning from the ceremonies to their homes engaged in frequent brawls with anti-Kaln forces and several mass fights were reported in New Brunswick.

No casualties were reported to police, however, and they took no action.

The initiation itself passed without seriously disturbing incidents, although a few revolver shots were heard during the night while the members of the mystic order were assembling.

A huge fiery cross, 75 feet high, which functioned by means of oil soaked burlap, was visible for miles about the countryside and guided the gathering thousands from all directions to the little farm where the altar was erected.

Klansmen began gathering around 8 o'clock and by 11 o'clock the converging roads were lined with automobiles from a dozen states, some bearing Florida license tags.

Special klan guards, neither masked nor robed, maintained order. The ceremonies began after midnight and continued until nearly 4 o'clock.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Their Ideals Plainly Illustrated.

Highly characteristic of the Ku Klux Klan and of the way in which its members everywhere carry out their avowed purposes, patriotic and virtuous, was what one group of them did this week in New Jersey, a State where, to its shame, the vicious organization seems to have considerable strength.

First a group of Klansmen went, in their hoods and gowns, to the home of a poor woman and gave her $50, in recognition of her real needs, present and coming. That was an act of the kind to which the Klansmen and their friends and defenders are fond of pointing with pride as justifying the society's existence. But somebody stole the $50 and the Klansmen suspected her son of having taken it.

What did they do? What they should have done is obvious. They should have presented such evidence as they had to the police or the District Attorney, and if they had made out even a prima facie case against the boy he would have been arrested, indicted, tried and, if proved guilty, punished, all in due course and order. That would have been civilized behavior.

Instead, they went at midnight to the house where the boy was living, dragged him out of bed, carried him in an automobile to a lonely spot, and there endeavored, by threatening alternately to hang him and to cut his throat, to make him confess the theft. As they failed, they let him go at last. If they had succeeded, it is more than possible that they would have killed him, as their like have killed others who interfered with Klan activities.

POLICE PULL DOWN K. K. K. FIERY CROSS

Bloomfield, N. J.—Three burning crosses, supposedly erected and fired by the Ku Klux in this place, Arlington and Kearny, N. J., as symbolic memorials to President Harding were torn down early by the police. The cross which attracted the townsfolk of Bloomfield was set up on a knoll near East Passaic Ave. The fiery torch in the shape of the cross threw its glare for miles around and was seen clearly by residents of Belleville, Bloomfield and Nutley. Inhabitants who had been awakened by the glare in the sky called up the police. On motorcycles the police hurried to the spot, and arrived there in time to see white-clad figures speeding away in automobiles. The police pulled down the burning cross and extinguished the flames.

SAYS NEW BODY CARRIES OUT IDEALS OF KU KLUX

OMAHA, NEB., May 2—Mayor James C. Dahlman today accepted the office of "grand lictor" or national head of the Fascisto of America, organization of which was recently announced here by Edgar J. Fuller of Omaha, former Ku Klux Klan Kleagle of the realm of Northern California. 5/3/23

Purposes of the order as announced by its organizers, include the upholding of the federal constitution, the engendering of "pure Americanism"; prevention and elimination of causes of mob violence; protection of pure womanhood, and "upholding the rights of a free and enlightened people to choose their own religion." Its symbol is a black shirt with an outstretched golden eagle over the heart.

The organization is not affiliated with the Mussolini movement in Italy. Mr. Fuller said its ideals are similar to the published ideals of the Ku Klux Klan, but quite different from those which that organization practices.

Missouri,

CHALLENGING THE KU KLUXERS

It is reported that a speaker for the Ku Klux Klan said a few nights ago, following the big initiation in St. Louis County, that the Klan was not against the Negro, but on the other hand, the Klan was the Negroes' best friend as long as he, the Negro stays in his place.

Somehow, we fail to see or understand from the above statement, any expression of friendship—or an abridgement of any charge against the Negro, that might be laid at the Klansmen's door.

Two important questions arise from the statement, "stay in his place." First is, where is the Negro's place in America? And second is, who are to set his bounds? It may be that if the Klan can answer these two questions, we will be fully able to express an opinion as to its sincerity.

Without further discussing the Klan or its activities, it may be proper to state just here, that our idea of a free country, the place of a citizen is in the sun, and that his bounds are set only by his intelligence, thrift and industry. These, to our minds are the true principles of a free country and are the fundamental rights of a free people.

To say to this one, thus far shalt thou go and no further, is like talking to a slave—that's the language of a master to his slave, or the overseer to a prisoner—such language has no place in a free country.

We think that the so-called Negro problem in America today is no more, nor nothing less than a fixed idea that is prevalent in the minds of most white people, that the Negro is not a free citizen, notwithstanding the proclamation by Abraham Lincoln.

Any man or set of men who say to one class of citizens, you go there, or you stay here thus are thy bounds, is saying, you are a slave, you are not free and you must not exercise the rights of free men.

Looking back short fifty years, the record of our achievement under adverse condition, is one any race could well be proud. We can say, to the American white man, "not alms are we asking of our sunlight and we will make our way."

Kansas City Klans Get Restraining Order Against Revocation

Kansas City, Mo., July 26.—Four Kansas City chapters of the Ku Klux Klan, representing a membership of approximately 4,000, today obtained a temporary restraining order in circuit court here to prevent revocation of their charters. The application for an injunction will be heard Monday.

The application states the faction of the klan headed by H. W. Evans imperial wizard, has threatened charter revocation if certain taxes are not paid at once. The applicants state they hold W. J. Simmons, imperial emperor, the rightful head of the klan and will not pay until decisions on suits now pending in Georgia establish the superiority of one of the two leaders.

Simmons recently spoke to klansmen in Kansas City and Evans is reported to be coming soon.

KLAN WILL OPEN KLAVERN

Large Gathering Expected at Poplar Bluff on July 26.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., July 13.—What is expected to be the greatest gathering of the Ku Klux Klans of Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas will be at Poplar Bluff, Mo., on July 26, when Poplar Bluff Klan No. 48, Realm of Missouri, will dedicate the new 40 acre woodland klavern which is located on the St. Louis road, two miles north of Poplar Bluff.

The outstanding features of the day will be a parade through the business district of Poplar Bluff in which klansmen throughout Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas have been invited to join in uniform. There will be a big free barbecue and the climax event is expected to be the public initiation of hundreds of candidates. The public off at some distance will be allowed to behold this feature. Visiting klans are being urged to bring candidates with them for initiation into the mysteries of klancraft.

KANSAS CITY KLAN JOIN NEW ORDER

Associated Press Report.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 10.—The Albert Pike Klan, No. 45, a local branch of the Ku Klux Klan has withdrawn from the national organization with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., and has declared its intention of supporting the National Associated Klans and the Associated Klans of Missouri, it was announced tonight by officials. Alleged inaction by the staff at the imperial headquarters was given as the reason for the move.

A resolution, passed by the local organization, July 6, and made public tonight declared that "there exists a state of affairs within the imperial palace of the klan in Atlanta that is proving highly detrimental to the klans throughout the United States." That has created an emergency and necessitates immediate action to preserve the principles of the klan.

The resolution stated that the local klan will not make any further contributions to the support of the Atlanta headquarters, holding all funds in escrow until "such time as the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have been straightened out and put on a democratic basis."

The klan takes this action, the resolution said, to the end that "klancraft be not lost to posterity."

W. J. Simmons of Atlanta, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan addressed a klan meeting here tonight.

Kluxers Celebrate Near Independence

Kansas City Times 7-14-23

The presence of Imperial Wizard Simmons in the city Tuesday was the occasion for a meeting of the kluxers at their favorite haunt near Independence. The Klan is reported to be divided in Missouri and Kansas, as a result of the Simmons-Kimbro-Evans fight, so there were only a small number of the klansmen to meet with Simmons.

The trip here is a part of Simmons' plan to visit several cities and to speak with a view to re-organizing his devitalized forces. From here it is said, Simmons went to Wichita, Kansas.

FLORIDA FOURTH STATE TO FEEL RULE OF LASH

Chicago Tribune 8-21-23

Terrorism Grows; Troops Fire on Tulsa Gang.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 20.—[United Press.]—"Flogging parties," now under investigation under orders of governors of three southern states. Oklahoma, Texas, and Georgia, spread yesterday to Florida.

Two instances of "lash rule" were reported in Florida. Following the kidnaping and beating of Cæsar Nealons, Negro, at New Smyrna, four men were arrested. At Eau Gallie, Fla., a band of masked men kidnaped and whipped G. A. Davis, a barber, accused of not supporting his wife.

Gov. Pat Neff of Texas, who returned to the capitol at Austin yesterday after an absence of several weeks, approved action taken in his absence to have whipping probed by state rangers.

Mob Has Whipping Boss.

Military authorities conducting the investigation into whippings in Tulsa were reported to have obtained important information regarding the whipping band. This included information that all mob action in that county was carried out by the same band under the directorship of a "whipping boss."

In Georgia ten men were under arrest at Atlanta, accused of kidnaping and murdering Millward Trouton, and three brothers were held at Macon charged with participating in floggings.

A band of Negroes formed near Goldsboro, N. C., turned the tables on whites. The mob threatened to "get" Robert Hood, acquitted by a jury of charges of killing a Negro. Hood escaped from the county before the mob could act.

Men Are Paid Floggers.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 20.—From information obtained from the three Hudson brothers, arrested last night in the act of flogging two Negroes, the police tonight said they were preparing to round up an organized flogging band.

During the last forenight several men have been whipped and ordered to leave town, and during the last six months scores of men have been flogged.

The police also announced tonight that the Hudsons and other members of the flogging band are paid men, and that through the Hudsons they had learned they were being financed by an organization. A confession from one of the Hudsons, the police said, was expected during the night and names of those who have been financing the floggers would be made public. Gov. Walker at Atlanta tonight offered to send troops if necessary.

Barber Taken from Jail.

Eau Gallie, Fla., Aug. 20.—G. A. Davis, who was removed from the county jail last night by five masked and robed men who had obtained keys to the jail when they overpowered a deputy sheriff on the street, returned to the jail this morning. Davis had been arrested on a charge of nonsupport.

Davis, who returned alone, appeared to have been roughly handled, but was said to have denied that he was beaten.

Rev. McGehee Explains His Offer.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A CORRESPONDENT in your paper undertakes to call my hand on the $1000 offer I made sometime ago relative to the Klan being a criminal organization. He says, "In the Post-Dispatch recently a St. Louis minister, the Rev. Charles D. McGehee, offered to pay $1000 to anybody who would produce an instance in which a member of the Ku Klux Klan was convicted of an offense in a court of record." 8-19-23

What I did say in my challenge that the Klan was not a lawless organization but was just the contrary, was as follows: "I defy anyone to prove from the court record that the Klan has at any time, anywhere in the United States been convicted of any crime."

As to the case in question, the writer is as accurate in drawing his conclusions as in my first offer to reward the false accusors with $1000 for proof of conviction of the Klan for any crime committed. This was not a criminal charge against the Klan, but against certain individuals who published a paper called "The Voice of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," a privately owned paper. There is only one official publication, "The Night Hawk," published by the Imperial Palace in Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Manning, I am sorry that you cannot give this $1000.
trust with that job would be the editor of the Post-Dispatch whom you name.

As to the stakeholder, the last person I would trust with that job would be the editor of the Post-Dispatch, whom you name. CHAS. D. McGEHEE.

Other Klan Crimes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I AM a few days too late to be able to claim the reward of $1000 to anyone proving to the Rev. McGehee of a single case of any member of the Ku Klux Klan being convicted for committing acts of violence. However, I wish my competitor for the reward the very best success in collecting from the Rev. McGehee.

What I wish to say s if the Rev. McGehee isn't certain of the case referred to I would suggest he buy a Houston Chronicle and read under date of July 25 how Criminal District Judge C. W. Robinson fined 11 members of the Ku Klux Klan $100 and costs apiece for committing acts of violence.

One case in particular was the flogging in Oklahoma of a man and the cutting off of the woman's hair. This act was committed last January.

You are to be commended on your recent editorial "Will Indiana Go Ku Klux," and your editorial in today's issue, "The Klan's Cocksureness." An organization of this sort will surely die of its own poison.

Klan Opens 'War Sheet' in Missouri

Chicago Defender

St. Louis, July 20.—The Patriot, a weekly newspaper with an announced policy to help the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, has made its first appearance in St. Louis. 7-21-23

While in an editorial official connection with the Invisible Empire of the Klan was denied, it specifies that "It is purely a private enterprise, and will boldly champion that all-American organization, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

E. M. Crane is the publisher and the paper is issued every Friday from Ninth and Olive Sts. The publication states that its members in St. Louis "represent the best men in the trades, in the professions, in business, in industry and in every important walk of life to be found in the Mound City." Chicago, Ill.

Several of its news articles belittle the Negroes, the Jews and the vatican at Rome.

The Patriot enumerated the principles and policies which it will champion, setting forth among them: White supremacy and protection of white womanhood.

The front page of its first issue has the following flamboyant headline: "Klan Wins in St. Louis." It claims that a heroic band in two years has grown to a great army of men.

OUR WORLD'S GREATEST "FIRE-EATERS."

Kansas City Times - Kansas City, Mo.

If lynchings and other injustices in the South were to cease if discrimination of every kind were discontinued; if our brethren of Klu Klux fame were to cease their naughtiness, and America entered upon that era of peace, brotherhood and prosperity which is the aim of God and all loyal Americans, and all was quiet in the land, and there was no race question whatsoever—did you ever stop to wonder what would become of some of our self-styled "World's Greatest Weeklies?" 9-1-23

That brings us to this question, "What makes a weekly great?" Surely not the acquisition of a nationwide reputation for yelping and protesting against everybody and everything, everywhere.

Ask for Better Street Car Service In the Gathering Held At Kinlock Park

9-14-23

The following is a clipping from "The Patriot" the official paper of the Ku Klux Klan that is being sold on the streets in this city under date of Sept. 7, 1923.

A mass meeting of Negroes was held in the Colored M. E. Church in Kinloch Park, a suburb of St. Louis, on Tuesday evening, August 28. There was a large attendance of representative citizens of Kinloch Park present.

It is said that the meeting was called as a result of posters appearing in the vicinity, signed "K. K. K.", and warning the blacks to watch their behavior especially on street cars. The notice read:

"We have been watching your behavior on street cars at Wellston, where you have been crowding and jostling whites, particularly white women, as you board street cars at Wellston, and spreading yourselves all over the cars instead of sitting together. We do not intend to put up with such conduct.

"We have also watched your running around and loafing in the streets of Ferguson, and it has got to stop. Stay away from Ferguson unless you have business there, and, if you have business, transact it quietly, and then get out."

At the mass meeting called for consideration of these notices short talks were made by Prof. Vivian, Rev. Johnson and Rev. Hancock and other local ministers These speakers pointed out that many of the Negroes of this vicinity own their own homes and are peaceable, law-abiding citizens. They said they wanted the surrounding communities to know that the rough element that has too frequently found its way into this suburb recently consists of Negroes coming from St. Louis to attend picnics and dances given by local citizens. It was thsi influx of undesirable Negroes, they said, that was causing all the trouble. Rev. Hancock of the Colored M. E. Church flayed this element roundly.

A committee was appointed to draw up a resolution pledging the colored citizens of Kinloch Park to strict obedience to the law, and to the task of co-operation with the authorities of surrounding communi ties and of the county in the enforcement of the law, thus preventing racial prejudice and strife. In return for their endeavors in this direction, they said, they asked for and would expect justice. They pledged themselves to the task, especially of checking disorders on street cars on the part of the rougher element of their own race.

Attention was also called to the fact that at certain hours in the morning and evening, street car facilities are very poor. It was alleged that there are not enough cars running during these two periods of the day to handle the traffic, with the result that the whites and Negroes are compelled to crowd into one car whereas two could be filled. It was decided to select a committee representing the Citizens of Florissant, Ferguson, Kinloch Park, and possibly Carsonville and Normandy, to wait upon the officials of the United Railways and prevail upon them if possible, to furnish more cars during these particular hours or to attach trailers to the regular cars, as the traffic requires, and thus avoid this close mingling of passengers of both races.

St. Louis Clarion 9-14-23

At the request of those calling the meeting, William H. Tiffin, Mayor of Ferguson; Carl O. Jeske, Editor of the Ferguson "News"; and Edward Tiffin, County Clerk, were present and addressed the meeting.

In relating the incidents of this meeting, the St Louis "County Leader", issue of August 31, says:

Whether the posters that appeared in Kinloch Park were actually placed by members of the K. K. K. or were the prank of some practical joker is a mooted question. It is a well-known fact that some Negroes riding on Kirkwood-Ferguson cars have at times, caused themselves to become obnoxious to the other passengers but it is quite generally believed that such Negroes, with perhaps an exception or two are not residents of Kinloch Park. Most of the colored population of that district are home owners and hard-working, law-abiding citizens.

Rev. Hancock Announces To Congregation of Gift from Two Men

St. Louis, Mo 9-14-23

The presentation of a purse of $100 to the Second Christian church on West Broadway, colored, by the Hannibal Ku Klux Klan, was announced to his congregation last night by the pastor, Rev. Mack C. Hancock who stated two men had called at his home and left the money, Saturday night. He also stated that the money would be accepted and applied to improving the church building.

Saturday evening two men who stated they represented the Hannibal Ku Klux Klan called at the home of Rev. Hancock and,after explaining their mission to the astonished pastor, presented him wih a purse. The money was in five dollar bills.

The speaker when he handed the purse to the preacher, stated that it was not a charity purse but was presented in recognition for the splendid work which Rev. Hancock and his members had done in rebuilding their house of worship on Broadway and for the influence for good that the church is exerting in this community, and then the men wished the pastor and his church a prosperous year and disappeared down the street. The men were not masked but Rev. Hancock stated that he recognized neither of them.

Rev. Hancock and a number of his congregation, have worked diligently in remodeling and practically rebuilding their house of worship. The pastor not only acted as architect of the building but gathered together much of the material used in the construction of the house, mixed and carried mortar and laid some of the rock. Rev. Gilbert Bundy, a young ministerial student, filled the pulpit of the Second Christian church last night, preaching to a large congregation.

Southern Weekly Owned By U. S. Senator Gives Description of Social Equality in Louisiana

Pittsburg Courier
Pittsburg, Pa.

(By The Associated Negro Press)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 23.—Colonel Mayfield's Weekly, (published by the newly elected U. S. Senator from Texas) now in its second year, edited by Billie Mayfield, Jr., and having E. W. Daniel as general manager, is strong for the Ku Klux Klan. In its attempted castigation of Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana, the Catholic church, and opponents of the White Robed Masqueraders in general, it gives some expert insight into some of the southern moral life which is generally denied when thrown in the teeth of that section.

Colonel Mayfield's Weekly issues from Temple and Houston, Texas. In its issue of January 27, 1923, many copies of which were distributed gratis throughout the Negro section of this city, under a front page editorial headed, "The True Story of Mer Rouge," after giving its opinion of one class of white people in Morehouse Parish, thus enlightens the world as to the other class of whom the Negro has constantly complained in this vitriolic style:

"The other, a motely crew of renegade caucasians in whom dishonesty and depravity blend like mud and miasma in the heart of a swamp. A set of jack leg gamblers and moonshiners who play sure-thing games with the darkies in the day time and sleep with their dusky daughters in the night time. A set of lecherous white men who go warm from the beds and kisses of lousy wenches to press their lips on the mouths of their white wives and babes, and openly boast of the nocturnal prowess of their senegambian consorts, a set of men, the unmarried contingency of which brazenly sent bonbons to Negro sweethearts, and appear with them in motor cars on the open streets of the little village in broad daylight and force greedy confectioners to serve them drinks in their cars, while white girls accustomed to that shame from childhood, move down the street in pitiless discomfiture. A set of married white men who proudly maintain in a cabin and a home, with the choicest of the frugal provision for the cabin. A set of white men married to bulldozed wives who are forced to silently endure the savage jeers of black paramours on the open highways of the little town, whose daughters eternally suffer the humiliation of being half sisters to Negro brutes who defiantly proclaim their kinship to make the villagers laugh."

"Watt Daniels, the man who disappeared and for whose death the Klan is being tried, terrorizing the people with gun displays dashing through the village in his whisky car with his nigger woman by his side laughing at the fleeting white girls and white boys.

"The father of Watt Daniels runs a gambling house in his own home where Negro men gamble with white men, where whisky is sold to white women and Negro men:

"That is the appalling condition that prevailed at Mer Rouge."

That same paper's "Character of Watt Daniels," says:

Here is what one Mer Rouge man had to say:

Newspaper Article States East St. Louis Candidates Are Endorsed.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 23.—The Post Dispatch today publishes an article that the East St. Louis, Ill., branch of the Ku Klux Klan has endorsed a candidate for mayor of that city and candidates for four city commissioners in the primary election to be held next Tuesday. 2-24-23

The article says the klansmen predict "they are going to make a clean sweep of things" and have exacted certain pledges from candidates desiring their support including:

That all appointments be of Protestants and klansmen, if possible; that the chief of police be a Protestant; and that proposed appointments be submitted to committee of klansmen before being made.

That candidates for mayor and eight for commissioners will be nominated Tuesday and the election will be in April.

K. L. L. ACTIVE IN ST. LOUIS

Joseph A. Downing Of New York, One Of The "Imperial Eye," Seen In Hotel Lobby Gives Out A Bit Of Information. St. Louis, Mo. 2-23-23

A little more light has been thrown upon the identity and activities of the so-called anti-Ku Klux Klan organization known as the L. L. L., during the past week.

It was learned a few days ago that a secret meeting of the L. L. L., was being held in the neighborhood of Jefferson and Pine.

A reporter for the Argus in quest for more information on the subject found a man in the dining room of the Y. M. C. A., who, after some questioning, admitted that he was one of the chief organizers or as his official title one of the "Imperial Eyes." He said his principal work is to watch over the Colored people in the United States.

When asked his identity, he produced a card bearing the name "Joseph A. Downing." At the bottom left corner of the card in fine print was, "Imperial Eyes." He said he was a former resident of New York, but was devoting all of his time to the L. L. L. When asked what was meant by L. L. L., he refused to state, adding, "You will know later."

Mr. Downing said that St. Louis had been selected as one of the Central points of activities of the new organization and branch headquarters would be established here soon. And while it is understood that he has been in St. Louis for sometime, yet he would not tell where he was stopping, nor would he tell but little of his activities, except to say, "We are getting stronger every day." Correspondence, he said, would always reach him addressed to "Box 500, Edwardsville, Ill." Most of the work is done through personal touch.

At present, according to Downing there are ten white members to one colored. Membership is open to all nationalities.

Kansas City, Mo., October 22.—A temporary restraining order preventing the Knights of the Kamelia from holding future meetings here was granted Monday by Judge E. E. Porterfield.

W. F. Zumbrunn, Kansas City attorney representing the national order of the Ku Klux Klan, asked for the restraining order in filing charges against William Joseph Simmons, former imperial wizard and other former officials of the hooded organization, charging they formed a conspiacy to sell the klan secrets to the Kamelia.

The plaintiffs furnished bond of $500 pending the return hearing on October 29.

White Men Are Arrested For Threatening Negroes In Mo.

NEGRO COTTON GROWER WANTED IN MISSOURI

CHARLESTON, Mo., January 31.—A Colored farmer of the O'Bryans Landing neighborhood brought word to Charleston, a few days ago, that he had been threatened for locating in that neighborhood. On the night preceding, a bundle of switches, a stick of dynamite and a note which warned the colored man, Gayward Burkley, that he would not be allowed to stay down there, was left on the porch of the cabin he was inhabiting.

Information filed by Prosecuting Attorney, J. C. McDowell resulted in warrants being issued for the arrest of Jack Bundy, Will Farmer, Carl Brashears and Sam Smith. Their arrest followed and these men were brought to Charleston and the three latter placed in jail. the former Jack Bundy, was released because there was no evidence of his being connected with the affair.

Brashears, it is reported, turned state's evidence and implicated Smith and Farmer. They readily confessed to their part in the plot to drive the Negro out of that locality. All three testified to Bundy not being indicated, but Smith and Farmer both allege that Brashears hatched up the plot, brought the switches, dynamite and the note to their homes and awakened them after 12 o'clock Saturday morning. He did not go with them to the home of Burkley but Smith and Farmer went. Smith says that he did not go up to the porch but that Farmer placed the note, dynamite and switches on the porch. This was said in Farmer's presence and he acknowledged it to be true.

The warning in the note was 'don't you know that we don't allow niggers down here?' Smith says that he does not know whether Brashears wrote the note or not but that he delivered it to him (Smith) and made both men firmly declare that they would not divulge any information to anyone. In the words of Smith Brashears said they must "LET IT DIE IN THEIR BODY."

Men Regret Action

Both Smith and Farmer regret their action and seemingly would be content that Negroes could live in that locality so far as they are concerned and say they permitted Brashears to persuade them to enter the plot and loudly denounce him for doing so and turning state's evidence.

The charges preferred, according to the information, is that Bundy, Smith Brashears and Farmer did unlawfully by force and threats of violence to the person of Gayward Burkley, attempt to compel him to abandon his occupation of farming. They gave Burkley 24 hours to get out of that community, so the note stated. Brashears made bond and was released. Farmer and Smith are still incarcerated in the county jail.

Colored Man, Cotton Grower

Gayward Burkley is a colored cotton grower who has just recently located here for the purpose of raising cotton. He is a tenant of Fred Hurst on the O'Bryan farm at O'Bryan's Landing. Mr. Hurst plans to put 700 acres to cotton. The Negro, Burkley, after finding the switches, notes and dynamite on his porch, said that he related his find to three white men, who were Farmer, Smith and one of the other men Bundy or Brashears. Upon his telling them of it, he said that they looked at one another knowingly and as if they were aware of the afct, but made no reply.

Business Men Aroused

The unlawful acts against the Negro settling in Mississippi county for the purpose of raising cotton will meet the disapproval of the business element throughout the county and every effort will be made to find the guilty parties wherever they be or whenever they try to intimidate men and cause them to leave.

Any acts of this kind or similar should be reported to the proper officials and steps will immediately be taken to arrest the offenders and proper punishment meted out to them.

This county is turning to cotton this year with the hopefulness that seldom is felt in a community that knows its soils to be as rich as anywhere on earth. They have tried grains for many years and during the past few years they have found that the grain crops are made at a loss to the landowner and to the tenant. This being so ,it is purposed to grow cotton as a salvation to the farmer in a financial way and the element in the county which have the welfare of the county at heart will not tolerate unlawful acts by anyone if money, time and officials can prevent.

Just before Christmas, some persons shot into the home of a colored person by the name of Wilson, on the J. L. Rynearson farm. Detectives from the Wm. J. Burns Detective Agency sent two of their operatives down here, presumably sportsmen coming down to hunt. As a result of this hunt, one man and a boy by the name of Ivy, were arrested on a similar charge as were the four men above mentioned. Both of these gave bond for thier appearance at circuit court next month as has Brashear. These trials are expected to come up in February. In the case of Wilson, however, there was an explosion of dynamite near his home. It was reported that dynamite was placed on the porch of the Rynearson home, but this is believed untrue.

No effort will be spared to ferret out all who shall commit these overt acts. Officials are alert and will diligently seek the offenders and faithfully discharge their duties and in this they will be encouraged in a substantial manner by the business men of the county. The employment of detectives, if necessary, will be done to find out the guilty ones, as was done during the holidays down about Wolf Island. The business element of the county, and this includes landowners of all degrees, are looking forward to a better county in a financial way and they will not tolerate unlawfulness or the sacrifice of business to the whims of those who are antagonistic to the colored man.

Colored Cotton Growers Wanted

The colored man from the south is a cotton grower. Expense, time and efforts have been put forth to induce this class of farmer to come to Mississippi County. Now that they have arrived and are arriving at rapid rate, they should be protected and there is no doubt but that they will be. Complete confidence is had in the officials and the colored farmer has the assurance of protection which is all that he desires to locate among us and pursue his peaceful occupation.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN

As we stated last week, the record of the present Board of Aldermen, as to how they voted, or refused to vote on the Ku Klux Klan is herewith published.

Those who refused to vote on the original resolution are: Gus A. Baur, Alfred Bergmann, Ralph H. Eilers, John Fett, Chas. A. Groeschel, Joseph Heckel, Joseph Hirth, Herman C. Kralemann, Edward Kuhs, Martin D. Lohmann, George Meisinger, Charles A. Numann, August H. Niederluecke, William Otto, Adam Reis, Edward Scholl, Wilber C. Schwartz, Clinton E. Udell William J. Studt, Harry Uhlemeyer, Henry Wander, Edward Wiehe, Samuel L. Wimer. St. Louis Argus - St. Louis - Mo.

It is only fair to state that at the following session of the Board of Aldermen, Edw. L. Kuhs who is now a candidate for the Presidency of the Board, offered a resolution to reconsider the vote which defeated the Ku Klux Klan resolution. This was seconded by Adam Reis. Mr. Kuhs and Mr. Reis explaining that they had thoughtlessly failed to vote for the former resolution, and that they wanted their sentiments on the Klan correctly recorded. 3/2/23

A second vote: ayes—Messrs. Bergmann, Eilers, Hart, Kuhs, Nangle, A. H. Neiderluecke, Wm. F. Neiderluecke, Otto, Reis, Schwartz, Studt, Watts, Wimer and Presdent Aloe.

Those refusing to vote a second time thus finally defeating the anti-Ku Klux Klan Resolution, here they are:

GUS BAUR	FOURTEENTH WARD
JOHN FETT	ELEVENTH WARD
CHAS. A. GROESCHEL	TWENTY-FOURTH WARD
JOSEPH HECKEL	THIRTEENTH WARD
JOSEPH HIRTH	EIGHT WARD
HERMAN C. KRALEMANN	TWENTY-SECOND WARD

EDWARD SCHOLL	SECOND WARD
WILLIAM TAMME	SIXTH WARD
CLINTON UDELL	TWENTY-THIRD WARD
HARRY UHLEMEYER	FIFTEENTH WARD
HENRY WANDER	SEVENTH WARD
EDWARD WIEHE	FIFTH WARD

The Argus considers that the last named 15 members who after having a chance to vote their real sentiments, have by their vote shown that they were really and truly in sympathy with the Ku Klux Klan.

ST. LOUIS, MO., March 31.—William J. Veach, candidate for mayor in the municipal election at East St. Louis, Ill., next Tuesday, and said by the St. Louis Post-Disptch to have the support of the East St. Lopis branch of the Ku Klux Klan for the mayoralty tonight asserted in a statement that he did not "want the endorsement of that organization."

Veach, who is a commissioner of finance and accounts in the present city administration, in his statement said:

"I most emphatically state that I have never had and will not have any dealings of any kind with the Ku Klux Klan or any of its committees or members. I do not want the endorsement of this organization and now positively and emphatically repudiate any such endorsement as well as the so-called 'invisible empire.'

"Should any such endorsement be made, it will not only be unauthorized and unsolicited but will be malicious political trickery of the most contemptible character, intended only to injure my chances for election as mayor of this city."

The klan is said to be supporting three candidates for city commissionerships in Tuesday's election at which a mayor and four commissioners will be chosen.

Simmons Enjoined On Klan Secrets

Atlanta Georgian 10-23-23

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 22.—William Joseph Simmons and 10 other officers of the Ku-Klux Klan are alleged to have entered into a conspiracy to sell secrets of the order to a competitive organization in a suit filed in the court of Justice Southern here Monday by the klan.

A temporary restraining order preventing the Knights of Kamelia, a competitive order named, from imparting secrets of the klan was granted.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923

The Klan is the first organization of any note that has ever classed any sort of white folks with Negroes, and this seems to be the great sin. We are at a loss to understand why the Klan believes that Catholics and Jews are the only white people it thinks worthy to such an assignment.

We believe that if the K. K. K. would declare its allegiance to the Roman Pontiff every Catholic would join its ranks in twenty-four hours. We believe that if the Klan would reject the Christian religion and adopt Moses, all the Jews would rush into the fold. This, to our notion, is sorry opposition.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

The Klan is against us under a hood. The others without the hood. 9-17-23

All secret societies limit their membership to certain classes. The Knights of Columbus exclude all but Catholics. The Jewish societies exclude all but the seed of Abraham. The accusation that the Klan stands for lawlessness has been made against the Knights of Columbus, the Jewish societies and even against the church and the Masonic fraternity, as well. The evidence that these all did engage in unlawful acts is quite as convincing as that against the Klan.

St. Louis, Missouri

The Klan is no more un-American—that is, un-protestant—than the Catholic societies and others. The Clarion is as much opposed to the one as the other, for none of them have espoused our cause. None of them have in their charter one word of encouragement for us. They are all unalterably opposed to us as a race. All of them are with the Klan when it comes to "segregating and Jim Crowing the Negro." They may agree on other matters. As we see it, they all agree on humiliating the Negro. If the Klan would make its slogan "Keep only the Negro down," it would be adopted instantly by all the others and the Klan knows this. Any other motive it claims for existence is camouflage. It was originally brought into being by the breath of hatred for the Negro and its revival is evidence that the Negro is still to be prosecuted.

Ku Klux in Cabinet of the Mayor

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 23.—Many citizens rubbed their eyes and pinched themselves, as it were, when they read Tolerance recently, which gave the names of seven men alleged to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, who are on the city's payroll.

Like "warding the lion in his den" Tolerance points its finger at Clinton H. Fiske, director of streets and sewers, room 32[illegible] City hall, and who resides at 5142 Westminster Pl., and lists his name among others as a member of the "Invisible Empire."

Defender Chicago, Ill. 11-24-23

As director of streets and sewers Col. Fiske is a member of Mayor Kiel's cabinet and wields a deal of influence over the mayor. He was manager of Kiel's campaign when the mayor ran for his third term.

Among the other names reported in Tolerance as being members of the Klan are:

William Dever, deputy coroner room 224 Municipal building. Resides 2649a Utah.

Benj. Eyerman, foreman, street department. Resides 3417 Oregon Ave.

J. W. Joyut, clerk for police headquarters. Resides 3836a Shaw Ave.

Tolerance further states that the sheriff's office is a little "Invisible Empire" in itself. Most of the men are Klansmen.

MAN ADMITS SENDING WIFE K. K. K. LETTER

St. Louis Globe Democrat

John Oliver Beck, 23 years old, 763 North Euclid avenue, admitted sending his estranged wife, Helen, a threatening letter, which he signed "K. K. K.," following his arrest at 7:45 o'clock last night.

Beck stated that he had been separated from his wife for some time and had struck upon the novel idea of sending her a threatening letter in order to scare her into returning to him. 10-16-23

The letter, he said, was mailed Saturday and was received by Mrs. Beck at her home, 5576 Wells avenue, yesterday. She immediately suspected her husband and communicated with police. Beck was arrested at Seventh and Olive streets by Detective Sergeant William Ryan.

The letter was written in red and blue ink and was embellished with a dagger and two skulls flanking the word "warning." It read: "Better do right or we'll get after you, and if we get after you it won't be healthy." It was signed "K. K. K."

Police did not determine whether or not Beck is a member of the Ku Klux Klan. He is held for federal authorities.

The spokesman, who is alleged to have been recognized as one of the members of the mob which lynched Flowtow, denounced Northern labor agents, who have been luring the farmers away. He characterized them as scalawags and frauds. Another speaker went so far as to offer a reward of $500 if it could be proved that any member of the Klan had ever threatened or molested a colored man.

After begging the hearers not to listen to the voice of the "agitators who were attempting to lure them from their friends, the Southerners" the Klansmen deposited an offering in the collection plate and departed.

Note Sent to Negro Educator at Shelby Signed "K. K. K." Forgery Charge.

QUITMAN, Miss., July 21.—The Ku Klux Klan of Quitman has given to the press a notice in which klansmen severely arraign certain persons who sent threatening communications to J. M. Williamson, a negro educator of Shelby, Miss., who was to have spoken at the county courthouse here Wednesday night.

It is said that two young men in a Ford car carried a note to Williamson threatening him with violence if he appeared at the courthouse and that the note was signed "K. K. K." In consequence thereof the meeting was held in a negro church. The communication did not have the seal of the klan affixed to it, and according to notice from the klan it was conceived in the minds of "unscrupulous enemies of the klan and good government, in a manner to make it appear that it emanated from the klan." All citizens, and especially klansmen, are called upon to assist the duly constituted officers in seeing that the guilty party is convicted and sent to the penitentiary.

And made the slaves a showman.

But oh! What change has taken place
Since Abe went home to star-land!

Another Negro Church Visited and Kindly Words Spoken.

SARDIS, Miss., Aug. 27.—Evidently the negroes of Panola County are not afraid of the Ku Klux Klan. Believing that good results were to be obtained from the klan visit to a negro church last Sunday, it was by special request of the members of Harmonious Church, one of the leading congregations in the county, about eight miles west of Sardis, that a delegation of the Sardis klan visited that place this morning. They bore with them a message of good will and friendliness, and assured the colored folks that the klan had nothing to do with the propaganda than was being spread among them and trying to induce them to go north. The article in this morning's Commercial Appeal, regarding the 27 negroes sent to the county farm in Milwaukee, was read to them, and made a considerable impression. Leaving a substantial reminder on the collection plate, the visitors retired with the good wishes of the congregation and pastor.

Frank A. Scott, Anti-Klan, Elected Sheriff of Warren.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Aug. 30.—The recent elections in Warren County attracted considerable attention due to the fact that it was really a test of strength between the Ku Klux and anti-Ku Klux forces in the county

That the klan lacks a good deal of dominating the county is attested by the fact that Frank A. Scott, the anti-klan candidate for sheriff, was successful in his race, securing a majority of 864.

Candidates either members of the klan or sponsored by the order were brought out for nearly every Warren County office. Most of the races were settled in the first primary, but both sides girded up their loins for a showdown in the second primary.

Klan and anti-klan was the only real issue involved locally, and the situation had a considerable effect on other races.

Whitfield leaders state that their candidate would have received more votes in Warren save for the local fight.

Holton, former school teacher in Warren, received a majority in this county in the first primary. Word went about that he had received the klan indorsement in Warren and he lost the county in the second primary in the race for the commissioner of agriculture job by 538 majority.

However, the klan met some minor success, electing two of the five supervisors, these two, according to general report, having received the klan indorsement. These two men, Wood Lanier and Charles Powers, are from the Fourth and Third districts, respectively, the former supervisors being ousted. The klan in Warren County is reported to be strongest in these two districts.

It is understood the klan will continue their political activities and will have a ticket in the city election next year.

Spectacular Kuklux Affair Feature of the State Fair.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 15.—Promptly according to schedule, the big state fair was opened here at noon today with an unusually large first day crowd in attendance. The information bureau established in the Royal Hotel for the purpose of assigning guests who are staying over to lodgings, reported an active day and state that they will have no difficulty in finding accommodations for all who cannot get rooms at the hotels.

Today's biggest event was the auto racing between the greatest dare-devil drivers of the country. The drivers participating were: Sig Haugdahl, Fred Horey, Pop Daily, Burr Lumpkin, Ray Chrpool, Zarry D. Stone, E. H. Hood, Geo Sarles, Fred Lecklider and Jack Petticord.

Tomorrow the harness races will begin and tomorrow night the Ku Klux Klan of the state will stage a spectacular parade.

An extra force of special police has been put on for the week with instructions to give close attention to any attempted violation of the liquor laws and suspicious characters of every description.

The Mississippi State Fair is not a private corporation or joint stock company, it is owned and run by the city of Jackson on state property and is not run for a profit making proposition. All of the money taken in goes into premiums and overhead expenses and if a net profit accrues it goes into the fund for the next fair. It is operated in the interest of the people of the entire state and for the advancement of the industrial, commercial, agricultural and educational interests of the people.

Visitors were few. About noon the sun appeared and there was a promise of a clear afternoon, that those conditions did not last long and there was almost continuous rain until nearly night. The only satisfaction that Jackson and the fair management got out of the storm is that the almost stifling dust of Monday was laid.

Tuesday was on the official program as Ku Klux Klan Day, with two addresses by Imperial Wizard Evans of Atlanta, a parade to start from back of the fair grounds at 7 o'clock, passing through the principal streets of the city and back to the fair grounds in time for the second speaking, but the open celebration was called off because of the mud and water, and Mr. Evans spoke at the Century tonight.

Announcement of the sudden death of Congressman B. G. Humphreys at his home in Greenville was received here with expressions of regret, for it is conceded that there was no more popular man in the state. The fact he represented his district in the House for more than twenty years, and that his last two nominations and election were without opposition, bore testimony to his popularity. Mr. Humphreys could have been elected senator or governor if he had consented to make the races, but he preferred to remain where he was.

A number of Delta men are mentioned as a possible successor, among them being Oscar Johnson, Walt Sillers, Earl Brewer and Judge Percy Bell.

A number of the foremost negro citizens of Mississippi including Dr. S. D. Redmond, W. L. Mhoon, Wesley Crayton, J. W. Washington, R. P. Williams, A. M. Redmond, Eugene Booze, Isiah Montgomery, L. K. Atwood, and others have issued a call for a Republican state mass meeting at Jackson, October 24, for memorializing and petitioning the Republican national committee which meets in Chicago, the first Monday of December next, to reconsider and rescind their action in reducing Mississippi's representation in National conventions from twelve to four delegates, and to restore Mississippi and other Southern states to their former just and rightful quota of delegates to all Republican national conventions hereafter, and to attend to such other business as may come up. All Republicans are invited to participate.

Burglars pried off a window bar of Hunts Pawn Shop, corner Farish and Hamilton streets, last night and relieved the cash register of one hundred dollars. Several suspects are being watched by the police, but there have been no arrests.

The United States Civil Service commission announces that examinations will be held November 10 to fill the position of postmaster at Arcola, Calhoun City, Durant, Holcomb, Houlka, Lauderdale, Mendenhall, Okolona, Pass Christian, Pelahatchie, Picayune, Pickens, Shannon, Shubuta, Sumner, Tchula and Wiggins. This examination is under special executive order.

Praise Work of Rev. Fisher in Canton Revival.

Commercial Appeal

CANTON, Miss., Nov. 8.—Last night's services marked the closing of a three weeks revival meeting that has been conducted at the First Methodist Church here by Rev. Albert F. Fisher of Fort Smith, Texas. Rev. Fisher will leave today for his home for a few weeks rest before going to Pawnee, Okla., where he expects to conduct a meeting.

Memphis

The meeting just closed here resulted in the addition of about 50 members to the roll of the Methodist Church. Rev. Fisher has preached twice each day for the past three weeks, and in addition to this has conducted the song service. Mrs. Fisher presided at the piano.

11-9-23

At last night's service, just following the taking of a free will offering for the evangelist, and while the choir was singing, 10 representatives of the Ku Klux Klan, in full regalia, filed into the church and handed Rev. Fisher an envelope which contained a check for $200 from the local klan and a letter commending the evangelist upon the splendid work done by him here.

KLAN PARADE AT CLARKSDALE.

Commercial Appeal

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Oct. 23.—Rumors are afloat that there will be a mammoth Ku Klux Klan parade here next Saturday night, Oct. 23, with a number of noted speakers famous for klannish activities in the program. The parade is scheduled to start from the courthouse beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Should this event occur it will be the first that has been staged in this immediate section. The strength of the order here is not known, but its existence in this city was established as a fact a few months ago when a donation was made by the klan to the Clarksdale Hospital. It has been claimed that the local organization is one of the strongest in the state.

Two Hundred Initiated Under Flaming Cross on Coast.

Gulfport, Miss., Nov. 11.—Thousands of Gulfport citizens watched 1200 members of the Ku Klux Klan parade through the business section of the city Saturday night on their way to the Carter Athletic park where 200 members were initiated under a flaming cross. About 500 klansmen arrived in Gulfport from Hattiesburg and Wiggins in a special train over the Gulf and Ship Island railroad and large numbers also came from points between Pascagoula and Logtown.

The delegation that came on the special train included about fifty women in regalia who marched behind the men. The men initiated in the order came from various sections of South Mississippi.

10-24-23

Clarksdale, Miss., Oct. 23.—A parade in which approximately one thousand Ku Klux Klansmen participated marched through the streets of this city tonight and disbanded at the baseball park where a crowd estimated at five thousand heard Klan leaders deliver addresses.

The celebration was participated in by klansmen from all sections of the Delta. Large delegations were here from Memphis, Helena, Ark., and other towns. The principal speakers were: Rev. William McDougall, of Atlanta, Ga., but originally from Scotland; Mr. Causey, editor of the Tri-State American at Memphis and Colonel Ward, one of the state officers of the klan.

A section of the grandstand was reserved for the negroes, who were given special invitations to attend the meeting. The parade proceeded through the principal streets of the city and in the negro section and after the addresses were delivered the local and visiting klansmen attended a barbecue at the ball park. The parade was the first of its kind ever staged in the city.

NEGROES GET WARNINGS.

Notes to Coldwater Blacks Tell Them Not to Rent Farms.

Commercial Appeal

COLDWATER, Miss., Nov. 22.—Ed Rennix and Walter Porter, negro farmers living two miles from Coldwater, have received a threatening note warning them not to rent the farms they had in view for the coming year. The notes were written with a pencil on cheap paper and were placed in the negroes' mailboxes at night. Both were unsigned, and a comparison of the two showed that they were written by the same person. Vague but threatening language was used and the notes contained a complaint that the negroes were boosting land rent.

These two negroes are among the best negro citizens of this section and feeling among their white friends is running high. Both are peaceable and law abiding, and they are good farmers. The effort to drive away the highest class of negro labor pust at this time is especially unfortunate because of the shortage of farm labor that already exists.

Ed Rennix is a tenant on the farm owned by E. S. Mosby of Hernando. He had contracted to farm the same land another year, but he has asked his landlord to release him and will leave the place. Walter Porter, who lives half a mile away on the Boone plantation, had rented a farm from C. B. Hawkins of Coldwater but he, too, has asked to be released from his trade. Another negro family is leaving the Mosby place because of the threats, and the landlords are said to be making efforts to learn who sent the threatening notes.

KU-KLUX KLAN KOLUMN

Saturday Blade

TWENTY citizens from among whom the grand jury will be selected to investigate the activities of hooded bands in and near Bastrop, La., have been named by the Morehouse parish jury commission. The panel was selected without regard to religious, social or fraternal affiliations and the twelve men who will make up the grand jury will be selected March 5.

Attorney General A. V. Coco has stated that none of the grand jury proceedings will be made public and if indictments are returned the public will not know about them until arrests are made. The grand jury will report to District Judge Fred M. Odom. 2/24/23

In the meantime reports from Bastrop indicate a breach in the parish Ku Klux Klan following the revelations made in the open hearing on the kidnaping of F. Watt Daniels and T. F. Richards by a hooded mob. There is evidence that the power of Capt. J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops, designated by the attorney general as the czar of the community, is on the wane, his administration being blamed by some for the trouble in which the Klan now finds itself. It is admitted that the future of the Klan in the Bastrop district is at stake in the forthcoming grand jury investigation and even if sentiment were strong enough to depose Skipwith from his leadership such action probably would be deferred until the local investigation has been finished.

Chicago, Ill.

Blames Medical Students.

While Bastrop awaits the second investigation of the Daniels-Richards murder, a sensational statement comes from Idaho Falls, Idaho, where Dr. Lew Burger of New York, speaking in an open meeting of the Ku Klux Klan, asserted that the two bodies found in Lake Lafourche were placed there by medical students from a New Orleans college. Dr. Burger asserted that the bodies were not those of Daniels and Richards.

Another statement in which the Klan is absolved from any part in the Bastrop atrocity comes from Wichita, Kan., where Z. A. Harris, a national organizer for the Klan told an audience of about 5,000 persons that the charges made against the Klan in Morehouse parish, Louisiana, are false and that "Governor Parker knows they are not true." Harris said the Bastrop hearing was the result of a conspiracy against the Klan.

Ban Off Anti-Klan Publication.

Judge Ira Ryner of Chicago has lifted the ban against the publication of Tolerance, the anti-Ku Klux Klan publication, which had been imposed when the affairs of the publication company came before his court. An agreement was affected between Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell and Grady K. Rutledge, president of the publishing company, and representatives of the warring factions, to resume publication in order to maintain the circulation.

Hearing of the petition filed by Rutledge and Lionel Moise, co-editor of the paper, against Robert E. Shepherd, treasurer of the American Unity League, to determine the legal control of the magazine are progressing before Judge Ryner and a decision is expected at an early date.

Klan Files Answer in Kansas.

The Ku Klux Klan has filed its answer to the ouster suit brought by the State in the Kansas Supreme Court. The Klan makes a sweeping denial of all the charges made by the State, asserting that the Klan is "purely a social, secret, benevolent and eleemosynary" organization, opposing mob violence, intimidation or threats, and believing in law enforcement by and thru the constituted authorities. The petition says that the Klan renders highest allegiance to the Government of the United States and has no agents or employes in the State of Kansas. The answer denies that the seven defendants named in the State's petition are, or ever were members of the Klan. The men named are W. J. Robinson, H. Ballard, Thomas E. Daly, Bruce Hinkle, Richard Martin, W. D. McCrab and Noebel C. McCall.

Klan Greeting for Shriner.

James S. McCandless of Honolulu, Imperial Shrine Potentate of North America, was dozing contentedly in his Pullman car on his way to Mobile when the train was brought to a sudden, jerky, shrieking stop several miles out of Mobile. He was almost catapulted from his seat by the shock. Masked, white-robed figures filed into the car and approached the potentate's seat. The car was filled with the odor of tar while feathers swirled around like a blizzard. The masked men took McCandless from the car and carried him in an automobile, also bearing a hooded license, to a lonely spot outside of the city. It all turned out to be part of the program, arranged for the official visit to Abba Temple of the Mystic Shrine in honor of the distinguished visitor. The Imperial Potentate was entertained at a sea-food luncheon following the "K. K. K." stunt and later at a public reception.

Preacher Refuses to Quit.

"I'll stand by my guns, Ku Klux or no Ku Klux."

This was the Rev. W. B. Harvey's challenge following receipt of several anonymous letters and telephone calls warning him to leave his church in Newport, Ky., because of recent "pro-Klan utterances."

In a recent Sunday sermon, the Rev. Mr. Harvey denounced the Catholic church and permitted a hooded orator to preach from his pulpit.

A large sign asked a blessing on the Klan if it could rid Newport of undesirables which Harvey had erected in front of the Baptist church was smashed.

T. R., Jr., Scores Klan.

The Ku Klux Klan is a brutally intolerant group, hostile to American ideals, in the opinion of Theodore Roosevelt, assistant Secretary of the Navy.

The son of "Teddy" swung his father's big stick straight at all enemies of free speech, racial and religious toleration and personal liberty in a Lincoln day address before the National Republican Club in New York City.

"Liberty means the right to free speech," Secretary Roosevelt said. "Free speech is a prime essential in our country."

Klan Legislation.

The Ohio House of Representatives has declared itself against the State attempting to regulate activities of secret organizations by a vote of 26 to 81, defeating a bill requiring secret organizations other than those organized for purely social purposes to file a list of officers with the Secretary of State and keep a list of members open for inspection.

At Raleigh, N. C., the Milliken bill, designed to unmask the Ku Klux Klan and make the membership roll of all secret fraternal orders public, has been passed by the House of Representatives by a vote of 63 to 44.

GREENVILLE MAN OUT ON ANTI-KLAN TICKET

Commercial Appeal Memphis, Tenn.

H. P. Farish Announces for County Attorney.

2-20-23

GREENVILLE, Miss., Feb. 19.—H. P. Farish, former representative and senator in the Legislature, announced his candidacy for county attorney of Washington County on an anti-klan platform as follows:

To the Democratic Voters of Washington County:

"The matter of becoming a candidate for prosecuting attorney of Washington County has been urged upon me a number of times by various citizens of the county. Recently formal requests of the same nature have been presented to me signed by several hundred qualified electors. I have thus far withheld a definite reply to all requests, not through any lack of appreciation, but solely that I might have time in which to give the matter the serious and mature consideration which its importance both justifies and demands.

"In the estimation of those who would seek my election, the chief law enforcing officer of the county should not be identified with any secret, oathbound political organization. Regardless of my decision as to my own candidacy for the office, after mature deliberation, I personally share this opinion.

"Regardless of differences of opinion as may honestly exist as to the numerous and varied activities of the Ku Klux Klan in other fields, it seems to me that there is no room for disagreement when we consider the klan as a political organization. That the klan is in politics can no longer be denied by anybody, member or no member, who will take the trouble to investigate this aspect of the matter as thoroughly as I have. And I may say right here that if I did not personally know, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the active leadership of the klan had determined to make their secret power felt politically as well as in others ways.

"The most sinister influence which can possibly enter as a factor into our political life is one which works under cover of darkness, which cloaks its actions with oaths and mystery, which denies the very fact of its own objects and operations and causes those who promote its purposes to betray even friendship, if necessary, to conceal identity. That the Ku Kluk Klan supports men for office by just such devious and indefensible methods and practices that it does not permit its members even to discuss their membership, are matters no longer open to question. That its leaders have determined to seek the accomplishment of their end, whatever those ends may be, through the secret control of political power, secretly exercised, is scarcely denied by the bolder among them.

"It is equally apparent that in a number of counties also the klan is to try its strength at the coming August primaries. Its success or failure may possibly determine its future political course. The question, therefore, immediately before the people of Washington County is not one of Ku Klux Klan objects, good or bad; of Ku Klux Klan principles, high or low; of Ku Klux Klan internal activities, helpful or harmful. It is something much more simple, much more easily ascertained, yet much more vital than any of these. It is a question of Ku Klux Klan government—of Ku Klux Klan political control.

"The issue has at last become thus clearly defined. It is not one of religious creed; it is not one of race; it is not one even of law and order. It is paramount to all of these. It is one of elemental Americanism, of fundamental democracy, of the perpetuity of our political system and institutions. It is on this issue alone that I am willing to make this race. No less an issue than that of the secret political domination of our country would induce me to enter such a contest.

"I may add in conclusion that just as there is no word of bitterness, harshness or abuse in this statement, so, upon my part, will there be none in this campaign. It cannot be charged against me that I have injected political discord into the lives of our people. I am simply refusing to run away from or to be intimidated by an issue created by an organization which sooner or later has brought trouble and sorrow, heart burnings and broken friendships into every community in America in which it seeks secretly to regulate and control.

"This I am doing, with no intention of now beginning an active campaign. I shall alter my decisions in this regard only if I am forced to do so by the secret activities of others. I am not the candidate of any sect, clique, faction or group. I am running solely on my own responsibility. I shall conduct my own campaign in my own way. I am running solely to afford the people of this county an opportunity to register their convictions on what I believe to be the paramount issue of government which confronts them today. If elected I shall be under no obligations to anybody, anywhere, except to the people of my own county, and my only oath will be my oath of office."

MUMMERY OF KLAN'S RITUAL IS REVEALED

Leroy Percy Shows Sham Pretensions, Deceit, Hypocrisy

HAS BROUGHT ONLY STRIFE

Community Spirit and Fellowship Feeling Being Twisted Awry and Hatred and Dissension of Klan Substituted, Says Speaker.

Commercial Appeal Memphis, Tenn.

GREENVILLE, Miss., April 28.—Probably the greatest political meeting ever held in Washington County was that at the People's Theater here under the auspices of the Protestant organiaztion opposed to the Ku Klux Klan. It was a great meeting from the standpoint of interest manifested and from attendance, which amounted to fully 1,500 persons. Dr. J. D. Smythe, chairman of the Protestant organization, presided, and presented the speaker of the evening, Hon. LeRoy Percy, who delivered an address almost two and one-half hours long, which was listened to with rapt attention by the entire audience. It was undoubtedly one of the most effective political addresses ever made in this community.

No report of the speech can be full enough to convey the entire message delivered. The speech divided itself naturally into two parts, the first being an appeal to the officers and members of the Ku Klux Klan, and the second ridicule of the klan, "its sham pretentions, and the mummery of its ritual."

Commends Parker's Stand.

Some of the points covered by the speech were:

The speaker supposed that he had been invited to speak by the Protestant anti-klan committee because recently the fight of the klan had been indicated by the slogan "P-P-P," which translated meant "Parker-Pope-Percy," and possibly it was thought that he should be given an opportunity to reply to these attacks. This he declined to do, saying that he had not been commissioned to defend Gov. John M. Parker, who needed no defense at his hands, that he had known him all of his life, had known his mother and his grandmother, who lived on Deer Creek in this county when he was a boy, and that Parker was a gallant Christian gentleman engaged in trying to bring a lawless band of criminals to justice, in which effort all good citizens should wish him God speed. As to the Catholic Church, the speaker stated that England's most brilliant historian had said of it a hundred years ago that its history stretched back into the dim twilight of fable, that it was great and respectable before Saxon set foot on Britain, before the Frank had crossed the Rhine, when Grecian eloquence was still flourishing in Antioch and idols were still worshipped in the temple of Mecca. That during its life the church had faced many a foe and possibly felt that it needed no defender in this mimic warfare, at least it had not called upon him for aid.

As to the personal attacks which had been made upon him, the speaker said that if any man would stand and charge him by word or deed with having during his whole life wronged Washington County, or any man, woman or child in it, he would make him fair answer, and not in anger, but that he scorned to stand before a Washington County audience and defend himself against irresponsible, unfathered slanders; that a man who would slander another's character would stab him in the back, if he had courage enough to be an assassin.

He said the only concrete charge we had heard of against him was that he had been the boss of Washington County long enough, that the exalted cyclops of the county, who once had deemed his friendship worth while, was reported to have said of him at a klan meeting in Leland, referring to him as the "Big Cheese," that the day of kings had passed; but if the day for kings had passed, the day for wizards to control Washington County would never come. He said if it had been true that he had been boss of Washington County that he would have been proud of the job. It was the cleanest, most respected and had once been the most united county in Mississippi.

All Thanked Same God.

He then stated that the last time he had addressed a Washington County audience was at the community service held in the theater at Greenville to return thanksgiving for deliverance from the flood of the Mississippi River less than 12 months ago; that all denominations were present and a pastor from every church was on the platform; that they returned thanks to the same God, for deliverance from a common peril; that the community feeling was stronger in Washington County than probably in any section of the country; common peril had driven the people closer together; that if religion was that kind of service of man to fellowman, then by that standard this had been a truly religious community, and a man felt as he walked down the street that behind the door of every house, whether owned by Jew, Gentile, Protestant or Catholic, was a friend; that he wished for no better epitaph when he joined those who had gone before him than "He lies among his friends." That it was hard looking back through the mist of hatred and dissension which had been created by the Ku Klux Klan, to visualize the community feeling of a year ago, that where there had been love and friendship, there was hatred, division and dissension, division in the churches, in the civic life of the community, in the social life and business, which paralyzed the spirit of co-operation. That all this arose out of the Ku Klux Klan and the discussion of it; that these discussions had been brought about by the speech of Col. Camp, paid lecturer of the klan, delivered in this county last year, against which many had protested and made every effort to prevent its being made, realizing the trouble which it would bring upon the community.

Makes Appeal for Klan Removal.

He had no anger for the personal attacks made upon himself, he said, but by what had been done to the community he had been angered and grieved. And then in an earnest manner he appealed to klansmen, those who had brought this among us and who alone could take it out, to take from our midst this thing which had brought these changed conditions in community life. He appealed to the exalted cyclops by name, as having said on several occasions that by the stroke of a pen he could disband the klan. He appealed to him as a home boy, honored his people, possessing the confidence and esteem of the community, and said that if he, the speaker, had the power by the stroke of a pen to take this thing which had brought such dissension and strife into the community out of it, the only reason why he would fail to do it would be that his hand had fallen palsied and withered by his side. He appealed to the individual members of the klan, making part of the men who had shared in its fortunes, warp and woof of this community, its dangers and its prosperity, stating that many of them might have gone into the klan through the best of motives, but every one of them must realize what it had done to this community and that it was a mistake. He pleaded with them to quit the klan and to come back to their father's house, saying that if they did so, while no fatted calf might be killed in their honor, the right hand of fellowship and friendship and forgiveness would be extended to them.

Klan Forcing Negro Exodus.

He then touched on the labor situation, the uneasiness that the Klan created among the negroes, not that the Klan intended to hurt the negro this he did not believe to be the case but that it was difficult to make the negroes realize this and the labor agents did not tell them this; that it had been a contributing cause to the increase of restlessness among the negroes, and he referred to Simmons suggestion that the Klan should solve this negro problem as being similar to placing a band of wolves in charge of a flock of sheep. They might be good wolves, but you could not make the sheep realize it, and those of the sheep which did not die of fright would show you what a sheep could do when his mind was just set on running. And he urged them to get rid of the Klan so that as a united people we could say to the negro that this is a safe home for you, and if they then wanted to leave us, as a united people we could build up the country ourselves.

Continuing he said that if Ephraim was joined to his idols, and would not disband, then he warned them, that "We will clean you up from top to bottom," that the people who had brought this thing upon Washington County would never be entrusted with the government of the county." He charged the Klan with the lack of any sense of humor; that the humor was the saving grace of human life, that those not possessing it wander among the foothills of life and think they are walking among the mountain peaks. That this organization claimed to be organized to help enforce the law, and their principal object was to keep Jews and Catholics from holding office. Both the federal constitution and the state constitution provide there shall be no religious qualifications for office.

Existence Contradicts Law.

Seeking to uphold the law, their very existence is founded upon a contradicition of the fundamental laws of the land. He then referred in a humorous vein to the fight at Atlanta between Simmons, the emperor, and Evans, the imperial wizard, and undertook to pass upon the merits of the fight, and submitted to the audience the evidence of Simmons in the court proceedings, as shown by his petition and amended petition and his public statement, and the evidence in favor of Evans. Simmons charged Evans with having corrupted the organization into a government "by black-mail and a spy organization," with having expended $68,000 in the month of March for spies in the Klan to report on other members of the Klan, and with having squandered in eight months $275,000 of the funds of the Klan in traveling in regalia the Klan in traveling in regal body guards.

On the other hand, Evans claimed that Simmons had resigned the Wizardship, and suggested himself that he retire as Emperor with a salary of $1,000 a month and "Papa would sit in the corner and smoke his pipe and talk," and he had no right now to try to come back as Wizard; that the money that he had been trying to raise from organizing klans should go to the klan and not be appropriated by Simmons personally. And the speaker then called in as a third witness the Imperial Klan Kludd, or chaplain, and read the statement from him that Evans had been a person of no importance, had made no success in life, had been unethical in his business and indulged in what he, Evans, called the "spreading of poison meat."

The speaker said that this witness had made him decide in favor of Simmons and now the Washington County klan, which was waiting his decision, would take up the cause of Simmons. He said that the improvement in the klan, its cessation from lawlessness was due to ex-Cyclops Skipwith of Bastrop, and that as Lenine and Trotzky by the horrors of Russia, had saved the world from socialism; so Skipwith with the blood of Watt Daniel and Tom Richards had checked the lawlessness of the klan, had made them realize that the American people would not submit to further violence and lawless deeds. He dwelt especially as fundamental objections to the klan upon the spy system and the concealed identity of the klansmen, which all klansmen admit. Spies upon friends in days gone by among children had been called "tattletales" and by boys "dirty sneaks." That there was no dirtier trade in the world than that of spying upon your acquaintance and friends and reporting their acts and deeds to a secret organization. That Colonel Camp had claimed that the members of the klan went around with their ears and eyes open to report, and Cyclops Toombs had claimed that the spy system was so efficient in Washington County that nothing happened that he did not know it in ten minutes afterwards. That no one could charge the klan with anything worse than being a bunch of spies, of which they boasted.

Men Corrupted by Klan.

He did not call them, as Simmons called them, "a band of blackmailing paid spies," but he objected to walking among men who were spies. And then he dwelt upon the deceit and evasion and hypocrisy by which the members concealed their identity, and he illustrated it by reference to Ray Toombs and Ben Hatch, referring to them, not invidiously, but as two of the best members of the klan, who had been corrupted by the teachings and practices of the klan, that no man could be subservient to these teachings and practices without having his soul scarred, and no man was fit to be trusted with public office who had his sense of right and wrong corrupted by the teachings of the klan.

It has been taught to boys that the thing to do was to tell the truth and fear God; the klan taught that it was not necessary to tell the truth about some things, and he did not know how far the dispensation went.

He read some of the vile literature circulated in regard to the Catholic Church and charged the members of the klan with moral responsibility for its circulation, saying that it was not circulated by the Catholics, nor by the Jews, nor by the anti-klan organization, but circulated for the benefit of the klan to fill men with religious hatred, so that the recruits for the klan might be gained, and that the moral responsibility for this circulation rested upon each and every member of the klan.

Attacks Klan Oath.

He referred to the oath that a klansman takes as disqualifying him from holding office, showing that under the oath, which had been given by Simmons to the congressional committee and printed in the Congressional Record, a klansman entrusted with the secrets of a klansman could not divulge it unless the crime committed was a breach of the klansman's oath, treason to the government, rape or malicious murder. As to other crimes their oath sealed their lips. He said the fight had to be made in this county or the county surrendered to klan government.

He declared that when the German army marched into Belgium there would have been no war if the allies had not fought, but there would have been a cowardly surrender of their principles and country. Government by the klan destroys the fundamental principles of government, destroys trial by jury, guaranteed by every principle of Anglo-Saxon civilization that the officers of the county were the symbols of power of the people and not to be parcelled out by the klan; that officers should be responsible to the whole people who elect them and not to the klan which names them; that no man was fit to be an officer who owed allegiance to the wizard or emperor and was going to be governod or directed by him from Atlanta, and that this is a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and not a government of the klan, by the klan and for the klan; that we would have in this county constitutional government, not klan government; constitutional government, not church government.

He predicted that he would maintain the government which had been handed down to us; that the seat of the government would be Washington, not Atlanta; the head of the government would be the president of the United States and not the emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, and the symbol of the power and majesty of the government would be the flag of the United States, the Stars and Stripes.

PERCY ACCUSES KLAN OF ATTEMPT ON LIFE

Strange Visitor Left Home When Sheriff Arrived.

GREENVILLE, Miss., May 17.—The following letter published in a recent issue of the Greenville Democrat-Times, throws an interesting light on some sinister activities in Washington County. It is from former Senator LeRoy Percy, detailing what he believes was an attempt to lure him to his death. It follows:

May 13, 1923.

Mr. Wm. Ray Toombs, Greenville, Mississippi.

Sir: I wish to bring to your attention an incident which occurred last evening (Saturday) a few minutes before 8 o'clock.

I was in my home with my wife, sister and son, Capt. W. A. Percy. In response to a knock on the door Will went to it. A stranger to him entered and requested to see me. In response to a direct question of my son as to his name he gave the name of Keith of Arcola. Will left him sitting in the sitting room and came in the library and said there was a gentleman who gave his name as Mr. Keith who wished to see me. I went into the sitting room addressed him as Mr. Keith and shook hands with him. He was a rather beefy setup man, possibly from 35 to 40 years old, smooth shaven, dark complected, dressed in a dark suit and was wet. He stated that he wanted me to aid him in getting his car to town, that it had broken down just this side of Fish Lake bridge, that he had left it with his two sisters in it, and had walked to town, that the garage was unwilling to send a service car as he had no money with him and the garage was unwilling to take his check. I at once started to help him. It took several minutes to ascertain from the garage that it could not send out a car, and while I was arranging to let him have my car and probably go with him, Sheriff Nicholson and two friends who had an engagement with me opened the front door. I was surprised that Nicholson did not recognize the man, as he knows nearly everyone in this county, but I hurriedly introduced him and walked to the door for the purpose of stopping the car, thinking that Nicholson had been driven up by his chauffeur and wishing to use the car to help the man. I stepped out on the gallery, and the man, avoiding Nicholson, followed me, stepped off of the gallery and disappeared in the darkness. His entire story was a fabrication.

I believe that he was sent by the Ku Klux Klan, or an official of it, for the purpose of luring me from my home to my personal injury or death. I am writing you as the head of the Klan of this county to ask you:

1. Was this man sent to my home by one of the Klans of Washington County?

2. If so, for what sinister purpose?

3. If he was not an agent of the Washington County Klan, nevertheless you claim that you have a singularly efficient organization so that you are informed within 10 minutes after its occurrence of any incident occurring in this county. Have you any information in regard to this occurrence, and if so, will you give the sheriff the benefit of it?

4. You claim that the Klan has eyes everywhere and knows everything and that its object is to aid officers of the law. Will you co-operate with Sheriff Nicholson through your Klan-agency in the location of this man. I will pay a reward of $100 for any testimony leading to his identification and arrest.

Meridian People See Parade and Initiation For First Time.

Commercial Appeal 18 May 1923

MERIDIAN, Miss., July 4.—Meridian people for the first time witnessed a demonstration by the local Ku-Klux Klan tonight, when more than a thousand white robed men paraded the principal residence and business streets. After winding their line of march through the city the klansmen marched to the Mississippi-Alabama Fair Grounds, where there was a public initiation of a large class of new members. The initiation, like the parade, was witnessed by practically the entire population of Meridian and many thousands of people from the surrounding small towns and rural districts.

OBJECTS TO MOB RULE.

Hernando, Miss., June 29, 1923.

To The Commercial Appeal:

The recent beating and maltreating of the negro Sam Elliott, by a band of masked men should be vigorously condemned by the better and law abiding citizens of Memphis. The better class of people in DeSoto County do not relish the proximity of the lawless element of Memphis bringing their victims across the Mississippi line to punish them. (We do not propose to be the dumping ground for the so-called hooded knights.

There is no friction whatever between the whites and negroes in De Soto County and so far only a small number have left here for other states. As a general thing the negroes in this county are in a healthy, happy and peaceful condition. A few more instances of the above kind and we shall have a real exodus and who shall blame them? Respectfully,

B. E. McINTOSH.

The Klan in Minneapolis

The New Republic 7-11-23

SIR: I was sorry to see the New Republic imposed upon, as it seems to me to have been, by the article in the issue of June 13th, The Klan on Trial, by A. I. Harris. I do not know the writer by name at least but the article bore the earmarks of having been written by a member of the staff of the Daily Star, a paper thoroughly distrusted by honest liberals since it drove out Herbert E. Gaston from its editorial control, and became so mysteriously involved with the enemy that the conservative papers have no unkind word for it.

I have no excuses to make for the Ku Klux Klan and have nothing but condemnation for its secret methods and cowardly attack upon Mayor Leach, but the evident desire of Mr. Harris to whitewash the Mayor and his Chief of Police and to throw obloquy upon the Committee of Thirteen, as well as their backers. is distasteful to honest and intelligent citizens. The Committee of Thirteen is generally understood to be financed by wealthy members of the Civic and Commerce Association, which is a respectable body of citizens, interested in supplementing the more or less inefficient efforts of the police in getting evidence against gambling and other vice.

It is a common impression of those who followed the evidence in the two trials mentioned by Mr. Harris that if the County Attorney had shown half the zeal in securing and using the evidence against the Chief of Police that he used in trying to discredit the Committee of Thirteen and various witnesses against the Mayor in the Klan trial, the verdict in the former trial might have been different. As a matter of fact, in spite of the support of Mayor Leach by former Mayor Thomas Van Lear and the labor forces, Leach has been so discredited that a large number of respectable supporters have been led as a matter of self-respect, to vote for his opponent Campbell, and Leach was elected by only a small majority. Campbell has a fine record as a citizen and legislator and would have been elected, had not Leach been able to persuade many voters that Mr. Campbell was mixed up with Ku Klux Klan which both he and his friends deny.

EDWARD J. BROWN.

Minneapolis.

SIR: My article, The Klan on Trial, was an exposé of the Klan and not a "whitewash" of Mayor Leach.

The charge that the Klan was allied with powerful financial interests which sought to discredit Leach because he had the "audacity" to advocate municipal control and development of power of a high dam has since been fully substantiated. Milton Elrod, editor of the Fiery Cross, official Klan paper, has been compelled to admit the truth of that charge, inferentially naming the secret Committee of Thirteen.

The very thing—the high dam fight—which caused the conservatives who put Leach into office two years ago to turn from him now, caused labor and liberals to flock to his support. And the ultra-conservative Minneapolis Journal, which unquestionably sought to defeat him, was astonished at "the greatest political turnover in the history of the city."

Leach was re-elected by nearly 10,000 majority, with his opponent carrying the "silk stocking" Thirteenth ward. The evidence connecting Campbell with the Klan was conclusive. The Daily Star did not editorially support either candidate.

My friend is careful not to condemn the Klan as an organization, only its secret methods. Is he just a wee, wee bit of a Klan sympathizer himself?

A. I. HARRIS.

MINNESOTA GOES ANTI-KLAN

Minneapolis, Minn., March 30.—The state legislature by a vote of 96 to 2 has gone on record against the Ku Klux Klan, passing the bill introduced by Miss Myrtle Cain (white) prohibiting the public wearing, under certain conditions, of masks or other means of concealment of the identity of persons.

KLAN TO CARRY FIGHT TO COURT

Exalted Cyclops of Minneapolis Chapter Announces Intention to Resist Charter Revocation.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 29.—The Minneapolis chapter of the Ku Klux Klan will go to court to resist revocation of its charter, Roy H. Miner, local exalted cyclops, announced here today at the same time making public a resolution by the local klan expressing "its full confidence" in him.

The local klan defied the men describing themselves as representing the national organization, refused to recognize them as possessing official authority and voted to forbid them admittance to the klan meetings, Miner announced.

Milton Elrod, editor of The Fiery Cross, klan publication at Indianapolis, and Phil Smythe, Ohio attorney, who said they were representing the national body, retorted with a declaration that "the charter of the North Star klan (the Minneapolis chapter) will be rocked." Smythe recently issued a statement declaring that attacks on Mayor George E. Leach, out of which the present controversy grew, were an "infamous outrage" and were committed by certain individuals for political purposes.

Miner and four others were recently convicted of criminal libel in connection with the attacks. He is under a 90-day workhouse sentence.

The statement issued by Elrod and Smythe declared that the action of the klansmen in affirming "confidence in and allegiance to individuals who have at least been connected by inference with the organization and who have been convicted in the courts of the state for the commission of a crime is contrary to the principles and the constitution of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

N Y C CALL

Minnesota Koo Koos

AN article in the current issue of the New Republic on the Ku Klux Klan in Minnesota offers a good portrait of the nightshirt Fascisti in that section. The Klan had distributed a paper containing an affidavit made by a prostitute against Mayor Leach and a trial for libel brought a judgment against five Koo Koos.

More interesting is the coalition of certain black forces, of which the Klan is an associate. It is evident that it proposes to serve as a strikebreaker, thus establishing an alliance with reactionary exploiters. The anti-union employers were interested in "getting" Mayor Leach. Then there is a Committee of Thirteen, which has inherited the baggage of Palmer's wartime American Protective League. The Citizens' Alliance, which has been fighting the unions, has members who have financed the Committee of Thirteen.

Here is a coalition of anti-Jew, anti-Negro, anti-alien, anti-strike, pro-scab, pro-Citizens' Alliance, profiteers and 100 percenters. It is a hate merger, an alliance of morons and skinners in the name of "100 per cent Americanism." The old Russia with its Black Hundreds has a good imitation in Minnesota and there need be no surprise that former czarists look to the United States as their mecca.

CONFESS THEFT OF KLAN IDEAS FROM AFRICANS

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Editor Says Klux Order Is Copied From Ceremonies of Bantu Tribesmen

2-17-23

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 16.—The old familiar saying: "They tell me a Colored man invented that and a white man stole it from him," has been officially endorsed by an editorial in the Detroit Free Press in its issue of January 28, 1923. This paper declares that the modern Ku Klux Klan idea of the American white man is a distinct "steal" from the Bantu tribe in the heart of Africa. Proof of this is contained in the following comment:

Origin of Klan.

"It is a matter of common remark that the Ku Klux Klan furnishes an outlet for certain human tendencies that have shown themselves repeatedly in American history. It is perhaps not so commonly known that similar organizations begin to appear at a very low stage in development of human society, and that ethnologists have studied secret societies in the heart of barbarous Africa that are essentially the same as the Klan. Among the less advanced Bantus, for instance, there are societies which function as governments within the open and tribal government. The members wear masks, just as the white hooded gentry of this country do, and hold gruesome ceremonies in the jungles which are for all the world like the outdoor mysteries of the Ku Klux. Their ostensible purpose is to maintain law and order, but they degenerate into persecutory and blackmailing gangs. Among the people of the Pacific islands there are or have been similar organizations and the North American and Mexican Indians also had masked secret fraternities.

"But it is curious that the black African organizations should so closely resemble the Ku Klux Klan. Indeed the similarity of the two suggests that white men may have obtained some of their ideas of the Klan from southern Negroes who retained memories of African clans just as they remembered their native myths and folk stories.

Has Primitive Ideals.

"Considering their attitude toward the Negro, it is a safe surmise that the brethren of the Klan will not accept this hypothesis gracefully, but whether they do or not, one inference which arises from the widespread nature of their institutional theories among low savages cannot be escaped. The Klan is a throwback, as the breeders say, to a primitive ancestral state. The Klan carries on as it does, for the same reason the mule, taking after the wild ass of the desert, sometimes has stripes on its legs. Putting the matter less figuratively, the Klan is a return to methods which civilization has outgrown as it outgrew nose rings and [illegible]lism."

MASK BILL PASSED IN MICHIGAN

The Freeman

(Preston News Service).

LANSING, Mich., May 4—Wearing of masks in public by organizations is prohibited in a bill passed by the Michigan House of Representatives last Monday by a vote of 76 to 2. The measure was introduced by Representative James A. Burns, of Detroit, and was said by its sponsors to be aimed at the Ku Klux Klan and similar organizations. It now goes to the Senate and, according to reports stands an excellent chance of passage. If passed by the Senate, it is reported that it will receive the Governor's signature.

Michigan Becoming Hotbed of Ku Klux Klan; Hundreds Take Oath of Masked Band at Night; Meet in Oakland County

U. OF M. PROFESSORS AND STUDENTS JOIN

Detroit—Grouped in a hollow on an immense Oakland county farm, about 35 miles northeast of Detroit, with an immense fiery cross pointing its peak into the blackness of the sky above them, with all approaches closely guarded, from 800 to 1,000 novices gathered from the south-eastern district of Michigan, took the oaths which bound them to the Ku Klux Klan Wednesday night.

The Herald
Detroit, Mich.
6-15-23

It was said to have been the largest initiation ceremony this order of mystery ever has held in Michigan. It is expected that with this wholesale enlistment of the restless element of the southeastern part of the state the usual reign of terror and lawlessness will follow. Despite the claim of its 100% Americanism, this infamous organization persists in cloaking its members behind masks, creating fear and distrust and making acts of lawlessness more easy to commit.

Wednesday evening from sundown until about 10:30 o'clock roads from east and north and south and west poured a steady stream of hooded and white robed Ku Kluxers into the farm, almost every foot of which was utilized for the parking of automobiles.

The usual custom followed by the organizers of this questionable band is to prey on the prejudices or ignorance of prospective candidates to such an extent that a false conception of patriotism is soon built up. When sufficient recruits have been enlisted the radicals and most dangerous members have gathered enough courage to put into action their program of taking over the government of the community into their own hands and administering persecution in place of justice.

Estimates made said there were close to 8,000 persons present, and that the ceremony was staged by the Ku Kluxers of the southeastern district of Michigan, mostly from Wayne, Oakland, Monroe and Macomb counties.

It can easily be seen that unless drastic and speedy measures are taken to check or control the operation of this un-American society the safety of the people of Michigan will soon be as uncertain as is that of Louisiana. This is particularly true inasmuch as it is known that the student body and faculty of the University of Michigan is becoming honeycombed with southern proaganda and prejudice and Klan recruits from this class can easily become a menace to the lawful administration of justice.

While most of Wednesday night's recruits were from the surrounding country and drawn from the ignorant classes, not some there were from further p[illegible], however, including a group of [illegible]ee or four professors and a numb[illegible] students of the University of [illegible]igan at Ann Arbor.

Beyond Understanding

An Ethican minister of the A. M. E. church of Elkhart, Ind., accepted a gift of $100 from a representative of the Ku Klux Klan and in return allowed representatives of the Klan to speak from his pulpit. It is also claimed that the pastor of the Baptist church accepted a similar gift of $100 from the same source.

The Michigan Herald
7-14-23

It is seldom a wise thing to criticize the actions of an individual, especially a leader, until all of the facts concerning the action are known. This may be true in the case of an Ethican minister—a leader and teacher of an Ethican congregation in accepting a gift from the Ku Klux Klan. Yet it seems almost beyond understanding that any facts or any circumstances can in any wise justify giving the Klu Klux Klan a place in an Ethican assembly. For an A. M. E. pastor to accept a gift of a paltry sum of money from a sworn enemy of the people he leads and to allow the use of his pulpit to a representative of this most un-American organization certainly looks like the act of a traitor or a fool.

A few weeks ago this column was used to congratulate the citizens of a Michigan city on the high standard of the religious leaders in that city and to remind them that much of the respect and prosperity they enjoyed was due to the respect and confidence built up for them in the community by their pastors and preachers.

For an A. M. E. pastor to open his pulpit to a representative of an organization working against every honorable ambition of his people cannot add to the respect of the pastor or the prosperity of the people. To accept a "gift" for doing so savors strongly of the act of a Judas or a Burr. Judas was a Jew, Burr was an American "white man," but the American "black man" decidedly has no place in his ranks for either.

The "State News" regrets sincerely that it does not know what the Ku Klux Klan had to say to an Ethican congregation. We can think of absolutely nothing when our country is not at war that would furnish a common ground for the K. K. K. and the African Methodist Episcopal church to meet on. The two organizations are as diametrically opposite in practice and precept as the paganism of a cannibal isle and the Christian religion.

As was intimated before, there may be some extenuating circumstance in favor of this pastor, but with the notorious reputation of the Klan we cannot imagine what it could be.

As long as the K. K. K. is sworn to so-called "white supremacy," as long as Ethicans remain the butt of its acts of terror and lawlessness, as long as it continues to be glaringly un-American—there must be an extremely scant place if any, for the K. K. K. or its filthy dollars in anything that is Ethi n or decent.

MEXICAN RADICALS CLASH WITH KU KLUXERS

Richmond Planet 1-6-23

(Crusader News Service.)

Mexico City, Jan. 3.—Reports from various cities of conflicts between the Mexican Fascisti or Ku Klux and the Communists indicate that the former organization has grown greatly in numbers and importance lately. Thus far these clashes have not been sanguinary but are more indicative of what may be expected in the near future, not only in Mexico but in the United States as well, as the opposing forces of Fascism and Communism, with their allies, settle down to the new phase of the old struggle between Capitalism and the Proletariat. Just as Communism is representative of the growing revolt on the part of the workers so is Fascism or Ku Kluxism, in the opinion of many, representatives of the determination of the Capitalists not to surrender without a fight their strange hold over the workers.

The Regional Federation of Labor from its headquarters in Mexico City is extremely active in its propaganda against Fascism and the Fascisti are not likely to overrun the country as happened in Italy and is now happening in the United States. Mexican workers have already tasted to some degree the joys and benefits of themselves exercising control and are not likely to surrender their preogatives to the Fascisti tools.

KU KLUX KLAN WOULD ESTABLISH MANDATE OVER MEXICO

Klan Program Includes Alliance With Canada; Elimination of European Emigration and Mandate Over Mexico.

Although one of the prerequisites to citizenship in the invisible empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan as published in their official literature is the "No man is wanted in this order who will not and cannot swear an unqualified allegiance to the government of the United States of America, its flag and its const-i tution . . . . who does not esteem the government of the United States above any other government, civil, political or ecclesiastical, in the whole world," the activities of the Klan in Canada has grown to such proportions as to attract the attention of the Canadian press.

The Spectator, quoting an official of the Klan, states that "the Klan is already established in the western provinces of Canada and will soon be operating over the entire Dominion and has for its goal the idea of a sort of a confederacy. That doesn't necessarily mean your separation from the British empire, but a more definite alliance between the two great English speaking countries on this continent. We have a definite program in view that will be of the greatest benefit to all. Confederacy would prohibit the dumping of European emigrants on this continent, would absolutely forbid a further influx of Orientals and would establish a mandate over Mexico.

Canadians Oppose Klan Activities

According to the mayor of London (Ontario) Canadians will not tolerate men with bloody hands walking in their midst. Justice in the Dominion is sure and swift. As mayor of London I will use all the s of my office to rid the city of the verinous missionaries of an order that seeks to terrify citizens who may differ from these so-called Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in race, color, religion or ability to succeed.

Klan Thought to Have Kidnaped Mexican Man

The Houston Post 8-28-23

Associated Press Report

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27.—The publication of articles denouncing the Ku Klux Klan and denying the existence of that organization in Mexico is believed to have been responsible for the kidnaping Saturday of Jose Campos, director of the newspaper Excelsior.

Senor Campos was held captive for four hours by a group of masked men. He was forced to promise to publish an article admitting the existence of the klan in Mexico.

Houston Press

KLAN GROWS ACTIVE IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

The Tulsa Daily Press Bulletin

MEXICO CITY.—Two men were wounded, one fatally, when 15 masked Ku Klux Klansmen forced their way at 11 o'clock at night into the editorial rooms of the large conservative daily, Excelsior, here. Firing revolvers in the air they announced that by order of the Imperial Magi they had come to return the pistol of Luis Campos, the editor.

The previous Saturday Campos had been kidnaped by the klan as he was leaving his house and taken blindfold for a long auto ride during which, at the point of a pistol, he was forced to promise that he would give proper publicity to the existence and activity of the klan. Excelsior for a month had run articles saying that no such organization existed in Mexico. The Ku Klux told Campos that this had been a blow to their prestige.

It was two days later that the office of the periodical was invaded. Three Ku Klux penetrated to the editorial rooms while others guarded the entrance. Outside were several high powered cars. When one klansman made a move toward Campos, the assistant editor hit him. This started general firing during which a klansman was mortally wounded and the doorman of the newspaper was wounded in the arm. The klansmen escaped in their automobiles before the arrival of the police.

The wounded klansman, who proved to be an alderman of a suburb of the capital, stated in the first aid hospital that there had been no intention of violence, and that they were merely obeying the orders of the Imperial Magi to return a revolver which had been taken from Campos the night he was kidnaped and to demonstrate to the editorial staff of the paper that the klan really existed and was determined to force favorable publicity for itself.

General opinion in this city is that the klan has succeeded merely in making itself tragically ridiculous.

WITCH HUNTING GIVES WAY TO KU KLUX KLAN IN OLD NEW ENGLAND

Federated Press

BY HAYS JONES
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

BOSTON.—The Ku Klux Klan has invaded Massachusetts and announces its intention of conquering all New England. Some weeks ago New England was startled to hear that the Ku Klux had captured the city administration of Portland, Me. At that time the klan came out in the open and said it would eventually control all New England. Its officers appeared in public and admitted their membership.

During the last week in September the klan held an open meeting at Worcester, Mass., despite the opposition of the city officials and the public. Mayor Sullivan tried at first to prevent the meeting, asking the owners of the hall to withdraw their permission to the klan. When that failed he announced he would see that everything was orderly.

Almost everyone in the city turned out for the meeting, gathering around the hall in the streets, shouting their protests and throwing stink bombs. A large contingent of state police and the local officers maintained order. After the meeting Kleagler Farnsworth of Maine, said he had had a thousand men ready in the hall to "protect" the meeting. There was no violence, however.

At the Worcester meeting the kleagle after berating all who had not the peculiar quality of being born free, white and protestant in the United States, referred to the trouble in Oklahoma.

"We will run Oklahoma yet," he said. He went on to say that Oklahoma was 75% klannish, and eventually the klan would control that state and any others.

Chicago, Ill.

The next move planned publicly by the klan is an invasion of Boston, which has a large Catholic population. The klan intends to make its first appearance here some time in October, despite public opposition.

Mayor Curley, of Boston is equally determined that they shall not meet in the city. Any hall owner who leases his hall to the K. K. K. will promptly forfeit his charter, according to Curley. The mayor basis his opposition to the meeting on the ground that it would tend to provoke disorders.

So far there has been no violence in Massachusetts attributed to the klan. Its plans seem to be directed toward gaining possession of the state and local administrations.

According to a Boston paper, the klan has already broken into Boston secretly. The paper states that it has been meeting secretly as the Protestant League of Massachusetts for six successive Sunday afternoons, in a Boston church. The elders of the church say if they had known it was being rented for klan meetings they would not have permitted the deal. No step to stop the meetings has been announced.

OFFICIAL HARVARD SILENT ABOUT KLAN

"Least Said, Soonest Mended," Dr. Eliot Comments

St. Louis Post

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 31.—"Least said, soonest mended," was the comment of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, last night, concerning reports of Ku Klux Klan activities in the student body. Entirely consistent with this expression of his attitude was his refusal to amplify his position in any way.

Overseers of the university took much the same stand as the former president. Most of them were unwilling to commit themselves at all, explaining that the extent, or existence even, of a klan organization at Harvard was so much a matter of conjecture that they thought the time not ripe for a statement.

"The whole thing is unsound fundamentally and will not live very long," said State Treasurer James Jackson, a Harvard graduate and overseer. "It is natural that in an institution as large as Harvard, such disturbances arise. I believe the undergraduates will work the problem out for themselves, unless it is advertised and made too much of. I don't know the exact state of affairs, so I cannot say whether there is any need for the university authorities to act, but I have no doubt that they will handle the situation adequately if they find that their guidance is necessary."

The. Rev. Dr. Paul Revere Frothingham gave as his reason for withholding comment, that he did not believe everything that he read in the papers. He explained that as an overseer and as a member of the University board of preachers, he must know definitely just what the klan was doing at Harvard and what the results of its activities were before he made any public statement.

Speaker B. Loring Young of the Massachusetts House, likewise an overseer, declined to make any comment, as did others of his associates on the board of overseers who are Boston men.

A request that the organizers of the klan at Harvard be ferreted out and expelled was the burden of a message sent to the overseers yesterday by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Univesity authorities last evening said that they had not received the communication.

KLAN FOOTHOLD AT HARVARD; MAY BE "LAUGHED AT"

Chicago Daily Tribune

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 22.—An article in the Harvard Crimson today says that there are indications that within the next few weeks the Ku Klux Klan will make a concerted drive to increase its membership among Harvard undergraduates. It says that thus far few Harvard men have openly declared their allegiance to the klan, but quotes one of these as saying the Harvard branch of the organization, while at present inactive, is making its influence felt.

J. Weldon Johnson Denounces the Exclusion of Negroes From Its Dormitories.

149 ALUMNI SIGN MEMORIAL

11/13/23

Letter of Protest Declares Jim Crow Policy Augurs Dark Future for This Country.

Harvard University, by its exclusion of negro students from the freshman dormitories, is "putting into effect the program proclaimed by the infamous Ku Klux Klan and its apologists," says James Weldon Johnson, Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 70 Fifth Avenue, in a letter to President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, made public yesterday. The letter says that one of the most liberalizing influences at Harvard was to be found in the opportunity afforded to Southern students to come into contact with the negro so that they could tolerate and understand him.

Charles C. Burlingham, Harvard, '79, disclosed yesterday that there were 142 signatories to the memorial on the exclusion policy of Harvard forwarded to President Lowell by graduates of that institution. In correcting the report that there were only seven signers of that document, Mr. Burlingham explained that seven graduates had distributed the memorial to a selected list of Harvard men.

"There were 142 signers of the memorial," said Mr. Burlingham. "The document was placed in the hands of a little less than 200 men. Of that number there were only eight who disagreed with the sentiments expressed in the memorial. Some of those who would not sign it were governed by delicate positions which they occupied in relation to the university. But the seven men who have been described as the signers of the memorial merely submitted it to other Harvard graduates."

The letter to President Lowell from the Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People not only protests the exclusion from the freshman dormitories of Roscoe Conkling Bruce Jr., but conveys a warning as well against Harvard's surrender of principles at the demand of the Southern anti-negro prejudice.

Writes Emphatic Protest.

The letter fololws:

A. Lawrence Lowell, Esq., President Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.

Jan. 11, 1923.

Sir: In your letter to Mr. Roscoe Conkling Bruce, stating that his son is excluded from the Harvard freshman dormitories because of his color you make the following statement:

" * * * I am sure you will understand why, from the beginning, we have not thought it possible to compel men of different races to reside together."

May I be permitted to amend your statement so that it will accord with the facts? Your statement should read:

" * * * I am sure you will understand why, from the beginning, we have thought it expedient to compel men of different races to reside apart."

May I further suggest that Harvard's surrender of its tradition and the tradition of liberal America to the slaveholder's prejudice intensifies the very problem which you as Harvard's spokesman are professing to meet. Such amelioration of race problems as has been brought about in this country has occurred in large measure through Southern students who were met in Northern universities by an unflinching affirmation of the equality of all men in the realm of the arts and of learning. One of the most liberalizing influences on the Southern racial situation has been that the traditional stand of Harvard has afforded to Southern white students the opportunity of coming to know as human beings their fellow colored students with whom they were associated. Deprive those Southern students of their last opportunity to learn the tolerance that comes of living with and understanding men of all races, men with whom they will have perforce to live and mingle in the United States, and Harvard University helps mightily to darken the future of the United States, for by capitulating to anti-negro prejudice in the freshman dormitories or anywhere else, Harvard University affirms that prejudice and strengthens it, and is but putting into effect the program proclaimed by the infamous Ku Klux Klan and its apologists.

Very truly yours,

JAMES WELDON JOHNSON,
Secretary.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—Alderman Chamber, Past National Vice Commander of the American Legion, is seeking the members of the Ku Klux Klan who forced their regalia on him after he had spurned their offer of high office. They took advantage of his absence to invade his apartment at 76 Westland Avenue, Back Bay, and leave a "black night shirt" bearing the insignia of the organization.

"All I regret," says Chambers, "is that I was not home to give the visitors a warm reception." This incident was the climax to a series of mysterious interviews—three in all, covering a period of four months—with Chambers, all of which he took as a joke until the men attempted to decorate him with one of their hoods.

"I think it was toward the latter part of September," said Chambers, "that a couple of men approached me as I was leaving my apartment. It was just about dark and both men manoeuvered in such a way that I could not get a good look at them. They spoke of the financial possibilities of Klan membership, said I had been recommended by a reliable source as having a strong hold on the young men of the legion and that being a son of Dixie could be trusted.

"I told them I considered the offer an insult and reminded them that I was a real American. Thereupon they left, remarking, 'Think it over, we'll see you again.' A month later another man intercepted me near my apartment with an offer of the position of New England agent of the Klan. My answer was so hot and threatening that he departed with 'Think it over, we'll see you again.'"

Catholic Boston Edifice and Malden School Under Guard.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 7.—St. Patrick's Catholic Church in the Roxbury district of Boston, and a new parochial school in Malden, are under armed guard for fear of attempts to dynamite them, the Rev. Jones I. J. Corrigan, head of the Department of Ethics at Boston College, said tonight in an address in which he denounced the Ku Klux Klan before the Holy Name Society of the Catholic churches of Greater Lawrence.

Father Corrigan urged that the secret organization be stamped out now before citizens would be compelled to act in self-defense.

MANCHESTER MASS TELEGRAM

The Klan and Immigration

Emperor Simmons of the Ku Klux Klan says there are more than 11,000,000 Negroes in the South, "presenting a problem to the white people of that section, such as has never been solved in the history of civilization." The Japanese, he declares, "for years have striven for a foothold on the American continent." He says American women "must co-operate in putting an arrest upon immigration to this country and in distributing the foreign and alien population already here over the country at large, and in Americanizing these un-American elements that we must retain."

Those who argue for unrestricted immigration say we ought to keep the country open for all who wish to enter it to better themselves. This argument implies an obligation on our part to offer opportunities to foreigners. But if we should become convinced that to keep out foreigners for a time would in the long run be best for them, as well as for us, we would betray no trust to put up the bars for a time.

But when we discuss immigration we should not take Ku Klux pessimism too seriously. Men who hide behind masks cannot have very valuable ideas to impart on Americanization.

KLUX EDITOR LEAVES

SCHEMER WHO TRIED TO PROSELYTE MASONS IN BOSTON GOES INTO HIDING

Angus Acree, the man who tried to capture the eighteenth convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs for the Ku Klux Klan, has been run out of Boston.

Rising in their wrath at the bold attempt to stir up religious and racial hatred, the Masons made Boston too hot for the sponsor of Klanism.

Attempts to learn where Acree, editor of a Klan paper and super-propagandist, had disappeared failed and questions directed to Masonic leaders brought forth nothing more than smiles.

Acree vanished as if into thin air. His disappearance is all the more remarkable because of the bitter denunciation he made of the convention just prior to his disappearance.

Bubbling over with indignation because of the vigorous and bitter castigation directed against him by the Masons, Acree termed the convention a "bloomer," a frizzle—a "sad commentary on time-honored Masonic fuctions."

The scorching remarks of Acree spread among the delegates like wild fire. Acree then vanished.

Was he ordered to go from Boston by Masons?

Was he put aboard a train and told to flee?

Or did he go because of fear of the consequences of his attempt to foist Klanism on the Masons?

All efforts to find out what caused him to suddenly change his mind and disappear have failed. No one is willing to talk about him—to reporters. Still his strange disappearance is much discussed by Masons.

In his statement, Acree said:

"These men do not represent the real Masonry of America. More than 100 delegates have refused to register and have returned home, disgusted with the so-called National League of Masonic Clubs. The entertainment here is so at variance with the open-hearted variety recently provided for the Shriners at Washington that it is laughable, even to be called entertainment at all.

"Only the delegates themselves are included in the entertainment—about 600 in number, to use their own figures—the rest being taxed more than $8.30 each to enjoy Boston's hospitality. Forty thousand at this figure makes quite a little sum for somebody."

Klux's Mission Was a Failure

Acree's mission here was a failure. He sought to obtain subscriptions for his paper. Before he left Boston, he claimed more than two hundred new subscribers.

This statement, however, was disputed by W. L. Terhune, president of the Boston Masonic Club, who said not more than five agreed to take the paper.

"I shall do everything in my power to repudiate this newspaper of Ku Klux Klan propaganda," said President Terhune.

Repudiate Klan

President Owen A. Jackson of the Engineers Blue Room Masonic Club, said:

"I don't know whether Acree and his fellow Ku Klux Klan propagandists were run out of town, but I do know that he got no encouragement from masons. There are 1100 members of our club who utterly repudiate the Klan and all its works. Masons believe in law and order. We are opposed to hooded faces and hidden hands. The things Acree and his cohorts want to settle by stealth with their own hands we Masons want settled in court. We are satisfied with our courts and proud of them. Acree could get nowhere among Masons. He and his Klan stand for something entirely different."

Major J. W. Myrick, leading Massachusetts Free Mason, said:

"Acree's Ku Klux Klan propaganda among Masons now in Boston because of the meeting of the National League of Masonic Clubs, has proved a flat failure. Masonry and the Klan are as far apart as the poles and no amount of propaganda can induce thinking members of the orders in Masonry to indorse or take part in the narrow bigotry, violent lawlessness and the stealthy undermining of American institutions which constitutes the Klan's program."

KLAN PROPAGANDA AT OPENING SESSION RESENTED AND KLAN DENOUNCED AT BOSTON CONVENTION. KLUX EDITOR LEAVES TOWN UNDER THE STORM, EQUAL RIGHTS LEAGUE

Delegates at the opening session of the 18th annual convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs in the Copley Plaza Hotel on Monday, after hearing various speakers make stirring denunciations of the Ku Klux Klan propaganda distributed Monday afternoon at convention headquarters, 20 Huntington avenue, turned their attention to the parade, in which approximately 15,000 participated.

Leading officials of the League united in declaring that any attempt made to align the league with other movements would be repudiated, and pledged the Masonic clubs throughout the United States to service to God service to humanity and devotion to the republic of the United States,

Mayor Curley Starts Avalanche of Denunciation of Klux

Mayor Curley struck the keynote of the day's proceedings. In his address of welcome he said: "Since I have been mayor, I have extended the hospitality of the city to 2000 or more organizations. I have never received at the opening of any meeting a greater inspiration that at the opening of your meeting today with the national anthem and the recognition of God Almighty.

Is Answer to Klan

"This is ample answer to the story of propaganda in the morning newspapers and for which your organization is in no way responsible. No man or men whose first thoughts are for God and country can be other than the highest type of American citizen. If we could have the Lord's prayer as a daily inspiration we would have a world where genuine brotherhood would obtain.

"We need a national American spirit and your organization of representative men can help bring it about. You came to a city with more places of national patriotic inspiration than any other city in the world, and I hope you will visit some of these places and be strengthened in resolution to promote a genuine American spirit.

Should Banish the Restive

He added that the nation began under Masonic sponsorship and would always be supported by Masons. He declared that the members of the fraternity could not go far afield when with "the courage of Washington, the heart of Lincoln and the energy of Roosevelt, they carried on their work."

"There is an undercurrent of unrest disturbing our national life." he continued. "We should put the whole crew of the discontented in a sinking ship with leaden sails and with hell for destination and bid them farewell. Let every delegate take home the inspiring words of the Mayor to his club and to his family life."

Urges United Action

He also suggested that the league maintain permanent headquarters and have a permanent official in charge. He urged the observance of Masonic Sunday in October, and suggested that the Masonic clubs should stand in the relation of minute men to the grand lodges in any emergency. He emphasized the point that "it is necessary for Masons to act as a unit to counteract underground propaganda inimical to American institutions."

FORD TELLS GOV. PARKER HE IS NOT A KLANSMAN

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., June 18.—Henry Ford and Gov. Parker of Louisiana, both of whom are looked upon as possible candidates for the presidency, conferred here yesterday. Others present at the conference were Murray Hullbert, president of the New York Board of Aldermen; Joseph T. Fanning, former Indiana Democratic leader, and Col. John P. Sullivan, Louisiana Democratic leader.

All denied that politics had been discussed. Ford said he was not seeking the presidency.

Gov. Parker as chief speaker last night at a banquet of Massachusetts Elks denounced the Ku Klux Klan. Ford told Gov. Parker definitely that he was not a member of the Ku Klux Klan or any other secret organization.

NATIONAL EQUAL RIGHTS LEAGUE TAKES RESOLUTION OF THANKS FOR STAND AGAINST NEFARIOUS KU KLUX

Thursday morning of this week, Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., for the Boston Branch of the National Equal Rights

DR. A. P. RUSSELL, JR.
Prominent Mason who led Equal Rights Committee to White Masonic Convention.

League and as a leading Mason, and W. M. Trotter for the National Headquarters, took to the Copley Plaza the following Resolutions.

Text of the Resolution

To the Eighteenth Annual Convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs; Copley Plaza Hotel, Boston, Mass. Mr. W. L. Gorhune, Convention Chairman; Dr. E. M. Allen, National President; Mr. E. A. McKinnon, Secretary Treasurer.

Honorable Masonic Body:

Permit the National Equal Rights League of Colored Americans to convey to the National League of Masonic Clubs in eighteenth annual convention assembled in our city of Boston deep appreciation and hearty congratulations on the instant and vigorous repudiation of the audacious attempt to link your noble and ancient Order with the un-christian, un-American Ku Klux Klan.

This League applauds the positive stand taken by your leaders against race and religious discrimination and bigotry, and the declaration that your Masonic Order stands for: "Service to God, service to humanity, and devotion to the Republic of the United States;" which means protection of rights and life for our many racial minorities.

Yours for the Constitution,
National Equal Rights League and Boston Branch. Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., W. M. Eureka Lodge, F. & A. M., Prince Hall Jurisdiction of Mass., E. T. Morris, President of the Boston Branch, A. G. Wolff, secretary, Wm. M. Trotter for National Body.

Messrs. Russell and Trotter were received by Robert L. Clegg of Chicago, former president of the League of Masonic Clubs, who fraternized Masonically with Dr. Russell very cordially.

Ford Denies Charge of Sympathy For Ku Klux

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., June 17.—With the meeting here today for the first time of Henry Ford and Governor John M. Parker, of Louisiana, prominent democrats in the Connecticut Valley place high political significance upon a conference that took place in a local hotel. The two men, both of whom have been mentioned as possible candidates for the democratic presidential nomination met in large delegation of democrats from this section and finally were closeted in a room for some time. Neither would admit that politics with reference to their own chances for the nomination had been discussed.

Mr. Ford took occasion to deny his reputed sympathy for the Ku Klux Klan, saying that he was not only not a member, but belonged to no secret organization whatever.

HENRY FORD NOT A KLANSMAN

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—At a conference here this week between Henry Ford the millionaire automobile manufacturer and John M. Parker, whose principle business is damning the Klan, Ford denied that he is a Klansman and also said that he was not a member of any Secret order. It is known that Ford is a Mason and his denial of that order is not expected to set well with the Masons of the country.

Parker, who in his idle moments is governor of Louisiana, expressed himself as satisfied with Mr. Ford's renunciation of the Klan and duly entered him upon the rolls of his favored sons.

Parker is believed to be grooming himself for the Presidency, also, but it can be safely said that he will not get anywhere if he is depending on the New England vote.

CONGREGATIONALISTS FIGHT KU KLUX KLAN

Resolution Adopted by the National Council.

(By the Associated Press.)

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 22.—An anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution without mention of the klan was passed today by the National Council of Congregational Churches.

The resolution said: "The National council views with alarm and disapproval the growth of organizations which, however sincere in their professions of patriotism, seek to foster social and religious suspicion and give opportunity for lawlessness and brutality."

The resolution urged Congregationalists to refuse to join such organizations and to treat them as a menace to both religion and patriotism.

An amendment which would incorporate the words, "such as the Ku Klux Klan," in the opening sentence of the resolution was rejected.

The council also rejected a resolution admonishing France for occupation of the Ruhr.

LIBERTY UNION, OPPOSING KLAN, PROTESTS BAN

Boston, Mass., October 22.—A letter to Mayor Curley protesting against his order barring Ku Klux Klan meetings in Boston and signed by Norman Hapgood, the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Prof. Robert Morse Lovett and Dr. Henry F. Ward was made public last night. The letter, sent on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, asserted that "the legal right of the klan to hold meetings on private property and to discuss in private is clear and should be maintained."

While the letter declared that the activities of the klan were abhorrent to the writers, they contended that the civil rights "of the enemies of civil liberty as of its friends must be protected."

John S. Codman, chairman of the New England branch of the union, had previously protested that the constitutional rights of the klan had been encroached upon by the order.

Klan Leader Charges Attempt to Destroy Hall in Baltimore

Baltimore Sun
2-10-23

Baltimore, Md., February 9.—Burned newspaper piled against a scorched door of the home of the Thomas Dixon chapter of the Ku Klux Klan discovered by Exalted Cyclops J. W. Ford today, revealed an attempt to burn the building, Mr. Ford declared. The home is located in a former Presbyterian church at Madison avenue and Biddle streets.

The door and sills were scorched halfway up but at no place had the wood ignited. The floor is concrete. Police after an investigation said no inflammable liquid had been used.

Mr. Ford told police that members of the klan were in the building until after midnight. He personally locked the building and left everything in good order, he said. He believed it was sought to destroy valuable klan records stored in the office. He said entrance into the building had been secured by prying off the lock of a door not used by the klan. The records, Mr. Ford said, contain the complete rolls of the local organization and all the data since its organization. They could not have been replaced he said.

...e Beasts That Walk Like Men

Afro-American

Baltimore Catholic Review

Millions of Americans have been horrified during the last week by published accounts of of the race riots in Florida and by the description of the way Richards and Daniels were murdered by masked cowards of Louisiana. 1-19-23

The men who were responsible for the Florida riots and the Louisiana murders were men in name and appearance only. In reality they were beasts—worse than beasts, for wild animals kill quickly and because they have no reason. But in Florida and Louisiana the murderers have schemed and fiendishly planned their horrors. Adam would have blushed to know that such beasts would one day be his descendants. Cain would have cried for mercy and forgiveness that he had pointed the way to murder. Baltimore

These beasts, these degenerates, these fiends Mr. Ku will be ostracized by the unfortunates in Hell itself are they who dare say that it is for them to enforce the law; that they are the upholders of the standards of decency; that they are the defenders of Americanism; that they are the protectors of home and woman's honor. Good God, that Americans has come to this? Washington and Lincoln, Lee and Jackson, what think ye of such vermin? Was it for such beasts that you fought for all that you held dear?

They hate the Catholic Church in many parts of the South. The Ku Klux Klansmen do not want to associate with the Catholics. Thank God for that. Thank God at least they know that they are not fit to meet with real men. Where the Catholic Church is hated the most bitterly, there does crime rear its head; there do bestiality and cowardice and blood lust and degeneracy make headway. Deny this, if you can, you enemies of Catholicism and decency. Deny it, you cowards of the Ku Klux Klan and you hordes of lynchers! No Catholic man can do the things that you do because such things are slimy and cowardly and beastly and inhuman.

Answer, John Sharp Williams, and the rest of you—answer!

FORMER MER ROUGE MAYOR TO RE-ENTER MEDICAL COLLEGE

Faculty at Johns Hopkins Decides in Favor of Dr. B. M. McKoin

2-28-23

(Associated Press)

BALTIMORE, MD., Feb. 27.—Permission has been granted by faculty members of Johns Hopkins Medical school, for Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, La., to continue his post graduate work at that institution.

The re-admission of Dr. McKoin to the medical school has been a matter of controversy between the physician and medical school authorities who intimated that the doctors' return would probably cause undue publicity to fall on the institution, growing out of his alleged implication in the Morehouse parish murders and kidnapings of last August. Dr. McKoin left Johns Hopkins last fall to return to Louisiana and aid authorities there in their investigation of the Morehouse outrages. He later was released on $5,000 bond and returned to this city several weeks ago.

A statement issued by medical authorities tonight said that to refuse re-admission to Dr. McKoin "would, undoubtedly, prove a very serious handicap," to him and also "might prove to be a great injustice."

"It, therefore," the statement continued, "has been decided to allow Dr. McKoin to continue with his work until it shall become apparent that in the interest of the university and hospital other action is indicated."

Cause Mob Violence To Become General

Baltimore, Md.

A call for an end of what is termed "oratorical wrist-slapping" of Ku Klux Klansmen or others connected with mob outrages is made in the leading editorial of the March issue of Columbia, the K. of C. national magazine. 3-7-23

"From all pars of the country," the K. of C. publication says, "come reports of sporadic violence that is becoming less and less sporadic, more and more familiar item of the day's news. It would appear that the Klan mobsmen in ceratin places have a local option in mayhem; these go-getters can go and get provided local conditions are such that they can get away with it.

"If the central government can reach out and, regardless of State boundaries, take tool from the incomes of all citizens and residents for its legal support, it can surely reach out and protect all citizens and residents whe nlocal political conditions and complexions in any State militate against the firm repression of disorder because members of the majority in creed, color, or politics choose to be disorderly. Compromise with crime, in whatever form of reticence or indolence it may be manifested, cannot be long maintained without giving the compromisers the status of the criminal and without incurring, in some way and at some time, the punishment due to crime. Condemnation, even fulmination against the ruffians of red blood, is merely oratorical wrist slapping. In enforcement of the law valor must always displace discretion. Justice cannot be a matter of geography if a nation is to survice and prosper."

KLAN HEAD SPEAKS

Wishes To Visit Church To Show Colored People Klan Is Not Opposed To Them

Haled before the Baptist Ministers' Conference in session at Calvary Baptist Church Monday, Rev. L. D. Lyles, pastor of Jerusalem Baptist Mission, Biddle street, near McCulloh, denied that he had invited the local branch of the Ku Klux Klan to visit his mission or that he had given the interview published in last week's AFRO.

Ministers told the AFRO that had he admitted the invitation, he would probably have been asked to resign his conference membership.

Rev. Lyles came to the AFRO Saturday to change his statement previously made. He said: "I wish you would say that I did not invite the Ku Klux Klan and that they are not to hold service in my church."

Rev. James Ford, head of the Klan, who lives at 1433 S. Charles street, told the AFRO Thursday that the engagement had been made by his secretary, and the only thing he knew about it was that the church was close to the Klan hall at Biddle and McCulloh streets. He said he would see his secretary tomorrow.

NOT OPPOSED TO NEGROES

"One of the reasons we take advantage of visits to Negro protestant churches in the same manner in which we visit white protestant churches is that we want to show the colored people that we are not opposed to them.

"The Catholics, who we are opposed to because they set up political organizations in the form of religion, have tried to make the colored people believe that we are against them in our activities. This is not true.

"We are not opposed to Jews as such, but we are working in interest of the protestant denominations of all colors. The Jews are not admitted to our organizations for the same reason that they are not admitted to some branches of my Masonic order.

WOULD CORRECT IMPRESSION

"Don't you think," asked the reporter, "that colored people are justified in opposing the Ku Klux Klan in view of its past and present history so far as they are concerned?"

"I can see where some of them could get such an impression, and that is just what we want to correct by visits to these churches."

"Don't you think that such an organization is dangerous in that it causes a large number of the low element in the white race to perpetrate outrages in its name even if it is not responsible as an organization for such outrages?"

USE OFFICIAL STATEMENT ONLY

"There may be some danger," admitted Rev. Ford, but the Ku Klux Klan never sends out letters on any stationery but the official letter heads of the organization."

"Do you feel that the regularly constituted law enforcement machinery is unable to deal with these crime and that law is breaking down?" asked the reporter.

"It looks that way. If the Federal Government wants to stop counterfeiting they get the aid of the police department in every case in running down the criminals. But not so in bootlegging. We are active in suppressing crimes such as bootlegging.

"We are against the influx of the foreign element who brings his un American principles to this country and keeps them."

No "Ku Klux" Mayor

Sometime ago, the AFRO-AMERICAN declared it would not support Mayor Broening for re-election. It does not now. Many things the Mayor has done for the black group, but he failed in the pinches. We cannot forget the march of the Ku Klux Klan thru Baltimore streets, when Mayor Broening could have refused to sign the permitting order.

The AFRO-AMERICAN believes that Mr. Howard W. Jackson is the best of the three candidates. It believes with Harding that the Negro should divide his vote. It urges the support and the election of Mr. Jackson for Mayor.

Klan To Visit Negro Church At Suggestion Of Minister

The Rev. James W. Ford Says Colored Pastor Declared Only Bad Men Fear Ku Klux—Members To Wear Regalia To Service.

BALTIMORE AMERICAN
FEBRUARY 27, 1923

That members of the Ku Klux Klan, with their fiery cross, "nighties" and hoods will shortly visit a negro church in Northwest Baltimore while services are in progress was divulged at a meeting of the klan last night.

The meeting was held in the American Hall, on Lombard street near Broadway, and was addressed by the Rev. James W. Ford and Frank H. Beall. Between 30 and 40 candidates were initiated into the organization.

The speakers addressed the meeting on "Sanctity of the Home, White Supremacy and Separation of Church and State."

The Rev. Mr. Ford later said the klan had no fight with any race or religion.

"As a member of the klan, a body of real Americans clinging together, I would object to a negro waiting on the table in my home. The klan grants him just what the law accords.

"We don't object to negroes riding on the street cars with us. No law forces a white man to sit beside a negro unless the white man so desires.

"Not all of the negroes of Baltimore look upon the klan as an outrage. A negro preacher recently approached me. He has a church in the vicinity of Madison and Biddle streets. He asked why klansmen did not visit his church. This surprised me, and I asked him if he did not fear that his congregation would become frightened.

"The preacher replied: 'We know what the Ku Klux Klan is. A good negro is not afraid of the klan, and if there are any bad negroes in my church, they are not wanted.' So 15 of our members, in full regalia, intend to visit that colored preacher's church."

Many Members Claimed.

The Rev. Mr. Ford said 350 members of the klan will attend services at the Twenty-Fourth Street Christian Church on the evening of March 11. They will be in full regalia, he said.

It was said that Baltimore is well represented by the klan. Besides the Thomas Dixon Klan, numbering about 2,000, the Southern district has a klan of 150 members, Brooklyn has 190, Western district, 140 and Northern district, 450.

Geo. H. Goldsborough Tells of Meeting of Ku Klux at Easton and Praises Address Made by Klan Organizer

Ku Klux from all over the Eastern Shore gathered at Easton, Md. on Sunday afternoon where a wonderful address was delivered by one of the Klan organizers.

I was the only colored man present who stamped his approval on many of the things the Klan stood for. The speaker said the Klan lovd the Negro and was the Negro's best friend so long as the Negro conducted himself as a citizen. They were ready to protect him yet they could not admit a Negro to join the order. But the Klan is against Catholics, Germans and Jews as a whole. The speaker emphasized the fact that they were against white men being too friendly with colored women. He said, if any white man leaves his wife or sweetheart and seeks the company of a Negro woman, he will need an airplane to convey his soul from earth to hell when the good Lord calls him from time to eternity. The speaker also said that when he walks the streets and see Negroes mixed with white blood it makes him hang his head in shame knowing his race is the cause.

Mr. Goldsborough was very much impressed with the Klan and its activities, and said to a Klansman he knew, if those are principals which they stand for I only wish every white man in America would join the organization and help to wipe out such awful conditions and may long live the Klan.

The demonstation was held near the old Quaker Meeting House, a rare old historic building where Quakers have assembled for 235 years.

A number of floats were mounted on auto trucks. One of these illustrated conspicuously white supremacy by showing a supposed Negro and foreign in the background bowing in submission to whites who were seated on a throne above them. 8-17-23

The Klansmen wore no masks but otherwise full regalia. A number of colored persons witnessed the demonstration. "Fellowship Forum" a pamphlet setting forth the principals of the Ku Klux Klan were distributed.

Say Not Member Of Klan And Did Not Directly or Indirectly Seek Support Of Its Members

Baltimore Herald

Alexander Armstrong, Republican candidate for Governor, said that he had neither directly nor indirectly sought the support of the Ku Klux Klan.

Mr. Armstrong was asked to comment on the statement of Dr. J. H. Hawkins, imperial representative in Maryland of the imperial wizard. Dr. Hawkins yesterday declared that the Ku Klux in Maryland had definitely lined up with the Republican party and would support Mr. Armstrong for Governor. 10-24-23

"I have read the article," Mr. Armstrong declared. "The only comment I can make is that I do not belong to the klan and have never knowingly talked to a member of it. I am not in any manner identified with it, know nothing about its purposes and plans and have neither directly nor indirectly sought its support."

BRUNSWICK MINISTER REFUSES KLAN GIFT

Baltimore Sun 11-7-23

Frederick, Nov. 5.—Six or seven men attired in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan entered the Afro Methodist Episcopal Church, Brunswick, during the service last night, marched to the pulpit and held out an envelope to the pastor the Rev. Ignatius Snowden. The robed spokesman said they wished to bestow a gift on the church.

The pastor said it was against the law of his church to accept money from an organization named the Ku Klux Klan and declined to accept the donation.

The klan members then visited another Negro church and the preacher accepted a donation.

Ku Klux Must Pay Taxes. The tax court ruled that the Ku Klux Klan at Baltimore is a political organization and therefore must pay taxes on its building. The klan had asked for exemption, but the court said that it would be "manifestly unfair and opposed to the spirit of the law governing exemptions to call on the wealth of citizens who are the particular objects of the antagonism of the klan to assist indirectly in the support and maintenance of the organization." Klan officials deny that their organization is political and declare that if necessary they will carry the case as high as the supreme court to obtain justice.

PORTLAND ADOPTS NEW CITY CHARTER FAVORED BY KLAN

TWO OTHER PLANS BEATEN

Citizens' Non-Partisan Committee Denies Klan Was Associated in Its Movement.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 10.—Officials of the Ku Klux Klan, Realm of Maine, claimed victory tonight in the first attempt of the Klan to influence an election in this State. The so-called "Plan Three" charter, providing for a Council of five, which will elect a city manager, which was supported by the Klan, was adopted by the voters of Portland by a margin of approximately 2,500 votes.

Two years ago a similar plan came within 100 votes of adoption.

Although the plan three charter was supported by Klan leaders, the Nonpartisan Committee of 100, which sponsored the charter, had denied publicly that the Klan was associated in the movement.

Two other plans of city government were submitted to the voters at the same time, and 50 per cent. of the total vote cast was required for adoption of a charter.

While the Klan did not take an open stand on the issue it was intimated by their officials that they favored "Plan Three" rather than either of two other proposals put before the voters.

One of these, drafted by a committee headed by Mayor Carroll S. Chaplin, provided for a Mayor and fourteen Councillors to be elected for two years, one from each ward and five at-large, with party designation retained. The third form was the present charter, with a Mayor, nine Aldermen and twenty-seven Councilmen, elected annually.

F. Eugene Farnsworth, King Kleagle of the Realm of Maine, in an advertisement urged the voters of Portland to "go to the polls today and vote for the clean, progressive government every American citizen wants."

"At a meeting in City Hall Friday night," he said:

"You know how to vote on Monday. You know which side the gang is on. All we have to do is to vote against the gang."

Alexander T. Laughlin, Chairman of a Non-Partisan Committee of One Hundred, which has been advocating the Council Manager form of government, said today that if the plan were adopted it would not be a Klan victory.

"It would be a victory for the 5,000 citizens of Portland who came within 100 votes of securing the adoption of this charter two years ago," he said, "and who have since recruited the assistance of their friends and neighbors, without regard to race or religion, to abolish ward lines and partisan designations in carrying on the government of our city."

Klan C ns Victory In Vote At Portland

St. Louis Clarion

PORTLAND, Me., Special — The adoption by the voters of Portland of a city manager form of government was hailed as a victory for the Ku Klux Klan today by members of the organization, although a nonpartisan organization which had sponsored a plan for several years had different views. 9-21-23

The Klan had not come out publicly for a city manager, but in advertisements had urged members to vote against the "gang." "The nonpartisan organization denied that the Klan was associated with it.

The city manager plan was adopted by a margin of 2500 votes. There was some turbulence at the polls.

After the disturbance in two wards one of which was halted by the appearance of the sheriff, checkers excluded by the election officials. Missles were thrown at the automobile of Senator Ralph C. Brewster, one of the leading advocates of the newly adopted charter, an egg striking him in the face.

Entire Government of Maine City Is Captured by Invisible Empire.

By International News Service.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept, 11.—By a plurality of 2,347 votes, the Ku-Klux Klan Tuesday had won its fight to take control of the civil government in the city election here.

Plan No. 3, supported by the invisible empire, which provides a new city charter and a city manager form of government, was adopted in yesterday's election. A commission of five members will take the place of the Mayor and council.

Atlanta

The old form of government which had been in operation 91 years, will end next January. The city manager may be chosen from any part of the state. Georgian

An unusually heavy vote was cast and interest in the fight exceeded almost any previous political battle. Women took an active part in the election.

Mayor C. S. Chaplin, who defied the klansmen, issued the following statement:

"It is apparent that the citizens of Portland desire a change.

"As the last of its long line of Mayors, I am prepared to bid farewell to the traditions of 91 years and with the welfare of my native city at heart, to cheerfully resume my place in the ranks and lend every assistance to a fair trial of the new charter in accordance with the public will."

THRIFT, KAMELIA, THRIFT!

Maine

From the last of a series of articles on the Ku Klux Klan in Maine, written by Mr. A. J. GORDON for The Boston Herald, we learn that such Dirigo women as are willing to pay the regular price for hoods and robes will be allowed to become Klanswomen. The female annex bears the flowery name Kamelia. Portland is to have a chapter, Bangor is to have a chapter, if business is good. According to the organizers or cash-collectors, the object of the Kamelia is "to educate "women in the science of government "and history of the United States, "and to contribute funds to orphan-"ages and similar deserving institu-"tions." A future ornament of the Kamelia waves away tar and feathers, a favorite adminicle of virtue among the Klan doctors. No whipping, no violation of the law! But something mysterious and terrible awaits female persons unsatisfactory to the Kamelia. "We propose, whenever we feel the "need, to bring retribution in a man-"ner which, when it has been publicly "administered once or twice, will "bring the realization that women "have at last found a way of dealing "summarily with the problems con-"fronting them." 10-2-23

The astute gentlemen in charge of the receipts have found a way of dealing satisfactorily with their chief problem: New York

It is understood that the initiation fee in the women's organization will be in the neighborhood of $10. The robes, which are to have a little more material than the ones worn by the men, will be sold for about $6 or $6.50 each. These hooded robes, by the way, will also be manufactured by the organization turning out the Klan robes, which is a concern directly affiliated with the Klan. All the profits are thus distributed among the Klan officials. The robes will be white, trimmed with red and blue.

These patriots use the color of the flag, but the color of their dupes' money is what they're after. The scheme is neat. Keep the money in the family! We don't know what the orphanages and so on are going to get out of Kamelia. The Klan manufacturers of robes and hoods are going to get their $6 a head first. Mr. GORDON says that the gods of the Maine manufacturers of hoods, robes and trouble "have turned longingly to Nova "Scotia and the Provinces, where it "is proposed to garner a new crop of "Klan members." They think that Canada is fine territory in which to sell their "stuff."

THE STRONG MAN WEAKENS.

The last act of the tragi-comedy of Corfu is out of harmony with all that went before. MUSSOLINI, having exacted a fine of 50,000,000 lire from the Greeks, gives back 10,000,000 lire to be used for the relief of Greek and Armenian orphans. Thus, according to the Rome dispatches, he shows that the Italian Navy had no evil intentions when it accidentally killed a score or so of orphans in the bombardment of Corfu, and also proves that his action against Greece was not taken for financial profit. To the outer world this indicates that MUSSOLINI has a conscience, or at any rate a sharper ear for foreign opinion than had been supposed. In so far as he is trying to make atonement for the slaughter of the innocents at Corfu, let him by all means be applauded.

That the Italian Navy had no specific plans of aggression against the Corfu orphan asylum may be taken for granted. What that bombardment proved was that Italian naval intelligence was unaware that the fort at Corfu, dismantled for many years, was used as an orphan asylum; that Italian gunners were so unskillful that when shooting at an old fort on a hill they hit a bathing beach at the foot of the hill, and that the Italian naval command was apparently in a general mood of hilarity, inclined to open fire before discovering if there was anything to shoot at, and able to come back to sanity only when it appeared that some Englishmen might have been hit. This is to say nothing of the enthusiastic Italian press which hailed the achievement as a great victory, and denied that any Armenian orphans had been hit for several days after the fact was established to the satisfaction of the rest of the world.

It is probable that when the families of the murdered Italian officers have been compensated and the cost of the Corfu expedition paid, 40,000,000 lire will leave the Italian Government little, if any, profit. But this is not MUSSOLINI'S fault. When he seized Corfu he announced that Greece must pay not only the 50,000,000 lire fine, but the expenses of the occupation; and "next week the price will be higher." Then he discovered what should have been plain before the enterprise was begun, that England and France did not propose to let him stay in Corfu. He took the 50,000,000 lire because that was all he could get. But if what MUSSOLINI wanted was compensation for the families of the murdered men, he could have got it by ordinary negotiation. There was no need for sending forth fleets and armies and this drumming up of jingo nationalist sentiment which is now left very poorly satisfied.

MUSSOLINI's strong-arm work, in short, has won for Italy nothing that she could not have got by peaceful methods; but it has aroused a lively fear, suspicion and hatred of Italy in the small nations within her reach: it has caused an unfavorable reaction of public opinion all over the world, and it has shown that Italian diplomacy is short-sighted and clumsy. Where do sensible Italians find any national advantage in this? MUSSOLINI, in fact, is the most dangerous kind of autocrat—a muddle-headed autocrat with an uneasy conscience. His cardinal sin is that he doesn't know where he is going, and next to that might be placed the obvious fact that when he discovers where he has gone his first thought is to save his face. His methods are a good deal more like those of WILLIAM HOHENZOLLERN than of CAESAR. A stupid autocrat is an expensive luxury.

DIRIGO KU KLUX.

Once there were wandering Yankees in Yankeeland who were no friends of hard work. Some of them became "yarb doctors," "Injun doctors," lecturers on phrenology or spiritualism. Some drove "hulled corn" carts. Some used to sell "salve" or pills or "elixir" from an itinerant wagon, collecting a crowd by playing the fiddle or singing a comic song. Those were primitive getters of "easy money"; and little enough of it they got, usually. Their successors are wiser. Make yourself a Kleagle or an Exalted Cyclops. Go about the State, enlisting "citizens of the Invisible Empire" at $10 a head and $6.50 more for a robe with a hood to hide that head. It's an attractive business, even if it does seem strange that many "Maine folks," sensible, hard-headed, ironical, unless they have greatly changed, should part with their money so readily. New York Times

In the golden prime of Uncle SOLON CHASE'S steers Greenbackism flourished in Maine. You were a Greenbacker because you wanted more money, not because you wanted to part with some of the little you had. At any rate, Ku Klux pamphlets have been distributed widely in Maine. According to Mr. A. J. GORDON in The Boston Herald, the King Kleagle "of the Realm of Maine and his organizers are traveling constantly through every hamlet, town and city, exhorting and pleading for members who are able to donate $10 to become Knights of the Ku Klux Klan." We are reminded of our old friends, the "yarb doctors" and so on, by the versatility of the Maine Kleagle, "former hypnotist, barber, newspaper photographer, lecturer, motion picture promoter, and Salvation Army exhorter." A gifted person; and his invisible imperialists have just won a "great victory" in the Portland election. They say it themselves. 9-12-23

This "victory" was nearly as funny as the Klan is, considered merely in its fool aspect. Three plans of city government were submitted to the Portland voters. One was the present charter, the common form of city government, with a Mayor and a two-branched legislature. The second, a compromise, nobody wanted but the Mayor and a few of his friends. The third and successful plan, adopted by a plurality of 2,000, more than the necessary half of the whole vote, was a council manager charter. This improved form of city government was proposed by the Committee of One Hundred, composed of leading citizens. It recommended itself to the "progressives" generally. There was no doubt of its adoption until the Ku Klux came out for it. The conservatives, friends of the old system, sought to beat the new one by dwelling on this discrediting and unsavory advocacy of it by the Klan. The campaign was sweet as Summer until, in its last days, the Klansmen broke in, seeking to identify themselves with a movement sure to succeed, with a view to boasting of it afterward as another evidence of their "power." The Committee of One Hundred had to defend themselves against such defenders. Everybody was welcome to vote for the new charter; but it must be distinctly understood that the Klan was not the originator and would not be the boss of government under it.

The "victory" consisted in being on the side of the majority. Indeed, it was a "victory" in that the public disgust with the Klan didn't go so far as to defeat an excellent plan of city government simply because a lot of hooded noodles gave it their unwanted help. The Kludd of the Klavern should let that unpleasant fact temper the ardor of his thanksgiving prayer.

HARTFORD COURANT
SEPTEMBER 12, 1923

THE KLAN IN MAINE.

Newspaper yesterday agreed that the Klansmen in Portland, Me., scored a victory at the vote held in that city which abolished the old form of city government for the commission type. Here, so far as we can see, the Klan was within its rights for if the white Protestant gentiles form a majority of the electors they may frame the city government of Portland according to their wishes so long as they do not infringe upon the rights of the minority.

Perhaps they are also within their rights when they assert that they propose to parade in the city on Columbus Day but if they are they should waive it or select a different date. Their organization is based upon hatred of the Jew, the Negro and the Roman Catholic and in Maine, the latter group is the largest of the three. The Klan says naught of a parade upon Emancipation Day, which the Negro observes; it makes no mention of coming out in mask and gown on Yom Kippur which is now not so far off, but it feels an urge to be seen on Columbus Day.

Perhaps an event of the sort will make for peace and concord, to say naught of truth and justice, but it looks to us, to use a homely phrase, as if the Roman Catholics saw the day first and ought to be entitled to its enjoyment. Perhaps we can see the tactical advantage which the Klan has in view, that of assuming that if trouble results it can be laid at the door of the Catholic but, somehow, the motive does not appeal to us as a noble one.

It has been said that the mayor of the city will refuse to issue a permit for the parade but the mayor and all his works have been discredited by Monday's vote and the Klansmen may feel that they can ignore his wishes and go on with their show. By an official statement Governor Baxter has said that he does not know that any such order as the Klan exists and if it does it does not strike him as differing from any other secret society so he can be depended upon not to interfere. The matter is clearly up to the Portland authorities, if any still exist, and we wonder what they are likely to do about it.

WHAT may prove to be the most important political development of the week is the victory of the Ku Klux Klan in the municipal election at Portland, Maine. Although the ostensible issue was the adoption of the council-manager plan of city government, this was admitted to be a mere pretext for the exhibition of the power of the Klan. The immediate results of the victory are permission to the Klan to hold a counter-demonstration to the parade of the Knights of Columbus on Columbus Day—a proceeding which is likely to end in violence—and control of public education in the interest of the causes which the Klan holds dear. And this is only the beginning of the Klan in politics. New York Herald 9-12-23

Bouanchaud Interprets Public Speeches of Fuqua on Klan Issue.

New Orleans, La.

Lieutenant Governor Hewitt Bouanchaud, candidate for governor, yesterday issued the following statement: 10-18-23

"I have been asked to point precisely to the exact detail in which my position on the Ku Klux Klan differs from that position taken by Mr. Fuqua.

"To begin with, one radical difference between Mr. Fuqua's public expressions on the klan and my own is that Mr. Fuqua has nowhere, in his public utterances that I have seen, denounced the invisible empire of the Ku Klux Klan as the enemy of constitutional government, nor has he declared his opposition to that organization.

"In every single public utterance of mine I have done so in no uncertain terms, and I now repeat my unalterable opposition to that organization.

"This is the first marked difference in our attitudes on this important question.

Says Fuqua Seeks Klan Votes.

"In his public speeches Mr. Fuqua repeatedly has declared that he solicited the votes of the members of the Ku Klux Klan.

"I repeatedly have declared that I never have sought the vote of a known klansman.

"At Baton Rouge, Mr. Fuqua said: 'I want—yes, I solicit the vote of every man who is, under the law, qualified to cast a vote in a Democratic primary called to make this nomination, whether the voter be a Catholic or Protestant, Jew or Gentile, klan or anti-klan, highlander or lowlander, saint or sinner.'

"At Donaldsonville I declared:

"'I now repeat that I do not and cannot court favors by way of soliciting votes from the invisible empire of the Ku Klux Klan, because in the event of my election I am going to be opposed officially, resolutely to that organization. My position is radically different from that of my two distinguished opponents.

"This is the second marked difference between Mr. Fuqua and myself on this paramount issue.

Reiterates Opposition.

"Dudley Guilbeau, then a candidate for governor, declared that if elected he would not appoint a klansman to public office and asked his opponents what they proposed to do in this respect.

"I answered that if elected governor I would not appoint a known klansman to public office during my administration. This I now repeat.

"Mr. Fuqua answered that he would be the sole judge of the qualifications of his appointees. He thereby reserves the right to appoint a klansman to office. 10-18-23

Membership and Activities Listed; Resting Place

New Orleans, La.

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 10.—If the Ku Klux Klan goes to looking for any of the interesting klan records which Governor Parker is supposed to have they will not find them in Baton Rouge. Where they are, when they were sent away, and where they were sent to, the governor will not say. 11-11-23

Governor Parker would not discuss the matter one way or the other, but it is known that the records are no longer in Baton Rouge.

These records have proven very interesting documents. They were records of the klan membership in a number of communities and there were other records of klan activities in the governor's possession.

There has always been a great deal of speculation as to where the governor got these records of klan activities, but apparently no one but the governor and the party or parties from whom he got them know, for the governor has never intimated to any one where they came from.

For a time these records were kept under lock and key in the executive office. Now it develops they are no longer there. Where they are, again no one but the governor knows, and he won't tell.

KLAN ATTORNEYS SEEK TO FORCE JUDGE OFF CASE

TRIALS POSTPONED TO JANUARY TERM

Unprejudiced Assert Decisions Are Fair and Impartial.

Bastrop, La., Nov. 9.—Efforts to displace Judge Odom in the trial of alleged klansmen, on misdeamor charges growing out of raids made by hooded bands within the last eighteen months and for which bills of information were filed by the attorney general's office today were being made by attorneys for the defense in the way of an appeal to the supreme court to overrule Judge Odom in his refusal to recuse himself. It is believed the appeal would be filed with the court within the next ten days. 11-10-23

New Orleans, La.

Four men, J. K. Skipwith, Marvin Pickett, Benton Pratt and W. G. McIntosh, had been convicted on charges of carrying firearms on the premises of Alonzo Braddock, and T. Jeff Burnett had been convicted of assault with a dangerous weapon on Harris Neelis when the motion asking recusation was filed. The motion was made because the defense believed the court was biased and prejudiced, attorneys declared. Judge Odom refused to recuse himself, holding the motion was based on conclusions.

Delayed Until January.

Due to the time necessary to prepare the appeal and obtain a decision from the supreme court, all the remaining cases on the docket were postponed indefinitely and probably will not be tried until the January term of court.

During the recess the judge will have under advisement the cases of J. K. Skipwith, Marvin Pickett, Benton Pratt and W. G. McIntosh tried for conspiring to compel Alonzo Braddock to leave his home and Harley Rogers tried for assault on Harris Neelis, as a motion for a new trial for T. Jeff Burnett.

The cases in which the judge was asked to recuse himself are: J. K. Skipwith, T. J. Burnett and F. Higginbotham, conspiring to compel Thomas F. Richard to leave his place of business; Dr. B. M. McKoin and W. P. Kirkpatrick conspiring to compel Addie May Hamilton to leave Morehouse parish: J. K. Skipwith, T. J. Burnett, [illegible] Gray, Oliver Skipwith and Smith Stevenson, conspiring to compel a person to leave an automobile, on five counts all relating to the kidnapings on August 24, 1922, when Watt Daniel and Richards were last seen alive.

Called Blow to Klan. 11-10-23

Fines of $10 and costs or five days in jail were imposed on those convicted. It was reported that Captain Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan, would make a speech following adjournment of the court but was denied an opportunity by his attorney.

New Orleans, La.

Conviction of the five men rather than the sentences imposed was held by many to be the outstanding accomplishment of the trials and the effect gained by the show at hooded mobs and klan activities would be far reaching and do much to prevent further outrages. One went so far as to predict that with the conclusion of all the cases pending a step would be taken that would result in the passage of a federal statute which would make it an act of treason to take the klan oath.

While Bastrop is virtually united in its denunciation of Judge Odom there is a feeling among those who are not prejudiced that the judge has proven to be fair and impartial in every respect and unswayed by his friendship, in some cases life long, with klansmen and the defendants. Before court convened Mer Rouge felt bitter because acquittals were certain in their opinion, and Bastrop was not much concerned because of overconfidence, the condition now is the reverse. Judge Odom is the peer of all jurists in the eyes of Mer Rouge.

LEAGUE AGAINST KLUXERS BACKED AT EROS MEETING

New Orleans, La.

Monroe, La., Nov. 13.—Delegations from Ouachita, Jackson, Morehouse, Lincoln, Richland and other parishes attended the second organization meeting at Eros of the Caucasian-American League tonight, according to A. B. Parker of Monroe, who is looking after the Ouachita section of the organization. The league was formed at a mass meeting in Eros two weeks or more ago. Mr. Parker headed the Monroe delegation at the meeting and presented the charter or principles on which the organization is based and the charter was adopted with a few amendments. 11-14-23

"More than two hundred persons have signified their intention of joining the organization in addition to about 100 charter members," said Mr. Parker. "Its purpose is to combat the Ku Klux Klan. It is not a political organization, as has been asserted by persons who would prevent the formation of such an organization."

HOLCOMBE URGES KLAN UNMASKING, HITS INTOLERANCE

Would Favor Measure to Prohibit Public Parades by Hooded Men.

New Orleans, La.

Baton Rouge, La.,—Nov. 10.—State Senator Charles A. Holcombe, candidate for re-election from East Baton Rouge parish, issued a statement this week declaring his position on the Ku Klux Klan issue, in which he says the Klan has a legal right to exist, but in his opinion no organization has the right to appear or parade on the streets or on the public highways in hood and mask. He would, therefore, favor any measure to prohibit this practice and would vote for any measure uniform in its operations which would require every secret organization to file at stated periods a list of its members.

Senator Holcombe's statement follows: 11-11-23

"Since my announcement for re-election to the state Senate, I have been frequently asked what is my position as to the Ku Klux Klan. I have unhesitatingly stated my position every time the question has been asked that the voters have the right to know the position of every candidate for the Legislature on this question. There should be no ducking, no equivocation and no mental reservations; and, as far as I am concerned, there shall be none.

"I am not now, nor have I ever been, a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

"The Ku Klux Klan by that name or by any other name it chooses to adopt, unquestionably has the legal right to exist so long as it violates no law. It also has the legal right to restrict its membership as it sees fit; but, in my opinion, no organization, whatever may be its announced purposes, however patriotic it may profess to be, should have the right to appear or parade on the streets or on the public highways of the state in hood and mask. I would, therefore, favor any measure to prohibit this practice, and I would also vote for any measure, uniform in its operations, which would require every secret organization to file at stated periods a list of its members.

"I stand four square on the Constitution of the United States and of the state of Louisiana. In both of these instruments the people are guaranteed the freedom of religious worship. The moment we are denied this privilege, we cease to be a democracy.

"I am for peace and religious tolerence. To me it seems as uncharitable to criticize a man's religion as it is to belittle his looks or laugh at his clothes. I trust God will speed the day when this wave of religious intolerance which seems to be sweeping the entire country will pass away and men and women will put into practice the principles of the Golden Rule, and I also trust that in the future a man's qualifications for office and not his religion, shall be the test of his fitness.

"If I am returned to the Senate, I shall at all times, endeavor to respect the sentiment of the people I represent, without bias, without prejudice, and with a desire only to protect the various interests of the city and parish and to serve the people of the state of Louisiana. I respectfully solicit the vote of every Democrat."

Skipwith Tells of Organizing Party, but Says Sheriff Told Him to Do So

Montgomery, Ala.

BASTROP, LA., Nov. 5.—Four alleged members of the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan, including Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops, today were found guilty of "carrying firearms on the premises of another" in connection with hooded band activities in Morehouse parish last year.

Sentences will be pronounced later.

Others found guilty were Benton Pratt, Marvin Pickett and W. G. McIntosh.

Three alleged Klansmen, tried jointly with the four, were found not guilty. They were Sam Eldridge, Sam Cox and "Cud" Pickett.

The seven were tried jointly before Judge C. Odom in sixth district court. They were charged with a raid on the home of Alonso Braddock, farmer, who was believed to be engaged in the illegal manufacture of whiskey.

The cases were the first tried of a series of crimes charged to klansmen which have been set for trial this week.

Skipwith Testifies.

Captain Skipwith testified he organized the party to make the Braddock raid, but that he had verbal authority from Sheriff Fred Carpenter.

Sheriff Carpenter admitted he had given Skipwith verbal authority to bring in some stills that had been reported to the captain. Asked by the prosecuting attorney if he would have entered the Braddock home in the manner followed by the raiders to make an arrest for a misdemeanor and without a warrant, the sheriff said he would want a warrant.

Captain Skipwith said he could not remember the names of all members of the party but that "all I invited didn't come." He said the party captured two or three stills before reaching the Braddock place.

Braddock in describing the raid said the party appeared shortly after midnight, broke down the door and entered the house before he and his wife could dress.

Home Full Of People.

"The house was full of people," he said in explaining that the party was a large one. He identified seven of the possible forty. That night he was taken to Bastrop and turned over to the sheriff.

Pratt, of those identified, admitted he was a member of the party but did not leave the car nor enter the Braddock premises.

McIntosh also admitted he was with the party, but that he did not leave the highway. He said he had been invited by Captain Skipwith to participate in the raid having been told it was a "sheriff's party." He said Skipwith led the party and gave all the orders.

Russ Harkness testified he heard Marvin Pickett at a cafe say the day after the raid that he was at Braddock's the night before.

Cox, Eldridge and "Cud" Pickett denied they participated in the raid and presented alibis.

A flaw in the bills of information charging the men were armed with shot guns instead of pistols as subsequently testified to, caused a delay in the proceedings. The state moved for permission to correct the bill. The defense objected but Judge Odom granted the state's motion.

At the conclusion of the trial, the case of Laurie Calhoun, former deputy sheriff, also an alleged klansman was called. Calhoun was charged with an assault wit ha dangerous weapon.

KLAN CANDIDATES FOR FUQUA OR LONG

Fifty-five Country Parishes Report 208 Candidates for Two Houses; 114 Pledge Against Klan.

Times-Picayune

Reports from fifty-five country parishes on commitments of candidates for the House and Senate of the Louisiana Legislature, made as of November 6, show that the upper chamber is, in all human probability, safe against either control by or successful obstruction from Ku Klux Klan influence.

11-18-23

New Orleans, La.

It shows, however, that danger threatens of an obstructionist group in the lower house, able to prevent the passage of anti-klan measures. The eight parishes from which no detailed reports were obtainable are nearly all in territory where klan influence is strong.

These two conclusions are based upon the country data, read in connection with the known commitments of practically every candidate for either House or Senate in the parish of Orleans.

The following table shows the country reports; "B" standing for Bouanchaud, "F" for Fuqua, "L" for Long, "N" for noncommittal on governorship.

THE HOUSE

	"B"	"F"	"L"	"N"	Tot.
Protestant,
Anti-klan ..	13	13	3	10	39
Catholic,
Anti-klan ..	41	2	..	4	47
Noncommittal	2	18	9	14	43
Pro-klan	..	18	8	8	34
Totals	56	51	20	36	163

THE SENATE

	"B"	"F"	"L"	"N"	Tot
Protestant,
Anti-klan ..	6	7	..	5	18
Catholic,
Anti-klan ..	9	1	..	..	10
Noncommttal ..		3	7	..	10
Pro-klan	..	6	..	1	7
Totals	15	17	1	12	45

The word "noncommittal" in the above tables, means noncommittal upon the matter of the klan. In several instances, candidates said it was "no issue."

The missing parish reports would cover approximately fifteen candidates for the House and six for the Senate, and will supply ten House seats and three Senate seats. One of these parishes would certainly return an antiklan member of the House, and five of them, almost certainly, five members at least "noncommittal." Two of them would be in doubt.

Times-Picayune

The Times-Picayune presents these figures not as being entirely without error, but as representing the best information obtainable by persons well qualified to find out the facts.

Several candidates of the Jewish faith for the House, and two for the Senate are included in the "Protestant Anti."

Analysis of the Tables

11-18-23

It will be seen by reference to the table upon the candidates for the House, that there are eighty-six of the 163 candidates committed against the Ku Klux Klan, and therefore, dependable in their votes for laws against the mask and requiring the publicity of membership.

Fifty-four of these avowed "antis" are likewise committed to Mr. Bouanchaud and only fifteen of them to Mr. Fuqua.

Reference to the same table, shows that seventy-seven candidates are either "pro klan," or noncommittal upon the topic.

Only two candidates so classified are committed to Mr. Bouanchaud, while thirty-six of them are committed to Mr. Fuqua and seventeen of them to Mr. Long. These twenty-two candidates either "pro" or "noncommittal" on the klan, and who are likewise noncommittal on the governorship, are chiefly in parishes where the majority of the vote is swaying between Fuqua and Long.

The table of senatorial candidates may not be quite complete, for several parish reports failed to differentiate between House candidates and Senate candidates, but the evidence in the reports indicates that it is essentially near accurary.

Reference to the table, shows that there are listed twenty-eight candidates committed against the klan, and only seventeen either "pro" or "noncommittal."

Of the twenty-eight, those committed to Bouanchaud number fifteen, and those committed to Mr. Fuqua number eight.

Of the seventeen who are "pro klan" or "noncommittal," none is for Bouanchaud and nine for Fuqua. The eight remaining, are in territory that is debatable between Fuqua and Long.

An analysis of the reports indicates that in many parishes candidates have avoided the issue, and others have followed the trend of local sentiment. In a considerable group there is every evidence of a concerted effort to have a "klan delegation." In six instances candidates are reported as "member" or "leader," and are apparently so known in their home communities. They are divided among Fuqua, Long, and "noncommittal."

In next Sunday's Times-Picayune will appear a further analysis of the survey, showing indicated strength for the respective candidates by congressional districts.

BASTROP UNDER ARMS AS INQUIRY STARTS IN MER ROUGE MURDERS

Commercial Appeal 1-5-23

Sensational Evidence Expected at Hearing Opening Today.

Memphis, Tenn.

MARTIAL LAW PROBABLE

First Sign of Trouble Means Troops Will Rule.

NO NEW ARRESTS MADE

State Decides First to Produce Its Case, Then Convince People Dastardly Crime Has Been Committed, Justifying Wholesale Arrests—Skipworth's Movements Mysterious.

BY ROBERT LEE.

(By Chicago Tribune-The Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

MER ROUGE, La., Jan. 4.—Several reversals in the form of conducting the prosecution of the klan investigation in Morehouse Parish marked the eve of the public hearing which opens tomorrow in the Bastrop courthouse.

The first of these was the announcement that St. Clair Adams, in whom many have placed their hopes of severe prosecution, has withdrawn from the case as a special assistant attorney.

The withdrawal of Mr. Adams is said to have suggested the changes of the programme. Instead of making arrests no arrests shall be made until after the public hearing has demonstrated to the people that a grave crime has gone unpnished and that its authors should be locked up.

This announcement was made by Attorney General Adolph Vernon Coco, after conference with his first assistant, Seth Guion, and his second assistant, Semmes Walmsley.

In the place of Mr. Adams there has been appointed Senator Warren B. Howard of Shreveport. Mr. Howard has served in the Senate with distinction and is regarded with confidence by his associates.

Troops on the Move.

Today there began many activities calculated to sharpen the appetites of those who have been waiting for months to be spectators. Troop movement began early in the day. The cavalry detachment which arrived on Wednesday was divided. One-half of the troopers were assigned to Bastrop. The others remain in Mer Rouge.

While cavalrymen were riding through the woods on the muddy road to Bastrop, it became known about the Bastrop courthouse square that the proclamation for martial law is in the possession of Adjutant General Toombs.

It is required only for the adjutant general to tack this to the first tree and Morehouse Parish will fall under the first absolute law that it has known for 14 months.

The adjutant general established headquarters in Bastrop yesterday and assumed command of the military forces. The attorneys for the prosecution also have established branch headquarters in Bastrop, but their main offices will remain in Mer Rouge. Here are also the headquarters of Department of Justice operatives, of whom there are seven in Bastrop.

The interest enters about Courthouse Square. One of the subjects of profound speculation was the withdrawal of Captain Skipworth from his conspicuous position on the square. Before today he could be found all day long, the gaunt mysterious gray cyclops of Klan 34, receiving his subjects in the view of the whole world. Today he appeared periodically under the wooden awnings of the stores across the street, but most of the time he was out of sight.

In the courtroom there was a moderate amount of bustle. The limited seating capacity will be strained to its utmost. Arrangements were made for guards throughout the building. Of course, if martial law is proclaimed the militia will take over control of the courthouse.

The probability is that the hearing will last anywhere from ten to thirty days. In view of this unprecedented prospect for vistiors the vacant corners are beginning to blossom with hot dog bazars and popcorn venders.

There is hope that the report of the physicians in the post mortem examination of the bodies of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards, who were beaten to death in a klan execution will be placed on record before the close of the first day. This will open the way for the questioning of witnesses.

Subpoenas Are Ready.

A first hand survey of parts of Morehouse Parish was made by Attorneys Guion and Walmsley today. Subpoenas for witnesses suspected of klan affiliation are in the hands of process servers and will be sent out as occasion requires. Troopers will be sent with deputies if there is reason to suspect reistance.

The open hearing has extensive possibilities. It is purely a machine of the prosecution. The state is not required to expose its own witnesses. It may limit the procedure to the examination of suspected persons. A subpoena from the open hearing is in full force anywhere in the state. Witnesses are required to answer under threat of imprisonment for contempt.

Questions are asked only in direct examination. There is no cross-examination by the defense. In this instance there will be no attorneys for the klan present to offer even the slightest obstruction to any course of investigation the state may decide upon.

Skipworth's Threats.

Capt. Skipworth has announced that he proposes to "raise hell" when he gets on the stand. The attorneys for the state have suggested that probably he will not. The captain will be guided by the severe rules of court procedure and limited by the usages governing imprisonment for contempt. Witnesses may be detained and isolated. It has been intimated that some of them may be locked up pending grand jury action.

It is certain that all the important evidence obtained by this open hearing will be held by the state and inaccessible to the defense until the proper time.

The purpose of the open hearing is to emphasize a breakdown in law.

Where it is believed by the state authorities that the people have been prevented from exercising the ordinary weapons of political conduct the public hearing exposes to the multitude the preponderance of the evidence.

Then with public sympathy gained and with the force of mass opinion directed it is the theory no grand jury no matter how affiliated or how obtuse to the demonstration of a particular exigency, is likely to disregard a summons; and for the further reason that any grand jury under such conditions may vote indictments, with perfect complaisance as against a sinister influence as having been forced to do.

Then the Grand Jury.

When the public hearing is concluded the state gathers up its evidence, arranges it and presents it to the grand jury. The process thereafter is routine. In Louisiana arrests and trials may be directed on information on any charge below that of murder.

For murder a person can be accused only in an indictment. When the first evidence is presented in the public hearing there is bound to be a shudder.

This will be occasioned by that part of the medical report describing the number and variety of wounds sustained by Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards when they were slain. This description will show that some kind of a machine was used to break the bones of the victims. It will show that Daniels and Richards were literally hacked and broken piecemeal, a slow, savage process, punctuated by demands for confessions.

Horribly Tortured.

It will be shown in substance that the hooded crew began with the whip, asked questions, hacked off a foot and asked more questions; that a surgeon's knife was brought into play, and again a demand made for a confession that Daniel and Richards attempted to shoot Dr. McKoin, that a hand was hewed off, and another hand; and that finally, achieving the very sublimity of atrocity the murderers concluded by placing their victims in some kind of a machine which crushed every bone by slow pressure and brought the death which that night must have been the relief eternal.

It is the belief of the prosecution that Daniels was made to stand by and behold the butchery of his friend so that he might be horrified and unnerved by the fate that awaited him. This showing by the state is based upon the discovery that the numerous bone fractures were exactly similar to the fraction of an inch.

It is regarded as likely by the prosecutors that the publication of the medical report will be alone sufficient to arouse the sentiment of the people in favor of a determined prosecution.

HOW MER ROUGE HORROR BEGAN

Afro-American 1-5-23

Brazen Custom of White Men Living Openly With Colored Women Was Spark To Powder

Baltimore, Md

MAYOR TOOK PART

B.M.McKoin, Town's Chief Official, Fled To Baltimore When Accused

By Uncle Bennie Brown

"I would rather die than go back to Mer Rouge." "I am not connected with the Ku Klux Klan." These two statements were made by Dr. B. M. McKoin, white, Ex-Mayor and Ku Klux leader of this little town in Morehouse Parrish, La., shortly after three judges of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City had ordered him held to await extradition to stand trial charged with being one of a hooded mob which last August kidnapped and killed Watt Daniels and F. F. Richards, white and threw their bodies in one of the lakes in this "red sea."

As these words were spoken officers of the law were on their way to Baltimore with affidavits not only connecting Dr. McKoin with the Mer Rouge murder but high Kleakles in the Klan were telling the New Orleans Times-Picayune that he was the outstanding leader of the order in Morehouse Parrish and had taken part in other raids.

Began In Miscegenation

In the above situation is reflected the inevitable culmination of Ku Kluxism and disregard for law and human rights in the South. Like chickens they are coming home to roost. Like boomerangs they are striking back at the vitals of those who gave them birth.

Colored people throughout the country probably will not recognize from the facts sifting to the surface, involving as they do only white men, that the Mer Rouge outrages had their beginning when hooded mobs began the regulation of certain relations of white men and the underworld of colored women. Incidently bootlegging and gambling have entered into the equation but the first activities of the Ku Klux Klan were to turn its attention to the general custom long established along the stretches of the Mississippi Valley wherein white men evaded one half of the marriage laws preventing unions among the races by taking as their common-law wives young women of the race. While on the large plantations in the remote sections many times these common-law marriages were often treated as consecrated unions, the man taking the woman into his home and often rearing a family of octoroons or creoles, among the baser elements it often merged into prostitution. Especially was this true in the towns of Northern Louisiana and Southern Arkansas.

Best Elements Condoned Terrorism

To understand the culmination of incidents in Mer Rouge it is necessary to understand the conditions leading up to them. Few people realize the degree to which the spirit of the Ku Klux Klan has warped the moral fibre of the South. This spirit was instituted years ago when the first Ku Klux were organized for the sole purpose of suppressing the constitutional rights of the newly-emancipated Negroes of the South. Its method was terrorism under cover of darkness. Its practices developed the most cowardly instincts of white men and its condonement by the decent elements of the white race tore the very heart out of their religion and made a mockery of the legal machinery.

They had to create a new God to fit into their scheme of human justice. Brave men and kind hearts there are in the South, but even the fairest and most liberal of the white men and women in the South have abnormal ideas as to human relations. It is no wonder then that the spirit of the Ku Klux Klan allowed to grow would finally destroy the regard for law until this hydra headed monster would defy the existence of constituted legal machinery.

This is what happened in Mer Rouge. This is the same condition that is prevalent in hundreds of small towns in the South and in fact is slowly creeping over the entire country. For just in the proportion that Ku Kluxism is allowed to spread just so will the conditions that made the setting for the tragedies and outrages of Mer Rouge develop over the country, North and South.

Town Divided Into Two Factions

Mer Rouge is the outpost of a Catholic stronghold. There would naturally be some opposition to Ku Kluxism. When then, last summer the hooded mobs instituted a series of night raids this little town divided itself into two factions. Dr. McKoin, captain of the Mer Rouge Ku Klux, was elected Mayor and immediately Ku Klux tactics were instituted in administering the law. Under cover of darkness raids were made. White men and colored women were flogged and warned. Then the hell fire of mob violence broke loose in both factions. Fire was fought with fire.

One night Dr. McKoin, the mayor, who is a physician, received a call to attend a patient. On his way back somebody shot a fusillade of shot through the back of his automobile. He told people in Mer Rouge that he had been lurred to a lonely spot through a fake call by his enemies and had narrowly escaped death by shooting. He put the blame for the attact on the anti-Klan faction, naming several of his assailants, Daniels and Richards among the number.

Then the Klan got busy.

Shortly after this there was a big meeting in the Parrish to promote the good roads movement. Stirred by the rumors as well as interest in the meeting a large number of men and women attended the meeting. The meeting had just ended and the people were making their way home along the road when a hooded mob swooped down in automobiles and began a search. When the searching was over five men taken from the machines were spirited away into the darkness.

Only three of these men ever came back. Daniels and Richards disappeared and were never seen until a charge of dynamite lifted them from the slimy ooze of one of the many lakes in the Parrish.

Governor Parker Gets Busy

Perhaps the whole matter might have gone the way of forgotten things but Governor Parker saw this monster surely reaching out its fangs over other counties just as it had Morehouse Parrish. He laid the matter before the Department of Justice at Washington and they too saw the danger. While the Department of Justice has never been able to ferret out the perpetrators of lynchings when the victims were defenseless Negroes it got busy one this job and get results.

In the meantime Dr. McKoin had come to Baltimore and began study in post graduate work in his profession. When two of the members of the mob that murdered the two white men were run to cover and confessed under promise of immunity Dr. McKoin was named as a member of the mob which committed the deed. He was arrested and held for extradition.

There is no doubt that the whole matter brings the existence of the Ku Klux Klan to a crisis. The never failing law of human compensation and adjustment seems to have decreed that the blood that must flow to wipe out this national disgrace will flow between white men. The men and women who must always suffer most from any injustice in the long run are the men and women whose conscience are wiped out by the commission of the deeds. These incidents will tear the last mask from the cowardly Klan. Never will any American citizen have any doubt now that the very existence of any organization which purports to uphold law by breaking law is a menace. The very spirit of the thing excites the basest passions in men and opens avenues for the most brutal crimes. Even if the Klan itself never broke a law its very existence excites to lawless acts both white and black men.

Whatever the outcome of the Mer Rouge affair, the Klan must go, or Caucasian civilization will disintegrate.

Two Infa[illegible] Companies to [illegible] Order at Mer Ro[illegible] Murder Hearings Today.

SOLDIERS TO SEARCH EVERY CITIZEN

Squadron of State Cavalry Brings Up Rear in the Community Where Tense Feeling Prevails.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., January 4.—The "open hearing" in the Morehouse kidnaping and murder cases begins at the parish courthouse tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Final preparations were completed by the state this afternoon in the proceedings, by which an effort will be made to indict those persons believed to be responsible for the masked and robed mob action on August 24, when two of five men kidn[illegible]ped were killed and their bodies cast into a lake.

Only one prisoner will face the bar at tomorrow's hearing unless the state sets into motion its dragnet to scoop up 35 or 45 men believed by the authorities members of the mob.

State officials remained silent tonight as to when additional arrests will occur. It was understood they were in possession of a list of those implicated named by two men who were said to have confessed under the promise of immunity.

Martial Law Likely.

Adjutant-General Toombs failed to promulgate the martial law order he was said to have in his possession. He desired to put off such action as long as possible, he said. However, it was known the slightest display of firearms would be m[illegible] with a military order.

Firearms are prevalent in both Mer Rouge and Bastrop in unprecedented quantities. Mer Rouge citizens in particular are known to have armed themselves due to the strained feelings between the hostile factions.

Those entering the courthouse tomorrow will be searched for firearms it was learned. The courthouse will be protected by two companies of state troops now encamped on the courthouse and jail grounds.

A squadron of state cavalry was moved today from Mer Rouge to Bastrop. leaving the remainder of the troop at Mer Rouge where a company of infantry is encamped. The mounted soldiers are expected to be used in serving subpoenas and making arrests. The conditions of the roads required the usage of such troops, it was stated.

Hold Soldiers Ready.

The company commander of the Opelousas infantry announced today he was in receipt of instructions to hold his company in readiness for movement at any time. It said he also had transportation and rations orders. If this company is ordered out there will be three companies of infantry and one each of cavalry and machine guns in Morehouse.

Attorney-General A. V. Coco arrived here today and was in conference with his assistants. He announced that Howard Warren, state senator and a leading attorney of Shreveport, has been employed as a special prosecutor to fill the vacancy created by the sudden resignation of St. Clair Adams, of New Orleans, last night. The attorney-general will also be assisted by T. Semmes W[illegible]sley, George S. Guion and Paul A. [illegible]payrac, assistant attorney-general.

Ma[illegible] Witneses.

Wholesale subpoenas were in preparation today for the summoning of witnesses for the hearing. In addition to those summoned, all persons are privileged to enter the court of justice and asked to be permitted to testify. It was believed there would be more than 100 witnesses, including many women.

The witnesses will be sworn, examined by the district attorney but not cross-examined, and the testimony taken down in shorthand. The hearing will be before the district judge. At the conclusion the state, if it thinks the evidence justifies, will ask for a grand jury to return indictments.

This is the third time in the history of the state such proceedings has been invoked.

T. J. Burnett, former deputy sherriff, flanked by some of Louisiana's finest legal talent, will meet his charge of murder with an alibi. He was to prove he was working at the Southern Carbon plant at the time the kidnaping occurred. The timekeeper by whom he was to prove this, however, was kidnapped last Friday night and has disappeared.

Attorneys for Burnett announced today they would waive preliminary trial through the usual channels, a privilege according all persons charged with capital offenses in this state.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, former Mer Rouge mayor, charged by Governor Parker with murder, was riding through the southern states tonight en route to Bastrop. With him were two traveling companions, a deputy sheriff and a detective. McKoin will enter his home parish a free man, the charges being lifted when an extradition tangle developed and he agreed to compromise by returning voluntary.

The governor, rabid anti-klan, has charged that the physician was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. This, however, was not the first time the klan issue has been brought into the case. J. L. Daniels, one of those flogged on the fatal night, declared the costumes worn by the mob members what "what we know as the Ku Klux Klan." Gossip linking the Morehouse klan with the kidnaping and murders become so current that the supreme authorities of the Louisiana invisible empire sent investigators to Morehouse to ascertain who were responsible.

All activities of masked mobs in this vicinity during the last year or more will come under the spotlight, it was understood.

Mer Rouge Mayor Tells of Feeling Held by Captain Skipworth for Chief Executive.

Constitution

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., January 11.—Stories of a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in the Morehouse parish courthouse, of a meeting of a select committee to pass on the question of a Mer Rouge citizen charged with "anti-klan" activities and of instructions given three Mer Rouge citizens to "leave town" contributed to the record today in the open investigation, now under way in the hooded band activities in Morehouse and the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richard.

For the first time during the investigation the name of Governor John M. Parker was brought to the fore by a witness.

"Isn't is true that Captain Skipwith always became indignant when Governor Parker's name was mentioned?" was asked of R. L. Dade, mayor of Mer Rouge, who described himself as a former klansman.

Dade replied in the affirmative.

Captain Skipwith is exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan organization.

Dade was testifying as to the meetings being held to "restore peace in Mer Rouge."

"Under the regalia of the klan had there not arisen a condition in the parish that is intolerable?" Dade was asked. "Isn't it a fact that the klan has superceded the constituted authorities?"

"Yes, in a great measure," said Dade.

Merchant Testifies.

Hugh Clark, Mer Rouge merchant, who admitted that he is a klansman, brought forward the case of Addie May Hamilton, who testified that she was deported from Louisiana by members of the klan with a declaration that at the request of the young woman that she be permitted to return to her home near Mer Rouge, he circulated a petition and obtained the approval of Captain Skipwith for her return.

Throughout the testimony today as on previous days, the name of Captain Skipwith had a prominent place.

One witness, Fred Higginbotham, who testified that he was a member of the klan, declared the only officer of the organization he cold name was Skipwith and another asserted that directions that three Mer Rouge citizens quit the community was given by Skipwith.

Membership of the klan was given by Clark as between 300 and 400.

"The woods was full of them," Clark said in describing the attendance at an initiation ceremony in a field some distance from the highway between Bastrop and Mer Rouge.

Clark was on the witness stand a large part of the afternoon.

Clark told of circulating the petition seeking permission for the return of Addie May Hamilton, but could not recall all those who signed it. He could name only five men whom he could name as members of the klan. One there, he said, was Captain Skipwith, another Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge; "Pink" Kirkpatrick, George Sims and L. T. Snider.

McKoin and Kirkpatrick were two of the men the young woman previously testified she recognized as among a delegation of six hooded men who came to her home and ordered her to leave the state.

Pressed for more names of klan members, Clark asked Judge Fred L. Odom, before whom the inquiry is being held, if he was compelled to answer.

Judge Odom advised him to do so.

"Well, there was Sims—I can't remember any others. The woods were full of them. Everything seems to have slipped my memory," Clark said.

"Where were you the night of August 24?" was the next question.

"Well, you know that's a funny

Ku Klux Klan — 1923. II Louisiana

tbing," Clark replied. "I have heard so many rumors that I decided to find out just where I was on the 24th. I asked a friend and he recalled that I was at a Masonic meeting on that date and I went to the secretary of the organization, of which I am treasurer, and he checked up and established that I was present. I then remembered what happened there. Some of the fellows who live in Collinston came in and told us of having brought back J. L. Daniel and W. C Andrews and "Tot" Davenport. They said they had been flogged by masked men."

August 24 is the date of the disappearance of Watt Daniel and Richard. J. L. Daniel, Davenport and Andrews were taken prisoner by the black hooded band at the same time Watt Daniel and Richard were kidnaped.

Was McKoin's Bodyguard.

Clark said that on the night an attempt was made to assassinate Dr. McKoin—about which the kidnaped men said they were questioned when they were taken—he acted as a bodyguard for the physician to allow him to complete his round of calls.

Clark described the bullet holes in McKoin's car which he said were made by buckshot. He declared it "miraculous" that McKoin escaped injury.

Mrs. Clark preceded her husband on the witness stand. She testified she did not know her husband was a member of the Ku Klux. Mrs. Clark was called to verify a statement made by another witness that she had remarked that "the next time the Ku Klux got Richard he would not get off so light."

"If I made that statement I was just like all other women, talking about something that everybody else was talking about," she said.

During the testimony of Dade it developed that he had received anonymous instructions to "clean up the town."

"What were the substance of the letters," Dade was asked.

"That we were wallowing in a cesspool of lawlessness," Dade said.

"They said for us to clear up, clean up the town and if I didn't they would swoop down 1,000 strong and do it themselves. The letters were signed '100 per cent Americans' and 'the Vigilante Committee.'"

"You showed the letters to Dr. McKoin and Captain Skipwith, did you not?"

"Yes, I handed the letter to Captain Skipwith, who told me if I cleaned up the town I would not be getting such letters. Dr. McKoin also said 'why don't you clean up the town like I did?'

"I said it is just as clean as when you were mayor."

It was also during Dade's testimony that it was brought out that meetings were held between Mer Rouge citizens and klan leaders followed by instructions from Skipwith that three Mer Rouge citizens should leave.

Reports were current that A. H. Davenport, of Mer Rouge, was "the brains" of the anti-klan Dade. Then a conferer was arranged. Dade "clear the Davenport family name and also to discuss A. C. Whipple, Tom Milner and Walter Campbell and Governor Parker.

"Davenport's position was satisfactorily explained," the witness testified, "and Skipwith said he would see to it that the Davenports were protected but that I would have to tell Whipple, Campbell and Wilner to leave."

Fred Higginbotham declared one of the meeting places of the klan in regalia was the Morehouse parish courthouse court room in which the present hearing is in progress.

Higginbotham said he was well acquainted with men in the parish and that he practically knew everybody in Bastrop, but to "save me, I just couldn't recognize any of those present at any of the Ku Kluz Klan meetings."

"Who asked you to join the klan," Higginbotham was asked.

"A stranger, who came here to organize it."

The court took a recess until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock after J. C. Neetles, who discovered the bodies of Daniel and Richard in Lake La Fourche had testified briefly as to the roads leading to the lake.

MER ROUGH MAYOR IS TOLD TO LEAVE TOWN

Threatening Letter Received by Official Threatens His Life

(Associated Press)

MONROE, LA., Jan. 30.—Robert L. Dade, mayor of Mer Rouge, La., who testified at the state's investigation at Bastrop into masked band activities in Morehouse parish which closed last week, made public a letter he had received today warning him unless he left Mer Rouge with ten days he would be killed.

The letter dated January 28 and believed to have been mailed at Hot Springs, Arkansas, has been forwarded by the mayor to Governor Parker and will later be turned over to Attorney General Coco for investigation, it was said. Insulting epithets and statements of a derogatory nature made up the greater part of the letter, Mr. Dade said.

The letter in part follows:

"Dear Sir:

"You are hereby notified to pack up and get out of town within ten days of receipt of this notice. You have never been any good as a man or as a citizen. Use your own judgment and either leave or become a corpse.

(Signed) "Law-Abiding."

Mayor Dade said this is the first letter he has received threatening him.

"I have received a number of threatening letters since Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard were killed August 24," he said, "but these letters were more in the nature of threats against others than against me, warning me to clean up the town and get rid of the lawless element. These letters were made public at the open hearing when I testified."

KLAN HURTING SCHOOLS.

Drives Teachers Out of Louisiana Parish, Is Charge.

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 8.—T. H. Harris, state superintendent public education, today addressed to parish school boards and parish superintendents throughout the state a letter calling upon them to do everything in their power to prevent occurrences similar to those of recent date in Jackson and Winn parishes, when two school teachers were ordered by letters bearing the seal of the Ku Klux Klan to leave the community.

The fleeing of the principal of a Jackson Parish high school after the Ku Klux Klan had ordered him to leave, has just brought to light a similar incident.

Teacher serving his second year in Winn Parish school, according to Harris, left the community after receiving a communication bearing the seal of the St. Maurice Ku Klux Klan. The communication, according to Harris, informed the teacher while his services were satisfactory he was a Catholic and a member of the Knights of Columbus, and therefore would not be permitted to teach. He was threatened with a visit by a midnight party if he did not leave.

MASKED BAND RENEWS ACTIVITY IN BASTROP LATE DEVELOPMENTS

Judge Conducting Open Hearings Told of Youth Being Held Up

TWO MEN ARE NAMED

Witnesses Identify Deputy and Grocer in Hooded Party, Is Claim

(Associated Press)

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 19.—John P. Parker, Jr., prominent citizen of Monroe, was shot and probably fatally wounded at Monroe tonight by Carey Calhoun, of Bastrop, brother of Laurie Calhoun, acting deputy sheriff of Morehouse parish, according to reports received here.

(Associated Press)

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 19.—A black-hooded band still is operating in Morehouse parish. Such was the official statement made to Judge Fred M. Odom, presiding at the open hearing investigating masked band activities here, late today by department of justice agents.

Judge Odom, in a statement, said that it had been officially reported that a hold-up similar to the one which is alleged to have occurred on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway, August 24, resulting in the kidnapping of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, had occurred near Mer Rouge Thursday night.

The department of justice report names Sidney Rogers, a youth residing near Mer Rouge, as the victim. Rogers, according to the report, claimed that while driving a team of horses attached to a light wagon he was stopped by six or eight black-hooded men, one of them holding him up with a pistol. He said they demanded to know if he was "Mr. Knight." When he identified himself he was told to move on. The federal officer's report said that the man wanted was J. M. Knight, a grocer of Mer Rouge.

Neither J. M. Knight or Sidney Rogers are witnesses at the open hearing.

Judge Odom announced that he has ordered a full investigation, saying that "the Rogers boy's statement has just been laid before me, that I shall certainly push the investigation into this case as much as I can. I know neither Mr. Rogers nor Mr. Knight, but every angle of this affair will be looked into."

"Young Rogers in describing the held-up," according to the report of the federal agents, said "while driving to my home about two and one-half miles from Mer Rouge, I was stopped by a band of black-hooded men and some one in the crowd said: 'Stop; is this Mr. Knight?' I replied, 'No,' then some one said: 'All right, go on.'

"The man who did the talking," continued Rogers, "was tall and slim and had a coarse voice. When the masked men jumped out into the road, the horses ran away and threw me out of the wagon."

J. M. Knight, according to the official report, could give no reason why the hooded band was after him. In a statement given to federal agents the groceryman claimed that he had only one enemy in Mer Rouge and that had resulted from a quarrel over the payment of rent.

Members of the Rogers family said that Knight was expected to come to their home last night to deliver some horse feed, which they later learned had not been received by him, shipment he was expecting from roe.

SPRINGS SURPRISE.

(Associated Press)

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 19.—State's Attorney General A. V. Coco, conducting the investigation here into the operations of masked bands in Morehouse parish, sprang a surprise today when at the opening of the afternoon session of the open hearing, he paced R. A. ("Berry") Whetstone on the stand. Whetstone, regarded as the state's most important witness in its effort to identify the kidnappers and slayers of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, almost at the beginning of his testimony named T. Jeff Burnett, former deputy sheriff, now under arrest on a charge of murder as one of the members of the masked band that had Daniel and Richard in charge the evening of August 24 at a point on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway two miles from Bastrop.

Whetstone, since stating several weeks ago that he had identified one or more of the masked men, has been in charge of the authorities at an unannounced place, and when he unexpectedly appeared in the court room he was escorted by Detective Chief Glynn, of the New Orleans police department. He left the room accompanied by Glynn immediately after concluding his testimony, was joined by agents of the federal department of justice and in the absence of an announcement as to his whereabouts, it was assumed he was taken to Baton Rouge or some other city.

Newt Gray, declared yesterday by Fred Eubanks to have been a member of the band which kidnapped Daniel and Richard, was named again today as one of the party. Mrs. J. H. Inabnet, of Mer Rouge, testified that after attending the barbecue and baseball games in Bastrop on August 24, she started for home in an automobile driven by Thelma Dade, granddaughter of J. L. Daniel and niece of Watt Daniel. The car, she said, was held up by the masked band and when it was ascertained no men were aboard, it was ordered to proceed. Miss Dade saw her grandfather and uncle both blindfolded and guarded by hooded men, and became so agitated that Mrs. Inabnet had to take her place at the wheel of the car.

Mrs. Inabnet said that the mask of one of the hooded men was torn, that she recognized him and upon being pressed for his identity declared it was Newt Gray.

Whetstone's experience with the hooded band was unlike that of other persons held up. He resides at Oak Ridge and walked to Bastrop to attend the celebration. He left for home in the evening afoot with the expectation that he would be given a lift by a passing motorist, and while walking saw an automobile parked near the highway. He assumed it was a party of picknickers, but upon approaching discovered the persons about the fire were black hooded men.

He almost reached them before he was noticed, he said, and when fifty feet away one of the men called him by name. They forced him to approach, gave him a bucket and told him to get some water.

Whetstone said upon his return he sat upon a log for thirty minutes in the midst of the party. He noticed wires hanging down and discovered that the telephone lines had been cut.

"Pretty soon," he continued, "the crowd came from Bastrop and all of them got held up. Then about twenty minutes later some one told me that they had Watt Daniel, J. L. Daniel, W. C. Andrews and those other fellows. Then I got loose from them and caught a car and rode to Oak Ridge."

Asked if he recognized any of the masked men. Whetstone replied:

"Yes, T. J. Burnett."

"Are you positive?"

"Yes, he had his mask up."

"Did he ever indicate afterward that he knew you had recognized him?" Attorney General Coco, examining him, questioned.

"Yes, every time I would see him he would smile at me just as if to say, 'Well, you know.'"

Burnett, soon after his arrest and incarceration in the parish jail here developed pleurisy and was removed to a hospital in Shreveport. He virtually had recovered and left that city late today under guard to be returned here.

Other testimony regarded by the state's forces as of vital importance to its case was offered at the forenoon session by Wm. J. McDonald, brother-in-law of J. L. Daniel. Mr. McDonald declared that "Jap" Jones, mentioned frequently in previous testimony, had told him that the "whole damned family" would be "cleaned out" before the alleged atempt to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, was settled.

McDonald said Jones did not know he was related to the Daniel family and when he learned of it asked him to forget the conversation.

McDonald declared he called Jones' hand and that Jones said, "I needn't get so mad about it." He added that he told Jones no one had ever shot at Dr. McKoin and he explained at length why he held this belief.

An alleged attempt to assassinate the physician had been declared by some authorities to be at the bottom of the wholesale kidnapping. The three men kidnapped with Daniel and Richard and flogged reported that all were questioned by their captors concerning the reported firing upon Dr. McKoin from ambush. McDonald stated that had McKoin been fired upon the physician would have gathered his friends and instituted a search for the assailant. This did not occur, he said, and he was emphatic in asserting that he did not believe McKoin had been attacked.

McDonald said that after the kidnapping Jim Harp, in conversation with him in Harp's butcher shop at Bonita said "They should have been killed the night they caught Daniel, Andrews and Neelis on the Gallion road and they wouldn't had any more trouble with them.

The Gallion road hold-up occurred several weeks before August 24, and on this occasion the prisoners were lectured and released.

Several witnesses from the Spyker neighborhood were questioned at length regarding the disappearance of Harold Teegerstrom, time-keeper at the Southern Carbon Company, of that place. Teegerstrom left December 29, and it is believed that he was kidnapped. Henry Jones, one of today's witnesses, testified that the timekeeper appeared at his home two days later and explained that he was being hounded by department of justice agents. He had been called from his bed the night of the 29th, Jones said he told him, and upon going into the yard, saw an automobile with several men about it. Fearing an attack Teegerstrom fled. Jones declared he gave Teegerstrom $40 and a suit of his clothes in order that he might change his appearance and that he had not seen him since. He loaned Teegerstrom his watch and this was returne to him several days later through the mail in a package marked Monroe, La. Other witnesses described the wholesale holdup of August 24 and much of the testimony was a repetition of that brought out previously.

BANS KLANSMEN FROM STATE JOBS

Governor Parker Gives Reason for Failure to Appoint Two Men in Louisiana.

Alexandria, La., February 17.—No member of the Ku Klux Klan, if he knows it, will be appointed to a public office so long as he is governor of Louisiana, Governor Parker declared in a letter received today by L. B. Baynard, Jr., state representative, in reply to Mr. Baynard's open letter to the governor, charging him with failure to appoint two men in Rapides parish, as requested by a majority of the voters.

"I have made mistakes," wrote the governor, "but in doing what I sincerely believe best for the interest of the entire state, and now I wish to write you very frankly as long as I am governor I do not intend to appoint to any office of any kind any man without having his assurance he is not a member of the Ku Klux Klan."

The appointments questioned by Mr. Baynard included that to fill the vacancy on the parish police jury caused by the death of T. J. Texada. Texada's funeral was attended by klansmen who laid a wreath on the grave. The governor appointed A. G. Melady to the position and Melady was recalled a majority of the voters. A petition was then sent the governor by 60 per cent of the voters in the ward affected requesting the appointment of J. J. Leggett.

In his open letter to the governor Mr. Baynard said some persons were of the opinion Leggett was a klansman.

The governor in a second letter to Mr. Baynard urges that he and the other two representatives in the parish agree on a man to fill the police jury vacancy.

COCO SAYS KLAN JURORS WILL GIVE HIM SQUARE DEAL

Houston Post

Morehouse Prober Has Confidence in Reputation of Those Chosen

Associated Press Report.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23.—Attorney General A. V. Coco will not object to klansmen serving on the Morehouse parish grand jury which is to consider the evidence taken at the recent open hearing into hooded mob outrages, but he expects the klansmen to disregard their klan affiliations and return indictments against persons he will name at the grand jury hearing early in March.

The attorney general made his opinion clear today in a statement which followed a lengthy conference with members of his staff and conferences with leading residents of Morehouse parish during his visit there last week.

"The best information available is that five of the 20 men selected in the grand jury panel are positively members of the Ku Klux Klan, while it is generally believed that seven others are members," Attorney General Coco said. "Of course, it was impossible under the law to exclude citizens by reason of their affiliation with the klan or oposition to the order, and the jury commission pursued the only course open to them, that is, selecting the jurors with reference purely to their personal qualifications."

The attorney general referred to the good social standing of the men selected and declared that their lifelong residence in the parish, their property interests and reputation of being law-abiding citizens convinced him that they "would do their duty irrespectful of their klan affiliation or influence."

Judge Odom Delivers Strong Charge Against Maskers.

3/6/23

MANY INDICTMENTS ASKED

"You Are to Indict Criminals Without Regard to Their Affiliations," Judge Tells the Grand Jurors.

(By The Associated Press.)

BASTROP, La., March 5.—The Morehouse Parish grand jury was drawn today and charged by District Judge Fred M. Odom.

The judge arraigned those groups of men who take the law into their own hands.

"As concerns us," he said, "if we have reached that state or condition of society where men may organize into bands or groups and condemn and punish citizens when and as they see fit without regard to the laws of the land and the established rules of judicial procedure, then, gentlemen, the day of our doom is upon us. We have seen the end of civilized, organized society. The laws of civilized government must be enforced otherwise civilization could not survive."

Will Submit Evidence.

State Attorney General A. V. Coco expects to appear tomorrow and submit evidence obtained at the open hearing here in January into kidnapings, floggings and other activities of masked bands, which the state charges were composed of members of the Ku Klux Klan, and will ask for from thirty to forty indictments ranging from assault and battery to murder, the lats in connection with the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, of Mer Rouge, last August 24.

From the panel of twenty summoned for jury duty Judge Odom selected J. C. Evans, of Oakridge, a farmer, as foreman. The names of his eleven associates as drawn from the jury box follow:

C. R. Talman, Mer Rouge, farmer; S. H. Stevenson, Stevenson, farmer; G. A. Allen, Bonita, merchant; D. B. Williams, Oak Ridge, farmer; J. H. Jordan, Collinston, merchant; George Hayden, Bastrop, farm superintendent; E. M. White, Mer Rouge, farmer; R. E. Bramlett, Collinston, merchant; F. M. George, Gillou, farmer; Frank Hope, Bonita, farmer; B. U. Hood, Bastrop, oil well worker.

Judge Odom's Charge.

Judge Odom's charge to the jury was in two parts, first an extemporaneous address along routine lines, and later a lengthy written charge devoted entirely to the hooded operations and observance of the law. Persons with long experience in court work and associates of the attorney general pronounced it one of the strongest utterances in favor of the law and order they had ever heard delivered from the bench.

Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, who figured prominently in the testimony of witnesses at the open hearing and who was among the spectators in court today, declared it "a very good charge."

Judge Odom supplemented the prepared charge with a few extemporaneous remarks and concluded:

"There is only one law and that proper and entirely safe relationships to international affairs which should be borne by such a country as our own. The recommendation that the United States adhere to the protocol under which this court has been created, was not put forward without the most thorough and matured deliberation. Those who at this time are entrusted with the direction of the international relations of our country are firmly convinced that this move not only would represent the wise policy for our own people, but would be an emphatic testimony of our purpose to encourage every feasible project for establishing the rule of law, as opposed to the rule of power in this world. The whole story of civilization has been the story of the efforts to substitute the domination of justice under law, for armed might.

Surrenders No Control.

"I may say frankly that it is inconceivable to me that the American people, who have so long been devoted to this ideal should refuse their adherence now to such a programme as is represented by this tribunal. Nothing could be farther from the purpose of the administration than to suggest that our country surrender any of its control over its own fundamental rights and destinies. But we may be sure that differences will always arise among states and peoples, precisely as they have always arisen between individuals and just as courts of justice and equity have been set up to determine issues as between individuals, so it is proper and logical that provision should be made for a like adjudication of those differences between nations and peoples which may properly be committed to such determination.

"I look upon the establishment of the court of international justice, with the jurisdiction that has been given to it, as one of the greatest advances which world society has made toward conditions in which at last the rule of law may be substituted for the rule of force. It looks to the settlement of issues before they become dangerously acute; it contemplates the elimination of the causes of conflict and war. Feeling thus I cannot but believe that our own country should be among the most devoted adherents of such a programme."

The president, it is expected, will upon other occasions and perhaps upon the public platform during the summer and fall discuss this subject further with the people. Secretary of State Hughes may also make a few speeches on the subject before long. He has no speechmaking programme in mind but is said to reserve the right to speak on the subject if he chooses.

GRAND JURY MEETS AT BASTROP MONDAY TO PROBE MURDERS

Montgomery Advertiser

Judge Will Deliver Charge in Writing on Kidnaping Cases

3/3/23

(Associated Press)

MONROE, LA., March 2.—District Judge Fred M. Odom when he charges the Morehouse parish grand jury at Bastrop next Monday will devote most of the charge to the kidnapping of five Mer Rouge citizens, including Watt Daniels and T. F. Richard last August 24, and the slaying of the last two, according to a statement made public here today.

Judge Odom declared he would use the power of his office to bring to the jurors the realization of the seriousness of the cases with which they will have to deal.

"It is my intention to submit the charge in writing," he said, "so there will be no chance for misrepresentation and for being misquoted. I shall deal with the various phases of the crime involved and will give whatever support that the case warrant for a thorough investigation.

"I do not know as yet to what the charge shall contain. It will be devoted almost wholly to the kidnapping cases and will not likely include the usual routine of crime that comes up for the grand jury's investigation. At any rate, if I have anything additional to say in regard to the grand jury's work it will be delivered extemporaneously and aside from the written charge to the jury."

Klansman, Fellow-Employe of Burnett, Tells of Kidnapping of Witness for State.

New York 1-19-23

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 18.—Fred Eubanks, brother-in-law of E. N. Gray, testified at the open hearing today on the torture and murder of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards that he saw Gray among a group of hooded men on the roadside on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge road on Aug. 24, the day the two men were taken to their death.

"These men wore balck hoods?" asked Mr. Guion, Assistant Attorney General.

"They did," was the reply.

"And you recognized Gray as one of those hooded men?"

"Yes."

Gray, according to published reports, is to be one of those directly accused by the State of complicity in the kidnappings, murders and tortures. Yesterday, when he was recalled as a witness, counsel for the Ku Klux Klan, of which Gray is a member, objected to his examination. He disappeared and the Attorney General was content to let him go, satisfied that the efforts of the Klan to bar his testimony were in the State's favor.

The understanding here is that Gray had the lob of "spotting" the men who were to be taken prisoners as they returned from the Bastrop berbecue and ball game. Gray, according to investigators, was the only member of the masked mob who was clothed in a white robe and a white mask, all the others wearing the black outfit of the Klan "Terrors."

When the holdup occurred, the Klansman garbed in a white robe went down the line of automobiles as they were halted and pointed out Daniel and Richards, J. L. Daniel, W. C. Andrews and C. C. (Tot) Davenport. As he pointed them out the black hooded men seized the victims, blindfolded and hogtied them and threw them into a Ford truck and dashed away. It is held that Gray's work as a spotter makes him an accessory before the fact even though he did not participate in the actual murder of Daniel and Richards and the whipping of the elder Daniel and Andrews.

Dean Ashcroft, field manager of the Southern Carbon Company of Spyker, apparently established an alibi for "Jeff" Burnett, accused under warrant, of the kidnapping and murder of Daniel and Richards. Ashcroft is a klansman. He testified that Burnett worked at the plant on the night of Aug. 24, when Daniel and Richards were kndnapped. Ashcroft was the last man to see Harold Teegestrom, another employe of the carbon works, before he disappeared one night after the investigation into the Mer Rouge murders had been started. Teegestrom was reported to have been kidnapped by a band in automobiles after he had said that Burnett did not appear at the carbon plant on the night of the double murder. He has not been heard from since his disappearance.

Klansman Admits Storage of Dynamite.

Ashcroft was asked about the dynamite stored, supposedly under lock and key, in the Carbon Company's plant after Aug. 24, the date of the killing of Daniel and Andrews, whose bodies were brought to the surface of Lake La Fourche by the explosion of a dynamite charge a few weeks ago. The State will try to prove that this dynamite was taken from the carbon company's works where Ashcroft, a Klansman be it remembered, Burnett and Teegestrom, the missing witness, were employed.

Ashcraft was also asked about his knowledge of the use of dynamite and hacksaws. Keys and a hacksaw were found near Lake La Fourche after the murders. The hacksaw was used to release a skiff moored at Lake La Fourche, a skiff which the State believes was used by the masked murderers in taking the bodies of Daniel and Richards to the spot where they were sunk.

Ashcraft was examined in regard to the size of the wire used at the carbon plant in fastening roofs of the meter houses to the frames. The same kind of wire was used to bind the bodies of Daniel and Richards.

Another point brought out by the State was the friendship existing between Ashcraft and Henry Jones, a farmer living near her. Jones reported to Sheriff Carpenter that on the Sunday following the disappearance o Teegestrom the missing man appeared at his home, left a bunch of keys and a watch and borrowed $40, saying he was going to leave this section of the country.

Ashcraft testified that he attended a wedding on the night of Dec. 21 when the dynamite was exploded in Lake La Fourche. He admitted that the Southern Carbon Company received a shipment of twenty cases of dynamite of fifty pounds each about three months ago. He said he stored the explosive in the dynamite house and that he and Superintendent Bennett were the only possessors of keys to the dynamite house.

Nine witnesses were called today by the State. The first, Rufus Eubanks, nephew of E. N. ("Newt") Gray, gave damaging testimony against his uncle. According to young Eubanks, on the night of the kidnapping of Richard and Daniel, he drove Gray to a spot in the Mer Rouge-Bastrop road within a short distance of the scene of the kidnapping. The boy also stated his suspicions were aroused by the actions of Gray. Another witness was Leon Daniel, brother of Watt Daniel.

Harley Rogers, also an employe of the Southern Carbon Company, denied that he had gone to Mer Rouge in an automobile with Jeff Burnett. Harry Neelis swore on the stand last week that on the afternoon Richards was first kidnapped he was stopped by masked men on the Mer Rouge-Bastrop Road looking for Richards; that the first two men to stop him, both unmasked, were Burnett and Rogers.

The witness was asked if he ever used a hacksaw. The reply was in the affirmative but the witness denied that he had any hack-saw or drills about the sawmill he previously owned. Rogers admitted serving as a Deputy Sheriff with Captain Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Klan, Charlie Cox and others. He said they were deputized by the Sheriff and instructed to arrest a man named Price who was said to be making whisky. Price escaped, he said, and he never served again as a Deputy.

He said Burnett was working at the carbon plant the night Lake La Fourche was dynamited.

When Rufus Eubanks was called to the stand he told of attending the ball game in Bastrop on Aug. 24, and of mmeting Gray there. He said Gray asked him to take his car home after first driving out on the Bastrop Road. The witness said Gray told him he wanted to meet Tom Higginbotham.

Relatives Say Gray was Kidnapped.

The examination then continued as follows:

Q.—How far from the holdup spot did you leave Gray? A.—About 200 yards.

Q.—On you way back to Mer Rouge that evening did you meet any masked men? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many were there? A.—Well, there were several cars loaded with them.

Q.—What did you do that night? A.—I went to the Fellowship Baptist Church.

Q.—Is that the church attended by "Newt" Gray? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Gray at the church that night? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see the hooded men while you were taking Gray's car back toward Mer Rouge? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you take a peep after you started away from Gray? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you see? A.—I saw Gray standing in the road.

Fred Eubanks, another brother-in-law of Gray's, was called next. He was stopped on Aug. 24 by hooded men, he testified.

He testified as follows:

Q.—Did you recognize any men on the roadside? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did they wear black hoods? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you recognize any of them. A.—I recognized one.

Q.—Who was that? A.—"Newt" Gray.

Calls Gray and Higginbotham Perjurer.

After Enbanks had testified that he wa sstopped by three hooded men farther on, but was unable to identify any of them. Leon Daniel, 40 years old, crippled brother of Watt Daniel, was called to the Witness Stand. He said Watt had told him of being accused of making whiskey and shooting at Dr. McKoin and that Richards was also accused. Watt, Leon said, disapproved of the Vigilance Committee and the entire Klan.

Henry Pipes told of seeing at Collinston a masked band in cars stop for gasoline. He did not recognize any of the masked men, although he saw the truck in which they and their captives were seated.

T. B. Pratt, Jr., 21 years old, admitted he was a Klansman and that he knew nothin gabout anything pertaining to the kidnapping or reports about it. He was perfectly willing to qualify as a man who had lost his memory and would not admit that he ever had one.

J. H. Jnes testified that Gray visited him two days after the murder of Daniel and Richards and asked if anything had been heard about them. Gray, the witness said, explained where he had been on Aug. 24.

"Did Gray volunteer all this information," the witness was asked.

"Yes," was the reply.

Rufus Eubanks was recalled at the beginning of the afternoon session. He was asked again about taking Gray's party home in the Gray car. He was asked to give the names of those in the car and he told again of passing an automobile containing hooded men.

"Did you meet anybody?" he was asked.

"Yes; Thomas higginbotham came by in a Ford roadster."

"Who was in the car with Higginbotham?"

"Nobody."

Gray and Tom Higginbotham have testified that Tom Higginbotham picked up Gray and carried him to the home of Will Higginbotham, Gray and both the Higginbothams are admitted Klansmen.

Ask Witness About Dynamite.

Ashcraft, the next witness, told Federal secret service agents, before the hearing began, that he had seen Teegestrom kidnapped by a band in automobiles. On the stand he said he spent the night of August 24, at "Jeff" Burnett's home and went to bed at 8:30 o'clock. He was sure Burnett had worked at the carbon plant that night because Burnett had on his working clothes and his black suit which he wore when not at work was hanging in the bath room. The witness admitted he had seen Burnett at the Bastrop ball game and later at Bastrop.

The State then indicated by questions that it believed the dynamite used in Lake La Fourche came from the carbon plant. Ashcraft said that on the night of the explosion, Dec. 21, he was attending the wedding of Jewell Harris, an employe of the carbon plant. He admitted that when a new plant was started several months ago he personally had moved 1,000 pounds of dynamite to the dynamite house. He said that he had returned about 10 o'clock after seeing the wedding party off at Collinston and stayed at Burnett's. He denied he had visited the bunkhouse, but revealed that T homas Williams began sleeping there that night for the first time. D. E. Wilson and Jim Williams were also at the bunkhouse.

A series of questions then asked by the State's Attorneys indicated a suspicion that the wire found bound around the bodies of Daniel and Richards had been taken from the carbon plant. Ashcraft was then asked as follows about the kidnapping of Teegestrom:

Tells of Teegestrom's Kidnapping.

Q.—Do you nnow where Teegestrom is? A.—No.

Q.—When did you last see him? A.—The night he was kidnaped.

Q.—He was kidnaped? A.—Well, somebody came to the door and called him and I never saw him again.

Q.—You and he were sleeping together? A.—Yes, we were sleeping together.

Q.—What time had you all gone to bed? A.—About 9:30.

Q.—You heard him called? A.—Yes, some one called "Tee." That's all I heard. I was about half asleep.

Q.—Nothing unusual about his being called? A.—No, he was subject to that. He was always called in a case when the machinery broke down.

Q.—You don't know whether Teegestrom is livin gor dead? A.—No, I don't know.

Q.—Didn't some one approach you and Teegestrom about a conversation that took place in the bunkhouse? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Whose statement was it? A.—Teegestrom's.

Q.—And you denied that he said it and he denied that he made it? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did any one ask you if Teegestrom had said "We didn't get them tonight but we will tomorrow night"? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You believe he was kidnapped? A.—I don't know. He disappeared.

OTHER SON DID GET LETTER

This Declared He Would Return Jan. 20, but He Has Not Been Seen or Heard From Since.

OWNER OF KEYS SOUGHT

Bunch Found Near Lake Lafourche Is Believed to Be Clue to Deaths or Explosion.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 22.—Harold Teegestrom, 19 years old, and until his mysterious disappearance Dec. 29 timekeeper at the plant of the Southern Carbon Company at Spyker, La., was the principal object of inquiry in today's session of the open hearing into the Morehouse outrages. The kidnapping and murder of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards on the night of Aug. 24 was momentarily forgotten when Victor S. Teegestrom of Monroe, the missing witness's father, took the stand and told of how the boy had dropped out of sight.

Mr. Teegestrom said he did not know whether his son was dead or alive. He impressed the State's attorneys with his simple statement. He asserted he was certain that his son would write to him if free to do so.

Mr. Teegestrom told of a letter received by his son, Clarence, on Jan. 12, which was written by Harold, and which said he would return to testify on Jan. 20. But the boy did not return, as his father confidently expected, and the witness frankly stated that he did not know what had become of him.

The disappearance of Teegestrom links up with the State's efforts to locate the owner of a ring of keys, found on the shores of Lake Lafourche after the mysterious explosion which raised the bodies of Daniel and Richards to the surface. One of these keys, it has been positively determined, is the key which opened the locks on the meter houses at the carbon plant in Spyker.

The State maintains that if the owner of that key can be found it can determine the identify of one man who was in the murder group that tortured and slew Daniel and Richards. But S. I. Bennett, manager of the carbon plant, testifying this morning, asserted when the keys were shown to him that apparently they were ones lost by a negro, Sim Harris, who was discharged from the carbon plant several months ago. Assistant Attorney General Walmsley stated during the noon recess that the keys in possession of the State are not the keys lost by the negro; that the negro lot his keys at a point at least seventeen miles from the spot where the keys in evidence were found.

Sidney Rogers, a 13-year-old boy, who was halted on the Cooper Lake road by hooded raiders on Wednesday night, and J. M. Knight, a Mer Rouge merchant, for whom he appears to have been mistaken by the raiders, testified, and were closely interrogated by Judge Odom as well as the attorneys for the State.

Bad Roads Hold Up Witnesses.

The first dozen witnesses called this morning failed to respond, as the rain last night made the roads impassable and kept them from the hearing. C. Wagster, a Mer Rouge man, finally came forward without being called. He explained he had been summoned Saturday.

Wagster testified he was playing cards in the home of J. L. Daniel, father of Watt Daniel, the night of the alleged attempt on the life of Dr. B. M. McKoin. Richards was also in the game, he said, but Daniel stayed out. Wagster said he quit the game about 10:30 o'clock. He and a man named Hicks, he said, went out together. About 10 minutes later he said he heard two shots. He testified that the game did not break up when he quit and that Daniel and Richards were both in the house when he and Hicks left.

S. J. Bennett, general manager of the Spyker Carbon Plant, who employed Harold Teegestrom, testified about Teegestrom's disappearance on Dec. 29, after somebody had called him out from his bed. Bennett was asked as to Teegestrom's duties at the carbon plant, and the testimoney served to draw out the information that Dean Ashcraft, who has already testified, was in charge of the meter house at the plant and was the man who had Teegestrom's keys brought to him after Teegestrom disappeared.

Mr. Guion had Bennett exhibit his own keys to the meter house and then compared them with the several keys found on the shores of Lake LaFourche, near the spot where the bodies of Daniel and Richards were brought to the surface.

"Do you know any reason why Teegestrom should have disappeared!" Mr. Guion asked.

"I do not," Bennett replied. "I haven't any idea. Teegestrom was in good spirits the last time I saw him and I enjoyed his friendship."

"Do you know whether Teegestron is dead or alive?" Mr. Guion asked.

"I don't," the witness replied.

Senator Warren exhibited the ring of keys found at Lake LaFourche and asked Bennett if he had ever seen them before. Bennett said he was not sure. He expressed the opinion that they had been lost about eight months ago by a negro, Sim Harris, who had the job Dean Ashcraft now holds. Bennett said he discharged the negro and the keys were lost many months before his discharge.

Berry Whetstone Was Warned.

Mrs. Sallie Whetstone, sister-in-law of Berry Whetstone, who lives near Mer Rouge, was asked if any one ever talked to her about the kidnapping.

"Yes" she replied, "Bertha Summers and I were walking to Mer Rouge and Gus Calhoun overtook us and said he had heard they got one of the Whetstones. He said he'd hate to be in Berry's shoes."

"What else did he tell you?"

"I don't know, except he said to tell my husband to tell Berry if he knew anything he had better not tell it."

The witness said she considered Gus Calhoun a friend and that he was just advising her.

"Gus just merely wanted to let Berry know if Berry recognized any members of the mob he had better keep his mouth shut," she said.

The witness told of hearing Berry Whetstone a few days after the kidnapping tell her husband one of their own cousins was in the hooded mob.

"Did he name him?" she was asked.

"No," she replied.

Jeff Burnett, under arrest on a murder charge, is a cousin of the Whetstones.

Mrs. Whetstone testified her husband told her of seeing Smith Stevenson driving his truck on the Mer Rouge-Bastrop road on the evening of August 24. He asked Stevenson for a lift to Mer Rouge, but Stevenson refused, she said, declaring he was only going a short distance. Stevenson was not masked, she said.

The opening of the afternoon session was delayed by the failure of witnesses to appear. The State's Attorneys held a long conference with Judge Odom, but its nature was not disclosed. A half dozen regular witnesses were called, but none responded.

J. M. Knight, who is said to have been sought by a hooded mob last Wednesday near Mer Rouge, was seen by Judge Odom and brought to the witness stand. He said he ran a meat market and a restaurant.

"Have you had any threats from a law and order committee?" he was asked.

"No."

"Any visits?"

"On the night of August 24 some folks called at the door—my boy thought they were ladies—but when we got out they had gone. They had something over their heads."

The State's Attorneys had in mind reports of recent visits; that Knight had "callers" on the night of August 24 was news to the prosecution and everybody became interested.

Teegestrom's Father Ttestifies.

While Knight was testifying some of the State's witnesses began to appear. Victor S. Teegestrom, father of Harold, the missing witness, was called.

"How many sons have you?" he was asked.

"Three, Clarence, Harold and Oscar."

"Do you know where Harold is?"

"Have you heard anything from him?"

"No sir, but my son got a letter from him a week ago."

Teegestrom told of seeing a letter from his son on which was written, "Somewhere in the United States." The letter was dated Jan. 12, he said.

"Could you determine by the post mark where the letter was mailed?"

"No."

"The letter satisfied you that your son was still alive?"

"Yes sir."

"Had he ever discussed with you that Federal agents had talked to him about agedies in this town?"

"No sir?"

"Did he advise you in any way that he intended leaving?"

"He did not."

"Have you had any other communication from him?"

"No sir."

"You have no idea where he is?"

"None whatever."

"What did the letter to your son say?"

"That he was alright and expected to come home and testify. We expected him last Saturday."

"Yon don't think he has any desire to conceal anything?"

"I do not, sir."

"You want to see this whole matter thoroughly investigated?"

"I do sir."

"When did you first learn that your son got a letter from Harold?"

"From Clarence."

At this point the old man could contain himself no longer and broke into tears.

"We want to help you, Mr. Teegestrom," said Mr. Guion.

"I want to help you, too," he declared, fervently, tears running down his cheeks. He bit his lip in an effort to control himself.

"Where was the letter addressed from?"

"I don't know."

"Was the leter addressed in his own handwriting?"

"I am sure of that. It was his own handwriting."

"Don't you think he would write to you if he could?"

"I have been under the impression that the Government agents interrupted the mail."

Mr. Guion assured the witness that he was in error in that impression.

"So there is not a thing you know that can throw light on your son's whereabouts!"

"No, sir."

Mr. Guion told the witness that the State had no evidence that would implicate Harold Teegestrom in any crime whatsoever.

"I am sure that he was in no crime," said the father.

"You feel reasonably sure if your boy were able to communicate with you, he'd do so?"

"Yes sir, I know it."

"Can you think, at this time of any one who has given you assurance your son is safe?"

"None in particular; but every one, friends and strangers, have assured it."

"Where did you son receive this letter?"

"At the carbon plant. It was handed to him by Mr. Bennett, the mnaager."

Saw Hooded Men on Aug. 24.

J. T. Ellis of Mer Rouge was called. He testified he came to Bastrop with L. L. Davidson on Aug. 24.

"Did you have a pleasant trip!"

"No, sir. We were on our way back when we saw a party of men in the road. They all were black-hooded and many were armed. We passed through them. They looked into our car closely, but none spoke to us."

"Did you get out of your car?"

"Yes. I got out and looked around to see if I could identify any of them. I was attracted by one who weighed about 175 pounds and who was about 5 feet 10 inches in height. He carried an old shotgun that was repaired in the middle. I noticed that in particular."

"Did you see Daniel?"

"I saw old man Daniel and W. C. Andrews. They were tied and blindfolded."

"Did you talk to Hugh Andrews, W. C.'s brother about this?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he tell you he recognized any of them?"

"Yes sir, he did."

"What did you say!"

"I told him I'd be out till the cocks crowed if it had ben my brother being carried away by those men."

"Did Andrews tell you whom he recognized?"

"No, sir."

"Did you recognize any of them?"

"No, sir."

"If that gun was shown to you again would you recognize it?"

"I think I would."

"Had you ever seen one like it before?"

"Since, I've seen one I thought looked like it."

"Did you recognize any one that night!"

"No sir, I did noe."

Boy Tells of Wednesday Raid.

The hearing was halted again for lack of witnesses. The Court asked if there was any one present who had been subpoenaed in the case. There was no answer. Judge Odom then asked for Sidney Rogers, 13 years old, stopped by the hooded mob last Wednesday night.

"Did you go to Mer Rouge last Wednesday?" he was asked by Mr. Guion.

"Yes, sir. I went by myself in the wagon to get some feed."

"What road did you take?"

"The Cooper Lake road."

"What time did you start for your home?"

"About 7 o'clock. I was waiting for Mr. Knight."

"Had the feed came?"

"No, sir, I did not have anything in the wagon."

"You were alone when you were held up?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, tell us about it?"

"About two miles from Mer Rouge, on my way home, the horses jumped and I fell out of the wagon. Then a man in a black hood told me to stop and asked 'Is that you, Mr. Knight?' I said, 'No,' and he told me to go on."

"How many were there?"

"About eight."

"Did they all have hoods on?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you start on again?"

"Well, the horses had run away. I caught them, and then I went home."

"Did you recognize any voices."

"No, sir, but the man who did the talking was a big man, with a heavy voice."

"How close to the men were you?"

"About ten feet, where I fell out. The wagon wheel rolled over my ha and took it off my head."

Klansman Freed Of Raid on Prison

DE RIDDER, La., Jan. 20.—Sheffield Bridgewater, former exalted cyclops of Beauregard parish klan No. 9, was acquitted tonight of charges of conspiracy to commit assault and battery in connection with a raid on the parish jail at which time a negro was removed by six men alleged to have been dressed in white robes.

GRAND JURY GIVEN STRONG CHARGE BY DISTRICT JURIST

Montgomery Advertiser

Work of Probing Mer Rouge Kidnapping Started at Bastrop

Montgomery, Ala.

(Associated Press)

BASTROP LA., March 5.—The Morehouse parish grand jury was drawn today and charged by District Judge Fred M. Odom.

State Attorney General A. V. Coco expects to appear tomorrow and submit evidence obtained at the open hearing here in January into kidnappings, floggings and other activities of masked bands, which the state charges were composed of members of the Ku Klux Klan, and will ask for from thirty to fifty indictments ranging from assault and battery to murder, the last in connection with the kidnapping and slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, of Mer Rouge, last August 24. 3/6/23

From the panel of twenty summoned for jury duty Judge Odom selected J. C. Evans, of Okridge, a farmer, as foreman.

Estimates of the number of klansmen on the jury run as high as six, but this feature did not seem to be regarded as of importance since the attorney general had stated that he would be willing to place the evidence before a jury composed entirely of klansmen if they would only discharge their duty as sworn officials of the court.

B. U. Hood, one of the jurymen, was called as a witness at the open hearing, but when he took the stand and was questioned concerning his knowledge of the kidnapping of Daniel and Richard it developed he was at work in a distant part of the parish the day it occurred and knew nothing of it until the next day.

Nothing concerning its inquiry is expected from the jury until it makes its final report to the court. Criminal cases of a routine character which it will investigate are usually few in number and it is believed it will be ready to report within a week or ten days.

The state will present a brief of the transcript of the testimony taken at the open hearing and it was hinted today that it might call one or two witnesses who testified then in order to clear up for the jury several features of the case.

Judge Odom's charge to the jury was in two parts, first an extemporaneous address along routine lines, and later a lengthy written charge devoted entirely to the hooded operations and observance of the law. Persons with long experience in court work and associates of the attorney general pronounced it one of the strongest utterances in favor of the law and order they had ever heard delivered from the bench.

Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, who figured prominently in the testimony of witnesses at the open hearing and who was among the spectators in court today, declared it "a very good charge."

Judge Odom supplemented the prepared charge with a few extemporaneous remarks and concluded:

"There is only one law and that is the written law. If you should find that anybody has violated the law, punish him."

The judge in referring directly to the Ku Klux Klan in his charge said:

"The violation of the law to which I have called your special attention has been laid at the door of the Ku Klux Klan. Whether

Atlanta Ga

COCO LAUNCHES ATTACK ON KLAN IN PARISH

Atlanta Constitution

Declares at End of Hearing That Organization Responsible for Disorders and Lawlessness.

Constitution

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., January 25.—The open hearing here conducted by the state of Louisiana into the operations of masked men in the parish, which Attorney General A. V. Coco has characterized as the "Morehouse atrocities," ended today after having been in session continuously since January 5. Scores of witnesses testified concerning floggings, deportations, circulation of warnings by a "vigilante committee," kidnappings and the spiriting away of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard on August 24, of whom no trace was found until their bodies floated to the surface from the depths of Lake La Fourche on December 22.

Leon Jones, of Moselle, Miss., the only witness at the concluding session, testified that his car was disabled on the highway about three-quarters of a mile from Lake La Fourche "some time in August," and that during the night one small touring car and a small truck containing masked men and two others who appeared to be prisoners, passed him bound toward the lake. Some time later the cars returned from the lake and he said there seemed to be no prisoners.

The hearing adjourned at 10:25 o'clock this forenoon, but a few minutes prior to that time Attorney General Coco made a statement to the court, declaring that evidence had been developed sufficient to show the Ku Klux Klan responsible for lawlessness in the parish.

Barnett Scored Hearing.

Judge W. M. Barnett, counsel for the only men who, expecting they will be defendants, have retained legal aid, attacked in a lengthy formal statement the legality of the open hearing and the character of testimony adduced.

Judge Barnett's statement, the under section 1,018 of the revised statutes of this state.

"The statute does not provide that witnesses may be drawn before a first formal comment from the defense, follows in part:

"This proceeding has been held court and grilled and cross-examined, but in order that their depositions may be taken.

"None of this has been done in this case, therefore this whole proceeding in my judgment is a nullity and the testimony adduced cannot be legally used in any proceedings whatsoever. It cannot even be used legally before a grand jury; it would be hearsay, and any bill of indictment predicated upon this testimony would be quashed by the court.

"The corpus delicti has not been established to a reasonable certainty, to say nothing of the rule that it must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. Two bodies were found in Lake LaFourche; the coroner of the parish, Dr. O. M. Patterson, a man of unquestionable integrity and standing both as a citizen and as a physician, was not permitted to make an examination of them. He never got closer than forty feet to the bodies while they were yet in the water, and he was told that he could not make further examination; while at the same time two pathologists seemed to have already been arranged with, even prior to the finding of the bodies, who were to come and make an examination which would disclose the manner in which the bodies found came to their death. And it might be said here that their testimony was not at all disappointing in this regard.

Doubts Identity.

"There is more than a doubt as to the identity of these bodies which is entertained in the minds of people generally. Those who heard the testimony without exception entertained such doubt, and after the pathologists have made their full report on the matter there was a general unbelief left upon the minds of all fair-minded people.

"Many witnesses were called to connect various and sundry persons with the mob that kidnaped and carried away Daniel and Richard, and, the testimony produced showed every earmark of having been worked up by agents of the department of justice and was so conflicting that it destroyed itself. It was manifest from the very beginning that the real motive behind the prosecution was to convict the Ku Klux Klan in the forum of public opinion, without regard as to whether or not the perpetrators of the crime would be uncovered.

"Without exception there was no material or vital point against any individual established, except by the most partisan testimony and testimony which could not stand the fire of cross examination or the test of character necessary to give it verity.

"The activities of the Ku Klux Klan were gone into with great pains and in my judgment the evidence does not sustain the charge that they are responsible for this crime or had anything to do with it. There are other activities of minor importance where immorality and lawlessness were being practiced, that they perhaps did take some part, but in no case is a crime or misdemeanor disclosed where it is definitely shown that the K. K. K. took any part and in no instance has any actually been shown except in furtherance of law enforcement and morality. As a lawyer, having had a good many years of experience in the practice and several years' experience as a district attorney and as district judge, I am of the opinion that this proceeding as it has been carried on, is an abuse of the law. I do not mean that in every instance and with every witness there was an abuse of the law or the machinery of the court, but in a number of instances during this proceeding methods were adopted which cannot be sanctioned by either the judicial or the lay mind.

State Done Harm.

"The state of Louisiana, and especially Morehouse parish, has been done incalculable harm by the publicity of sensational matter, 90 per cent of which has been without any substantial foundations whatever, and from all of the evidence of the hearing and the manner by which it was conducted, it impresses the reasonable mind that a great stage play has been given the public with other motives behind it, rather than the desire on the part of the governor to really bring the guilty parties to trial.

"I have one other thing to say, and that is that the persons who have been named as having been connected with this kidnaping affair will prove their unqualified innocence when we have an opportunity of speaking before a court of justice."

Attorney General Coco, who addressed the court immediately before adjournment, declared that since the advent of the klan in the parish there had arisen "a condition of disorder anl lawlessness which has ripened into a supercession of constituted authorities by the K. K. K., and the establishment of a government of its own." The parish, he added, "was on the brink of riot and bloodshed," when Governor Parker sent troops here and initiated the investigation.

Mr. Coco declared that while it might be conceded many klansmen did not actually participate in acts of lawlessness, "they nevertheless may be deemed responsible therefor by reason of their silence and inaction."

The text of the statement follows:

"May it please the court:

"The state has decided to discontinue these proceedings, for the present at least, and until such time as conditions may justify their resumption. The hope is expressed, however, that this may not become necessary.

"Before taking our leave of your honor and of this parish, I desire to express my gratification at the orderly and dignified manner in which these proceedings have been conducted, and my pleasure in the assistance we have received from the officers in obtaining the prompt attendance of our witnesses and in preserving order.

"On the other hand, it is my very painful and humiliating duty to refer to the deplorable conditions in this parish, as revealed by the evidence. The proof is convincing that since the advent of the K. K. K. in this parish there has gradually arisen a condition of disorder and lawlessness, which has ripened into a supercession of constituted authorities by the K. K. K. and the establishment of a government of its own, from which a reign of terror and chaos have resulted, and the parish was on the brink of riot and bloodshed when the governor sent the militia here and these proceedings were initiated.

"While it may be conceded that many klansmen did not actually participate or encourage these many acts of lawlessness and crime, which finally culminated in the murder of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, they may nevertheless be deemed responsible therefor by reasons of their silence and inaction. These offenses and crimes were committed in the name of the order, under the protection of its regalia and in the use of its recognized methods and practices, and under the leadership of its officers, the principal of which has, for the last six months at least, brought about a condition in this parish which is a blot upon our civilization and brings into question the proud title of American citizenship.

"The flogging of citizens, their deportation and banishment and other kindred offenses, were but mere pastimes and of such frequent occurence that they were accepted as commonplace things, the protest against which was itself sufficient ground for deportation.

"Without going into detail, we beg to say that the conclusion we have reached is that many persons have been identified and connected with these many acts of violence and crime, leading to and including the kidnaping of August 24, 1922, and the murder of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, and it is the purpose of the state to present this evidence to the grand jury for its consideration and action as soon as we can get a transcript of it."

KLAN TO WAGE BITTER POLITICAL BATTLE

Enraged at Mer Rouge Revelations, Will Seek to Control Louisiana Offices.

N.Y. Times 1-28-23

FOES PREPARE CAMPAIGN

Formation of Secret Group Within Order and Suppression of Publicity Are Planned.

New York Times

Special to The New York Times.

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 27.—The fiercest political battle ever staged in Louisiana is in prospect in the next State campaign, with the Ku Klux Klan and the foes of the hooded fraternity lined up for a desperate struggle. Enemies of the members of the "Invisible Empire" are determined that no important office shall be permitted to go to a candidate espousing the principles of the Klan. Realizing that the organization will make a strenuous struggle to get one of its members or sympathizers in the gubernatorial chair when Governor John M. Parker steps out (under the law he cannot run for office again), anti-Klansmen have perfected a questionnaire which will be put up to candidates for all offices.

This course was adopted when it became known that B. Y. Clarke, formerly Acting Imperial Wizard of the Klan, had sent out a secret statement to a selected few Louisiana politicians who are members of the order, inviting them to join a political Klan within the Ku Klux Klan. The invitation caused at least one prominent Klansman to renounce the order and make public the Klan within a Klan scheme.

Clarke's statement reveals the purpose of the political Klan, or Imperial Klan, as it is known officially at Klan headquarters, to take in Congressmen, Senators, Governors, Judges, and others of political prominence, who are to form an inner circle and whose membership is not to be revealed to the other members of the Invisible Empire. The officeholders are to be initiated at star chamber sessions of the Klan by imperial authority from headquarters.

Secret Klan Within Klan.

The closing paragraph of the Clarke statement shows that the group of men composing the "Imperial Klan" are to dictate the political policy of the masked organization and that the local members are expected to obey orders from headquarters without question. Clarke's statement in part follows:

"We are face to face with the opportunity of bringing into the organization men of large type but men whose identity we want to absolutely conceal from even their local Klan—the Klan which is located where they live. For instance, Congressmen, Senators, Governors, judges and others whom we can line up as real Klansmen, but which it would be best for them and for us for their identity to be completely and absolutely concealed.

"These men can be passed upon in the Imperial Klan and put upon the roster of the Imperial Klan and given the Imperial passport to enter their local Klan at anytime it was thought best to let them go there and uncover their identity as Klansmen. I believe this feature of the Imperial Klan's possibilities alone justifies its establishment at this time.

"It will not be long before Klans in all parts of the nation will begin to send in petitions of various kinds to be discussed by the Imperial Klan. Problems of local character, problems of national character, will come before this body to be discussed by the head of the operating forces of the organization and the action taken will be passed down in full detail to all of the Klans throughout the nation. I think we have made a forward step and I am heartily in favor of it."

The former Klansmen from whom this statement was obtained, said:

"This is an attempt to create a secret political oligarchy in Louisiana. If these secret political bosses should by some chance, get in power, conditions far worse tha nthose of the Reconstruction period will result. The shocking revelations in Morehouse Parish would be duplicated in many other parishes and we would have anarchy. No man's life would be safe. The State of Louisiana would become an armed camp. I do not believe the people will take any chances. Klanism will be the paramount issue in the coming campaign and the Klan will be snowed under."

Questionnaire for Candidates.

A sample of the questionnaire candidates will be asked to fill out follows:

"1. Are you, or have you ever been, naturalized as a citizen of the Invisible Empire, commonly known as the Ku Klx Klan?

"2. Which do you consider the most sacred of oaths, the oath you take while qualifying for office or that of any secret organization under the sun?

"3. Do you believe in the right to worship God according to the dictates of your own conscience, the absolute separation of Church and State, and that all religious denominations should be protected so long as they comply with the written laws of the land and do not make themselves obnoxious to society?

"4. If elected will you abstain from affiliating with any and all secret organizations who conceal their membership by permitting perjury and concealing their identity behind white and black masks?"

A. E. Farland, Chief of the Department of Justice agents, engaged in the investigation of the Klan outrages in Morehouse Parish, left here for Washington tonight, where he will make an exhaustive report on Klan conditions in Louisiana to the highest officials of the nation. It is thought probabe that President Harding will ask for a full report on the Morehouse investigation, and the Attorney General's office believes that a Federal drive of nation-wide proportions will be begun against the Klan before the Morehouse Grand Jury takes final action on the cases groging out of the kidnapping and murder of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards on August 24.

It was made known tonight that the Federa lauthorities will not only receive a full report on the situation in Morehouse parish, but will also have access to a large amount of information, which has come to Governor Parker since the beginning of the inquiry in Louisiana. Much of this information was handed to the Governor voluntarily. Much of it was gathered under the direction of the State authorities, aided by the Federal agents. All of it would have a bearing on a nation-wide driv eagainst the "invisible empire" under the auspices of the United States Department of Justice.

Plot to Foil Publicity.

Among facts not shown at the Bastrop hearing but which have been well authenticated by the investigators is that the National Council of the Klan followed closely the proceedings of the open hearing and have promised moral and financial support to Klansmen accused in Morehouse, despite Captain Skipwith's statement to the contrary.

Moreover, it is now asserted that the national leaders of the Ku Klux Klan, infuriated by the wide publicity given to the proceedings at Bastrop, are determined to reorganize along different lines with a view to muzzling the press. The plan calls for the enlistment of employes of newspapers, telegraph operators and others engaged in the distribution of news of national importance, and the employment of methods which smack strongly of the tricks of the I. W. W. and Communists in blocking unfavorable publicity.

Reports to Governor Parker indicate that the Klan, from a country-wide standpoint, is seeing a slump in its campaign for new members; has seen the better class of its membership withdrawing and is now forced to appeal to the baser elements of the population.

Louisiana officials have been informed that in Kansas City the Klan, strong enough last Fall to defeat in his own section of the State, Senator James A. Reed in his successful contest for reelection, has split wide open with the results that the original organization has changed its program, eliminating its attack on Jews, Roman Catholics and negroes, and confining its activities to a fight on Greeks and other foreigners from Southern Europe. The faction which stood up for the original principles of the Klan, that is, persecution of Jews, Catholics and negroes, has organized a separate society, known as the American Klan, and with a smaller force, and a different name, is waging the battle formerly conducted by the original Ku Klux Klan.

In a murder trial opening tomorrow in Ardmore, Okla., Klan issues are at stake and the Klan is said to be openly divided in the conflict. In Arkansas, with the Government forces largely favorable to the Klan, the State Legislature has started an investigation of Klan lawlessness in Harrison. Reports indicate that the fight started by former Governor Henry J. Allen, who has been succeeded by a Democrat, has virtually eliminated the "inviisble empire" from that State.

Even in the Morehouse Parish, where there were 800 men voters, 500 of them Klansmen, prior to the murders of Aug. 24, the Klan, it is freely predicted, cannot survive more than six months. There are Klansmen there who are openly hostile to Skipwith. This has been learned positively by Federal investigators. It is predicted that there will be a demand for a new Cyclops, and it also is freely predicted that there will not be a man in Morehouse Parish willing to accept the rsponsibility.

Without Skipwith there can be no Klan in Morehouse Parish, according to Bastrop leaders, and with the abdication of the aged Cyclops the only solution, it is believed, would be the dissolution of the Morehouse Klan chapter altogether.

With Attorney General Coco resting at his home at Marsville, his assistants in New Orleans early this afternoon began the transcription of the huge volume of testimony taken at the Bastrop hearing.

While the Attorney General's forces reserved much of their ammunition for recital before the Grand Jury, enough testimony was gathered st the open hearing, they admit, to make it reasonably certain that charges of murder will be preferred against Captain J. K. Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Klan; E. N. (Newt) Gray, a deacon in the Missionary Baptist Church and prosperous farmer; Oliver Skipwith, a son of Captain J. K. Skipwith, and Smith Stevenson, who was identified as the driver of the truck on which Daniel and Richards were carried through Bastrop on their way to the place of execution.

Among others who will be charged with murder are five Klansmen from Ashley County, Ark., two of whom, it was admitted tonight, have been examined by Secret Service agents.

Skipwith Orders Klan to Be Good.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 27.—Captain J. K. Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Klan, sent word down the line to all of his followers today that a single infraction of the law would not be tolerated by the Klan or by the Exalted Cyclops himself.

"I have given my promise to Attorney General Coco as a Southern gentleman that I would do all that I could to keep down any trouble in Morehouse Parish until the Grand Jury is convened on the first Monday in March," said Skipwith tonight. "I thought this would be sufficient, but there have been signs that some persons thought I was joking, and I believe it may be necessary for me to repeat that so far as I am concerned I do not want any monkey business."

Skipwith is back in Bastrop after a visit to Monroe, where it is said that he was advised by high Klan officials that it would be a feather in the cap of the Morehouse Klan if Morehouse Parish made a record for law observance until after the Grand Jury session in March at least. Skipwith was asked tonight if he had any more information concerning his announced theory that Thomas F. Richards is still alive.

"I am not giving out any interviews any more," he reylied. "I have always believed Richards is alive. I think we can prove Richards was sent out of the country after he told all he knew about Daniel. Richards was afraid of Daniel and he watned to go. I am willing to tell all I know to the Morehouse Grand Jury. I have always been willing to tell all I know when the proper time comes, but not before. The Attorney General's staff is apparently trying to smoke me out, but I will say that when I get ready to tell what I know I will tell it."

lieved to have been seen near Shrewsbury, a New Orleans suburb, late this afternoon. Secret Service men dashed out in an automobile and combed the roads leading north from Shrewsbury in an effort to find the man suspected of being the friend of Jeff Burnett, whose testimony, it is believed, will prove a big help in bringing to justice the hooded men who slew Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards.

A stranger wearing khaki trousers and walking with a limp and who in every way resembled photographs and the description of Teegestrom halted the car of William Krebs near Shrewsbury and asked "the nearest route north."

"Where do you want to go?" asked Krebs, who was struck by the youth's striking resemblance to Teegestrom. "Oh, North," was the reply. "I want to get to Canada, but I've got to walk it."

Krebs pointed out the Jefferson Highway and then telephoned to the Department of Justice. Flyers were sent out to all towns and villages on the highway to be on the lookout for the youth whose description has been widely published. Department of Justice operatives believe Teegestrom has been terrified by the Klan and fears to go on the witness stand and tell what he knows.

Just beyond Shrewsbury residents had seen the stranger leave the highway and go into a thicket. The thicket was searched without avail.

WITNESS TELLS OF MOB'S ACTIONS

Took Victims to Lake, Returned Without Them, Is Tourist's Testimony.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, Staff Correspondent of the I. N. S.

COURT HOUSE, BASTROP, La., Jan. 25.—L. Leon Jones, a Mississippi farmer, openly charged that he saw members of the "hooded mob" take their victims to the shore of Lake LaFourche and return without them, while testifying Thursday at the Mer Rouge murder inquiry.

The open hearing was formally ended a few minutes after the Attorney General concluded his statement. Judge Fred L. Odom, who presided, declared the investigation indefinitely adjourned "pending call of the court."

The investigation may be reopened at any time. State authorities, however, will confine their future prosecution to the grand jury proceedings, or special "information" cases unless some unusual development occurs. The grand jury investigation will not start until all evidence taken at the open hearing has been prepared in brief form. This may take four weeks or more, probably throwing the investigation before the new parish grand jury which convenes March 1.

SEARCH FOR BOY CONTINUES.

The seach for Harold L. Teegerstrom, missing witness, continued Thursday but state authorities were not pushing it with the same vigor as previously.

"Teegerstrom has ceased to be a vital point in the prosecution," said one member of the Attorney General's staff. "We believe his friends know where he is and we have abandoned all theories of foul play."

The state troops, who were sent into Morehouse Parish by Governor Parker when the open hearing started, were ordered relieved from duty. The soldiers will have left the parish before nightfall.

Their departure was coincident with an announcement from Governor Parker's office that martial law will be declared at the first sign of violence. Civil authorities at the same time announced they would use their full forces to stop future disorders.

WITNESS RECENTLY FOUND.

Jones was motoring cross-country on the night of the murders when his machine broke down on the Lake LaFourche road. He disappeared immediately afterwards and was located 10 days ago at his Mississippi home.

Ku-Klux Purposes and Methods.

Chicago Daily News

In the meetings that have been held in Chicago this week to consider measures for combating the influence of the Ku-Klux klan much has developed in condemnation of that organization and nothing to justify its existence. The most telling indictment, of course, was brought by Gov. John M. Parker of Louisiana, in whose state have developed the worst features of the dangerous klan situation. At Mer Rouge kidnaping and murder of the most atrocious sort were executed by an invisible force set up in opposition to the laws of organized society.

Doubtless among the many thousands of the klan throughout the United States there is a high percentage that holds the honest belief that the organization is useful and lawful. Of course they are mistaken. The klan may have legal and laudable purposes, but it sets about achieving them by improper and illegal means. It is chiefly effective through the fear that it inspires by its secret tyranny. It employs the methods of the Neapolitan camorra and the Sicilian mafia. Like the camorrists, the members of the klan take an oath of secrecy and fidelity and, like the camorrists, some members of the klan have not hesitated to commit any crime up to and including murder.

With the commission of such crimes as have been charged against the klan no more than a small percentage of the members presumably are in sympathy. The others, who do not believe the klan guilty, at least cannot deny that behind the mask and under the pledge of secrecy that shields the members unscrupulous individuals hide and use the organization for purposes of revenge or for other evil ends. 3-1-23

This country cannot tolerate organizations whose members hide their identity behind masks and set up a tyranny of fear. Such organizations are not democratic but are destructive of democracy. In the United States there are plenty of wrongs to be righted and evils to be removed, but the work must be done fearlessly, manfully, in the open. If the Ku-Klux members want really to serve their country let them come into the light and stand or fall by the righteousness or unrighteousness of their cause.

"DOC" M'KOIN ARRIVES

Limbs of Watt Daniel and Richards Were Wrenched From Their Bodies—In Some Torture Machine Their Lives Were Slowly Crushed Out, According to Evidence—Revolting Butchery Performed on Maj. Watt Daniel.

BY ROBERT LEE.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

BASTROP, La., Jan. 6.—Martial law here seems to be a matter of moments. There is a tenseness in the situation which may be precipitated into open trouble of a dangerous nature.

No small contributing cause is the determined protest of the seven secret service agents of the federal department of justice.

Headed by Chief A. E. Farland, these operatives, on whose disclosures the entire process of the case is based, are protesting vigorously against being disarmed in the courtroom, while Klansmen and sympathizers are only perfunctorily searched by Sheriff Carpenter's deputies as they enter the courtroom.

Opening of court was delayed this morning more than an hour by a demand from Chief Farland that he and his men be not molested in the carrying of weapons.

At Mercy of Gunmen.

"Friends of the klan are permitted to carry guns," was his charge. "All others, including the federal agents, have been placed at the mercy of gunmen as a result of Judge Odom's order."

There is no disposition to place the blame on Judge Odom, but it is charged that the deputies are searching only anti-klan men as they approach the entrance to the court.

When Chief Farland's protest was made to Attorney General Coco and Adjutant General Toombs it was decided to go into conference. For the present a truce has been reached.

At 10:20 o'clock the hearing was resumed. Peter Mulkern, an undertaker of Monroe, was the first witness. He told of caring for the bodies of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, whose headless and armless and legless trunks were found in Lake La Fourche.

Were Crushed to Death.

Following Mulkern's description of the technical care he gave the bodies the state introduced the reports of Dr. Charles Duval and Dr. John A. Lanford, pathologists, who examined the two bodies. Cooly, scientifically, Daniel and Richards were crushed to death by hooded terrorists, the pathologists declared. With barbarous ingenuity, hands and feet were wrenched from the battered bodies, the statement explains.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, who with Cyclops Skipwith, is in the center of glare in the hearing, entered the courtroom this afternoon. Almost instantly he became the conspicuous figure of the proceedings.

McKoin at first sat in a chair on the main floor. Then he moved to one of the galleries. Instantly women began leaving their seats to ascend to the gallery and congratulate him.

His Grin Vanishes.

While he was thus being felicitated, his face lighted up by a huge grin, old Daniel slowly entered the room and shuffled to a seat. Instantly McKoin's smile vanished and he gravely contemplated the old man who was flogged and whose son was murdered by a masked crew with which, it is charged, McKoin had sympathetic connections.

Throughout the session McKoin listened intently to the testimony, commenting from time to time to those who sat near him.

Scientific means were used to break each arm in three places and then the chest cavities of the helpless victims—one a world war veteran, and the other his friend—were smashed in by "pressure applied from front and from back," the witness declared.

The most grewsome outrages in the pages of history were outdone that night behind the veil of dense foliage in a sheltered spot in the wooded section near Mer Rouge after Daniel's father had been brutally beaten and two others had been severely flogged by the masked terror.

Turkish Outrages Outdone.

The Spanish Inquisition, Turkish outrages and tortures of Apaches in the 49 days were far less inhuman than the tragedy of that black night as described in Louisiana's noted public hearing.

Cloaked in the unemotional language of the man of science, also was described a crude operation, a revolting butchery—which had been performed on Daniel before his life was viciously crushed out. It was a story that evidently was charitable to the band of murderers.

Then the remains were wired to iron wheels and cast into Lake La Fourche. The two reports are practically identical, except that the crude operation performed on Daniel was not committed in the case of Richards. Courtroom interest was immediately drawn to the tragic souvenirs of the night of Aug. 24 by the entrance of soldiers bearing portions of the remains of Daniel and Richards.

While the report of the medical examiners was introduced as evidence it was only fragmentary when compared to the expanded explanation of Drs. Lanford and Duval. The physicians elaborated on their explanation by pointing out in the bones of the victims the undeniable evidence of the extreme brutality.

Old Mr. J. L. Daniel, father of Watt, sat gravely by the side of Adjt. Gen. Toombs as the medical men described in clinical frankness the savagery that must have been practiced on the bodies of the victims in order to produce the fractures shown by the mute human fragments.

The climax came when the bones of the two victims were produced, crushed through at regular intervals by some modern improvement on medieval torture-chamber methods. The bones were sewn with white thread to great squares of dun-colored cardboard, just as they would have looked if they had still been intact.

And at the gaps through which the inquisitors of the black hoods had crunched their "specially constructed device" were sewn the innumerable bone splinters that had been shattered out of the living tissue.

"The bones of the arms and legs were broken in three places," Dr. Duval said. "The striking features of the fractures or breaks in the bones, always three in number, in the arms and legs, were that they were about equidistant. Indications were breaks produced by some force or forces that came from different directions."

Mutilated During Life.

"When would you say the cutting operation performed on Daniel's body took place?" Dr. Duval was asked.

"During life," the physician replied.

He testified that the head was crushed "by forces coming in different directions as though from some instrument, such as a vise."

"Could the injuries have been produced by beating?"

"I don't think so," Dr. Duval said.

"Were the injuries inflicted before death?" Attorney General Coco, who conducted the questioning, asked.

"Yes," Dr. Duval replied.

He explained that any one of several injuries noted could have caused death.

"My idea is that the body was most inhumanly tortured," Dr. Duval said in answer to another question.

"The striking symmetry of the bone fractures and their relationship to injuries of the surrounding soft tissues suggest that the body was subjected to some specially constructed device designed for inflicting punishment."

Limbs Torn From Body.

After describing the condition of the bodies at the time the autopsy was performed, of parts of clothing about the bodies and of a watch, the crystal crushed and the hands indicating 10 o'clock, taken from one of the bodies, the report in the case of Daniel continued:

"The tendons and ligaments about the stumps of the legs and forearms are ragged and uneven as though they had been torn or pulled from their attachments.

"The bones of the body, particularly those of the extremities (legs and arms), are found fractured. These fractures are compound."

But the first tale of the flogging came from the lips of W. C. Andrews—stockily built, good natured and smiling of countenance—a farmer of Mer Rouge.

One of the Men Flogged.

Andrews, one of the five kidnaped by the mob, said he had gone to Bastrop August 24 to attend the baseball game and barbecue with J. T. Norworthy, riding with him in Andrews' car.

"We got here about 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning, in time to see the first baseball game," he said. "We left just before sundown."

"What time did you return?" asked Attorney General Coco.

"I started to return, but I didn't get there."

"About a mile or so out of town, up on a dump—that old tramroad out there—I was held up by a bunch of black-hooded men. There were about 15 or 20 of them."

"Was that on a public road?"

"Yes. One man came to the side where I was driving, pointed a gun at me and told me to get out. I did. I was blindfolded and my hands tied before me. They set me off at the side of the road, about 25 to 50 feet away."

"What did they say to you?"

"They said they wanted me. One of them said, 'Here's one of the men we want.'"

"Did you then recognize any of them or recognize their voices?"

"No, I recognized though the voice of J. L. Daniel, father of Watt Daniel. Then I heard them say they wanted some others. They got Richards next. When they put him beside me he asked: 'Is that you, W. C.?' and I told him it was. I said, 'I guess they are going to get all of us,' and he said, 'Reckon so.'

They got Watt Daniel and Tod Davenport then, I guess. I recognized Watt's voice when they told him to get up. I guess one of them shoved him or did something like that when he was slow in obeying. Watt said, 'Wait a minute, buddy, don't be so fast.'"

"Why did he say buddy? Those hooded men weren't buddies, were they?"

"Guess they wern't," said Andrews, smiling.

There was a barely suppressed laugh that ran the rounds of the court room at this. Attorney General Coco resumed the examination.

Andrews then described how the hooded men flogged him until he was numb.

"They took me down the road, but wouldn't say what they intended to do with me," Andrews said. "It seemed that we passed through Bastrop. Then I was taken from the car and questioned as to an attempt on the life of Dr. McKoin."

Andrews said that he knew nothing of it, but his captors expressed themselves as doubting his statement.

"They said they were going to whip me and make me tell."

"Then they whipped me."

Andrews said that the men next threatened to hang, but finally released him at Collinston, a town a short distance from Bastrop. He was told to "go back home and be a good boy," Andrews testified.

MORE MER ROUGE TROOPS

Cavalry Arrives to Prevent More Kidnapings—Activities of the Government Redoubled as Open Hearing Apprponches.

BY ROBERT LEE.

(Copyrighted Special to the Chicago Tribune, and The Commercial Appeal.)

MER ROUGE, La., Jan. 2.—Capt. J. K. Skipworth, exalted cyclops of Klan 34 of the Realm of Louisiana, is going to be under arrest tomorrow or next day, charged with murder.

More than 35 members of the Klan crew that kidnaped and murdered Watt Daniels and Thos. F. Richards on Aug. 24 also will be under arrest.

A troop of Louisiana cavalry is also expected to arrive in Morehouse Parish tomorrow morning. Orders for their encampment have been received. Officers from the adjutant general's department began today slowly taking over the control of the parish.

Today a new witness produced evidence positively identifying five klansmen as members of the hooded mob that participated in the killing of Daniels and Richards.

Drawing Final Plans.

With these preparations the various forces centered here in the fight to expose the Ku Klux Klan as the determining factor in the outrages which have occurred in the last 12 months are drawing the last plans for spectacular open hearing which is to convene in this parish on Friday. There still is some question of where the hearing is to be held, but as the time grows nearer it seems apparent that the parish court house in Bastrop will be the stage.

The State of Louisiana is supplying the troops and the legal talent. The federal government is supplying investigators from the Department of Justice. Three more federal men have arrived. The activities of the government have been redoubled. Day and night the automobiles of the secret agents are plowing the muddy roads of the primeval jungles and swamps, tracing klan propaganda and interviewing witnesses.

Testimony at Mer Rouge Murders Hearing to Involve Crimes Covering Year.

75 UNDER SURVEILLANCE

Prosecution Feels Sure Indictments Will Follow Pathologists' Report at Coming Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 31.—Evidence regarding alleged Ku Klux Klan and other organized atrocities in Louisiana dating back more than a year will be submitted next Friday at the open hearing at Bastrop when the State presents its case against "Jeff" Burnett and others as yet unnamed who are charged with being among the slayers of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards at Mer Rouge on Aug. 24 last. The belief is expressed here that the testimony given at the Bastrop hearing will involve Ku Klux Klan leaders in other States.

That Attorney General Coco's office has virtually agreed on its plan of procedure was learned today from a most authoritative source. At least 75 persons have been under surveillance in the Mer Rouge investigations and the number of suspected persons may be increased if the open hearing testimony discloses evidence which the Attorney General's office believes is certain to be revealed.

Pathologists' Rport Withheld.

Inadequate jail facilities at Bastrop have been noted oficially and a temporary jail or stockade will have to be built or prisons in other parishes utilized when the State's forces finally put out the dragnet for all persons involved in the Morehouse County outrages.

Evedince relative to outrages by organized and masked bands for more than a year has been reviewed by the Attorney General's and testimony at the open hearing not only will reveal this evidence as applying particularly to the Mer Rouge murders, but will as well concern the alleged flogging of innocent citizens, not only in Morehouse Parish, but in other Louisiana parishes; the banishment of citizens from Morehouse and other parishes, and campaigns of terror which are said to have been conducted at hegular intervals by armed and masked bands.

That high officials of the Ku Klux Klan in Louisiana and other States may be called on to testify at the Bastrop hearing is more than probable, and as Klan leaders have voluntarily offered to assist the prosecution, the open hearing may bring to the surface the story of the organization's aims and activities throughout the nation.

Attorney General Coco spent Sunday in his office studying official reports and was joined later by T. Semmes Walmsley, Assistant Attorney General Neither would make a definite statement as to what had been learned at the pathological examinations of the bodies of Richards and Daniels. Drs. Charles W. Duval and John A. Lanford, the New Orleans pathologists, whose official report is to be submitted to the Attorney General Tuesday, do not agree as to whether the dynamiting was responsible for the bodies coming to the surface.

The Attorney General's attention was called to the fact that at least one of the victims had been subjected to an operation which could be performed with safety only by a skilled physician and was asked if a report was true that this operation had caused his death and the subsequent decision to kill the other victim and hurl the bodies into the lake.

The Attorney General refused to discuss the subject, intimating that the report of the pathologists would not be made public until the trial. He also refused to comment on whether the explosion of half a ton of dynamite was responsible for blowing off the men's heads. A report is current in Mer Rouge that the victims were beheaded by the murderers and that their heads were concealed at a different point from the bodies.

It is known that the report of the pathologists will for mone of the sensational features of the trial.

Witnesses who will be called may involve others, and there is no way to determine how many persons will be finally summoned for examination after the hearing has started. The Grand Jury will be asked to indict after the open hearing has done its work, and the assertion is made authoritatively that the State has assurances that the evidence will be so overwhelming that there will be no chance of a failure to indict, despite the widespread ramifications of the Klan in Morehouse Parish.

Says Band Had "Death Squad."

Special to The New York Times.

MER ROUGE, La., Dec. 31.—The hooded mob which kidnapped Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards, with others, divided itself into two squads after the men were seized, according to one of the investigators who is working on the case.

One was known as the "death squad" and the oher as the "whipping squad," the investigator said. The "death squad" took Daniels and Richards in charge, inflicted tortures which the pathologists for the State found caused death, and sought to hide the crime by casting the bodies into Lake Lafourche.

The "whipping squad," the investigator declared, had the job of whipping J. L. Daniels and W. C. Andrews. The whipping, he said, was done near Lake Boueff, a few miles southwest of Collinston.

Managers of industrial plants around Bastrop are having difficulty in keeping their employes, especially negroes, among whom rumors have inspired fear of an outbreak as the result of the tense situation over the murder investigation situation. Many of the workmen live five or six miles from town, and they say they are afraid to go to and from work.

Except for this Morehouse Parish was quiet on the eve of the New Year, and the only official word was that there would be nothing doing until Attorney General Coco arrived to present the State's case at the open hearing on Friday. Department of Justice agents had nothing to say. Mayor Goodwin of Bastrop issued a statement denying that conditions in Morehouse Parish were as they had been pictured. His statement read in part:

Mayor Defends Bastrop.

The community of which I am Mayor wishes to correct the false impression the public has obtained of our home country because of the outrage last August, which I, together with the people of Bastrop, most vigorously condemn. We hope the culprits will be brought to justice, not by way of extenuation but in justice to our people. One such unfortunate incident should not bring a blanket indictment of lawlessness upon us. We are not a gun-toting, wild, savage people. We are law-abiding, like the people in the rest of the United States. Other communities throughout the country have had similar tragedies in their midst but have not been condemned as a unit. Some of the press reports, we know, have been exaggerated, but we welcome all correspondents and only hope they will stay to record the final result as well as the steps that led to the situation."

Old Skip at Work.

But the activity of the klan has been no less apparent and energetic. Skipworth, the exalted cyclops solemnly treads the streets of Bastrop in his conspicuous gray fedora, his blue reefer and his gray trousers. He always is to be found on the public square.

He walks a few steps and then calls: "O Ben." A silent man in a slouch hat and with prominent bulges in his hip pockets detaches himself from a group to approach the cyclops. There is a whispered conversation and Ben resumes his group or hastens off and the cyclops resumes his tread. Now and again he passes into an office, confers for a few moments and then comes into the street again. He sees them all. He gives orders. They all seem to take deep interest in what he is saying. He doesn't hesitate to speak of the klan and its work.

"That damned whisky drinking, nigger loving, poker playing outfit down there to Mer Rouge is the cause of this," he says. "When I get ready to slam out a statement it'll be hotter than hell. We've tried to get them Mer Rouge people to lead moral lives. But it ain't in 'em. We've got a girl down there that we've made the daughter of the klan. I'll bet she's the best citizen of that damned town."

Daughter of the Klan.

This "daughter of the klan" is a person concerning whom there was comment last summer. The klan sent word to her that she must clear out. She was taken from her mother and sent to Little Rock. When she wanted to visit her mother she had to get permission from the cyclops. She is in Mer Rouge now. She has permission. Old Skip announces that through purification in the moral laundry of the klan she now is fit for society again. He says the klan is going to educate her and make a woman of her.

"She's a damned sight cleaner than she ever was, now that the klan has adopted her," says the gray cyclops. "Well, just wait for the hearing. I'll cut loose and tell about that town of Mer Rouge. Sodom in its palmiest days never approached that town. And the biggest joke of all is the government men are saying that they found the bodies of Daniels and Richards. How in hell could those bodies stay in Lake La Fourche four months and look like anything?"

Warrant Prepared.

The warrant has been prepared for Old Skip. The question of imprisonment next is to be considered. It seems apparent that the tiny Bastrop jail cannot hold the numbers to be arrested. New Orleans and Baton Rouge both have been suggested. Skipworth says he doesn't care a damn what they do. He proposes to fight the state and the government to a queen's taste. He says Dr. B. M. McKoin is as fine a man as you'll care to meet and that Dr. McKoin also will show the people of Mer Rouge where to get off at.

The state is preparing to inject into the evidence the killing of Dr. Thomby by Dr. McKoin several years ago. Nothing ever came of that killing. A coroner's jury in Galion, La., decided that the homicide was justifiable and nothing ever came of it. It is recalled that most of the men of Mer Rouge went on the bonds of McKoin when he was arrested for that shooting. Among those who signed the bonds were Watt Daniels and his father.

"Well, hell," says Old Skip, "McKoin will be back in a few days and he'll have something to say about all these things, I reckon."

He Simply Vanished.

It is the continuing intimidation of witnesses that brings new troops. The whole parish is under scrutiny of klan agents. No sooner does it become known that an inhabitant of a lonely, back country plantation has been in conversation with government agents than a warning is delivered by klansmen. Harold Teegestrom, the timekeeper for the Southern Carbon Company at Spyker was spirited away so quickly that he had not even an opportunity to snatch up his Christmas bonus check. He wore his working clothes. But there was not the least sign of a struggle. He simply vanished. And the reason for his disappearance has been amply supplied to the federal agents.

It is not the spoken defiance of the klan that has caused the governor to send in state troops or the government to investigate further. It is the discovery of definite evidence of guilt, definite recognition of individuals and definite knowledge of intimidation of witnesses. It is this definite knowledge that causes men of the parish to carry arms, many conspicuously, and the women to drive to market through the forest roads with shotguns in their buggies.

A Mer Rouge man sat down to eat tonight and as he did so eased himself of the burden of a huge navy revolver. "That baby goes to Bastrop with me," he said.

"I wouldn't do it, Bill," said an old townsman.

Bill tossed him a swift glance that might have meant anything. Then he said:

"And that ain't all. I'm going to have another one just like it. When I go to that hearin' I expect to sell out."

"Selling Out."

This "selling out" is a stock expression in this community. When one is confronted by an unequal number of enemies one doesn't beg off or make truces. He sells out. He kills as many of the enemy as he can before the enemy finally kills him. This was what old Mr. Daniels meant when he said that "Watt would have sold out if there had been a chance."

There came to light today a strange evidence of the instinctive regard for law which abides in Mer Rouge. One of those who has been protesting most vigorously against the encroachments of the klan described it.

"It was just a couple of days after the murders," he said. "The town got pretty badly het up. You see here in Mer Rouge we have always been just like a big family. Everybody knowed everybody else. If you wanted a car to drive somewhere, you just went out and took the first one you saw. It was all right. If you didn't get back till the next day, that was all right too.

"If you wanted to be driven somewhere, the first man or boy you met was glad to take you there. If you didn't want to go home, you just went and slept in the first house you come to. But the klan business split the town family right to pieces. Since then we've been bothered about each other. We've been suspicious. No man knows what another man is about to do.

"The murders was the climax. As I say, the people got het up. The word went round that everybody was going to pack their guns and go over to Bastrop and shoot the shoes off them hod dam 'klux.' Fifteen minutes more would have done it. But a few of the older heads got there and just said a few words and I really believe that the hottest one in the crowd was ashamed that he had ever thought of breaking the law to get even with a law breaker."

But even with the coolest of leadership there is likely to be a Fourth of July on Jan. 5.

M'KOIN READY TO GO.

Will Return to Louisiana Voluntarily, He Says.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 2.—Dr. B. M. McKoin, wanted in Louisiana for alleged murder in connection with the Morehouse Parish kidnapings, is willing to return to Louisiana voluntarily, but must first be released by the Baltimore court in whose custody he now is.

Gov. Ritchie today wired Gov. Parker for such release.

Gov. Ritchie informed Gov. Parker that the requisition papers already in his hands were not sufficient for the reason that the affidavits are made on information and belief and not by anyone who had any personal knowledge of the alleged crime.

If the case comes to trial before Gov. Ritchie, the Maryland executive told Gov. Parker his decision accordingly would be against granting requisition at this time, but that he would hold Dr. McKoin for a reasonable time in order to give Louisiana authorities the opportunity to submit competent affidavit.

Dr. McKoin, Gov. Ritchie said, while insisting on his extradition rights, nevertheless was quite willing to return to Louisiana voluntarily, but could not do so until released by the court.

"Will you consent to his release so that he may return to Louisiana, and will you authorize your deputy officers to accompany him there?" Gov. Ritchie asked.

Will Leave Tomorrow.

"If you are willing to do this he wants to leave tomorrow."

The governor's telegram was sent after a conference with Robert R. Carman, counsel for Dr. McKoin, at the governor's office here late today.

Dr. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, La., was arrested here last Tuesday at the request of Gov. Parker and was to have appeared before Gov. Ritchie in extradition proceedings. Gov. Parker accused him of complicity in the murder of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards of Morehouse Parish, some time between last August and December. They were two members of a party of five men kidnaped by a band of hooded men.

Gov. Ritchie's telegram to Gov. Parker follows:

"After examining the requisition papers in the McKoin case, I do not think that they are sufficient, for the reason that the affidavits are made on information and belief, and not by anyone who has any personal knowledge of the alleged crime. Both the law and practice are clear in requiring this.

"If the case comes to trial before me my decision will accordingly be not to grant requisition at this time, but I will hold McKoin for a reasonable time in order to give Louisiana authorities the opportunity to submit competent affidavits. Dr. McKoin while insisting on his extradition rights, nevertheless advises me through his counsel that he is quite willing to return to Louisiana voluntarily, but he cannot do so until he is released by the court.

"He would like your deputy officers to accompany him back to Louisiana. Will you consent to his release so that he may return to Louisiana and will you authorize your deputy officers to accompany him there? If you are willing to do this he wants to leave tomorrow."

Andrews Declares Belief His Kidnappers Were Klansmen—Black Hoods Hid Their Identity.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 6.—W. C. Andrews and J. L. Daniel, two of the five men kindnapped by the black-hooded band which slew Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, today told a graphic story of their treatment when the second day's hearing into the Mer Rouge outrage began.

Neither Andrews nor Daniel, father of Watt Daniel, could reveal the identity of a single member of the masked band, which they said numbered from fifteen to twenty-five. Andrews, however, said that while he did not accuse the Ku Klux Klan as a whole he believed that the men who maltreated him were Klansmen.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, who is accused of being one of the band of kidnappers, whippers, torturers and slayers, was a spectator in the gallery of the courtroom, and, while his name was repeatedly mentioned in the testimony, he never changed his calm poise. He did not appear gravely concerned. While he is free from custody on bail, the murder charge still hangs over him.

Pathologists Tell of Torture.

Dr. Charles W. Duvall and Dr. John Lansford, State pathologists, who made autopsies on the bodies of Daniel and Richards, were among the first witnesses called at the morning session. Dr. Duvall stated his positive conviction that the murdered men were tortured by some especially prepared mechanical device before they were finally put to death and that this instrument must have been a device that fitted a human body, with auxiliary devices, after the fashion of manglers, that pressed down and crushed the shoulders, arms and legs of the victim in vital spots. In this manner, the pathologist testified, the murderers inflicted a slow torture on their victims. He was unwilling to offer an opinion as to how long the torture lasted before death finally came to free Daniel and Richards of their agony.

Both Dr. Duvall and Dr. Lanford stated positively that the explosion of dynamite in Lake La Fourche which brought the bodies to the surface could not have dismembered them and that the absence of heads, arms and feet was due to atrocities for which medico-legal history according to Dr. Duvall, held no parallel.

Prior to the opening of the morning session a conference was held in his office by Judge Odom with Attorney General Coco and his aids, Federal agents and Adj. Gen. Toombs, representing the military, at which it was decided that martial law would not be proclaimed in Bastrop, at least for the present.

Mr. Duvall testified that he was Professor of Pathology at Tulane University and had been there thirteen years, had spent six years in the same work at Louisiana State University and had obtained his medical degree at the University of Pennsylvania. "I have made more than 6,000 autopsies or post morten examinations," he said in reply to a question as to his experience in conducting autopsies.

The courtroom was deadly quiet as the pathologist told of conducting the autopsy over the headless forms of Daniel and Richards. J. L. Daniel, the father, listened with his chin in his hands.

Hands and Feet Chopped Off.

After testifying that wires were found bound about the body of Daniel, forming a crude basket, Dr. Duvall continued:

"I would say that the hands and feet had been chopped or smashed off. The bones at these extremities were jagged and protruding. In the body we found striking injuries, especially to the long bones in the arms and legs. Each of the twelve bones of the arms and legs were broken in three places. At the lower, middle and upper parts.

We found that the thighs had the same sort of fractures at the upper, middle and lower parts.

"These breaks were alwaysthree in number and were equi distant from one another. The breaks were very striking because of the marked similarity. There is very good evider theseequ were fractured before death. We found als that the bones of the chest were fractured in a peculiar manner. The chest plate was fractured and crushed in and from the character of the fractures we deduced that the force that caused them came from in more than one direction, that one or more forces were exerted from opposite directions."

Dr. Duvall said the internal organs were easily recognized, but apparently were uninjured. Other organs were gone and the indications were that they were removed with a sharp instrument.

"Was the cutting done before or after death," Attorney General Coco asked.

"It was our opinion," Dr. Duvall said, "that the organs were removed before death. The alterations found could not have been done after death. There was evidence that much blood had flown."

Describing the injuries about the head he said: "We found it to be merely loose skin and a few bones. The brains were gone. The head had been crushed by force coming from more than one direction, in our opinion," he added. The nature of the head wounds suggested crushing rather than blows, and probably a device was used. He expressed the opinion that any one of the injuries in itself could have caused death. In the removal of certain organs, for instance, the victim would have bled to death.

"Were these injuries inflicted simultaneously or at different times?" the Attorney General asked.

"That would depend upon whether the men were tortured," was the reply.

"Tortured," exclaimed the Attorney General. "What is your opinion on that?"

"I believe the men were most inhumanly tortured."

Bones of Victims Exhibited.

In describing the body of Richards, Dr. Duvall said the head was crushed and one hand and feet were missing. It was without clothing and was bound with wire forming a basket similar to the one enclosing the body of Daniel.

There was more evidence of decomposition than in the body of Daniel. There were also indications of a terrible loss of blood.

"We found the fractures in the bones of Richards almost identical with those of Daniels,' said the p athologist. "The breaks were three in number in each member and were also the same distance apart. Richards's spine, however, was not dislocated or broken. In Richards's chest bones, the injuries were the same as those of Daniel. The ribs, instead of being fractured, were separated from the breast plate. The bone injuries o both men were produced by the same method."

"What kind of a device was used in your opinion," the Attorney General asked. "Do you think the arms were outstretched at their sides and the de vice applied to break the bones?"

"That may have been true," was th reply. "The injuries were crushing, an I am inclined to believe that such a de vice may have been used. In injuries that sore, death is not produced by lo of blood or hemorrhage, but it may b produced by shock."

The bones of Daniel were then exhibited attached to a white carboard. Dr. Duval pointed ou the left and right thigh bones, explaining the fractures. Th breaks in the other bones were als pointed out. The knee bones, in a box were next exhibited, and then bones removed from the body of Richards, these being attached to a cardboard.

The pathologist pointed out three breaks in the leg bone of Richards and also the triple fracture in the arm bone.

"Could dynamite have had the effects you have described in these two bodies?" the witness was asked.

"No, dynamite could not have brought out the regularity in the fractures. Dynamite would also have affected sections of the body that have escaped injury. Dynamite, according to all conditions, did not cause these injuries."

Thinks Torture Device Specially Made.

Dr. Lanford was the first witness at the afternoon session, being examined by Senator Warren, Special Prosecutor. Dr. Lanford said he had made 500 autopsies. He corroborated, in a detailed way, the testimony offered by Dr. Duvall at the morning session, particularly with regard to conditions which indicated that Daniel and Richards had been subjected to slow torture before they died.

Dr. Lanford said the character of the injuries convinced him that the wounds were not due to blows, but to a continuous force, a steady crushing force from more than one direction. The lacerations of muscles and the condition of the blood indicated that the torture was inflicted just immediately before death. There was evidence also, he said, thta both victims had lost great quantities of blood before death came. Dr. Lanford agreed with Dr. Duvall that dynamite could not have caused the injuries.

"Do you think it was possible to have inflicted these tortures without a specially constructed device for inflicting human torture and suffering!" Mr. Guion, Assistant Attorney General, asked.

"I do not," said Dr. Lanford. "I cannot conceive of this thing having been done by anything other than an instrument specially constructed."

Victim Tells of Whippings.

The next witness called was W. C. Andrews, one of the three men who were kidnaped by the masked band with Daniel and Richards. Andrews was born and raised in Mer Rouge and is a farmer less than one mile outside the twn. He told the court of going to the barbecue in Bastrop on Aug. 24, taking with him J. T. Nordworthy, and the two drove back along the Mer Rouge Road.

"About a mile from Bastrop," he said, "we were held up. A bunch of men with black hoods on, looked to me like there were about fifteen or twenty, came rushing up. One held a gun to me and told me to get out of the car. They blindfolded me and tied my hands and walked me about fifty feet."

"Did you recognize any of them?" the Attorney General asked.

"No," replied the witness.

"They led me over beside J. L. Daniel," Andrews went on. "They had him, too. 'We want some others, too,' I heard them say. Then they got Richards and brought him over. 'Is that you?' he said to me. I told him it was. Then Daniel was brought over. He sat down and they pulled him to his feet.

"Wait a minute, Buddy, don't be so fast,' Watt said. They took me away. I asked them what they were going to do with me, but they would not answer. We all walked down the road and they put me in a car. We came back to Bastrop."

"How did you know where you were going, if you were blindfolded?" asked the Attorney General.

"I could smell the odor of the pulp mill," Andrews replied. "We drove quite a ways," he continued, "the car stopped and they asked me what I knew about the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin. I told them I didn't know anything about it and told them I was not in town that night. Then they pulled off my trousers and threw me down on the ground. Then they whipped me.

"The next thing I remembered they were beating old man Daniels. I could hear his yelling. Then they came back to me. They told me if I wouldn't tell them about shooting at Dr. McKoin they were going to hang me. I replied I did not have anything to tell, and they put me back in the car. They asked me if I had recognized any one of the party, and I said I hadn't.

"'It's mighty good for you that you did not,' they said, 'now go on back home.'"

Andrews said he was then released and the blindfold was taken from his eyes.

"Walk down the road and don't look back," he said the hooded men ordered, and he obeyed.

"How many men did you see?" the Attorney General asked.

"I am not sure, about fifteen or twenty, I should say."

"Were they all hooded!"

"Their faces were covered; black covering over their faces."

"Were these black coverings like the Klan hoods!"

"No, some of them were hats—they were black masks that covered part of their faces."

Believes Kidnappers Were Klansmen.

Andrews was asked whether he saw any automobiles parked o nthe roadway when he was first stopped He said he saw only an autoombile truck. He was asked if he knew who held him up and beat him.

"I don't know who the men were, but I believe they were members of the Ku Klux Klan. I don't accuse the Klan as a whole, but I believe the mob was composed of Klansmen."

The witness said the hoods came down to the neck only. If he knew the identity of the persons who kidnapped and beat him he would reveal the names, he declared.

"Has any one," asked the Attorney General, "other than an intimate friend or members of your family, asked you whether you knew who was in the mob?"

"Well, every one has asked me."

"Did any one that you suspected of being in the mob ask you?"

"Yes."

Describing the return journey from Collingston, the witness said he was in a touring car with U. L. Daniel, whom he recognized by his voice. Daniel kept asking for water, but the kidnappers refused it. Andrews thought he was being taken to his death. He was in bed two days after the whipping.

"They must have given me about forty lashes," he said.

He denied he had had any trouble with Dr. McKoin. He denied also that he was a member of the Klan.

Elder Daniel Describes Beating.

J. L. Daniel, father of the slain war veteran, was the next witness. He told how he and his son left home on the morning of the Bastrop barbecue and came to attend some business at the county seat. They separated.

"That was the last I saw of Watt alive," he said. I went home at noon and came back to Bastrop with "Dad" Peterson, to see the evening ball game. Coming back after the game my car was the st to be held up. I saw a touring car in the road ahead, and Peterson said:

"'Some body is in trouble up there.' I stopped the car. After we stopped men sprang up on either side of our car."

"How many were there in the crowd," he was asked.

"About twenty, maybe twenty-five. They were black hoods. One man pointed at me and said, 'Here's one we want.' He put a gun on me, a .45, I think. They told me to get out of my car. I got out and they blindfolded me with a red bandana handkerchief. I was then led by two men to about twenty-feet beyond the road and told to sit down. A little while later they brought Andrews and sat him down near me. I recognized him by his voice.

"My granddaughter, 15 years old, I knew was in a car behind us when we started, and I heard my granddaughter's voice saying, 'Poor Watt, poor Watt.' We sat for quite a time, and then Andrews and I were led off and loaded into a car. Andrews was the only man I knew had been caught until I was released at Collingston."

"What happened after they put you of Andrews in the car?" asked the Attorney General.

"We were driven back toward Bastrop for about an hour. Then they took us out of the car and we were led to a spot in the pine woods about thirty yards from the road. They told us we knew who had tried to assassinate Dr. McKoin and that if we didn't tell they would kill us."

"How many were talking to you?"

"About three. I told them I didn't know who tried to assassinate McKoin. After that they took my pants down and whipped me with a leather strap. After they got through with me they helped me up and started on Andrews. They whipped Andrews more than they did me. They beat him severely.

"Andrews and I were put back in the car after we were whipped and driven to Collingston. There they took off the blindfold and untied our wrists and we were told to go home. We were put out right behind the depot at Collingston. The man who put us out at Collingston still wore his mask."

hTe elder Daniel said that the masked man nearest to him was fully six feet tall. Beyond that he could give no description of his assailants, and had no suspicions as to who the members of the mob could have been.

McKoin Laughs at Bereaved Father.

Senator Warren asked Daniel about the shots supposed to have been fired at Dr. McKoin.

"I told Watt I was going to McKoin and talk to him about the shooting," the witness replied. "A few days before Watt and a couple of other young men ran into a bunch of hooded men who held up some boys. Watt came home and told me about it. That was before the shooting. I thought it was my duty, we being fellow Masons, to go to Dr. McKoin and talk over the matter. He told me he was not a Klansman."

Dr. McKoin, sitting in the gallery, seemed to find a great deal of humor in Daniel's testimony. He laughed uproariously when Daniel repeated their conversation.

"A little after that talk," Daniel continued, "Watt came to me and told me he'd been held up. Dr. McKoin, Laurie Calhoun and another man were in the party."

Calhoun is a Deputy Sheriff of Morehouse Parish and went to Baltimore after Dr. McKoin.

That was the first time Watt was held up, Daniel said. He was then searched and a box of cartridges was taken from him.

Judge Odom broke into the testimony at this juncture to adjourn court. He announced that the hearing would not be resumed until Tuesday, Monday being a legal holiday.

Attorney General Coco tonight said that he was well satisfied with the progress made so far.

"We'll get the men who wore the black masks," said the Attorney General.

"Jeff" Burnett, accused with Dr. McKoin of being one of the slayers, today lay ill on his steel cot in the Parish jail.

PLAINLY, members of the Ku Klux Klan cannot escape responsibility for the horrid crime at Mer Rouge, Louisiana. But it is a lazy mind that is satisfied with that conclusion. For the same readiness to resort to violence which has made Mer Rouge a word of infamy throughout this country has been displayed, without the aid of the Ku Klux Klan, in Arkansas; and Williamson County, Illinois, seems as unable to discover the perpetrators of the Herrin crimes as a Southern county to ferret out lynchers. And the record of Morehouse Parish, which includes Mer Rouge, shows that Klan methods are no novelty there. Morehouse Parish has a population of which 75 per cent are Negroes. The white minority rules the parish by force; Morehouse Parish has one of the blackest records of lynching in all Louisiana. It had thirteen recorded lynchings in a half-century. Wherever whites rule a black majority or keep a minority in subjection by force, violence becomes habitual, and sometimes, as in Mer Rouge, it oversteps the boundaries of race. (It is significant that Mer Rouge jumped into the headlines only when whites were killed.) Whether this violence is dramatized and given a name like the Ku Klux Klan is relatively unimportant. The habit of violence is the root evil and would persist even if the Klan as such were suppressed.

THIS habit of violence, while encouraged by white domination, is too general in the United States to be explained by race alone. Boone County, Arkansas, where a citizens' committee has been holding a sort of lynch court, flogging strikers and union sympathizers (even hanging one), and closing stores which refused to display the open-shop sign, has less than one-tenth of one per cent Negro population. Williamson County, Illinois, has not even a large foreign-born population. Yet both have made themselves notorious for sudden outbursts of violence which their citizens apparently have approved. The acquittal of five of the Herrin miners charged with murder may mean that those five men had nothing to do with the crimes, but combined with the fact that they were the men selected for trial by a bitterly hostile prosecution, in a town where thousands must have known about the crimes, it is evidence of the same kind of community indorsement of violence as lets lynching go unpunished in the South. In Arkansas, it is alleged, the railway strikers burned bridges. No one was punished. Now a self-appointed citizens' committee of anti-union men has taken charge of Harrison and other towns; sheriff, judge, and mayor seem to have abdicated in their favor, and even the Governor, by his refusal to send troops, supports the inquisition. These incidents should not be regarded as isolated outbreaks of industrial passion or race feeling: they cannot be cured by suppression of one organization or by punishment of a few individuals. They are significant of a deep canker in the American people: our readiness to resort to violence to enforce our code of ethics, and to indorse the violence of others if we approve the code they seek to enforce.

Initiating a Negro into the Ku Klux Klan

We read Mayfield's Weekly, published at Houston, Texas. We do not like many things said in it, nor do they like the views we express in exchange. Nevertheless, it is frequently interesting. It opposed Harding's appointment of Walter L. Cohen, a Negro, as Controller of Customs at New Orleans on the ground that he is "part Jew, part Catholic and half Nigger." It could not stomach a "Catholic and a coon." Three in one—Jew, Catholic, Negro. How does Cohen manage to stay in Louisiana? It's a mystery to us why he was not thrown into the lake since he has not even got the protection of the governor. Is that combination invincible?—or Achilles-like—vulnerable only in the heel?

Again, if Cohen is "half nigger" and half-white, where did he get the white blood from? Or is his blood red and simply his skin white, his nose aquiline and his soul Catholic?

Mayfield's Weekly settles the whole thing. Here's the way it is done. It says, "You see Cohen is a Koon, was a Kike [It does not say how he lost his Jewish blood—or do the Jews have blood?] and by religion is a Katholic." "Koon, Kike, Katholic" make him a K. K. K., a member of the Ku Klux Klan! This is a most ingenious method for a Negro to join the Ku Klux Klan. Make no application. Just get a little Jewish blood and join the Catholic Church. Then presto! And this great organization of native, gentile, protestant, white Americans is polluted with everything against which it is fighting, except alienism. And a West Indian like Garvey who is not a native would violate every tenet, except that Marcus would accede to white supremacy here and sail for Africa to set up black supremacy there.

"Ain't it awful" about these "Kikes, Koons and Katholics."

(N. B.—In the South the term "coon" is one of opprobrium used in referring to the Negro. It comes under the same head as "nigger" and "darkey.")

Louisiana Governor Sets Good Example.

The vigor with which Governor Parker of Louisiana is proceeding in the matter of bringing to justice the perpetrators of the horrible murders at Mer Rouge furnishes a worthy example for state executives. Public opinion was so divided and feeling was running so high that the success of the investigations was gravely threatened. In that situation, the governor did not hesitate to call out troops to preserve order. It is not surprising that this unusual manifestation of determination is securing results. Prospects are good for bringing those responsible for the beatings and murders to justice. Whether these crimes are to be laid at the door of the Ku Klux Klan or not, it has been proved that they were committed by men wearing hoods and robes, and establishes the justice of the contention that the secrecy and disguise of the order offers opportunity for lawlessness and violence which will not be overlooked by the viciously inclined.

ANTI-KLAN MAN WINS IN PRIMARY

Houston Post Texas.

Associated Press Report.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—Judge J. F. Brunot of Baton Rouge, running as the anti-Ku Klux Klan candidate in the primary held today in the fifth supreme court district, consisting of 12 parishes, was leading his two opponents late tonight by approximately 550 votes for the nomination of associate justice to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Justice Robert R. Reid, according to unofficial and incomplete returns tabulated by the Times Picayune. 3/28/23.

The other two candidates were Judge Robert S. Ellis of Amite, and Judge Columbus Reid, also of Amite, both of whom were supported by the Klan.

Returns from 147 precincts out of 273 in the district, according to the newspaper gave:

Brunot 7211; Ellis 3379; Reid 3272.

The election caused intense interest because of the klan being involved for the first time as a political issue in a Louisiana primary.

KLAN CANDIDATE ATTACKS ELECTION

BATON ROUGE, La., April 4.—Judge Columbus Reid of Amite City, one of the candidates supported by the Ku Klux Klan for the supreme court from the fifth district today filed suit in district court here attacking the nomination of District Judge H. E. Brunot, who in the primary of March 27, defeated both Judges Reid and Judge Robert Ellis of Amite.

Judge Reid in his petition alleges that in one precinct, one of his commissioners was ejected from the polling place for over two hours and that while he was absent the ballot box was removed from public view and tampered with.

It is also alleged that the polling place was changed from one location to another and that all votes cast for Judge Reid were not properly counted.

VICTIMS WERE INNOCENT.

Not Involved in Attack on McKoin, Is Claim.

Commercial Appeal 12/31/22

(United Press.)

MER ROUGE, La., Dec. 30.—Absolute proof that neither Watt Daniels nor Thomas F. Richards was guilty of the attempted assassination of Dr. B. M. McKoin, now charged with being a member of the mob that kidnaped and murdered the two men near here, Aug. 24, will be offered at the open hearing, to start at Bastrop, Jan. 5, according to J. L. Daniels, father of Watt, and himself a victim of the kidnaping. The elder Daniels was severely beaten by the mob.

The elder Daniels, his son, Watt, and Richards were playing poker with five other man at the Daniels home on the night of the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin.

In an effort to allay all suspicion that may exist that his son, Watt and Thomas Richards had a hand in the attempt on Dr. McKoin's life, and to convince authorities that the two men were cruelly murdered for a crime about which they knew nothing, the father will offer at the open hearing his own testimony and that of several others who were "sitting in" the poker game on the night in question.

Daniels is convinced the kidnaping was in retaliation for the attempt on Dr. McKoin's life, pointing out that during the beating administered to himself and others by the mob, they were questioned about the shooting, which narrowly missed the doctor.

"Old man Hicks," a roamer, who makes a living by enlarging pictures, is also being sought by Daniels to testify. Hicks, it was said by Daniels, was in the game at the Daniels home the night some unknown persons shot at Dr. McKoin.

The poker game, Daniels said, was a "friendly game" for small stakes. Besides the two Daniels and Richards were Earle Andrews, C. H. C. Wagster, Louis Felton, Frank Bell and "Old Man Hicks."

M'KOIN PLANS FIGHT.

To Oppose Extradition to Limit—Case Opens Tuesday.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 30.—Indications that the fight to keep Dr. B. M. McKoin, ex-mayor of Mer Rouge, La., from being returned to that state where he is wanted on a charge of murder, would be continued to the last was given today when Robert R. Carman, the physician's counsel, said he had mentioned the case to Judge John C. Rose of the United States District Court. Mr. Carman, a former United States district attorney, visited Judge Rose concerning another case, but after a consultation, in which the McKoin case was mentioned, admitted that application for a writ of habeas corpus under federal jurisdiction was a possibility.

Dr. McKoin, who was arrested Tuesday at the request of Gov. Parker of Louisiana, in connection with the murder of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards, two of a party of five men kidnaped in Morehouse Parish last summer by a hooded mob, spent today in the hospital in the city jail, suffering from bronchitis. He was reported to have spent a restful day and was expected to be about again in another day or so.

Mr. Carman again today said that he would make no further move toward obtaining his client's release until after the extradition hearing before Gov. Ritchie. As the Louisiana officers are expected here with the necessary papers, probably tomorrow, it is not expected that the case will go before the governor until Tuesday, as Monday is a holiday.

CRIMES CHARGED TO 31 CITIZENS

Atlanta Sat.

Attorney General Draws Bills of Information in Connection With Hooded Band Activities.

The Atlanta Constitution

New Orleans, April 13.—Thirty-one bills of information charging more than a dozen citizens of Morehouse parish with various crimes as a result of the activities of masked bands in the parish last year were drawn today by Attorney General A. V. Coco, and delivered to District Attorney David I. Garrett to be filed at Bastrop, according to the New Orleans Times-Picayune. 4/14/23

Persons named in the bills, the newspaper declares, include Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, his son, Oliver; Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge; E. N. "Newt" Gray and T. Jeff Burnett, former Morehouse deputy sheriff. Burnet, Oliver Skipwith and Gray were named by witnesses at the open hearing in Bastrop in January as having been recognized as members of the band which, on August 24, kidnaped Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, who were not heard of again until December 22, when two bodies which rose to the surface of Lake Lafourche were identified as theirs.

Captain Skipwith was declared by one witness to have been seen conversing with a masked man later on the highway down which the abductors and their prisoners disappeared. Others against whom informations will be filed, according to the Times-Picayune, are Laurie and Gus Calboun, former deputies; W. H. Kirkpatrick, Kelly Harp, Ed Ivy, Marvin and Cud Pickett, Fred Higginbotham and Benton Pratt.

The bills will charge conspiracy to commit murder, kidnaping, assault with deadly weapons on the public highway, assault with intent to commit murder and damaging or destroying telephone lines. It is recalled that an operator employed in the telephone exchange at Bastrop testified that the day of the Richard-Daniel kidnaping Captain Skipwith asked her not to handle any telephone calls between Mer Rouge and Bastrop. Later the line was found cut at the scene of the abduction, which occurred on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway.

The attorney general announced sometime ago that he would file bills of information in the case this week, but it is known they had not been prepared up to last night. District Attorney Garrett came to New Orleans today from Monroe, conferred with the attorney general and his staff and departed tonight. Mr. Coco late today would divulge nothing of the conference but stated that when the bills were filed he would announce here the names of the defendants and the charges.

CONFEDERATE ELECTION A KU KLUX VICTORY

Lee, Re-elected Commander-in-Chief of Sons of Veterans, Had Klan Support.

NEW ORLEANS, April 12 (Associated Press).—General W. B. Haldeman of Louisville, Ky., was elected Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans in reunion here. He defeated General E. W. Kirkpatrick of McKinney, Texas, by a two-to-one vote. General Julian S. Carr, the holder of the office and General William A. Collier of Memphis, Tenn., withdrew from the race.

W. McDonald Lee was re-elected Commander-ni-Chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans in session here today. He defeated B. H. Richardson, Commander of Camp Beauregard, New Orleans, by the vote of 243 to 51. Lee is said to have been supported by the Ku Klux Klan faction.

The United Confederate Veterans adopted resolutions asking that the sons of Confederate veterans continue as a separate organization, and, when the last of the 64,000 Confederate veterans now alive should be gone, should soulder the burden of setting forth in its true light what the South fought for in the sixties.

Another resolution expressed the gratification of the convention upon learning that the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association had taken steps toward the establishment of a school of journalism at Washington and Lee University in honor of General Lee.

The work of the "Rutherford Committee," which is laboring to have adopted by every Southern State for study in the public schools a history which it believes sets forth the "true facts" of the Civil War was endorsed. The convention uproariously and unanimously adopted a motion forever banning the use of the terms "Johnny Reb" and "Rebel" by Southerners when referring to Confederate soldiers.

General Julian S. Carr, the Commander-in-Chief, read a telegram from The Columbus (S. C.) State asking if the convention regarded such terms as proper.

"Do not these expressions, if used by Southerners, concede the Northern contention that secession was rebellion?" The message concluded.

General Carr, in his reply to the newspaper, declared that the terms were "perversions of history when applied to Confederate soldiers," because history had proved they were not rebels. The reply was endorsed by the convention and at the conclusion of the uproar that accompanied the vote, General Carr shouted "I am a rebel, and a Ku Klux, too."

KLAN IS BREAKING UP, SAYS FORMER GOBLIN

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 11.—Gov. John M. Parker, accompanied by T. O. Harris, state auditor, left tonight for New York, where Gov. Parker will deliver an address at the Jefferson Day celebration, and probably discuss the Ku Klux Klan.

Coincident with the governor's departure came the announcement of George Kimbro, Jr., of Houston, Texas, former grand goblin of the Ku Klux Klan of twenty-one states that internal strife was breaking up the organization. "I said months ago that internal strife was going to wreck the Klan," said Kimbro commenting on the break between Emperor Simmons and Imperial Wizard Evans. "And I mean that this is coming to pass right now and that the klan is being rapidly wrecked all over the country."

MURDER CONSPIRACY LED BY "CAPT. SKIP," LOUISIANA CHARGES

Jeff Burnett, "Newt" Gray, Laurie Calhoun and Many Others Accused of Minor Offenses in Connection With Mer Rouge Tragedy Growing Out of Ku Klux Reign of Terror.

(By The Associated Press.)

BASTROP, La., April 18.—David T. Garrett, district attorney of the Sixth Judicial District, arrived here late today from Monroe and filed early tonight the 30 bills of information prepared by Attorney-General A. V. Coco, charging nearly a score of Morehouse citizens with various offenses as a result of masked band activities in the parish last summer.

Commercial Appeal 4/18/23

(By The Associated Press.)

BASTROP, La., April 18.—Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse Parish Ku Klux Klan, will be the storm center in the forthcoming trials of Morehouse citizens as a result of operations of masked bands in the parish last year for which Gov. Parker holds the klan responsible. District Attorney David I. Garrett arrived here late today from Monroe with 30 bills of information prepared by Attorney General A. V. Coco charging nearly a score of persons with various offenses. He planned to file them with James Dalton, clerk of the court, early tomorrow and Mr. Dalton expected immediately to place in the hands of Sheriff Fred Carpenter warrants for the arrest of the defendants.

The most serious charge is that of conspiring to murder, and two bills covering this crime are directed against Captain Skipwith. One relates to the case of Watt Daniel, kidnaped by a band of hooded men on Aug. 24, while the other relates to that of T. F. Richard, Daniel's companion. Two bodies identified as those of the men were found Dec. 22 in Lake LaFourche. There are no other murder conspiracy infrmations.

Other Charges Against Him.

In addition to these, other bills charge Captain Skipwith with carrying firearms on the premises of another, with conspiring to compel a person to leave his home, with conspiring to assault a person, with conspiring to compel a person to leave an automobile, and with conspiring to compel a person to leave his place of business.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, arrested in Baltimore at the request of Governor Parker, upon a charge of murder in connection with the Daniel-Richard case, also is named in several bills. One charges him with conspiring to compel a person to leave Morehouse Parish, another with assault with a dangerous weapon, and a third with conspiring to assault a person. Dr. McKoin now is in baltimore, a student at Johns Hopkins University, and it is understood he still is under $5,000 bail in connection with the case, but is not under a murder charge.

T. Jeff Burnett, E. N. "Newt" Gray, Oliver Skipwith, younger son of Captain Skipwith, Smith Stevenson, and Captain Skipwith are named in bills charging conspiracy to compel a person to leave an automobile. This charge is in connection with the abduction of Daniel and Richard, Daniel's father, "Tot" Davenport and W. C. Andrews, all of whom were kidnaped on Aug. 24. Witnesses at the open hearing here in January testified that they had recognized Burnett, Oliver Skipwith, Gray and Stevenson as members of the band of masked abductors which stopped automobiles and got its prisoners. Stevenson, Oliver Skipwith, Burnett and Gray are charged in other bills with lying in wait, armed with a dangerous weapon. This charge also results from the abduction.

Other "Maskers."

Captain Skipwith, Marvin Pickett, Cud Pickett, and Benton Pratt, declared by Alonzo Braddock to have been members of an unmasked party which visited his home last summer, brought him to Bastrop and turned him over to Sheriff Carpenter as an alleged bootlegger, are named in bills charging the carrying of firearms on the premisse of others. Three similar informations directed against three other men were in the possession of the district attorney to be filed in his discretion. Other bills naming the same men, charge conspiracy to compel a person to leave his home. These also result from the Braddock raid.

W. P. Kirkpatrick and Dr. McKoin are named in informations charging conspiracy to compel a person to leave Morehouse Parish. Addie May Hamilton of Mer Rouge, ordered by a masked band to leave the parish or be tarred and feathered, testified at the open hearing that she had recognized Dr. McKoin and Kirkpatrick among her visitors.

Kirkpatrick, Dr. McKoin and Laurie Calhoun are named in bills charging assault with a dangerous weapon as a result of a hold-up on the Gallion road, while Calhoun is named in another as conspiring to compel a person to leave the town of Bastrop.

Kelly Harp, Ed Ivy, Dr. McKoin, Calhoun and Capt. Skipwith in other bills are charged with conspiring to assault a person, this offense also growing out of the Gallion hold-up.

Burnett and Harlie Rogers, as the result of an attack upon Harry Neelis Bastrop garage operator, are charged with having committed an assault with a dangerous weapon.

Capt. Skipwith, Burnett and Fred Higginbotham are named in bills charging conspiracy to compel a person to leave his place of business. This charge grew out of a warning received by T. F. Richard a few weeks before his death and caused him to give up a position in Bastrop and move to Mer Rouge.

All of the defendants are in Morehouse Parish at this time except Dr. McKoin, Calhoun and Ivy. Dr. McKoin a few days ago said he was in Baltimore as the result of a sort of gentlemen's agreement with Louisiana officials and that he would return when asked to do so. Calhoun is near Brownsville, Texas, where many Morehouse citizens during the last two or three years have been purchasing property, and Ivy was last reported near Natchez, Miss. Sheriff Carpenter states that the men beyond his jurisdiction will return to the parish immediately.

It is understood all of the defendants have known for several days of their impending arrest and that they have informed the sheriff they would surrender tomorrow and ask that they be permitted to give bond for their appearance in court.

Masked Klansmen Routed from Church

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

MONROE, La., Aug. 30. — Three klansmen, garbed in masks and robes, were routed by a member of the church Monday night when they marched down the aisle of the Baptist church at Tullas presumably for the purpose of giving the evangelist in charge of the revival a donation, it was learned here last week.

When they were almost at the pulpit, Dr. E. L. Caharen, a physician, rose to his feet and dived for the hooded figures. There was a wild scramble of arms, legs, hoods and robes. Masks were torn off and the klansmen fled hurriedly, leaving behind parts of their costumes.

The congregation remained quiet and did not join the combatants. After the visitors had departed the physician returned to his seat and the preaching was resumed.

The klansmen were said to have been recognized.

CAPTAIN SKIPWITH TO BE STORM CENTER IN FORTHCOMING MOREHOUSE HEARINGS

Charges Range From Conspiracy to Commit Murder, Down to Carrying Firearms; List Made Public

The Morning Herald

BASTROP, LA., April 18.—Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, will be the storm center in the forthcoming trials of Morehouse citizens as a result of operations of masked bands in the parish last year for which Governor Parker holds the klan responsible. District Attorney David I. Garrett arrived here late today from Monroe, with 30 bills of information prepared by Attorney General A. V. Coco, charging nearly a score of persons with various offenses. He planned to file them with James Dalton, clerk of the court, early tomorrow and Mr. Dalton expected immediately to place in the hands of Sheriff Fred Carpenter warrants for the arrest of the defendants.

The most serious charge is that of conspiring to murder and two bills covering this crime are directed against Captain Skipwith. One relates to the case of Watt Daniel, kidnapped by a band of hooded men on August 24, while the other relates to that of T. F. Richard, Daniel's companion. Two bodies identified as those of the men were found December 22 in Lake Lafourche. There are no other murder conspiracy informations

BAND INVADES TRAIN BEARING LA. GOVERNOR

The Atlanta Morning Herald 8-18-23 Atlanta, Ga.

Parker Orders Masks Off, Exonerating Personal Friends After Denouncing Order.

BATON ROUGE, La., August 17. Baton Rouge was the scene of much excitement Friday when it was learned that a masked band boarded Governor John P. Parker's train at Gloster early Friday, forced their way into the Pullman where he was sleeping and created a considerable disturbance.

Governor Parker was en route to the Capital from the State Legion convention at Monroe, La. Three coaches filled with robed men were hooked onto the Memphis train at Gloster, Miss. Almost immediately they, in full robe, mask and cowl, entered the Governor's coach.

"Stand up, Governor," commanded the chieftain. Governor Parker stood up. "Look us over. What do you think of us?"

GOVERNOR REPLIES.

"I think just what I nave always thought," snapped the Governor. "I consider your organization a menace to law and order.

"I think, furthermore, your organization operates in violation of our laws and that patriotic men don't hide behind masks. If you will take off your masks I can tell you better what I think of you."

There was a moment of astonished silence, broken by the voice of a child, crying in frightened treble, "Oh, mama, what are they going to do with that man?" Finally the chieftain lifted the white peaked mask from his head.

"Do you know me?" he asked.

"Of course, I do," replied the Governor, calling him by name. They shook hands. From then on it was more like a family reunion than a truce between enemies.

REVEAL FRIENDS.

Other klansmen unmasked, revealing among their number many of the Governor's personal acquaintances.

As the train drew up into Centerville, the leader of the klansmen said: "Let's give the Governor a cheer. What's the matter with John M. Parker?"

In response the members of the klan, which Governor Parker has denounced and opposed at every opportunity, cheered him heartily.

The klansmen left the train at Centerville, Miss., where a large naturalization meeting is being held Friday.

Governor Parker was thrown into national limelight nine months ago when he launched his sensational investigation into the Bastrop outrages of Morehouse Parish, La. He has fought the Ku-Klux Klan bitterly since the organization invaded his state and openly accused its members of perpetrating the North Louisiana atrocities among which were two murders.

WOMAN SUES KU KLUX FOR $100,000 DAMAGES

The Constitution

Shreveport, La., August 24.—A dispatch to The Shreveport Journal from Lufkin, Texas, today says that Mrs. Jessie Wiley, of Diboll, has instituted suit at Lufkin for $100,000 against the Ku Klux Klan.

The Angelina klan No. 16, D. F. Harrell, Sam H. Kerr, Hobby Kelley and B. A. Teston are made the defendants. The petition states that on July 20, 1924, a masked mob of klan members came to her home, took her husband, Ben Wiley, beat him unmercifully, coated him with tar and feathers and otherwise disgraced him. She further states that the klan has persistently circulated charges against her that have alienated her friends and damaged her reputation and standing in the community where she lives. The petition also alleges that the purpose of the klan is to injure persons in their good name, credit, character and to bring into public scandal, infamy and disgrace with all good and worthy people.

Ben Wiley, the husband, instituted suit several weeks ago against the same organization for $100,000.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923.

Louisiana

A Strong Charge.

The grand jurors, convened at Bastrop, La., to pass upon the facts gathered in the investigation of numerous crimes of mob violence in Morehouse Parish as good American citizens and believers in law and order can do nothing more than follow the plain letter of the law as it was laid down for them in the charge of Judge Odum. The plain facts are that mobs have committed crimes of various sorts against the law; they have flogged, deported, terrorized and even murdered people without giving to any of them the rights of legal defense that are guaranteed to every man, woman and child of the republic. There has been direct evidence offered as to the names of some of these mob members and there have been admissions that these accused persons were also members of a certain secret order whose professed purpose is to proscribe certain persons because of race and creed. Naturally an organization cannot be prosecuted criminally, and it should not enter into the matter, but individuals against whom there is sufficient evidence can be punished and they should be punished regardless of whether they are members of that particular organization or any other one.

The crimes that have been committed in the Mer Rogue region were not so much offenses against the individual victims as they were outrages against the honor, integrity and safety of Morehouse Parish and the state of Louisiana. For this reason we decline to accept in advance the rumors that there will be no indictments because members of that certain secret order will refuse to indict any other member. We would not at least in advance accuse the citizenry of that section of such treason to the state and nation. We cannot conceive how any body of Americans might place a higher value upon some organization to which they might belong than upon the state that protects them in their own life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. To do such a thing would be to knock the pillars from under the temple of organized government and to cause the destruction of the vandals themselves as well as everyone else. This thought was brought to the attention of the jury most strikingly by Judge Odum when he said:

> As concerns us, if we have reached that state or condition of society where men may organize into bands or groups and condemn and punish citizens when and as they see fit without regard to the laws of the land and the established rules of judicial procedure, then, gentlemen, the day of our doom is upon us. We have seen the end of civilized, organized society. The laws of civilized government must be enforced otherwise civilization could not survive.

And if there be no punishment of the persons guilty of the crimes in Morehouse Parish the only result can be that individuals will take it upon themselves to furnish their own protection for themselves. There will be rival organizations at war with the one that presumes to defy the law and the finish would come in bloody, fratricidal strife. The safety of Morehouse Parish and the state of Louisiana depends upon the full assertion of the power and majesty of the law in that parish. If that be not done then anarchy is at hand.

"OLD SKIP" REQUESTED TO QUIT KLAN, REPORT

Also Asked to Leave Louisiana, Says Story.

"FOR GOOD OF THE ORDER"

Klansmen in Three Parishes Launch Attack on "Storm Center of Mer Rouge Affair—Report Order for Banishment Prepared.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 15.—Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse Parish Ku Klux Klan and one of the central figures in the state's investigation into the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, of Mer Rouge, last August, has been asked to resign "for the good of the order," and to leave Louisiana, according to information which the New Orleans Times-Picayune says it has obtained from a prominent klansman.

According to the newspaper the request for Skipwith's resignation came from the majority of klansmen in Morehouse, Ouachita and Madison parishes.

Wizard Advised Move, Report.

Captain Skipwith, it was stated, refused either to resign or to leave the state, maintaining that he was legally elected cyclops and that only the imperial wizard of the order could remove him. Klansmen in the three parishes, it was added, took up the question with Imperial Wizard Evans shortly before the differences between Dr. Evans and Emperor Simmons arose in Atlanta, and it was stated that Dr. Evans also advised Skipwith to resign and leave Louisiana.

Dr. Evans did not pursue the matter further at the time, it was said, but later on members of three klans renewed their petition to him asking that he issue a proclamation banishing Skipwith from the order and declaring his office vacant. A proclamation along these lines was prepared, it was stated, and was ready for the signature of the imperial wizard when the legal wrangle between Evans and Simmons developed. Simmons, it was said, favored Skipwith's cause and Skipwith, as soon as he heard of the Evans-Simmons row, collected a number of his followers and hurried to Atlanta with the avowed purpose of supporting Simmons.

Waits on Evans-Simmons Fight.

At the present time the outcome of the effort to oust Skipwith is declared to be awaiting the result of the fight between Evans and Simmons.

The efforts of the klansmen to oust Skipwith was said to have been taken in the belief that Skipwith is a storm center and that until he is eliminated the process of bringing conditions and relations in Morehouse Parish to normal will be slow. The technical ground upon which the petition to Atlanta headquarters was based was said to have been the charge that he had permitted a violation of the klan laws which prohibited klansmen from wearing their hoods and robes only at initiation ceremonials.

It also was stated that the three klans shortly after the open hearing at Bastrop was concluded in January requested Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, to leave for the good of the order and peace of the community. Dr. McKoin went to Baltimore early in February and still is in that city.

31 CHARGES FILED BY COCO IN PROBE OF BASTROP CASE

Morehouse Klan Head, Former Mayor, and Others Named

Associated Press Report.

NEW ORLEANS, April 13.—Thirty-one bills of information charging more than a dozen citizens of Morehouse parish with various crimes as a result of the activities of masked bands in the parish last year were drawn today by Attorney General A. V. Coco, and delivered to District Attorney David Garrett to be filed at Bastrop, according to the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Persons named in the bills, the newspaper declares, include Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, his son, Oliver; Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge; E. N. "Newt" Gray and T. Jeff Burnett, former Morehouse deputy sheriff. Burnett, Oliver Skipwith and Gray were named by witnesses at the open hearing in Bastrop in January as having been recognized as members of the hooded band which on August 24 kidnaped Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, who were not heard of again until December 22, when two bodies, which rose to the surface of Lake La Fourche, were identified as theirs. Captain Skipwith was declared by one witness to have been seen conversing with a masked man later on the highway down which the abductors and their prisoners disappeared.

Others, against whom informations will be filed, according to the Times-Picayune, are Laurie and Gus Calhoun, former deputies, W. P. Kirkpatrick, Kelly Harp, Ed Ivy, Marvin and Cud Pickett, Fred Higginbotham and Benton Pratt. The bills will charge conspiracy to committ murder, kidnaping, assault with deadly weapons on the public highway, assault with intent to commit murder and damaging or destroying telephone lines.

FIVE ARMED MEN BEAT LOUISIANA JUSTICE

Bossier City Man Blames Attack on Political Opponents.

SHREVEPORT, La., March 26.—U. W. Hutchings, justice of peace at Bossier City, where he has been active politically for several years, was attacked by five armed men late last night as he was about to enter his home and was severely injured about the head as they attempted to put him in an automobile, according to police reports today. Both Hutchings and his wife, who answered his cries for help and found him unconscious in the street, recognized some of his assailants, they said. At least two of them were "masked."

Hutchings attributed the attack to political differences since he had heard of some threats by what he termed the "opposition," but he said no one in particular had been threatened, so far as he knew. Hutchings was rendered unconscious by a blow from the butt of a pistol. The attackers fled when Mrs. Hutchings and two others in the house emerged.

Klan Exposures Of Bootleggers Are Held Illegal

New Orleans, June 30.—There is no law in Louisiana against the admission of evidence obtained in Ku Klux Klan raids against bootleggers or persons accused of other crimes, the state supreme court held today in affirming fines and sentences against four negroes of Morehouse parish, convicted of violation of the prohibition law. The negroes were raided by 45 klansmen on Nov. 24, 1922, while federal authorities were in the vicinity investigating the deaths of Thomas Richard and Watt Daniel, who, the state charged, were the victims of a masked band.

Counsel for the negroes asserted the raiders battered down the doors of the negroes' homes in the night time, threatened them, discharged firearms in their homes and otherwise created terrorism in search for whisky they accused the negroes of possessing.

The negroes were lodged in the Bastrop jail by the raiders.

The negroes were indicted, convicted, fined and sentenced to 60 days in prison. They appealed, asserting evidence so obtained could not be used.

It was alleged in the brief filed by attorneys for the negroes that the raid is one of the cases for which Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish klan, is now under indictment, filed by Attorney General Coco, and awaiting trial.

Justice St. Paul, of the supreme court, in affirming the lower court held that as there was no law on the Louisiana statute books against the admission of such evidence, it would have to be admitted.

700 ARE INITIATED INTO KNIGHTS OF KU KLUX KLAN

Largest Ceremony Ever Witnessed in Louisiana Staged at Crowley

CROWLEY, LA., June 18.—Under the rays of two monster electric crosses at the parish fair grounds here tonight seven hundred men were initiated into the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, said to be the largest ceremony ever staged in this part of the state. A crowd estimated at 10,000 persons witnessed the initiation.

About 500 Klansmen traveling in eight special trains were present from parts of Louisiana and Texas points as far west as Houston, while thousands of others came in automobiles from nearby places, packing the fair grounds to capacity and jamming the streets leading to it.

Preceding the initiation ceremonies Klansmen were given a barbecue in which 3,500 pounds of beef and 1,800 loaves of bread were served.

Opening and closing with an elaborate pyrotechnic display the prepared program consisted of music and speeches upholding the Klan as the embodiment of pure Americanism and the protector of the country's ideals.

A feature of the occasion was a parade around the race track in which Klansmen attired in the regulation regalia on foot and on horseback participated, preceded by a band from Port Arthur, Texas.

SIMMONS LAUNCHES KAMELIA CAMPAIGN

New Orleans, June 28.—A campaign expected to result in the enrollment of 500,000 in the Knights of Kamelia, was announced Thursday when Emperor W. J. Simmons and Dr. William E. Thompson, of Virginia, stopped here en route to Beaumont, Texas.

The Kamelia will have four great aims, Thompson said, speaking for Simmons, including the formation of a great university for American girls without funds; the purchase of large amounts of radium for cancer treatment; the erection of a national tuberculosis hospital, probably in Texas, and the organization of forces to cooperate with federal authorities in the treatment of narcotic addicts.

A few picked men will have charge of enrolling the Kamelia, it was said. The speaking tour planned by Simmons and Thompson will cover Texas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas. Beaumont will be the first stop and Friday night 50,000 Klansmen are expected to gather there for the opening address, according to Thompson.

Gen. Booth, Ku Klux Leader, D

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 28.—A. Booth, 79, Adjutant General and Chief of Staff of the United Confederate Veterans, died here last night.

General Booth was appointed by General W. B. Haldeman of Louisville, who was elected commander-in-chief at the veterans' re-union here last May. He was a member of the Kloncilium, the governing body of the Ku Klux Klan. A klan delegation will attend the funeral tomorrow.

General Booth was born near Georgetown, Ky.

Boy 'Kluxer' Makes 'Tar Baby' of Child

His Victim Becomes Ill and Mother Files Charges.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 21.—When pillow-slips and nightshirts are worn in parades by grown men, there can be small blame when a boy of 14 wants to wear them too. And one boy did. He went even further. He adopted the recreation as well as the costume of the well-known organization that has adopted the gunny-sack as a head covering. In short, he wanted some one to tar and feather. He already had the tar.

So the boy, Henry Bayer, of McDonoghville, went out in search of some miscreant deserving of a coat of pitch. He found little Joseph Crampes, barely two years old, and, in want of a better subject, gave him a bath in a pot of hot tar. Conforming strictly with the custom of his adult models, Henry "disbanded," and melted away.

When Mrs. Crampes found little Joseph, he was black—from head to foot. And all her attempts to remove the tar went for nothing. It stuck. And then little Joe became sick, and has been quite ill as a result of the pitch party. Mrs. Crampes has filed charges of malicious mischief against Henry Bayer, and if the little fellow doesn't recover fully, more serious charges will be preferred against the amateur "Ku Kluxer."

KLANSMEN PAY TRIBUTE TO GENERAL BOOTH

New Orleans, June 29.—Impressive funeral services were held today for General A. B. Booth, adjutant general and chief of staff of the United Confederate veterans and one of the two Louisiana members of the imperial kloncilium, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Interment was in the Masonic cemetery.

Fourteen robed Klansmen, led by the Great Titan of Louisiana, and representing the 14 living members of the imperial kloncilium, Knights of Booth was the fifteenth member of the body—appeared at midnight at the mortuary chapel where the body lay, formed a living cross, and knelt in prayer. They left a cross formed of roses and this floral, six feet in height, was one of the hundreds of tributes in the chapel when the service was held.

General Booth, while walking several days ago, fell and fractured his knee-cap. He was placed in a hospital and a few days ago pneumonia developed. He was 79 years of age and a native of Georgetown, Ky.

KLAN AT LABOR MURDER SCENE

BOGALUSA, La.—The Ku Klux Klan is arranging a mammoth initiation near Bogalusa. In the meantime labor men in the state are endeavoring to bring to justice the murderers of their fellow craftsmen who were shot down by a gang of open-shoppers in that city three years ago. The grand jury of Washington parish will be in session in July. Although the state of Louisiana has no "available funds" to prosecute the case, money will be raised by popular subscription.

Gov. Parker, prodded by the Louisiana State Federation, has directed Att'y. Gen. Coco to proceed with the investigation.

Flogging of Ben Wiley May Prove Expensive.

Memphis, Tenn.

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 24.—A dispatch to the Shreveport Journal from Lufkin, Texas, today says that Mrs. Jessie Wiley of Diboll has instituted suit at Lufkin for $100,000 against the Ku Klux Klan.

The Angelina Klan No. 16, D. F. Harrell, Sam H. Kerr, Hobby Kelley and B. A. Teston are made the defendants. The petition states that on July 20, 1921, a masked mob of klan members came to her home, took her husband, Ben Wiley, beat him unmercifully, coated him with tar and feathers and otherwise disgraced him. Ben Wiley, the husband, instituted suit several weeks ago against the same organization for $100,000.

NEGROES FLOG WOMAN.

Eleven of Baton Rouge Secret Order Are Arrested for Affair.

Baton Rouge, La., July 14.—Members of the "Black Star Line," a local negro secret order, flogged a negro woman here last night, and as a result eleven negroes were in jail today and the authorities are searching for three others.

The prisoners include four women attired in men's clothing, and all were said to have worn masks.

Negro Masked Society Flogs a Negro Woman

(By the Associated Press.)

BATON ROUGE, La., July 14.—Members of the "Black Star Line," a local negro secret order, flogged a negro woman here last night and as a result 11 blacks were in jail today and the authorities are searching for three others. The prisoners include four women attired in men's clothing, and all were said to have worn masks over the upper part of their faces when they staged the whipping party. One of the prisoners, according to the police, declared the woman was flogged because the organization did not approve of her conduct.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923

Louisiana

N. Y. C. GLOBE
JANUARY 11, 1923

THE MEANING OF MER ROUGE.

So far no legal evidence has been brought forward connecting the Atlanta headquarters of the "Invisible Empire" with the murders and terrorism in Louisiana. That the Mer Rouge kidnappings were accomplished by bands of men who wore the regalia of the secret order and who were known as members of the Ku Klux, however, has been testified. No real doubt exists but that the reign of terror which was carried on was the work of local members of the klan.

It is difficult to characterize the behavior of the so-called prominent citizens of this Louisiana parish. Somebody has committed murders so brutal as to be inexplicable on any ground save that of insanity. Deportations have been made in the name of decency, and yet the very klansman who conducted the raid was guilty of an indignity to a schoolgirl. Again the klansmen make a great show of chivalry while one of their leaders at Mer Rouge did not hesitate to strike a defenseless woman. One of the worst aspects of the socially diseased condition alleged to exist was the infection of the law-enforcing agencies. The sheriff who yesterday sat beside the judge conducting the present proceedings was shown by testimony to have connived at the crimes.

A situation such as this reveals ugly depths in human nature which ordinarily are concealed. If what happened in Louisiana had occurred in Mexico, or Russia, or Turkey, Americans would have no words strong enough for condemnation. But none of these countries have records which surpass for infamy the crimes committed by the "good people" of Mer Rouge. The inquiry has developed such shocking deeds that it is probable the growth of the Ku Klux Klan will be definitely checked. Murder organizations have arisen at other times in the United States, but hitherto they have not survived exposure.

It is to be hoped that Governor Parker will be enabled to clean out the nest of criminals who have done such injury to their state. Soldiers should be kept at Mer Rouge indefinitely, if that course is necessary to protect life and to guarantee the exercise of constitutional rights. But the matter should not be allowed to end there. The lawlessness attributed to the Ku Klux in Louisiana may be fairly traced to the lynching custom so long defended in the south. Law and justice have been abolished in certain sections when Negro criminals aroused public feeling. Men have been burned at the stake nd mobs have indulged in sadistic orgies of lust.

Louisiana is now learning that white men cannot destroy the law and civilization for the Negro without destroying it for themselves. It was a true saying that when the white man sought to enslave the Negro he enslaved himself, and it is true to-day that until the white man is willing to observe the law in his treatment of the Negro he cannot expect to see the law upheld. This is the real warning of Mer Rouge, and it is a warning which congress ought to observe. For until the federal government has done all that it can to end lynching and its attendant barbarities, such crimes are probably inevitable.

KLAN LEADER NAMED IN MURDER HEARING

Witness Declares Captain Skipwith Gave Orders in Morehouse Parish

Montgomery Advertiser

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 9.—Delving into the secrets of the Morehouse parish branch of the Ku Klux Klan in an effort to fix responsibility for the kidnapping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, victims of black-hooded raiders, state's attorneys produced testimony to show that floggings and deportations had been carried out under the direction of the leader of the parish klan and that black hoods were part of the regalia used by bands of klansmen on marauding expeditions. 1/10/23.

Captain J. K. Skipwith, recognized leader of the klan organization in Morehouse, was named by J. F. Norsworthy, who described himself as a resigned klansman, as the order giver of the parish organization.

"White hoods and robes were for ceremony—to be worn inside the lodge room and on parades—but the black hood was for raiding parties," Norseworthy declared.

Norseworthy's testimony reached a climax when he identified a black hood with a low hanging apron under the chin produced by A. V. Coco, state attorney general, as the headgear worn by klansmen on raids.

The day's testimony carried the narratives for a time beyond the incidents of the actual kidnapping of the two men to expeditions on which Norseworthy said he was sent to lash and drive several men from Louisiana.

Norseworthy declared himself rated as a former "captain" in the klan organization.

Half a dozen witnesses testified today—men who were taken prisoner or were present at the time Daniel and Richards were kidnapped.

All agreed that the kidnapping was at the hands of a black-hooded mob, armed with rifles, pistols and shot guns. None, however, could identify members of the band.

During the examination of two witnesses, C. C. "Tot" Davenport and Sidney White, attorneys for the state set up the question as to whether there had been any intimidation.

Young Man Kidnapped, Borrows Funds From Neighbor and Flees

NEW MOB IS MYSTERY

How Teegerstrom Eluded Men or What He Suffered Is Not Known

(Associated Press)

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 1.—After a day of exhaustive investigation, Sheriff Carpenter of Morehouse tonight announced he believed that Harold Teegerstrom, 19 year old time keeper at a carbon plant at Spyker, La., who was kidnapped Friday night, was alive and had fled from this section through fear.

From reports of the incident pieced together it seemed that 16 unidentified men appeared at the plan't "bunk house," called the youth to the door, seized and placed him in one of the automobiles waiting outside, and drove off into the woods. Whether the men were masked has not been learned.

What occurred in the woods has not been disclosed, but Teegerstrom managed to escape from his captors and yesterday appeared at the home of Henry Jones, saw mill man, and excitedly asked him for $40 with which to depart for an unannounced destination.

Jones said he let him have the sum and Teegerstrom departed. He told Jones he had been takn into the woods but did not say what happened.

Jones reached Bastrop today and reported the occurrence to the sheriff.

Teegerstrom was to have testified in the open hearing and trials in connection with the Morehouse kidnappings and murders.

While considered an important state witness, T. J. Burnett, former deputy sheriff, in jail here on a murder charge, declared he could prove an alibi for August 24, the night of the outrage, by the young time keeper of the Southern Carbon plant, where Butnett was a foreman.

The sheriff today recalled that Teegerstrom had publicly declared Burnett was at the carbon plant on August 24.

Burnett told newspaper men at the jail Friday he could prove an alibi by the plant's records.

Although there had been reports the records were destroyed by the mysterious party, officials of the plant announced today the records were intact.

"You can say positively that Harold L. Teegerstrom, timekeeper for a carban plant at Spyker, Louisiana, who disappeared Friday night, was kidnapped."

This statement was given newspapermen tonight by one of the investigators sent here to assist state officials in the inquiry into the kidnapping and killing of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards last summer.

"Any statements to the contrary," it was added, "are pure bunk and have been put out for the purpose of misleading the people."

Aside from this statement the investigators declined to discuss the case further. They asserted they did not know the whereabouts of Teegerstrom.

Victor Teegerstrom, prominent citizen of Monroe, is assisting the civil authorities and federal agents in locating his son. The sheriff said he did not know whether the youth was handled by friends or enemies of Burnett.

The incident added another chapter to the book of startling events being written here which already includes a masked and robed mob stealing five men from a public highway; of punishment grounds where two were unmercifully flogged and two beaten to death and horribly mutilated; of bodies being decapitated, wire-bound, weighted with iron and thrown into a lake; of the governor of the state personally entering into the investigation; of troops, divers and volunteers dragging lakes and swamps searching for the bodies; of mysterious dynamiters blowing them to the surface; of arrests of prominent men and the promised arrest of others; of confessions involving 45 men; of charges that the Ku Klux Klan was responsible for the deed, and of counter charges; and of open hearings and trials to commence.

New Year's day was celebrated quietly here and at Mer Rouge. All business was suspended and but for the presence of three companies of state troops and federal agents, there was no outward sign the communities were passing out of a year of tragedy into a period that was shrouded in mystery.

Preparations were being completed for the open hearing to begin Friday.

BALTIMORE, MD., Jan. 1.—Reports that local agents of the department of justice are cooperating with the Louisiana authorities for the return to that state of Dr. B. M. McKoin arrested here last Tuesday for the murder of two men, were current here today. Special Deputy L. A. Calhoun, of Morehouse parish, and Chief Detectives James P. Glynn of New Orleans, who arrived here last night with extradition papers, were in conference with justice officials this afternoon.

Clarence B. Kean, head of the department of justice here, accompanied the Louisiana officers to the conference with Governor Ritchie at Annapolis last night. After the meeting the governor set Wednesday at 1 o'clock for the hearing.

Late today Calhoun and Glynn conferred with Chief Police Inspector Henry and State's Attorney Leach and announced that they were ready to take back Dr. McKoin for trial.

Dr. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, was arrested for the murder of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards at the request of Governor Parker as an outgrowth of the alleged kidnapping of five men at Morehouse parish last August by a hooded mob. Dr. McKoin has declared himself innocent of any connection with the crime, saying he was in Monroe, 40 miles from the scene of the disorders on the night in question.

A last minute withdrawal of the fight against extradition was forecast today by persons who have been in close touch with the case. Attorney Robert R. Carman, counsel for Dr. McKoin, said he and the physician have reached no conclusion as to what attitude to adopt at the hearing. The attorney said he has not as yet seen the extradition papers.

Dr. McKoin, who was removed to the jail hospital several days ago following an attack of bronchitis, was said to be in a greatly improved condition today. He declined to comment on the extradition proceedings, saying the matter rests with his lawyer.

Chief Glynn said Governor Parker would be the first man to offer redress to Dr. McKoin should the latter prove his innocence.

"The best thing for Dr. McKoin to do," he said, "is to go back to Louisiana and prove his innocence by the ordinary processes of law."

Answering fears expressed by Dr. McKoin that he would be killed by the mob element should he set foot on Mer Rouge soil again, Chief Glynn said:

"No one will shoot Dr. McKoin. No one will know when he arrives home and he will be guarded by the militia."

Declares He Quit Klan in Disgust When Ordered by Cyclops Skipwith to Take Men to Arkansas Line and Flog Them—Quotes "Skip" as Saying, "We've Got Two of Them."

BASTROP, La., Jan. 9.—Sworn testimony in Judge Fred M. Odom's district court here today directly linked up the Ku Klux Klan with the torturing death of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards in the dense woods of Morehouse Parish on the night of Aug. 24. It linked the klan with other terrorism, floggings and whippings, night riding and banishments. It established the black-hood of terror as a regular part of the klan's regalia.

The "black hood," it was testified, is used by the klansmen when they go forth at night "on the warpath" to enforce under the cover of darkness the klan's own conception of right and wrong, law and order.

The testimony was given by Jas. T. ("Big Jim") Norsworthy, cotton and corn planter of Mer Rouge, former "captain" of the klan, now long since resigned because, as he stated, "he didn't like it from the first night."

Witness Is Unafraid.

The planter gave his testimony unhesitatingly and unafraid. His voice, as he recited the details so damning to the Klux was full and strong. He often volunteered even more than was asked of him, and stared with chilly, blue eyes straight down into the courtroom crowd, or up at packed galleries, interspersed with hard-faced, sinister-lipped klansmen.

When he left the stand during the noon recess of court, he met a group of men in the corridor of the courthouse. They walked up to him and shook his hand.

"God speed you," they said. "You're the kind of a man we need in Morehouse Parish."

A few moments later, reporters approached in courthouse square to ask him for some details of his testimony. Someone asked him whether he wasn't afraid the klan would "get" him for that testimony.

Indicts "Old Skip."

"Hell, no," he said. "I ain't afraid of all the klux in Bastrop."

And, incidentally, into this record of klanism in Morehouse Parish, this former klan chieftain read a circumstantial accusation against Capt. J. K. Skipwith, when he quoted the "exalted cyclops" as saying to him a short time after Daniels and Richards disappeared:

"There were six men in the parish whom we had to get rid of. We have got two of them, we have got to get the other four."

Mr. Norsworthy also named Dr. B. M. McKoin of Mer Rouge as one of the men in the party which "kidnaped" Ada Mae Hamilton, the young Mer Rouge girl, who was deported and told "never to return to her home town unless she got the O. K. of Skipwith." He also testified that M. P. (Pink) Kirkpatrick and Tony Higginbotham were members of the Hamilton kidnaping party.

Miss Hamilton, it was announced tonight, will probably be the first witness called tomorrow. She is expected to definitely identify the members of the band which took her from her home and from her parents and ordered her out of town forever.

Aside from the testimony of Mr. Norsworthy, a well-to-do plantation owner, whose word is regarded as high as is that of any other man in the parish, the most important witness of the day, was Sidney White, who was in the Watt Daniels car when the latter was taken from it by the black-hooded band.

Tells of Fatal Night.

Mr. White was apparently a very unwilling witness. His testimony was valuable, not alone for what he told, but for what he did not tell. He will be examined most carefully by the prosecutors at a later date.

He added to the record, however, the very important testimony that, according to a statement of Marshal Mott, a traveling man by the name of Files, accompanied by his wife, were stalled in a broken-down car near Lake Lafourche about 11 o'clock the night of the murder.

A truck passed them. In it were what looked lige might be two bodies. They were covered with a sheet. This is the first time that there has been any evidence of any kind from any person who saw the bodies, or supposed bodies, on the way to the lake. If true, it would be conclusive proof that the bodies were dumped into the lake that night and that the bodies found were undoubtedly the bodies of Daniels and Richards.

The Norsworthy indictment against the Ku Klux Klan, however, was the vital feature of the day, the high spots of which are found in the following questions by Attorney-General Coco and the answers of Mr. Norsworthy:

Joined a Year Ago.

Judge Coco: "Are you a member of the Ku Klux Klan?

Mr. Norsworthy: "I joined the klan about Oct. 6, a year ago. I was a charter member. Then I attended two meetings. They were too much for me. I asked to have my name striken from membership."

Q.—Why?

A.—I didn't like it. I joined to see what the klan was. They said it was an organization of high ideals. After two meetings I found out what it was really organized for, and how it handled things, and I didn't like it at all. I got out.

Q.—What is the black hood of the klan, what does it typify?

A.—It is part of the regalia of the klan, officially recognized and prescribed regalia, used at certain times.

Q.—Why is the black hood used at certain times?

A.—Well, they always wear it when they want to go out on a night raid.

Q.—Well, when the klan wants to go out on a terror raiding expedition it always masks in the black hood, doesn't it?

A.—Yes.

Q.—When it goes out on the warpath it wears the black hood?

A.—Yes sir.

Q.—When it conducts an initiation, when it wants to emphasize its alleged high ideals, it wears the white robe?

A.—Yes.

Q.—When it gets its gang together for marauding purposes it always wears the black?

A.—Yes sir.

Q.—During your short time of membership you were an officer in the klan?

A.—Yes, I was appointed captain by Capt. Skipwith; Dr. McKoin was my assistant.

Q.—I see reference made to a committee of the klan, the vigilance committee?

"Investigating Conditions."

A.—Well, the members of that committee ran around the country to investigate conditions and report to Capt. Skipwith.

Q.—Who is this cyclops?

A.—Why, Capt. Skipwith, he's the boss.

Q.—You know Skipwith has ordered much terrorism carried out in the name of the klan?

A.—I suppose so.

Q.—As a matter of fact, you know it, don't you?

A.—Yes, I do.

Q.—You've known him to order citizens of this parish to leave the country, and to stay away?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Hasn't this organization brought about terrible conditions in this country, in this parish?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Hasn't this klan actually superceded the government?

A.—Yes, as a matter of fact it has changed the whole government.

Q.—The local authorities have been actually superceded by rule of the klansmen?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever receive any terror orders from Capt. Skipwith which you refused to carry out?

Orders a Flogging.

A. Yes, sir, he ordered me to take some people to the Arkansas state line, give them a good flogging, send them across the border and see that they remained across. I refused.

Q. Yet some of these same officers were klansmen, nine of them were members of the grand jury, four of them were members of the jury commission, the sheriff is a klansman, and the district attorney is a member of the klan, aren't these facts correct?

A. I've so understood.

Noon recess was ordered by Judge Odom at this point. At the beginning of the afternoon session Mr. Norsworthy again took the stand, and was questioned by Attorney General Coco as follows:

Q. You told this morning about Capt. Skipwith giving you your orders to take some people to the Arkansas line, tell us about that?

A. Well, he told me to take three people there, two of them were negroes, and one white man. Jeff Wal was the white man, and the two others were Jordan Bailey and a man by the name of King. The captain told me to take them there and "whip them to within an inch of their lives, and then see that they never return." I didn't do it.

Q. You know the black hood of the klan when it is used, on these terror expeditions?

A. Yes, sir.

The "Hood of Terror."

Judge Coco here handed a black hood to the witness, pointed to the slits for the eyes and the mouth, and called attention to how it draped over the shoulders, wide and ample, so that it left entrance for plenty of air. Mr. Norsworthy examined it carefully and the examination continued.

Q.—Is that the black hood of the klan?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Give us a general idea of the operations of the klan in this parish since it was organized.

A.—Well, the vigilance committee makes its report to Capt. Skipwith. He tells the klan what to do, whatever he says goes, whatever popped into his head about what to do with these men or women, he ordered done.

Q.—Have these conditions led to terrorism and chaos in this community?

A.—They certainly have.

Q.—Is there any confidence in law and order left in this parish?

A.—Not by any means. The people here live in fear and dread every minute, all the time, both good and bad. Why I was coming home one night when a woman drove up beside me. She stopped me, and begged me to accompany them home to Mer Rouge. 'I am afraid to go any further through these dark roads,' she said.

He told of many klan dealings with Dr. "Bunny" McKoin and "Old Skip" and other klansmen, of having himself been threatened with death—of a peace conference called between klansmen of Bastrop and anti-klansmen of Mer Rouge—testimony in which he told of a conversation which directly connected Dr. McKoin and Skipwith with the killings.

McKoin and Old Skip.

This conference took place in Monroe, La. It was called by the klansmen themselves because "a serious situation has arisen in Morehouse Parish," when it was found by both sides that any little overt act by either side would cause a "riot."

"Bunny" McKoin was at this meeting as well as "Old Skip" he testified, and "Skip" said to him:

"There were six men in Mer Rouge who don't belong there. We've got two of them and we're going to get the other four."

The two he "got" say Farland and Rooney, government men who sat in at the trial for the first time today, were Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards. Norsworthy himself testified that the other four were named to him as Hugo Davenport, merchant and planter; A. C. Whipple, village blacksmith known as "The Judge;" Walt Campbell, chief of police of Mer Rouge; and Tom Milner, superintendent at the Interstate Cooperage Company, south of Mer Rouge.

Davenport, Campbell and Whipple are the sort of men who will not be scared out of a community. Milner is gone.

Once Norsworthy said on the stand, he himself had decided to leave Morehouse, simply sell out and go away, not because he feared, but because he was disgusted and "tired" of them.

"But you didn't go?" inquired Attorney General Coco.

"No," replied "Big Jim," with a rare smile. "I decided I'd rather stay here and fight it out."

This was comedy to the court fans J. L. Daniel, Watt's father, again testified.

"Old J. L.," they have a habit of calling men by their initials in this part of Louisiana made a difficult witness. He is weary with life, they say, since Watt is gone. At times during his testimony his mind wandered strangely.

When he was asked the name of Addie May Hamilton, who has been kidnapped once by the klansmen and is now under guard to prevent a recurrence of it, he stated he did not know. In the next breath he stated he had known her for years.

On the question of the whereabouts of Watt on the night of the alleged attempt on the life of Dr. McKoin, when two shots were said to have been fired through the back of the doctor's car in an attempt to assassinate him, old "J. L." was clear.

"Watt was in my home all evening," he said. "We played poker." And ht named others who were in the game, including Richards. This was important, in as much as the firing of the shotgun charges through the physician's machine has been laid at the door of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards.

No Messages From Watt.

Again Mr. Daniel was asked whether he had ever received any message from Watt after the night of the kidnaping.

"Never," he answered. "I told my friends when Watt didn't show up the next day, 'They've murdered my boy.'" He also testified that previous to the killings he had received a telephone message from Skipwith that "there were several parties he was going to get if he had to shoot on sight."

"On the night you were kidnaped and they beat you, couldn't you recognize any of the men who beat you and took Watt away?"

"No, sir. If I could I certainly would tell it."

"You have no fear?"

"No, sir. If I'd known any of them—well, I'd have had a little personal matter with them long ago."

Torture and Slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards Will Be Thoroughly Investigated

12 WITNESSES CALLED TO GIVE TESTIMONY

Part of Troops on Guard Withdrawn, Thus Lessening Likelihood of Declaring Martial Law

Bastrop, La., January 8.—Legal forces of the state of Louisiana prepared tonight to dig deep tomorrow into the tragedy of Morehouse parish—the torture and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, whose deaths have been charged by Governor John M. Parker to "klan murderers."

Today was largely one of conferences in preparation for the resumption tomorrow of the open court hearing with testimony in the record already to show that the two men were put to torture and death by means of a specially devised machine of punishment after being taken prisoner by what was described as a black-hooded mob.

Twelve witnesses were summoned today to testify. Their testimony is expected to deal largely with the capture of Daniel and Richards and the finding of their mutilated and decapitated bodies in Lake La Fourche two weeks ago.

Other than the announcement of the list of witnesses, the removal of a company of the state troops sent here to act in conjunction with civil authorities was probably the most important surface development, and tended to allay an impression that martial law was in prospect. Adjutant General L. A. Toombs, of the Lousiana national guard, sent here to observe conditions and take any steps that might be necessary, maintains a policy of watchful waiting. Approximately 100 state soldiers, still, were on duty here and at Mer Rouge tonight.

Father to Take Stand.

J. L. Daniel, father of Watt, and himself a victim of the hooded band, was to be recalled to the witness stand tomorrow. The elder Daniel started his testimony Saturday afternoon but did not finish. He told of being taken into the woods by members of the mob and flogged and of the disappearance of his son at the same time, but apparently had much more to tell.

In addition to Mr. Daniel the list of witnesses includes his granddaughter, Thelma Dade, 15-year-old daughter of Mayor Dade, of Mer Rouge, Sidney White and "Nip" Eckols, who were in the automobile from which Watt Daniel was taken, and several other men who were halted by the masked band at the time of the kidnaping.

Whether any of them will testify as to the identity of the members of the hooded band cannot be foretold. Thus far none of the witnesses has been able to name members of the mob.

T. Semmes Walmsley, assistant to Attorney General A. V. Coco, was named today as spokesman for the state's legal forces. His first interview with newspaper men was confined to an announcement of the list of prospective witnesses for tomorrow. He denied several rumors of a sensational nature.

In addition to the testimony to be given by Daniel and his granddaughter and the two men who were in the automobile with Watt Daniel, much interest is attached to the prospective testimony of C. C. "Tot" Danvenport, a Mer Rouge citizen. Davenport was one of five men captured and taken into the woods by the kidnapers and who, according to other witnesses, were questioned as to an attempt made to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge and now under bond to await action on an affidavit which charged murder in connection with the death of Daniel and Richards. W. C. Andrews, one of the first witnesses, declared he was flogged until he was numb when he denied any knowledge of the attempt on Dr. McKoin.

Imperial Wizard Calls Attention to the Fact That Bastrop Hearing Is of One Side Only.

Ga.

Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, declared in a statement issued late Tuesday night that he unhesitatingly stands on the denials of klan officials in Louisiana that members of the organization had anything to do with the Morehouse parish kidnaping and flogging outrages in which it is charged Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards were tortured to death last August.

Reports, which he said had been sent over the nation to the effect that the Morehouse mob, that is alleged to have killed Daniel and Richards, was dressed as klansmen, he attributes to efforts of enemies of the klan to discredit the organization.

Lawlessness is as distasteful to klansmen as to law-abiding citizens of any community, the imperial wizard declared in the statement. He expressed confidence that the klan will "as usual be vindicated both legally and in the minds of all fair-minded men."

Cites False Statements.

The statement in full follows:

"The press reports today give me an opportunity to point out some of the many gross misrepresentations concerning the Mer Rouge affair that have gone through the news columns of the press of the nation. I have, heretofore made no statement concerning the affair because any statement about the incident was due to come from the officials of the klan in Louisiana and did come from them in which they made complete denial of any klan connection with the affair, and upon their statement outlining the state organization's plans concerning same, and upon the statement and denial of the Louisiana state officials I unhesitatingly stand.

"The news reports concerning the affair have repeatedly carried the statement that the mob supposed to have killed the two Mer Rouge citizens wore white robes and white hoods, when as a matter of fact the first testimony brought out at the hearing by the state's witnesses shows that they wore black masks, and my information is that the members of the mob were dressed in overalls and unionalls. In other words the enemies of the klan in their frantic effort to discredit the organization have deliberately sent over the nation news reports to the effect that the mob of lawless citizens who are supposed to have killed the Louisiana victims were dressed as klansmen when those sending out the stories knew this was not so.

Klan Deplores Lawlessness.

"As the executive head of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan I denounce any statement no matter from what source that the Ku Klux Klan or klansmen are authorized or taught to commit any act of lawlessness, and any klansman who becomes a lawless citizen is equally as distasteful to klansmen as he is to law-abiding citizenship of any community.

"I desire also to call the attention of the public at this time to the fact that the hearing at Bastrop is not a trial but is simply a presentation of one side of the case. The witnesses are not even allowed to be cross-questioned and the enemies of the klan during this hearing are therefore having their day in court, and the refutation of what may come out at these hearings can not be made at the hearing but will have to be made later on after the findings of the present hearings have been analyzed and those guilty of crime of any kind have been located or designated and tried, and I am sure that the klan will as usual be vindicated both legally and in the minds of all fair minded men.

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is a human machine composed of human beings with over three thousand klans now organized and many hundreds thousands of members scattered throughout the nation. The national, state and local leaders of the klan are conscientiously doing everything in their power to build up in America a lawful and helpful patriotic organization, designed to stand behind the executive officers of the law in the execution of their sworn duty and the better element of every community in the nation is aware of this fact. In the face of the bitterest antagonism from lawless and un-American elements, and the most unjust and scurrilous and false attacks, the leaders of the organization and the membership of same have in my judgment stood up wonderfully well and kept their temper and their patience far above the average in such a situation."

ADJUTANT GENERAL HOLDS LEGAL EDICT TO USE GUARDSMEN

Four Units of State Troops on Duty Preparatory to Murder Hearing Friday.

M'KOIN ON WAY TO LOUISIANA

Disappearance of Kidnaped Witness Remains Mystery as Date of the Hearing Approaches.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., January 3.—The possibility of martial law hovered over Morehouse parish tonight as state troops, civil authorities and the state's legal forces rounded out their final preparations for the open hearing in the Morehouse kidnaping and murder cases to begin Friday.

Governor Parker had signed a martial-law edict and placed it in the hands of Adjutant-General Toombs to be promulgated at his discretion, The governor and attorney-general, however, in keeping with their policy of silence, declined to make an official announcement in this regard.

The adjutant-general visited Mer Rouge and Bastrop during the day conferring with the officers commanding the four units of state troops stationed there.

The Jennings cavalry troop established came at Mer Rouge today alongside the Monroe infantry company that has been on duty here since the state's open investigations into the kidnaping of five citizens of Morehouse and the murder of two began two weeks ago. The New Orleans machine-gun company and the Alexandria infantry continued to occupy the square guarding the courthouse and jail.

McKoin Released.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, arrested in Baltimore on a charge of murder in connection with the cases, was expected to reach here Friday with the officers sent to extradite him.

The physician will return to the state a free man in accordance with an agreement reached today between Governor Parker and Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, in regard to the contested extradition papers. What charges the state will place against him when he reaches Louisiana soil could not be learned tonight.

The two assistant attorneys-general of the state reached Bastrop today and established offices at the courthouse. They will be joined tomorrow by the attorney-general and other assistants. Attorneys who will represent T. J. Burnet, former deputy sheriff, the first arrested were here in conference with their client. These attorneys also will represent Dr. McKoin.

Silent About Troops.

The state made no move today that would indicate the significance of the moving of the Jennings cavalry here. To this unit, it was understood, will be assigned the task of rounding up those whom the state will charge with implication in the masked and mo action of last August, and also for serving subpoenas on witnesses who will be expected to testify at the hearing.

How many will be arrested and when, was as much a mystery tonight as a week ago. Two confessions implicated 45 persons, it has been reported, and other reports say 35 affidavits were signed by the attorney-general last week and will be served between now and Friday. Officials in a position to know declined to discuss this with newspaper men.

There were no developments during the day that could clear up the mystery of the disappearance of Harold Teegerstrom, regarded as a state witness, who was kidnaped by unidentified men from his sleeping quarters at Spyker, La., Friday night.

KLANSMAN TELLS OF PEACE MAKING AT MER ROUGE

Parish in Turmoil; Conference Sought to Forestall Feuds

SAY DR. M'KOIN THREAT FAKED

Jan. 14, 1923

Associated Press Report.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 13.—Testimony of three witnesses—one naming his brother as having been recognized as a member of a black-hooded kidnaping band, another seized and lectured by the "black-hoods," and the third telling of his anxiety to leave the community because of Ku Klux Klan activities—with the collapse of plans for a conference between A. V. Coco, State attorney general, and Captain J. K. Skipwith, klan leader, were developments in the State's investigation of masked band depredations in Morehouse parish.

Fred Cobb, who hails from Texas, where, he says, "men fight square," told of being seized by five hooded men, one of whom he declared was Laurie Calhoun, named by other witnesses as a klansman. Cobb said he was taken to a woods and reprimanded by the men who accused him of misconduct.

Names Own Brother.

Walter Campbell, town marshal, and superintendent of the light and water plant of Mer Rouge, named his brother, A. L. Campbell, as having been recognized by Thomas F. Richards, kidnaped and slain with Watt Daniel, August 24, last, as having been a member of a black-hooded kidnaping party which stalked the roads about Bastrop a week previous to the disappearance of Richards.

The kidnaping of Richards and Daniel was the culminating act which brought about the present investigation.

Leon Braddock added pathos and a dramatic scene to the day's proceedings. Braddock, a farmer, who said he has lived all his life in this section and by the "sweat of my brow have secured a home, a farm of 80 acres, seven mules and an automobile," told of his anxiety to sell his property at a reasonable price and leave to seek more peaceful fields for himself and his wife and four children. This, he said, is due to a raid made on his home by unmasked men, led by Captain Skipwith, who accused him of making liquor.

Just as State's attorneys were about to name the hour for the conference requested by Captain Skipwith to discuss Ku Klux Klan affairs, the klan leader announced early this afternoon to the Associated Press, that as far as he was concerned there would be no conference.

Captain Skipwith said the withdrawing of his request for the interview with Attorney General Coco was due to State's attorneys placing witnesses on the stand to dig into the activities of the klan. "If they care to go about it in this manner, I can see no good to be derived from a conference with Mr. Coco," said Captain Skipwith, known as the 'exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan.

Attorney Surprised.

Attorney General Coco declined to comment on Captain Skipwith's decision other than to say that his withdrawal has not brought about any action by any members of his staff. He expressed surprise at the klan leader's withdrawal, however.

Preceding Campbell, Braddock and Cobb on the stand was A. L. Smith, whose declaration that "I am a klansman and am proud of it," brought forth a round of vigorous applause from the spectators, who were subsequently warned by the court to refrain from any further outburst.

Mr. Smith said he was president of the board of education of Ouichita parish and was willing to render any assistance toward the State's investigation.

The witness told of the kidnaping of Daniel, Richards, Harry Neelis, J. L. Daniel, W. C. Andrews and "Tot" Davenport having been reported to him, together with a report that Hugo Davenport, a member of one of the oldest Morehouse parish families, was "the brains behind the plot" to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, now under bond on affidavit charging murder of Daniel and Richards.

Mr. Smith said that if the reports were true he believed the Davenport family would be involved in a feud. To avoid this he hurriedly informed the Davenports and a conference was arranged between citizens of Mer Rouge, Bastrop, Monroe and the leaders of the Morehouse chapter of the klan.

He said the conference was for the purpose of restoring peace and harmony in Morehouse and to clear the Davenports' family name. The witness said Hugo Davenport was exonerated by the klan. He told of the various discussions during the conference and laid emphasis on what Dr. McKoin, who was present, had to say.

No Credence to Dr. McKoin.

After having said Dr. McKoin had "decided to leave Mer Rouge and burn his bridges behind him," the witness was asked whether any of the anonymous letters alleged to have been received by Dr. McKoin was discussed.

"They were not given any credence," said the witness, "because a man can write an anonymous letter to himself. It was reported that the letters were written on a typewriter in Dr. McKoin's office."

Cobb told in detail of having been kidnaped by five men and taken into a woods and lectured, in which he was threatened with death if he did not change his method of living.

The witness said his captors wore hoods covering the upper parts of their bodies over overalls. He said he thought the proceedings were "funny" and that he recognized one of the men as being Laurie Calhoun.

He said that at the scene of the lecture he had left a pair of shoes. Several days later, he said, he wrote a note to Calhoun and the shoes were left at a store where his son was employed.

Leon Braddock, the farmer, gripped the court room as he drawled out how happiness had been expelled from his humble home because his family believed he was a "marked" man. He dramatically described a raid made on his home at 1:30 o'clock in the morning, the raiding party breaking the lock on a door to gain admittance under the roof where his wife and four children were asleep.

The witness named those in the party who entered his home, declaring that Captain Skipwith was the leader and Marvin Pickett, "Cud" Pickett, Bert Pratt, Sam Cox, Sam Elderidge and a man who he said was named McIntosh. Several of them were armed and Captain Skipwith, he said, informed him they wanted him for "making liquor."

The witness said the band was unmasked and that he was taken to Bastrop and turned over to the sheriff. Sheriff Carpenter, he said, allowed him to spend the rest of the night in his home, but that another white man and four negroes seized by the band before it reached his home, were placed in jail.

Wife Unnerved.

Braddock said the affair had unnerved his wife, that she was no longer happy with her surroundings and believed that an attempt would be made to kill him. He said that he himself felt unsafe and had decided if he could get a reasonable price for his farm he would sell out and leave.

Walter Campbell in his testimony startled the court by declaring that Richard had informed him his brother and Jim Tisdale, were members of the blackhooded band who kidnaped him on the streets of Bastrop in daylight on August 17, one week before his final disappearance.

Campbell was one of the three men said to have been named by Captain Skipwith as having interferred with the operations of the klan in Mer Rouge and was ordered exiled. Campbell said that after W. L. Pugh consented to vouch for him in order that he might remain in Mer Rouge, he sent word to Captain Skipwith he was willing to put up $1000 to pay for an investigation to prove his innocence of the charge that he plotted with others to kill Dr. McKoin. The proposition, he said, was not accepted by Skipwith, who sent word to him that he could remain unmolested.

The witness testified that he had aided Dr. McKoin to conduct an investigation after the physician had received anonymous letter, threatening him. He said that he examined all of the typewriters in Mer Rouge including that of Watt Daniel. He said that he could find no clue, but Dr. McKoin came to him later and said that the letter was written on his own typewriter, explaining that his office was never locked and that it would be easy for anyone to gain access to his typewriter.

William B. Stuckey, Mer Rouge lawyer, and formerly of the Louisiana legislature, the first witness of the day, testified that Dr. McKoin "shot up his own car to gain support of the members of the klan. The former solon described himself as an opponent of the klan.

The witness concluded his testimony by saying that Dr. McKoin had incurred the enmity of many people in and about Mer Rouge because what he termed "bull in the China shop" methods of McKoin while he was mayor of Mer Rouge.

The court took a recess during the early afternoon until Monday morning.

THE KLAN IN MOREHOUSE

The Times-Picayune

In the open hearing at Bastrop, La., to obtain evidence of complicity in the murder of WATT DANIEL and THOMAS RICHARDS the Morehouse Parish Ku Klux Klan was unmasked in the testimony of a former member, J. S. NORSWORTHY, and revealed in its true colors as a secret society outside the law and exercising the power of a super-government in the community. It was formed ostensibly to regulate morals and inflict punishment upon those who incurred its displeasure. Orders to execute sentences upon alleged offenders were given by one Captain SKIPWITH, the Exalted Cyclops. Two disguises were used by the Klansmen: a white hood, mask and flowing garment as a symbol of the "ideals" of the society; a change to black when raids were to be made. The witness, a man of influence in Mer Rouge, was appointed an officer; but after a brief membership and attendance at two meetings he withdrew, and had his name removed from the "books." He saw things that he "didn't think right." An order to take three negroes to the Arkansas line and there "whip them within an "inch of their lives and tell them "never to return" he refused to obey.

NORSWORTHY testified in the shadow of the Klan's vengeance. He had been threatened with assassination if he went on the stand. His story was a bombshell in the camp of the suspected, for they had been boasting that if the Grand Jury returned indictments there would be no convictions. Although the witness had been told that "the District Attorney and two-"thirds of the Grand Jury were Klans-"men," Attorney General Coco said that he would be willing to try the case with Klansmen on the jury who were of good repute. The inference was that no jury of non-Klansmen could be selected in Morehouse Parish, and that a reaction had set in against the society. Men stood aghast at its excesses and no longer felt bound by the oath they had taken.

"Give us an idea of the general operation of the Klan," said the Attorney General to the witness; "they "claim to be for law and order. In "what way did they undertake to en-"force the law?" NORSWORTHY replied that "offenses" were not reported to the Sheriff nor to any of the officials of the parish, but to Captain SKIPWITH, who issued his orders after a committee had investigated each case. There ensued "chaos and ter-"rorism which did not previously ex-"ist." At one time there was almost a state of civil war. A conflict was averted by a "peace conference" between the Klansmen and those who did not belong to the society. The Klan had placed six men on its black list. The witness swore that the Exalted Cyclops told him after the disappearance of DANIEL and RICHARDS that the Klan "would get the other four." They were a planter of Mer Rouge, the City Marshal and two other citizens. "They kidnapped me the night "they got 'WATT' and TOM RICH-"ARDS," said the witness, "but they "knew better than to try anything "with me." NORSWORTHY is a giant in stature and a man of consequence. But even he did not get in touch with the authorities to break up the society. Men feared it too much. He left the parish to begin life again in Mexico, but at El Paso decided to return and take his chances with the Klan. The Attorney General, commenting upon the testimony of NORSWORTHY and other witnesses who had been threatened by the Klan, said: restrained by the forms of law, to regulate the morals of a community,

The Klan, not only in Morehouse, but in Louisiana and the nation at whether it is in the South or in the large, will have to consider seriously North, inevitably becomes an instru-the narratives that were unfolded at ment of tyranny. Planter Quotes Cyclops as Saying "We Means to Give Them a Trial, But They Knew Too Much."

Commercial Appeal

(Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

BASTROP, La., Jan. 12.—There came to the stand today in Louisiana's inquisition into the reign of terror which has gripped Morehouse Parish a stalwart planter of the old south, who under oath, swore that Capt. J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan, had explained to him by whom and why Watt Daniel and Tom Richards had been tortured and racked until they died, in the following language:

"He made the remark that all of this trouble had occurred from two very sorry boys, very sorry characters, or something to that effect.

"'And,' he says, 'if the boys had not been so smart,' he says, 'we intended to give them a trial in the court for shooting at Dr. McKoin.'

"'But,' he says, 'they got so smart and had too much to say at the ball game and over at Jim Norsworthy's barbecue at the Bonibee, that,' he says, 'the boys' (he didn't say 'we' that time), he says, 'the boys decided that they knew too much.'"

Story of the Killing.

This was the story of the killing, and the reasons thereof, as told to the court today by W. R. Norsworthy and in reading them into the record of the court. Mr. Norsworthy swore that the story was told him by Capt. Skipwith, the cyclops of the parish's knights of the flaming cross.

"And," continued the witness, in summing up his sensational quotations from the cyclops, "I believe those are the words he used; the best that I can remember."

This bit of startling testimony crept into a day's record, replete with sensations, without any warning that there was coming for the first time, the first piece of direct evidence concerning the "why" for the murders, so suggesting, directly, the identity of the group, which might be accountable for a story of crime which has startled the world.

And this story the state is ready to amplify later. Attorney General Coco said tonight. It is ready to fill in the missing links. It claims that it is ready to identify "the boys" who decided that Daniel and Richards were "to smart," that "they knew too much."

And the state is ready to show, the attorney general avers, just who the "we" of Capt. Skipwith's alleged "explanation" consists of.

Skipwith's Conferences.

Capt. Skipwith returned to the spotlight today in customary sturdy fashion. Only a little while before the giving of the above testimony he had notified Assistant Attorneys General Guion and Warren "that he would like to have a conference with Attorney General Coco." This will probably be held within the next few hours.

The request for the meeting was made in the middle of Bastrop's main street, where the captain transacts all of his business. With the request for a conference, he issued a "statement to the world," declaring that the testimony so far was a bunch of lies, sworn to by "disreputable characters;" that "Judge Coco is stirring up a lot of trouble, only to go away and leave these people here to kill each other."

Witness after witness today, some admittedly klansmen, others former members, or anti-klan, charged, or admitted that Capt. Skipwith was the guiding genius, and at specific times, member of the black hooded mobs, which spread terror throughout the parish.

Under oath they have sworn that he ordered men and women deported from their homes, or gave them permission to stay; that in all these activities he acted avowedly for the klan, and that his klan lieutenants were the distributors of the black robes when his mob members dressed for their night marauding expeditions.

Trailed by Ku Klux.

Witness Norsworthy repeated the story told on the stand some days ago by his brother, concerning Capt. Skipwith's charge that the former had been hired to kill both the captain and Dr. McKoin. He told about hunting the captain up, denying the charge and how the captain said to him:

"Well, old boys, it's lucky for you that you had two good friends here to vouch for you, for I've had six men trailing you up in Arkansas." Then the witness testified concerning the captain's explanation of the Daniel and Richards murder.

J. D. Davenport was a star witness.

"Do you know about the Richards and Daniel kidnaping and murder?" he was asked.

"Yes, I met the car with the klansmen and saw the truck with the men in it," he answered.

He told of the "peace conferences" after Capt. Skipwith had accused his brother of wanting to kill both the captain and Dr. McKoin. The captain attended most of them.

Homes No Longer Sacred.

"I said something had to be done," the witness testified. "We had to clear up the trouble. It was getting terrible. Mens' lives were in danger; their homes were no longer sacred. We had a super government. There was no law; no order, no safety.

"Skipwith finally said that my family was all right, but that Tom Milner, A. C. Whipple and Walter Campbell had to go, leave the parish, leave their homes, leave their families, and stay away forever.

"The captain appeared at all these conferences as the representative of the klan. We never thought of him in any other light. He was referred to as such, and it was understood that he spoke for and represented the klan. He accused these three men of being anti-klan.

"The captain finally called us together in Bastrop, after we had talked about asking Gov. Parker to intervene in an effort to bring order out of chaos. The cyclops said he thought he could settle the matter.

"Tom Milner had already gone, he explained; Will Pew would vouch for Walter Campbell. I would vouch for A. C. Whipple, they might remain so long as they did not denounce the klan, the captain decreed. So I did. That ended the conferences."

"Has Skipwith ever made any comment on the situation since?" the witness was asked.

"Yes, he telephoned once that he wanted 'the good people of Mer Rouge to know that there would be no trouble so long as Whipple and Campbell kept their mouths closed, concerning the klan, and the klan did not nullify its agreement.' He said he would notify us any time the klan sought to break the truce."

Mayor Dade Recalled.

Mayor Dade, of Mer Rouge, was recalled this morning. Under sharp questioning he admitted he was a member of the black hooded band, which took guns away from W. C. Andrews, Harry Neelis and Watt Daniel.

"I was a klansman then," he explained. "Kelly Harp and Ed Ivey, Dr. McKoin and Capt. Skipwith were in the party. Some of the men wanted to flog the boys, but I wouldn't stand for it, and pleaded with the captain."

"What did this band call itself?" he was asked.

"Why, it was the Ku Klux Klan, Capt. Skipwith was in charge. They gave me my black hood from the car. I quit the klan after that."

Kelley Harp, the next witness, admitted being in the party, but refused to reveal names of other members, saying his oath as a klansman prevented him from disclosing any of the klan's activities, despite the fact that he was no longer a member.

"Ever ordered to carry out any work of the klan?" Harp was asked.

"Yes, ordered to deport Ada Mae Hamilton. I wouldnt' do it, and quit the klan afterwards. I don't believe in the mask. It leads to confusion and order."

Black Hood of the Klan.

"What regalia of the klan did you wear when on raiding parties?"

"Black hood and robe; they gave it to me."

"They were furnished by officials and members of the klan, acting for the klan, and giving you regalia recognized by the klan?"

"Yes, sir; by members of the klan at least."

Early in the afternoon Judge Odom conducted his inquisition into the story published by a New Orleans newspaper to the effect that W. C. Andrews, important witness in the case, had been shot at from ambush. Mr. Andrews testified that there was a dent in his flivver that looked as though it had been made by a bullet, but he had heard no shots; was not afraid.

Judge Odom shortened the quiz, without giving the newspaper correspondent opportunity to be heard, and closed the incident by lecturing the big staff of correspondents.

"You are not a necessary adjunct of this case," he said. "You are here by sufferance. I will not permit garbled stories, or stories which may intimidate witnesses, and I will hold you personally responsible to this court for any stories appearing. No stories can be published which might scare witnesses." There was an outburst of applause from the galleries.

KLANSMEN ARMED TO FIGHT OFF RAID AFTER KIDNAPING

Witnesses at Probe Declare They Feared Men Of Mer Rouge

1-10-23

BASTROP SHERIFF TAKES THE STAND

Houston Post

Associated Press Report.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 15.—New ground was opened today by State attorneys in their task of unraveling the mystery surrounding the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, victims of black-hooded kidnappers. Two members of the Ku Klux Klan put into the record a recital of an assembling of klansmen in a store held in anticipation that Mer Rouge citizens might swoop down on Bastrop in retaliation.

James F. Harpand and "Jap" Jones, farmers of Bonita, a village in the southern part of Morehouse parish, both members of the parish klan organization, testified that after the kidnaping of Daniel, Richards and three other men on the Mer Rouge-Bastrop pike August 24 last, a dozen or more klansmen gathered in a hardware store here, armed themselves and prepared for eventualities.

Both insisted that the klan had no part in the kidnaping but that the gathering was deemed advisable as a precautionary measure in view of the intense feeling prevailing in the parish.

"Knew Tey Were Mad."

"Why did you klansmen wait up that night?" was asked of Harp.

"It takes a long time to tell that story," Harp said.

"We heard the people of Mer Rouge had a regular arsenal and we thought they might come over and blame the kidnaping on the klan. We knew they were mad and up in arms about the kidnaping of Richards a week before and we were afraid it would be laid at our feet."

Jones testified along much the same lines as Harp as to the gathering in the Bastrop store. He told of making the rounds with his friends in Bastrop stores, trying to learn who might be responsible for the kidnaping, but without result. At no place, he declared, could he find information as to who was in the party of men who took part.

"Did you hear of any preparation made to kidnap Daniel and Richards?" Jones was asked.

"No—none."

"Did you attend any meeting in which the conduct of Richards and Daniel was discussed?" was another question.

"Would Leave Them Alone."

"Yes, about six weeks prior to the kidnaping we met in the courthouse and Daniel and Richards were discussed, but we decided to let them and other citizens alone. Then we had another meeting—an impromptu affair—at which Dr. B. M. McKoin, Captain J. K. Skipwith and others were present. We talked over the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin. Watt Daniel and others were blamed but particularly Watt Daniel."

Skipwith is the parish leader of the klan. Dr. McKoin formerly was mayor of Mer Rouge and is now charged in an affidavit with murder in connection with the deaths of Daniel and Richards.

Harp and Jones were the principal witnesses at the afternoon session of the hearing. They were preceded on the witness stand by F. L. Carpenter, parish sheriff, Gus Boyd, Collinston storekeeper, from whom the black-hooded band purchased gasoline while holding the two kidnaped men prisoners, and a half a dozen other witnesses.

Carpenter's testimony related to the seizure of Alonzo Braddock, a Morehouse farmer, by a band of unmasked men said to have been headed by Captain Skipwith.

"Get the Stills."

Carpenter denied that the men who participated in the arrest of Braddock were commissioned as sheriff's deputies but asserted that he had told Skipwith, when the klan leader informed him that he had located some "stills" and asked to be deputized, to "go out and get the stills."

Carpenter said at the time no warrant had been issued for Braddock. J. F. Dalton, district clerk, testified that a search warrant to enter Braddock's home had been issued and also a bond for Braddock's appearance on a charge of illicit distilling.

Boyd, a member of the present parish grand jury said that the purchase of the gasoline was arranged by a man who kept his features hidden by a black hood. He declared he did not recognize this man or any of his companions who were seated in a touring car and in the automobile truck in which the two captives were held, blindfolded.

"Wasn't it unusual to see parties of men with black hoods on?" Boyd was asked.

"No, I have seen one or two parties dressed like that on the streets of Collinston before," he answered.

F. C. Eason of Monroe, another witness, repeated a conversation he said he had had with Captain Skipwith after the kidnaping of Daniel and Richards.

"Needed Attention."

"Captain Skipwith asked me if I knew anything of Daniel and Richards. I said it was a sorry come-off. He said, 'You probably do not know why it was done but the community thought they were bad characters and needed attention.'"

Hugh Davenport, father of "Tot" Davenport, one of the men kidnaped but not harmed at the same time Daniel and Richards were captured, said he had been notified that he was to be "exiled" because of alleged anti-klan activities. The matter was adjusted and he remained in Mer Rouge where he operates a mercantile establishment.

W. L. Pugh, a klansman, told of vouching for Walter Campbell, marshal of Mer Rouge, who was said to have been listed among those to be sent away because of reports that he was involved in a plot to assassinate Dr. McKoin.

"Jap" Jones was the last witness of the day.

"Why did you join the klan?" was one of the questions asked.

"Because they were making an effort to uphold law and order," he answered.

"Instead of waiting in Bastrop on the night the men had been kidnaped, why didn't you and the other klansmen get out on the trail of the kidnapers?"

Had Two Hours' Start.

"We couldn't—they had two hours' start on us."

Jones named Captain Skipwith, R. L. Thomas, owner of the store, John Carter, John Morris, James Harp, Smith Stephenson, Tom Stephenson, Dr. F. L. Bellinger and Ray Carpenter as among those who remained at the Thomas store.

"Did you ever hear Captain Skipwith denounce the governor?" Jones was asked.

"No, except I read a warm denunciation by Captain Skipwith in the newspapers. I saw Captain Skipwith a few days later and he told me that he had been grossly misquoted."

Harp said conversation in his section of the parish centered on the attempt to kill Dr. McKoin.

"It was generally discussed, and Watt Daniel, Tom Milner, A. C. Whipple and Walter Campbell were being accused as having had part in the plot," said Harp.

Questioning of Harp centered largely around the gathering in the Thomas store.

Regrets Daniel's Death.

"As a member of the klan, you regret the death of Daniel?" he was asked later.

"Yes."

Harp had described Daniel as an "enemy of the klan." He said that at noon on August 24, several hours before the kidnaping, he talked with Daniel.

"And you knew then, as a klansman, that he was an enemy of the klan?" he was asked.

"Yes."

Harp concluded his testimony by explaining that one of the chief reasons he remained in Bastrop was to satisfy his own curiosity as to who kidnaped the two men.

Captain Skipwith paid his first visit to the courtroom today since the hearing began 10 days ago. He came to the room during the noon recess, exchanged salutations with the newspaper correspondents and left before the court reconvened. He explained that, he was hunting for his brother, who arrived in Bastrop to visit him this morning.

Machine Guns Remain.

Two detachments of State troops—a machine gun detail from New Orleans and a cavalry detachment from Jennings—remain on duty here and at Mer Rouge. Their activities thus far, however, have been confined to camp routine. It has been explained that the soldiers are now being held only as bystanders at this time, but are in readiness to step in any time their services may be needed to aid civil officials.

Jeff Burnett, the only man being detained thus far in connection with the slaying of Daniel and Richards, remains in the hospital at Shreveport, where he was taken some days ago suffering with pleurisy. He is said to be rapidly recovering and probably will be returned to the jail here shortly.

No intimation has thus far been given as to when additional arrests might be expected.

KLAN ACTIVITIES IS CAUSE OF SHOOTING, EVIDENCE INDICATES

SHOT FIRED IN FIGHT

Former Sheriff and World War Veteran Victim of Klansman's Bullet

(Associated Press)

MONROE, LA., Jan. 20.—Ku Klux Klan activities in Morehouse parish was the cause of the killing last night of John P. Parker, Jr., of this town, by Carey Calhoun, of Bastrop, his cousin, according to evidence adduced at a coroner's inquest held here late today. The jury's verdict holds that Parker came to his death by a gunshot wound inflicted in a scuffle with Calhoun. There were no recommendations.

Parker was a former sheriff of Ouachita parish and a captain in the Rainbow Division in the World War. The body of Parker will be interred tomorrow afternoon with full military honors.

Calhoun, who is under arrest, is being held here pending action by the district attorney, who is now in Bastrop.

In a voluntary statement to the coroner's jury, Calhoun declared the argument resulting in the killing arose out of a discussion of the Ku Klux Klan activities and particularly as to the testimony given at the Bastrop open hearing by Jim Norsworthy.

Calhoun said the shot was fired accidentally at the time both he and Parker were scuffling to secure possession of a gun following an argument.

"We had been drinking all day, Wess Saunders, Jack, and myself, and in the evening went to Bessie Jones' house for supper before going to Jack's plantation," Calhoun said.

"We took one drink after another and then commenced talking about the Mer Rouge affair. We discussed Norsworthy's testimony and one word led to another until he slapped me and I slapped him back.

"Then he hit me and I hit him back, and both of us, seeing a pistol, made a grab for it. During the scuffle the gun went off."

Saunders testified he was asleep at the time the shooting occurred and never heard the pistol fired.

Bessie Jones is a negress. She has fled. Parker was killed with a .45 calibre revolver that belonged to the woman.

Calhoun, who has admitted he was a klansman, was a witness at Bastrop at the open hearing investigating black-hooded mob activities, and he testified as having escorted William Norsworthy to the home of Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan, and arranged a conference between Norsworthy and Skipwith.

Montgomery

Norsworthy and Skipwith conferred over a report that the former had been hired by certain citizens of Mer Rouge to kill Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, for the price of $1,500.

Norsworthy testified he made a satisfactory explanation as to his whereabouts on the night of the attempted assassination and Skipwith told him he would be protected.

Montgomery Ala.

Jim Norsworthy was the first witness at the open hearing to connect the klan with having black hoods as part of its regalia. He said that he once was captain in the Morehouse klan, but resigned when he was ordered to take several men to the Arkansas line, flog and deport them.

1-21-23

Calhoun is a brother of Gus and Laurie Calhoun, both of whom have been mentioned repeatedly in connection with hooded activities. Laurie was the special deputy who brought Dr. McKoin, charged with murder in the case, back to Louisiana from Baltimore. He also arrested T. J. Burnett, a former deputy sheriff, likewise charged with murder.

Calhoun was released from custody tonight by Sheriff Grant of Ouachita, following receipt of an order signed by the district attorney.

"There are no charges pending against Calhoun," the sheriff said. "However, the matter is subject to a grand jury investigation."

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 20.—Efforts of the state of Louisiana through an open hearing to fix responsibility for the kidnapping August 24 of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, whose mutilated bodies were discovered December 22 in the waters of Lake Lafourche, twenty five miles from Bastrop, moved forward today with unexpected rapidity. Three more names were added to the alleged roster of the masked band which made captives of Daniel and Richard and the Ford truck in which they were whisked away, was identified.

Smith Stevenson and Oliver Skipwith, the latter the youngest son of Captain J. K. Skipwith, admitted leader of the Ku Klux Klan in Morehouse parish, and a third man identified only as "Blacksmith" Smith, were declared by the witnesses today to have been members of the kidnapping band and the state put in evidence a telegram from the state bureau of motor vehicles at Baton Rouge giving the name of the man registered as the owner of the truck.

The name of Captain Skipwith also was connected with the stirring events of the evening when one witness testified that he saw the klan leader at the fork of the Monroe-Collinston highway in conversation with a hooded man. The captors and their prisoners were last seen at Collinston.

H. B. Blankenship, of Bastrop, was the witness whose identification of young Skipwith, Stevenson and the truck created one of the greatest sensations since the hearing got under way. Blankenship testified that in the late afternoon the hooded band in several automobiles and with Daniel, Richard and three other prisoners, all blindfolded, and with their hands tied behind their backs, went by his home. The caravan, he said, passed within fifteen feet of him. The prisoners were aboard the truck. He did not see the license numbers of the truck or cars but having been for some time familiar with cars of the kind he observed the truck closely in order that he might recognize it if he saw it again. Asked if he searched for it later, he replied that he had, and that because of various distinguishing marks, he had recognized it. He said it bore 1922 Louisiana license tag No. 74657. It was at this juncture that Attorney General Coco introduced in evidence the telegram from Baton Rouge declaring that car No. 74657 was registered in the name of Smith Stevenson.

Blankenship was then asked if he had recognized any of the hooded men.

"Yes, I am positive; Oliver Skipwith and Smith Stevenson."

The witness explained that he had identified Skipwith by the manner in which he was attired, and added that he was on the running board of one of the cars "close to me." Stevenson, he said, was driving the machine. "It was his car and from his appearance, I am sure it was him."

Stevenson was on the stand early this week and testified that he was in Bastrop the night of August 24, adding that he had been deputized as a marshal during the day to assist in preserving order at the barbecue and baseball games. He testified that he owned a Ford truck; that it had been used during the day to haul water to the baseball park, but that it was at his home that night. He said if it was used during the night it was without his knowledge and without his permission.

JUDGE ARRAIGNS NEWS REPORTERS.

Atlanta Ga. Constitution

Bastrop, La., January 12.—Today's proceedings in the open hearing investigation of masked band activities in Morehouse parish was enlivened by a statement from the bench by Judge Fred L. Odom after an investigation of an item published in several papers yesterday with reference to the finding of what was alleged to have been an indentation made by a bullet in the door of an automobile owned by W. C. Andrews, one of the state's witnesses. 1-13-23

Judge Odom took exception especially to newspaper headlines which asserted that an attempt had been made to assassinate Andrews.

Andrews had testified that he could not say when the mark was made, but that it was called to his attention Wednesday. He declared that the automobile had not been in use except at intervals for a week or more.

"I want to say with reference to the matter that the only interest I have in it is to find out definitely whether or not our witnesses have been interfered with," Judge Odom said.

Court's Business.

"It is the court's business to find out and it is everybody's business to notify the court when an attempted interference is made with our witnesses. If there is any interference, any intimidation or any threats of any kind made against any witness by anybody, I am going to exert every power that the state of Louisiana permits in not only detecting but punishing the party who attempts to interfere with a witness.

"I think there has been too much talking and too much writing about this little matter, and I want to say to you, gentlemen of the press, that I do not think you are necessary adjuncts to this investigation. You are here by courtesy, gentlemen. I welcome you. I have no objection to your being here. But I am going to expect a different course from you in the future.

"I regard any attempt to color this testimony or to color the statements of anybody with reference to matters of this kind as an interference with the witnesses who come to this court. I have said that we are not going to have any interference. Now, you gentlemen can go so far, but I would suggest that you be cautious about coloring these matters.

Lays Responsibility.

"You say you don't control the headlines. You are responsible for what goes in your papers, gentlemen, and any report that goes out through the newspapers or otherwise that witnesses have been fired upon from ambush or otherwise tampered with or interferred with—I say any report that goes out, any talk of that kind, is, in itself, an interference with the witnesses, in that witnesses will not want to come to court if they are going to be assassinated.

"I am going to deal with anybody who circulates such reports, or causes the circulation of them, as I will with anybody else who interferes with the witnesses in any other way. I don't want the witnesses interferred with."

At the conclusion of Judge Odom's remarks, spectators occupying seats in the court room and in the galleries broke out with loud handclapping and other manners of applauding. The court had to rap for order.

When court recessed for the day a conference was held between Judge Odom and the 20 or more newspaper men in attendance at the hearing. The matter was thoroughly discussed and a satisfactory settlement was reached.

SKIPWITH CANCELS KLAN DISCUSSION WITH OFFICIAL

Declares Attorney-General Can Get His Evidence From Witnesses in Open Hearing.

WITNESS ON STAND IMPLICATES BROTHER

Declares He Was Told His Own Kinsman Was Member of First Kidnaping Party.

Bastrop, La., January 13.—The conference between Attorney General A. V. Coco and Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, has been called off indefinitely, according to an announcement made by Captain Skipwith early this afternoon.

"There will be no conference between myself and Mr. Coco," the klan leader said. "I could not see where any good could come out of it, and therefore decided to call it off."

"Have you informed Mr. Coco to this effect?" Captain Skipwith was asked.

"No, not yet. It hasn't been officially called off, but you can say that a conference between the attorney general and myself will never be held. The state's attorneys seem to be satisfied in digging into the affairs of the klan by placing witnesses on the stand at the open hearing, and therefore it is best for them to get their information from that source."

Attorney General Coco, when informed by The Associated Press that Captain Skipwith had decided to call off the interview which Mr. Coco in an official statement yesterday said had been arranged but no date set, appeared surprised at Captain Skipwith's action.

"I have not been informed either by Captain Skipwith or his attorney about this, and I will say that the calling off of the arranged interview was not the result of any steps taken by myself or any members of my staff."

Captain Skipwith requested a conference with Mr. Coco yesterday in order to lay before him the operations of the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan in an effort to show that it had not taken part in any of the alleged "black hood" outrages which resulted in the deaths of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard.

Implicates Brother.

Bastrop, La., January 13.—Walter Campbell, marshal of the town of Mer Rouge, testified in the open Campbell—as members of a black-hooded band which kidnaped him from Bastrop a week before Richard and Daniel disappeared.

"Is Campbell any relative of yours?" he was asked.

"Yes, my brother," the witness replied.

Campbell was one of several Mer-Rouge citizens said to have been designated by Captain J. K. Skipwith, leader of the Morehouse parish branch of the Ku Klux Klan, as undesirable. Campbell said he was vouched for by another citizen, offered to put up $1,000 to prove that he was innocent of any charges that might be preferred against him, and he was allowed to remain.

Campbell said he had learned that he had been charged with plotting to kill Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge.

Cheer Klansman.

Preceding Campbell, Bradlock and Cobb on the stand was A. L. Smith, whose declaration that "I am a klansman and am proud of it," brought forth a round of vigorous applause from the spectators who were subsequently warned by the court to refrain from any further outbursts.

Mr. Smith, a stately old Louisianian, said he was president of the board of education of Cauchita parish and was willing to render any assistance toward the state's investigation.

The witness told of the kidnaping of Daniel, Richard, Harry Neelis, J. L. Daniel, W. C. Andrews and "Tot" Davenport having been reported to him, together with a report that Hugo Davenport, a member of one of the oldest Morehouse parish families, was "the brains behind the plot" to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, now under bond on an affidavit charging murder of Daniel and Richard.

Mr. Smith said that if the reports were true he believed the Davenport family would be involved in a feud. To avoid this he hurriedly informed the Davenports and a conference was arranged between citizens of Mer Rouge, Bastrop, Monroe and the leaders of the Morehouse chapter of the klan.

He said the conference was for the purpose of restoring peace and harmony in Morehouse and to clear the Louisiana.

Davenports' family name. The witness said Hugo Davenport was exonerated by the klan. He told of the various discussions during the conference and laid emphasis on what Dr. McKoin, who was present, had to say.

After having said Dr. McKoin had decided to "leave Mer Rouge and burn his bridges behind him," the witness was asked whether any of the anonymous letters alleged to have been received by Dr. McKoin was discussed.

"They were not given any credence," said the witness, "because a man can write an anonymous letter to himself. It was reported that the letters were written on a typewriter in Dr. McKoin's office."

Given Lecture.

Cobb, the Texan, told in detail of having been kidnaped by five men and taken into a woods and lectured in which he was threatened with death if he did not change his method of living.

The witness said his captors wore hoods covering the upper parts of their bodies over overalls and union-alls. He said he thought the proceedings were "funny" and that he recognized one of the men as being Laury Calhoun.

He said that at the scene of the lecture he had left a pair of shoes. Several days later, he said, he wrote a note to Calhoun and the shoes were left at a store where his son was employed.

Leon Braddock, the farmer, gripped the courtroom as he drawled out how happiness had been expelled from his humble home because his family believed he was a "marked" man. He dramatically described a raid made on his home at 1:30 o'clock in the morning, the raiding party breaking the lock on a door to gain admittance under the roof where his wife and four children were asleep.

The witness named those in the party who entered his home, declaring that Captain Skipwith was the leader and Marvin Pickett, "Cud" Pickett, Bert Pratt, Sam Cox, Sam Eldridge, and a man who he said was named McIntosh. Several of them were armed and Captain Skipwith, he said, informed him they wanted him for "making liquor."

Band Was Unmasked.

The witness said the band was unmasked and that he was taken to Bastrop and turned over to the sheriff. Sheriff Carpenter, he said, allowed him to spend the rest of the night in his home, but that another white man and four negroes seized by the band before it reached his home were placed in jail.

Braddock said the affair had unnerved his wife, that she was no longer happy with her surroundings and believed that an attempt would be made to kill him. He said that he himself felt unsafe and had decided if he could get a reasonable price for his farm he would sell out and leave.

Walter Campbell in his testimony startled the court by naming his brother and Jim Tisdale, who, Richard had informed him, were members of the black-hooded band who kidnaped him on the streets of Bastrop in daylight on August 17, one week before his final disappearance.

Campbell was one of the three men said to have been named by Captain Skipwith as having interfered with the operations of the klan in Mer Rouge and was ordered exiled. Campbell said that after W. L.

Witness Declares Jeff Burnett Was One of Hooded Party

Associated Press Report.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 19.—John P. Parker, Jr., prominent citizen of Monroe was shot and probably fatally founded at Monroe tonight by Carey Calhoun, of Bastrop, brother of Laurie Calhoun, acting deputy sheriff of Morehouse parish, according to reports received here

Associated Press Report.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 19.—States Attorney General A. V. Coco, conducting the investigation here into the operations of masked bands in Morehouse parish, sprang a surprise today when at the opening of the afternoon session of the open hearing he placed R. A. "Berry" Whetstone on the stand. Whetstone, regarded as the state's most important witness in its effort to identify the kidnapers and slayers of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, almost at the beginning of his testimony named T. Jeff Burnett, former deputy sheriff, now under arrest on a charge of murder, as one of the members of the masked band that had Daniel and Richards in charge the evening of August 24 at a point on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway two miles from Bastrop.

Whetstone, since stating several weeks ago that he had identified one or more of the masked men, has been in charge of the authorities at an unannounced place, and when he unexpectedly appeared in the courtroom he was escorted by Detective Chief Glynn of the New Orleans police department.

Gray Is Named Again.

Newt Gray, declared yesterday by Fred Tubanks to have been a member of the band which kidnaped Daniel and Richards, was named again today as one of the party. Mrs. J. H. Inabnet of Mer Rouge testified that after attending the barbecue and baseball games in Bastrop on August 24 she started for home in an automobile driven by Thelma Dade, granddaughter of J. L. Daniel and niece of Watt Daniel. The car, she said, was held up by the masked band, and when it was ascertained no men were aboard it was ordered to proceed. Mrs. Iuabnet said the mask of one of the hooded men was torn; that she recognized him, and, upon being pressed for his identity, declared it was Newt Gray.

Whetstone testified that he left the celebration at Bastrop afoot with the expectation that he would be given a lift by a passing motorist, and that while waiting he saw an automobile parked near the highway. He assumed it was a party of picnickers, but on approaching discovered the persons about the fire were black-hooded men.

He almost reached them before he was noticed, he said, and when 50 feet away one of the men called him by name. They forced him to approach, gave him a bucket and told him to get some water.

Whetstone said upon his return he sat upon a log for 30 minutes in the midst of the party.

"Pretty soon," he continued, "the crowd came from Bastrop and all of them got up. Then, about 20 minutes later, some one told me that they had Watt Daniel, J. L. Daniel, W. C. Andrews and those other fellows. Then I got loose from them and caught a car and rode home."

Asked if he recognized any of the masked men, Whetstone replied:

"Yes, T. J. Burnett."

"Are you positive?"

"Yes, he had his mask up."

Burnett soon after his arrest and incarceration in the parish jail here developed pleurisy and was removed to a hospital in Shreveport. He virtually recovered and left that city late today under guard to be returned here.

To Clean Out Family.

Other testimony regarded by the State's forces as of vital importance to its case was offered at the forenoon session by William J. McDonald, brother-in-law of J. L. Daniel. Mr. McDonald declared that "Jap" Jones, mentioned frequently in previous testimony, had told him that the "whole d—— family" would be "cleaned out" before the alleged attempt to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge was settled.

McDonald said Jones did not know he was related to the Daniel family, and when he learned of it asked him to forget the conversation.

An alleged attempt to assassinate the physician has been declared by some authorities to be at the bottom of the wholesale kidnaping. The three men kidnaped with Daniel and Richards and flogged reported that all were questioned by their captors concerning the reported firing upon Dr. McKoin from ambush. McDonald stated that had McKoin been fired upon the physician would have gathered his friends and instituted a search for the assailant. This did not occur, he said, and he was emphatic in asserting that he did not believe McKoin had been attacked.

Several witnesses from the Spyker neighborhood were questioned at length regarding the disappearance December 29 of Harold Teegerstrom, timekeeper at the plant of the Southern Carbon company at that place.

Other witnesses described the wholesale holdup of August 24, and much of the testimony was a repetition of that brought out previously.

Mer Rouge Mob Resumes Operations

Associated Press Report.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 19.—A black-hooded band still is operating in Morehouse parish, according to a statement made to Judge Fred M. Odom, presiding at the open hearing investigating masked band activities here, late today by department of justice agents.

Judge Odom, in a statement, said that it had been officially reported a holdup similar to the one which is alleged to have occurred on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway August 24, resulting in the kidnaping of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, had occurred near Mer Rouge Thursday night

The department of justice report names Sidney Rogers, a youth, residing near Mer Rouge, as the victim. Rogers, according to the report, claimed that while driving a team of horses attached to a light wagon he was stopped by six or eight black-hooded men, one of them holding him up with a pistol. He said they demanded to know if he was "Mr. Knight." When he identified himself he was told to move on.

The federal officers' report said that the man wanted was J. M. Knight, a grocer of Mer Rouge.

Neither J. M. Knight nor SidneyRogers has been called as a witness at the open hearing.

Judge Odom announced that he has ordered a full investigation.

Jeff Burnett Taken Back to Bastrop

Associated Press Report.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 19.—T. Jeff Burnett, held in connection with the kidnapings of F. Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, left at 3 o'clock this afternoon for Bastrop, La., where he will be confined in the Morehouse parish jail.

Burnett was guarded by the two deputy sheriffs who have been with him through the 13 days which he spent at a local sanitarium. He developed pleurisy while at the jail in Bastrop shortly after his arrest in connection with the Mer Rouge case. Pugh consented to vouch for him in order that he may remain in Mer Rouge he sent word to Captain Skipwith he was willing to put up $1,000 to pay for an investigation to prove his innocence of the charge that he plotted with others to kill Dr. McKoin. The proposition, he said, was not accepted by Skipwith, who sent word to him that he could remain unmolested.

SKIPWITH ASKS HEARING IN ORDER TO VINDICATE KLAN

Declares He Will Convince Attorney-General That Organization Never Donned Black Masks.

11/13/23.

HEARING MAY BE SET FOR TODAY

Atlanta Georgia.

Exalted Cyclops Will Bare Operations of Ku Klux in Louisiana During Past Year.

Atlanta Constitution

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., January 12.—State's attorneys announced today that Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan, has requested a conference with Attorney General A. V. Coco and his assistants in connection with the hooded band atrocities in this parish.

At an early hour tonight the attorney general's staff had fixed no date for the conference. It is probable that it will be held tomorrow.

Reports were current here early today that Skipwith had made an open threat against the attorney general. Mr. Coco, in a statement to the Associated Press, absolutely denied that the report was true.

The conference requested by Skipwith is to allow him to lay before the attorney-general the various operations of the klan during the last year, he says in order that the organization could prove no black masks were ever worn by its members.

The following statement regarding the conference was issued by Attorney-General Coco:

"The information was conveyed to me this morning (Friday) through members of my staff that Captain J. K. Skipwith would be glad to have a conference with me. Not having had an opportunity of seeing him during the day, due to my presence in court, I made known to Judge Barnett tonight during the supper hour that I knew of no reason why I should not grant the request of Captain Skipwith.

"Judge Barnett suggested that the conference take place tomorrow (Saturday) and I told him it would be perfectly agreeable to me."

Judge Barnett is counsel for T. J. Burnett, the first man arrested in connection with the deaths of Daniel and Richard. Burnett is in a hospital in Shreveport recovering from an attack of pleurisy.

Bastrop, La., January 12.—Will R. Norsworthy, Morehouse parish planter, testifying today in the open hearing investigation of masked band depredations in Morehouse and the slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richard, victims of a black-hooded mob, credited Captain J. K. Skipwith, leader of the parish organization of the Ku Klux Klan, with having said Richard and Daniel "knew too much."

Norsworthy was testifying as to a conference he said was held with Skipwith in the latter's home at Vaughn, La. The discussion led up to the disappearance of Daniel and Richard.

"He made the remark that all of this trouble had occurred from two very sorry boys, very sorry characters, or something to that effect," Norseworthy testified, "and he says 'if the boys hadn't been so smart we intended to give them a trial in the courts for shooting at Dr. McKoin,' but he said 'they got so smart and had too much to say at the ball game and there at Jim Norseworthy's barbecue a the Bonibee,' that, he says 'the boys'—he didn't say 'we' that time—he said 'the boys decided they knew too much.' I believe those were the words he used—the best I can remember."

Norsworthy is a brother of J. T. Norsworthy, who testified that he was a former klansman and "captain" of the Morehouse chapter of the klan.

Was Not Klansman.

Will Norsworthy declared he was not a klansman. He explained that his conference was to ascertain the authenticity of a report that he had been accused of agreeing to accept $1,500 to kill Skipwith and Dr. McKoin.

"Skipwith told me it was lucky for me that I had friends in this country," Norsworthy said.

"I asked him about the kidnaping report. He said he had a letter that I had been hired by citizens of Mer Rouge to kill him and Dr. McKoin.

"Captain Skipwith said he had investigated and found the report untrue. He said that the time there were six men in Arkansas spotting me. I had just returned from a trip to Arkansas before the conference."

The witness continued that he had been informed by friends at Spencer, La., that "Dr. McKoin with guns and two friends were there looking for me."

"Did Skipwith say that the boys had killed themselves?" Howard Warren, special assistant attorney general, asked.

"No, he didn't," Norsworthy answered.

Declares Masks Used.

The testimony of Norsworthy with statement of Robert L. Dade and Kelly Dade that black masks were used by a klan band on a march to the village of Stampley early last summer and the testimony of Joseph Davenport, Mer Rouge merchant, were high lights of the day's proceedings.

Dade said he wore a black mask furnished him by Edward Ivy, a fellow kansman, when he was picked up in Mer Rouge and asked to accompany the band on a trip to Stamplev to investigate a report that a negro was operating a gambling house there where both white men and negroes gambled.

Dade said Dr. McKoin also was a member of the raiding party. McKoin, Dade said, was garbed in white.

Harp declared he wore a black mask also on the raid.

It was on this march that the party met Watt Daniel, W. C. Andrews and Harry Neelis who testified yesterday as to being "held up" by the klan band.

"Did they favor whipping the boys," Harp was asked with reference to Daniel, Andrews and Neelis.

"Dade, I and others did not favor it," said Harp, "but the majority did."

The three men were not whipped, but were lectured, according to previous testimony.

"Was Captain Skipwith there?" was the next question.

"I positively refuse to answer," said Harp.

Harp declined to name who appointed him on a committee made up of klansmen to deport Addie May Hamilton, but, he said, "the man who appointed me told me he would take the matter up with the proper authorities of the klan."

Davenport testified at the afternoon session of the hearing.

"My family has resided in the Mer Rouge district of Morehouse dating back for 117 years," Davenport asserted. "It lived in peace until the advent of the klan. We then had to get permission from high authorities of the klan to continue our residence in our old home town."

Davenport was called to testify because of conferences held by citizens of Mer Rouge, Bastrop and officials of the Ku Klux Klan relative to his brother, Hugo Davenport, having been accused of being an "anti-klan" leader.

Agreed to "Lay Off."

After a lengthy conference, Davenport said, Captain Skipwith had agreed to "lay off" the Davenport family, but insisted that three other citizens, A. C. Whipple, Tom Milner and Walter Campbell, of Mer Rouge, would have to get out of the state because of their anti-klan activities.

"Milner left before we could vouch for him," said the witness. "I vouched for Whipple and W. L. Pugh vouched for Campbell. We were held personally responsible by Captain Skipwith for these men."

Davenport said a series of conferences were held in an effort to restore peace and harmony in Morehouse.

"The conditions at the time were bordering on chaos," he said.

"We did not think our courts were functioning properly and we discussed because our children's lives were in danger whether to request Governor Parker to declare martial law."

Leon Davenport, brother of Joseph and Hugo Davenport, testified largely in corroboration of statements made by his brother.

Saw Auto Truck.

Conrad McDuffy, the last witness of the day, told of having seen a light automobile truck at 11:30 o'clock on the night of August 24—the date of the kidnaping of Daniel and Richard—returning from Lake La Fourche from which the headless and mutilated bodies of the two men recently were taken.

McDuffy, and Marshal Mott, who also has been summoned as a witness, was returning from Monroe at the time, according to McDuffy's testimony, and were within two miles of the lake when the truck, being driven by a man apparently wearing a black hood, passed them. Another automobile was following the truck, he said. McDuffy testified its occupants also were masked.

McDuffy said Mott, the following day, rode in his automobile with a man and his wife whose automobile had broken down on the Lake La Fourche road to Rayville.

"The automobilists asked Mott," the witness said, "what did they do with those men they had bound and gagged in the truck last night. Mott told them he did not know anything about it."

No announcement was made tonight as to what witnesses would be called tomorrow. It is anticipated that the hearing will continue for at least two weeks.

FORMER MAYOR OF MER ROUGE READY TO FACE HEARING

Governor Ritchie Refuses to Honor Requisition For Dr. M. B. McKoin

MORE TROOPS CALLED

Cavalry Outfit Ordered to Join Guardsmen Already at Bastrop

Montgomery Advertiser 1/8/23

(Associated Press)

BALTIMORE, MD., Jan. 2.—Governor Albert Ritchie today refused to recognize the requisition for Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, Louisiana, arrested here last Tuesday in connection with the Morehouse parish murders and kidnapping on the grounds that the affidavits were not made on actual knowledge of the alleged crimes.

The executive sent a telegram to Gov. Parker of Louisiana late today outlining his decision in the case. His message stated Dr. McKoin was now willing to return to Louisiana voluntarily, but could not do so until released by the court. Dr. McKoin was arrested for the murder of two men at the request of Gov. Parker and was remanded to jail pending extradition proceedings.

As soon as the Louisiana governor relases Dr. McKoin from the mured charge he will return to that state. The physician insisted however, that he return with Special Deputy Calhoun and Chief Detective James P. Glynn of New Orleans who arrived here Sunday with the extradition papers. Dr. McKoin stated he was ready to go back tomorrow.

The text of Gov. Ritchie's telegram to Gov. Parker follows:

State's Attorney Robert F. Leach who is representing Attorney General Coco, telegraphed the latter to urge Gov. Parker to release Dr. McKoin. It was learned tonight that Attorney Leach had advised Attorney General Coco a few days ago that unless the extradition papers were filed in proper form there was a possibility . Gov Ritchie would refuse to recognize them.

Up to a late hour tonight no word had been received from Gov. Parker in answer to Gov. Ritchie's message.

"After examining the requisition papers in the McKoin case, I do not think that they are sufficient for the season that the affidavits are made on information and belief and not by any one who has any personal knowledge of the alleged crime. Both the law and practice are clear in requiring this.

"If the case comes to trial before me my decision will accordingly be not to grant requisition at this time, but I will hold McKoin for a reasonable time in order to give Louisiana authorities the opportunity to submit competent affidavit. Dr. McKoin, while insisting on his extradition rights nevertheless advises me through his counsel that he is quite willing to return to Louisiana voluntarily, but he cannot do so until he is released by the court.

"He would like your deputy officers to accompany him back to Louisiana. Will you consent to his release so that BASTROP, LA., Jan. 2.—Louisiana's crack cavalry of Jennings will reach here tomorrow morning to reinforce the three companies of state troops now on duty here and at Mer Rouge in connection with the state's investigations into the death of two men, victims of a robed and masked mob.

While the order to entrain came suddenly, the movement was not a surprise, as it had been known since early last week that orders had been prepared for the calling out of two additional units. However, their identity was not known.

At this time there is a company of infantry at Mer Rouge detailed to maintain order where most of the folks are armed and many divided into hostile clans.

A machine gun and an infantry company are encamped here at the courthouse square, guarding the court house and the parish jail where one man is being held on a charge of murder.

The cavalry unit, which saw service overseas with the Rainbow division, may be used in rounding up those persons whom the state will charge with complicity in the August kidnaping and butchery of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards, Mer Rouge citizens. The roads at this time are almost impassable in many places because of the seasonal rains and cavalry would afford the most satisfactory means of communication.

The movement was not regarded here as being influenced by the kidnaping of Harold Teegerstrom, 19-year-old timekeeper of a carbon plant at Spyker, who was spirited away by unidentified men in the dead of the night Friday. Federal agents today were continuing their investigation of the incident, but officials felt the youth was safe and out of the state, having fled from the woods where he was held a captive. His importance as a witness at the hearing has not been disclosed either by the state or defense.

Persons interested in the open hearing set for Friday began to arrive in the city tonight. Two of the state's assistant attorney generals are expected to reach here tomorrow morning from New Orleans while the attorney general and others on his staff will be here Thursday.

The number of witnesses who will testify is not known, not even to the state. Those wishing to testify are privileged to make this known after the hearing starts. Some will be subpoenaed. It is believed here there will be several hundred witnesses. All incidents relating to the kidnaping of August as well as other mob action in the parish will be gone into, it has been stated. There was nothing to indicate that Governor Parker, who has been the controlling power behind the state's movements in the case, would come here during the hearing.

Ku Klux Klan investigators were secretly continuing their investigations to be in a position to make an early report to their chiefs regarding the merit of the charges that have been made that klansmen were responsible for the August outrage. The Morehouse klan has disclaimed all complicity in the affair and has announced it would welcome investigators.

MONROE, LA., Jan. 2.—Harold Teegerstrom, 19 years old, son of Victor Teegerstrom, of Monroe, was kidnaped by a party of men whose identity has not been established and made his escape and is now in hiding, according to a statement by Charles V. Teegerstrom, a brother, who is employed by a carbon manufacturing concern at Lamkin, Ouachita parish.

The young man said he was expecting to get in touch with his brother at any time, as he had received a message from him after the disappearance last Friday night at Spyker, saying that he was safe and that he would communicate with him later. The message was sent by a friend, according to Teegerstrom, who saw the young man last Sunday.

Teegerstrom said he was unable to substantiate a report that his brother had returned to Erie, Pennsylvania, the former home of the Teegerstroms, but expressed the belief that he had left Louisiana.

"I know that Harold was taken out by a number of men," said Teegerstrom, "because he sent word to me to that effect.

"He slipped away from them after he had been brow-beaten and bulldozed, scantily clad and nearly frozen by the cold, and he spent all of Friday night in an old shack. The next morning he secured a pair of shoes from a countryman and got his breakfast at a farm house. He continued in hiding all that day and slept at a farm house Saturday night and on Sunday he got in touch with Henry Jones, saw mill man of Morehouse parish, an old friend, and was made comfortable.

"He left some time Sunday and I have since not been able to locate him."

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Jan. 2.—Statements that Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards were tortured before being put to death following their kidnapping by a masked band near Mer Rouge on August 24, were borne out in official reports of Dr. John A. Lanford and Dr. George W. Duvalle, New Orleans pathologists, who examined the bodies of the two men after they had been blown from the bottom of Lake Lafourche in Morehouse parish by a heavy dynamite charge, according to a statement by Attorney General A. V. Coco, to whom the reports of the surgeon's were submitted today.

The attorney general declared the reports "greatly strengthened" the case of the state in the proposed prosecution of persons responsible for the deaths of Daniels and Richards and perhaps other outrages in Morehouse parish.

"The reports certainly strengthened our case against persons we will accuse of the deaths, in a material way," the attorney general said. "I cannot discuss the details of the reports, but they are gruesome to say the least."

Mr. Coco will take his entire staff of three assistants with him to the open hearing in Bastrop which begins Friday, it was stated.

Adjutant General Toombs today refused to discuss the military situation in Morehouse parish, further tha nto in Morehouse parish further than to say that the troops of cavalry stationed and should arrive there tomorrow morning.

TRY TO FIX BLAME FOR TWO KILLINGS

The Atlanta

Murder Hearing Is Sidetracked to Hear Witness Tell of Expeditions of Ku Klux.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., January 9.—Delving into the secrets of the Morehouse parish branch of the Ku Klux Klan in an effort to fix responsibility for the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, victims of black-hooded raiders, state's attorneys today produced testimony to show that floggings and deportations had been carried out under the direction of the leader of the parish klan and that black hoods were part of the regalia used by bands of klansmen on marauding expeditions.

Captain J. K. Skipwith, recognized leader of the klan organization in Morehouse. was named by J. F. Norseworthy, who described himself as a resigned klansman, as the order giver of the parish organization.

"White hoods and robes were for ceremony—to be worn inside the lodge room and on parades—but the black hood was for raiding parties," Norseworthy declared.

Norseworthy's testimony reached a climax when he identified a black hood with low hanging apron under the chin produced by A. V. Coco, state attorney-general, as the headgear worn by klansmen on raids.

The day's testimony carried the narratives for a time beyond the incidents of the actual kidnaping of the two men to expeditions on which Norseworthy said he was sent to lash and drive several men from Louisiana.

Was Klan "Captain."

Norseworthy declared himself rated as a former "captain" in the klan organization.

Following testimony by Norseworthy that the sheriff and other officials of the parish and even members of a former grand jury were members of the klan, the attorney-general remarked:

"I think this investigation has the support of the better element of the Ku Klux Klan. I would not hesitate to try this case by a jury composed of this class of klan members."

Half a dozen witnesses testified today—men who were taken prisoner or were present at the time Daniel and Richards were kidnaped.

All agreed that the kidnaping was at the hands of a black-hooded mob, armed with rifles, pistols and shotguns. None, however, could identify members of the band.

During the examination of two witnesses, C. C. "Tot" Davenport and Sidney White, attorneys for the state set up the question as to whether there had been any intimidation.

Dovenport admitted that during the noon recess of court he had been approached and spoken to by a man he knew in a "surly" manner. At the time Davenport was on his way to lunch in company wih the attorney-general and his assistants.

Davenport walked away with the man and did not keep his luncheon appointment.

Four Witnesses Heard.

In addition to Noresworthy, White and Davenport, four witnesses were heard today. The testimony of all of them with the exception of Norse worthy, related to incidents in connection with the holdup of the party of Mer Rouge citizens and the kidnaping of Daniel and Richards and three other men.

White, the last witness of the day, remembered only dimly incidents of the fateful August 24 last—when Daniel and Richards disappeared and three other men of a party of Mer Rouge citizens en route to their homes after attending a barbecue and baseball game here were kidnaped.

"Wasn't it a strange thing to see hooded men, well armed take away your companions and you not to feel alarmed," White was asked.

"Well, I had heard of the klan taking out fellows and whipping 'em; then letting them go."

"Therefore, you had no occasion to feel alarmed, you believed they were going to whip him and then turn him loose and there was nothing for you to worry about?"

"That's right."

Saw Truckload of Men.

White told of a conversation he had with Marshall Mott, a resident of the same community in which he lived, Oak Ridge, in which Mott told him he had seen a truck similar to the ones in which the men had been put into after they were kidnaped pass about 11:30 o'clock at night. The truck contained what appeared to be hooded men and the forms of two men lying on the floor.

"The truck was traveling in the direction of Lake La Fourche in which the mutilated and headless bodies of Daniel and Richards later were found.

"With your companion having been kidnaped and your conversation with Mott as to practically seeing the forms of two men being carted toward La Fourche why did you not report the matter to the authorities?" was asked of White.

"I don't know—I didn't think about it," he replied.

Development of other than the testimony at the open court hearing was an announcement that an anonymous telephone message had been received warning federal investigators conducting an inquiry in conjunction with state adjutants that a plot was forming to kidnap Addie May Hamilton, a young woman said to have been forced to leave Morehouse parish by men described as klansmen and now at her home near Mer Rouge waiting to be called as a witness in the present hearing.

A soldier guard was placed at the Hamilton home when intimation of the plotted kidnaping was received, but the troopers were removed today under orders of Adjutant-General L. A. Toombs, of the state national guard, civilian guards being substituted. General Toombs, in a formal statement, explained that authority for the posting of the soldiers had not been authorized.

General Toombs has taken the position that the task of policing the parish rested with the civil authorities and that the soldiers could not act in that capacity under present conditions.

DRAMA IN BASTROP

Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn 1-6-23

BY ROBERT LEE.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

BASTROP, La., Jan. 5.—Old "Cap Skipwith approaches the courthouse he doesn't enter the courtroom; stay downstairs. The courtroom is filling now. Enters Attorney General Adolphe Vernon Coco. Fine big figure is Adolphe. Strange name Coco. It causes wonder.

His grandfather's name was Baldinado. He sold coconuts down the Mississippi to the ships that came. Baldinado was too long for the brusque sailors. "Coco" is good enough, said they. And so Coco it remains.

The attorney general wears it with pride. It smacks of tradition. Tradition lives and obeys the laws. The blustering newcomer ignores laws Andrews, Davenport and Daniel are names of tradition here. They fell into a masked crew of executioners who had no pride.

With the attorney general came his staff, Seth Guion and Semmes Walmsley and former Senator Howard B. Warren. Now the judge takes his place. Frederick M. Odom is his name. Morehouse Parish approves him. In Mer Rouge as well as Bastrop he is regarded as a man of fairness. He is not frightened by talk and whispers. There is a rap of the sheriff's gavel. The great public hearing to investigate the Louisiana klan murders is under way.

Not Many Women Present.

In the front room sit Daniel, Davenport and Andrews. Only a few women press in. Up north women break all the usages to hear salacious and shocking recitations. In the south women adhere to quaint, old-fashioned conventions.

Now the hearing is on. The judge begins to speak. He addresses his remarks to Sheriff Carpenter as if he is unaware of the crowded courtroom. But it is significant that all in the room hear him. He has not prepared his remarks. This is apparent from the lack of arrangement. He speaks of the presence of the troops, goes to another subject, returns to the troops, disposes of another matter and comes back to the troops.

"You will see to it that no one stands in the courtroom," run his remarks to Sheriff Carpenter. "I think there is no cause to apprehend danger. But we are going to avoid any appearance of trouble by making everybody feel safe. Hereafter, Mr. Sheriff, I want you to see that every man who enters this room is disarmed. Have help with you in the lower corridor and see that no one enters with a weapon.

"I do not believe there is the slightest occasion for excitement. But to avoid the appearance of excitement I want you to arrest the first person found intoxicated.

Subject to the Orders.

"Inasmuch as the troops are here I want to make it plain that they are subject to the orders of this court; they are a branch of the civil authority. There has been no occasion to use troops, but I shall not hesitate to use them if the occasion does arise.

"There must be no tampering with witnesses. Every possible aid will be extended the state in the prosecution of this investigation of the alleged murders.

"I will not say that there will not be martial law in this parish, but I am sure that no such step will be taken so long as law and order prevail."

And then the judge says that "on the request of Attorney-General Coco, there will be an adjournment taken until 2 o'clock."

At 2 o'clock the courtroom is packed. Apparently some of the good Morehouse folk feel more at ease knowing that deputy sheriffs are searching for six shooters in the clothing of all who enter. Men are vigorously fanned as is the police phrase. When a deputy fans one he briskly claps his hands over the person, paying attention to places suited to the concealment of man killers.

Old Mr. Daniel returns. He gazes mildly about him but finds no chair. He is in slight embarrassment when Sheriff Carpenter fetches him inside the space reserved for lawyers, gives him a chair and makes him comfortable.

Buzz of Excitement.

Comes a buzz of excitement. Two New Orleans detectives arrived in Bastrop, with parts of the bodies of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards to be shown in evidence. This was not to be uncovered until later. It causes a concentration of thoughts on the grim business of the hearing.

The evidence concerning the post-mortem examination is to be given by Dr. Charles Duval and Dr. John Lanford. They have just entered and with them comes the news that they and their grisly box of evidence entered Bastrop from Mer Rouge their car drove within five feet of Capt. Skipwith. Old Skip looked up, glanced to the right as his custom, and then resumed his solemn composure.

J. C. Nettles is sworn, a court reporter, who is hard of hearing, uses a sound catching device at the witness box. Attorney-General Coco questions Mr. Nettles, who is a fisherman on Lake Fisherman. It was he who found the bodies of Daniel and Richards on Dec. 22, and by this discovery set klannishness by the ears.

"I had a line out in Lake La-Fourche," says Mr. Nettles, "with 9,000 hooks on it."

"Nine thousand," says Coco, in surprice. Nettles nods. Some fish line Mr. Nettles tells how he found the bank of Lake LaFourche blown away by dynamite, and how he found floating on the surface the bodies of the murdered men.

Recognized the Bodies.

"You say," says the attorney general, "that you recognized the bodies as those of Daniels and Richards."

"Yes, sir. I knew Daniels perfectly by the remnants of the clothing I saw him wear on the day of the murder. I knew Richards by the shape of the body. I knew Richards because I often had work done by him in the garage in Mer Rouge."

Mr. Nettles recites answer by answer, how he reported his ghastly discovery to Mayor Robert Dade of Mer Rouge and how the military officers came to take charge of the bodies.

"And the bank of the lake kept on caving in. The force of dynamite was so great that a lot of fish were killed. And the diver who came to look for evidence on the bottom of the lake was scared to go down because the bank might cave in."

La Fourche is from 60 to 90 feet straight down, say those who claim to know. Not much wonder a diver didn't want to go down.

Some one left a hack saw and a bunch of keys on the bank of La Fourche on the night of the dynamiting. Nettles tells how he found these articles.

Tell-Tale Hacksaw.

Under questioning by Mr. Guion he explains that a hacksaw is used by a mechanic. In this case it was used, says Mr. Nettles, to cut the chain that held a boat to its moorings. The mooring chain was cut on two nights, Mr. Nettles explains. The boat was used to float the dynamiters to the middle of the lake. Some questioning now on the method pursued by Mr. Nettles in baiting his 9 000 hooks; to make clear the record of the day on which the bodies were found. Nettles simpers a little and says if the gentlemen don't mind he'd rather not expose the secret of his bait. The point is not pressed

And the remainder of Mr. Nettles' testimony is devoted to the technicalities of his craft. Isaac Walton with 9,000 hooks.

One of the grins on the bait episode came from Adjutant General Toombs, military head of the state. His grin instantly disappears and the normal seriousness is resumed.

Mr. Nettles steps down and becomes the object of a dozen cameras. Capt. William Cooper of Monroe, commander of the troops in Mer Rouge, takes the stand.

Recovery of the Bodies.

Young fellow—pep—good looking, overseas man. He makes friends easily and brings troops into a civilian vicinity without arousing rancor. He speaks in a distinct and pleasing tone. It was Captain Cooper who directed the recovery of the bodies of Daniel and Richards.

"I bought coffin boxes from Mr. Davenport's store. I telephoned bottling houses in Monroe and borrowed a truck, and I had the coroner from Monroe come to Mer Rouge," says the captain. "Then I had the bodies placed in the Masonic Temple at Mer Rougue."

Thus the state sets about to establish the identities of the bodies found in wooded LaFourche. Old Captain Skipwith scoffs at the idea of such identification. Mr. Nettles has said he is sure of the identity. Captain Cooper now carries the story forward.

The state proposes to let nothing slip in the progress of the bodies from La Fourche to the grave, then it will go back and show the trip from the kidnaping on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge Road to the the depths of La Fourche.

ney general takes the stand. He carries a small package which he unwraps as he begins to answer questions.

He says he was present when the body of Daniel was examined. The he says, is a watch bearing the name J. L. Daniel.

It was taken from the small pocket of the vicitm's trousers.

He holds up the watch. All eyes are strained.

Old man Daniel gazes dully at the rusty, broken watch taken from the dead man.

Now comes a bit of descriptive that snaps everybody up with a jerk:

"The watch is badly broken," says Mr. Walmsley. "It appears to have been crushed flat. The hands indicate 10 o'clock."

Ten o'clock! Crushed—that seems to mean that death came to Daniel after five hours of slow torture. This suggestion seems to prick into the nerve centers of the spectators.

Mr. Walmsley holds up the pitiful remnants of a five dollar bill and a belt upon which is a buckle with the initials "F. W. D."

Another stare of curiosity.

"Old Man" Daniel.

"J. L. Daniel"—the clerk has called a name that invokes drama. The tired and sad-faced old man moves wearily to the witness stand.

"I gave Watt that watch," he says in a dry voice that jerks in a kind of abrupt protest against the burden he bears. "I bought it when Watt went to war. I said, 'Wat, here, take it; some day you might want it!'"

He saw he was rambling into something personal between him and Watt. He stopped short. Then to a question:

"He always wore it in the little pocket of his trousers. He never would wear it on his wrist. He always said it was too conspicuous."

Several men in the room nodded solemnly. Too conspicuous! The identifications are piling up. The doubt raised by Captain Skipwith that the identifications are a deliberate conspiracy of the state is being attacked through a chain of witnesses.

A. E. Farland, head of the squad of department of justice agents, which has worked up the evidence in the case, exhibits a piece of cloth taken from the body of Thomas Richards. He says John R. McIlwain, a Mer Rougue merchant, identified the cloth as that bought from him by Richards.

Now Mr. McIlwain looks at the faded bit of cloth and says it is the same he sold Richards. There is a good deal of coughing and clearing of the throats as this evidence is concluded. Court adjourns.

BASTROP'S CELEBRATED CASE.

New York Times 1-6-23

After months of investigation an open court hearing began yesterday at the little town of Bastrop, La., to determine whether indictments should be found for the murder of WATT DANIELS and T. F. RICHARDS. They were kidnapped last August by a band of hooded men in broad daylight and in the presence of many people. The procedure of the Louisiana code is not that of our Grand Jury, whose deliberations are secret. Judge ODOM, who presides in the court at Bastrop, has said that this remarkable hearing may last a month. A great many witnesses were summoned, but their testimony will be given in the shadow of an opinion of the vicinage that is strongly Ku Klux Klan. Governor PARKER has been quoted as saying that the deaths of DANIELS and RICHARDS were compassed by the Klan. Hence the belief that the organization is on trial. That most of the men of Bastrop and a minority of the men of Mer Rouge are members of the Klan has not been denied. If non-Klansmen were the murderers there was a very extraordinary state of affairs in Morehouse Parish, for the Klan was numerically strong enough to deal with a lawless minority and keep the peace.

Bastrop, with cavalry, infantry and machine gun units on guard by order of the Governor, is still under civil control. It is significant that the presiding Judge has issued a warning that witnesses must not be intimidated. All persons entering the court are searched for firearms. Adjt. Gen. TOOMBS has authority to declare martial law. The situation, then, is this: the troops are ready to police the community, and the Ku Klux Klan is interested in seeing that order is maintained, for the Sheriff himself is a member of the order, and the two suspect prisoners are also said to be Klansmen.

If there should be indictments the influence of the Klan will be used in behalf of the defendants. It will maintain that the masks and cowls of the Ku Klux Klan were used in the spiriting away and the murder of DANIELS and RICHARDS by criminals for whom the order is not responsible. A conviction of any defendants as Klansmen would be a damaging blow to this secret society. Hence the proceedings at Bastrop will have the people of the whole country as observers.

Told Klan Secrets; Found Shot Dead

Evidence Fails to Support Theory That Wealthy Man Killed Self.

CLARKEBURG, W. Va., April 7.—Secrets of the Ku Klux Klan, which he is said to have divulged, are held responsible for the death of Kent W. Ogden, wealthy oil producer of Wallace, an oil town twelve miles north of here, and a sweeping investigation of the activities of the Klan in this section is to be made by Prosecuting Attorney Morris of Harrison County. 4-11-23

Notes in the possession of the District Attorney, the contents of which have not been divulged, will form the basis of the inquiry.

Ogden was found shot to death on the floor of one of his derricks late last Tuesday. A bullet had passed through his body and a revolver lay at his side.

The suicide theory was at once adopted by authorities, but developments, including the failure of the authorities to find the bullet, which, passing through the man's body, must have imbedded itself in the flooring of the derrick, has led to the theory that the oil operator was murdered and some point distant from the derrick and the body carried there by the killers.

Officials of the Wallace Klan in statements to local newspapers have denied emphatically that any activities planned by the Klan were of a criminal nature, but a notebook found in the dead man's clothing contained notations which contradict these assertions. The notebook was turned over to Prosecuting Attorney Morris, who says he will make public the contents after thoroughly investigating. A special Grand Jury may be empanel.

The father has maintained that his son committed suicide as the result of worry over what the consequences of his revealing secrets of the Klan might be, but other members of the family are inclined to the theory that he was murdered.

Prominent Klansmen have also voiced the theory that Ogden was murdered, but scoff at the idea that he was a victim of Klan vengeance.

Ku Kluxism in the Schools

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NATION:

SIR: Through the influence of the Ku Klux, Catholic teachers in the Clarksburg (West Virginia) Independent School District and the adjacent Coal District schools are being refused positions for next year. Among those dismissed is a Miss ——, an efficient principal at Tiessing. She has been in the service of the district for a number of years, but the board of directors of Coal District suddenly finds her religion is a barrier. Another to be dismissed is Miss ——, librarian of Victory high school, Coal District. A third whose position is in danger (I do not yet know whether she was reappointed) is Miss ——, teacher of French in Victory high school. These splendid women, and others as well, are slated for dismissal. They are Catholics and the Ku Klux is in the saddle.

Ku Klux Klan Active Against Union Miners

Secretary World War Veterans
(For The Federated Press)

FAIRMONT, W. Va.—At Hutchinson, W. Va. a coal camp, the Ku Klux Klan is threatening all colored and foreign born miners that if they cease work they will be immediately deported. The klan's action follows effort on the part of the operators to crush the miners' protest over unsanitary conditions of the town and the difficulty of securing medical attention though the union pays a large monthly fee for such care.

At Middleton, W. Va., and at Shinnston, men recently have been taken out and beaten by masked men. Investigation proves that the victims had spoken in favor of unions. In some cases people in receipt of Klan threats, who live in towns where there is no post of the World War Veterans, dare not reveal their names. The renewed activity of the klan is inspired by Hopkins, national lecturer of the klan, who is now touring this state.

The World War Veterans' organization in the coal fields was almost put out of existence during the big strike last year. Today old posts are getting back in line and new ones are being formed. Every post looks forward to the day when the state will act against the klan menace, and persons guilty of crimes committed under the cover of its hood will be dealt with by the courts.

Klan Gift Is Returned With Thanks

Chicago Herald

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—Organizations in this city are having a grand old time accepting and rejecting gifts from the Ku Klux Klan. The Salvation Army recently accepted a gift of $50 from the notorious secret order. At almost the same time Bascom B. Clarke, treasurer of the Volunteers of America returned two gifts totaling $75 that the Klan had sent to the Volunteers.

The Klan, in a letter to Mr. Clarke, declared that the public would some day come to realize what a fine thing an organization like theirs was for the community. The letter read that the Klan meant nothing but what was good for the city, state and nation. Work of the Volunteers of America was complimented.

When he returned the money, Mr. Clarke also wrote a letter. He sent it to the organization through the medium of the Wisconsin State Jorunal. In his letter Mr. Clarke regretted that because of the failure of Klan officials to make heir identity or whereabouts known he was unable to get in touch with them. He said that he did not want any money from anybody that was afraid to come out in the open, or who made their gifts so that they might be advertised before the public.

"The pharisaical way in which you do your alms, to be published in the press for advertising, prohibits me as treasurer of the Volunteers of America from accepting your donation," he wrote.

15,000 KLANSMEN HEAR ADDRESS BY COL. SIMMONS

Atlanta

Racine, Wis., July 29.—More than 15,000 persons yesterday and last night assembled at Klan Park, near here, for the annual midwest reunion of the Ku Klux Klan. Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin were the states represented, with some klansmen coming from as far as Indianapolis and Kokomo, Ind. Constitution

During the day the crowd was entertained with a program of sports, but the principal features came with sunset when the American flag was lowered to the strains of "America." This was followed by a display of fireworks, which preceded the address of Colonel William J. Simmons, of Atlanta, founder of the order. 30/23

"Three years ago we had 5,000 members," he declared. "Then they launched a campaign to drive us out of existence, and today we have five million members."

The address was followed by a parade of the robed klansmen and the initiation of hundreds of novitiates.

Home of White Minister Fired, Colored Pastor Told To Leave At Once

Md; Afro American 3/23/23.

Upperville, Va., March 23.—Local branch of the Ku Klux Klan alleged to have fired the parsonage of Rev. Harry U. Marsh, white, M. E. pastor, and attempted to assassinate him, also sent a letter to Rev. George Holland, also a colored M. E. minister telling him to leave at once.

Rev. Holland left town Saturday, and it is not known whether he is gone for good or only to attend the conference now in session at Lynchburg.

The letter, mailed at Middleburg postoffice, read:

"Nigger preacher Holland, I was told that you said Sunday night that white folks take off their hats to you. You ugly black ignorant jackleg preacher, the idea of you thinking such a thing. We will take your head off instead of taking our hats off to you. You and that white Methodist preacher has too much mouth. You always slurring somebody in your pulpit. We are going to shoot you just like we shot up him and his car. If you don't leave Upperville soon we are going to kill you. You had better not come to Middleburg any more. If you do we will shoot you. You long-mouthed ignorant black nigger Jackleg preacher. We saw you at the revival. You acted like a monkey and a baboon when you were shouting. We will kill you the next time we see you.

KU KLUX PLACES WARNING IN FRONT OF CHURCH

The Norfolk Journal & Guide 7/30/23

NORFOLK, Va.—"Gamblers, beware—all unlawfulness must cease."

This sign, in blazing letters, five feet high, surmounted by a fiery cross seven feet in height with the letters "K. K. K." at the bottom, was placed in front of the West Norfolk Baptist Church while the Civil League was in session last night, and as members emerged, four men in an automobile dashed away. The sign quickly burned itself out and the cross was removed by colored residents of the neighborhood, who were greatly agitated and soon made for their homes.

ACTION AGAINST KLAN DISMISSED

Richmond, Va., June 7.—Settlement of the controversy between the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, members of the local organization and the state was effected today by a compromise which resulted in the dissolution of an injunction granted by Judge Ernest H. Wells, of Hustings court, last October restraining the Klan from holding meetings or otherwise operating in Virginia. The injunction was based on the failure of the klan to comply with the state corporation laws.

The alleged refusal of the local chapter to turn over to the national organization certain funds and properties precipitated the court fight and the national body entered suit against the local organization. The Richmond klan countered with the declaration that the parent body had not complied with the state law requiring registration with the state corporation commission. The state intervened at this point and the klan was fined $50 for its failure to register.

At the hearing today it developed that the klan had complied with the state corporation laws and the injunction was dissolved. The suit against the local klan for prosecution of its funds and paraphernalia was dismissed by Judge Wells when the contesting factions reached an agreement that members of the local chapter may withdraw from the klan, exchanging their robes and other paraphernalia for the refund of assessments levied by the national organization.

Virginia Commission Puts Nominal Fine On Ku Klux Chapter

The Courier 4/14/23

Richmond, Va., April 13.—Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, incorporated under the laws of Georgia, was fined $50 by the Virginia corporation commission today for doing business in this state without authority of the commission. The fine was made nominal, it was stated, because the violation was "technical and unintentional." The commission acted on complaint of former local members of the klan after the Richmond chapter withdrew from the parent organization.

For a Structure of Racial Peace

The Norfolk Journal & Guide 8-11-23

From Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News.

Kluckerism, feud, murders, lynchings and all sorts of fantastic villainies are so frequent and so spectacular in the south that too often they conceal from view the fact that the forces of order and decency also are quietly marshaling. Little attention has been paid by the public to the meeting in Asheville of the Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation; yet the work that was reported at that meeting offers the most promising road to escape from the horrors that pessimists foresee.

The meeting of this commission is the standing negation of the assumption that every point of contact between the races holds the menace of friction. It is proof of the possibility of calm and reasonable consideration of their joint problems by intelligent southern white men and intelligent souther Negroes.

Hooded Figures Attempt To Assault Prosperous Old Farmer In Virginia. Son Comes To Rescue.

St. Louis, Mo. 9/21/23

Associated Negro Press.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 12.—Hearing his father's screams at 10:30 o'clock at night and rushing to the front door of his home with gun in hand and firing six shots at a group of hooded figures stalking around his father's home, W. F. Trent, son of W. B. Trent, 60 years old, a prominent and prosperous Colored farmer of Portsmouth, saved the elder Trent from assault and probable murder last Tuesday night. 9-14-23

The son with his family lives next door to his father who resides about two miles from the city near the Seaboard Air Line Railroad crossing on a valuable and fertile truck farm owned by him. He is also owner of a fine stock farm of horses and pigs.

According to a story told by the elder Trent he heard rappings on his door about 10:30 o'clock after he had gone to bed. When he went to the door three white men wearing masks partly covering their faces seized him and dragged him towards three automobiles parked in his yard. He screamed and one of the band hollered, "kill him." About forty more men wearing the regalia of the invisible empire were stalking around the yard and watching the scuffle. His son heard the commotion; keeping a cool head, he seized the shot gun, went to the door and let'er go six times. He stated that he saw one of the men limping out of the yard.

The nigh riders scurried for safety when the gun belched a hail of hot pellets. They dropepd their victim fled from the yard and returned the fire with revolvers as they sped down the dirt road. A short distance from the scene, one of the cars was ditched, but the occupants took no time to get it out, abandoning the car and fleeing with the others.

County officers arrived upon a telephone call. The gang had gotten completely out of sight and neighbors who had become aroused thru the excitement were shooting promiscously about the scene. The police confiscated the abandoned car and upon a search of it, found two long white robes and two hood caps. The following morning a white man called at the jail for the car and reported that it had been stolen. The police failed to put him under arrest for questioning, simpy holding the machine for further investigation.

Farmer Trent said he recognized one of the men as a man whom he has known since the kidnapper was a little boy. He refused to divulge the name of the member of the party, stating that the had put the matters in the hands of his attorney. Mr. Trent professed ignorance of any reason why any one should attack him.

Home of Rich Virginia Man Is Attacked

Pittsburgh Courier

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 11—Mystery surrounds the happenings in and around the home of W. B. Trant, wealthy colored man here, whose home was threatened by attackers last Thursday night.

Several shots were fired into Trant's home shortly before 12 o'clock and about an hour later, a cottage nearby was discovered in flames and was burned to the ground, police were told.

Kidnapping Attempt Fails

About a month ago, an attempt was made by visitors who called at Trant's home about 11:30 o'clock at night, to take him away, but they were repulsed in their efforts by Trant's son, who opened fire with a shotgun when he went to his father's assistance on hearing his cries for aid. His assailants escaped.

The shooting last week, according to the county authorities was done with an automatic revolver. It is believed that jealousy over Trant's wealth caused the dastardly attack. After several bullets had been fired into the home, things quieted down. About an hour later, however Trant and his son said they heard what seemed to them to be an explosion close by. They crouched on the floor of their home, as more bullets were pumped at the house. Suddenly, they saw the neighborhood light up, and discovered that a cottage nearby was ablaze. 10-13-23

Trant Refuses to Talk

The county authorities are not hopeful of being able to do much toward tracing those responsible for the shooting up of Trant's home. Trant, himself, showed little disposition to talk, they said, when the first attack was made on him.

BLACK KU KLUX KLAN APPEARS IN ROANOKE

St. Louis Clarion 10-4-23

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 6— What police declare resemble a black Ku Klux Klan has appeared in Roanoke One night last week, says Capt. Dan Horgan of the sanitary department, about twenty-five persons wearing regalia resembling that of the Klan appeared before him and protested against certain rulings he had made with regard to sanitary conditions affecting colored people. Horgan became panic-stricken at the sight and turned in a police alarm. He said the "Klansmen" fled before the police arrived.

75,000 KLANSMEN GATHER IN DALLAS TO IMPRESS NATION

But the Kloncilium Gets Only a Third of the Huge Number Summoned.

OBSERVERS SEE IT LOSING

Disintegration Has Already Set In, and Klan's Sway Is Lost, They Say.

EVANS READS ANATHEMAS

He Declares the Negro, Jew and Catholic Dangerous, and Would Bar Immigrants.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 24.—This, the second city of Texas, witnessed today the culmination of the long planned effort of the Ku Klux Klan to demonstrate that so far the Southwestern part of the United States is concerned the Klan is supreme. The hooded organization had published far and wide that between 200,000 and 250,000 masked men from Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and other States of the West and Southwest would invade Dallas, and that when the sun had set the absolute dominance of the Ku Klux Klan in this great section of the country could no longer be denied.

Hiram W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of all the Klans, accompanied by his staff of Grand Dragons, Kokards, Klabees, and others, arrived in state last night, and dawn found this Klan-dominated city ready to receive the masked thousands from near and far.

But a cog had slipped somewhere, and tonight it is admitted even by the Kloncilium that if the Klansmen now in Dallas were counted the total would not exceed 75,000. Leading citizens, not members of the Klan, say it is a sure sign that the crest of the Klan flood has passed and that Texas, where its control is undisputed, is at last ready to challenge the rule of the hooded knights.

"The spasm is passing and today proves it," said a Texan whose name is a household word, to THE TIMES correspondent tonight.

However, the day has been one Dallas will not soon forget. While the vast horde which the rulers of the Klan had boasted would concentrate in the city did not materialize, the fact remains that more Klansmen than ever before assembled at one time in any part of the South are tonight in Dallas. They are everywhere. There are thousands in hood and robe, and other thousands in ordinary civilian garb, their membership in the Klan disclosed by the little red "100 per cent. American" buttons and red ribbons with the number of the particular Klan to which they owe allegiance.

The Dragons, Klabees, Cyclopses and other high dignitaries of the organization are conspicuous in hotel lobbies, resplendant in robes of gold, royal purple or scarlet, the gorgeousness of the costume being in keeping with the rank of the wearer.

Blasts Catholics, Jews and Negroes.

The big feature of the day was the appearance at the State Fair Grounds this afternoon of the Imperial Wizard, who delivered a speech, the preparation of which is said to have taken five months. It was the official blast of the Klan, the first detailed statement by the Kloncilium of the things the masked horde stands for, a pronouncement in which Jews, Roman Catholics and negroes were grouped together as men and women incapable of attaining the "100 per cent. American standard" —people, the Wizard declared, who can never measure up to what he described as the Anglo-Saxon standard of patriotism.

Evans spoke to about 10,000 people, most of whom were members of the Klan. A loud-speaking apparatus had been installed to carry his words to all parts of the fair grounds.

Ku Klux brass bands were on hand to generate enthusiasm and "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the old hymn which the Klan has appropriated, was dinned into the ears of the thousands. The Wizard appeared on schedule time, which was 1 o'clock. He is a big man, with a rotund, clean shaven face. His mouth is large and he is always smiling. Incidentally he has a habit of waving his hand at the crowds in a kingly sort of fashion. On the stand with him were the chief officials of the Kloncilium. They were silent and undemonstrative, as benefitted their positions as subordinates to the Imperial Wizard.

George K. Butcher, the Cyclops of Dallas, introduced the Wizard. He lauded Evans as about the most 100 per cent. American of all the 100 per cent. Americans in the United States. Incidentally, Butcher referred to the impeachment of Governor Walton of Oklahoma, which he said was a great Klan victory. Then, with a deep bow, he presented the Imperial Wizard.

Very slowly, and with a broad smile, the Wizard advanced to the front of the stand. In his hand was a morrocco bound case containing the manuscript of his speech. Before his elevation to the "throne" in Atlanta Evans was a dentist in Dallas. It was to be expected, therefore, that he would be accorded a great demonstration. But again something went wrong—a moment or two of cheering and handclapping. That was all. When he read that part of his speech in which he referred to the negroes there was a real outburst. But his references to the Jews and Catholics received only scattering applause.

The Wizard's Speech.

"Without being unkind or unjust," he said, "we can say that there are in New York City about two and one-tenth times as many unassimilable foreigners as native Americans, while the better inferior aliens, added together, reach a total almost three and one-half times that of the American stock.

"If this nation is to continue its charted course, and attain its destiny, there will have to be a harmonious assimilation of each and every alien element in complete accordance with these essential standards I have laid down. Such assimilation implies a common merging, which, to be successful, must bring about true social and political equality.

"It means intermarriage upon a basis of physical, mental and moral equality, with no menacing threat of uneugenic consequences to succeeding generations.

"It must mean, in a culminating sense, a spiritual wedding with the State, a kind and character of citizenship in which no higher temporal loyalty shall exist, or be permitted to exist.

"With respect to present and future immigration, this problem of the melting pot is made many times more difficult by reason of the fact that we already have at least three powerful and numerous elements that do now, and forever will, defy every fundamental requirement of assimilation. They cannot be merged because of insurmountable social, racial and religious barriers, they will always stand apart from our own people.

"First, there is the negro, ten and a half million in number, about a tenth of the whole population. Tehy have not, they cannot, attain the Anglo-Saxon level. Both biology and anthropology prove it, and the experience of centuries confirms that conclusion. The low mentality of savage ancestors, of jungle environment, is inherent in the blood stream of the colored race in America. No new environment can more than superficially overcome this age-old hereditary handicap.

"In fact, with the present ever-increasing exodus from country to city, it is an undoubted fact that another generation will be marked by retrogression. The records, authoritative and unemotionally scientific, show the negro to be specially susceptible to tuberculosis and alarmingly itiavted by enereal infections. Even though these eugenic considerations did not forbid such bodily merging, there could never be intermarriage between whites and blacks without God's curse upon our civilization.

The Jew "Unblendable."

"Another absolutely unbelndable element is the Jew. For ages, ever since his ejection from Judea, he has been a wanderer upon the face of the earth. In speaking of him there is never a reference to the country whence he came, because, throughout the centuries, there has been no country he would or could call his home. Into his life has come no national attachment. oT him patriotism, as the Anglo-Saxon feels it, is impossible.

"Persecution has been his lot. With America, I am happy to say, the most tolerant of all the lands in which he has lived, an attitude reflected in the fact that already a fifth of the Jewish race is in this country. I would prefer to believe that all of this unceasing persecution has been unmerited, but whether or not the Jew himself is largely to blame, its indelible impress is there, marked by generation after generation of unchanging and unchangeable racial characteristics.

"They are a people apart from all other peoples. They always will be. On the one side are their religious ceremonies, their social customs, their aversion to the Gentile, all as inflexible as fate; on the other, a racial and religious antipathy, unrelenting and unabating since the cross of Calvary. This should not be; it is.

"Would you have your daughter marry a Jew, were we willing? That could not solve the problem of assimilation, because the Jew would stand out against it. A merging through intermarriage can never be brought abour. Were the melting pot to burn hundreds and hundreds of years, Jew and Gentile would each emerge as he is today. Only the Gentile would have been affected by many other elements and the Jew would not.

"As a race, the Jews are law abiding. They are of physically wholesome stock, for the most ppart untainted by immoralities among t hemselves. They are mentally alert. They are a family people, reverently and eugenically responsive to God's laws in the home. But their homes are not American, but Jewish homes, into which we cannot go and from which they will never emerge for a real intermingling with America.

"Not only because of the forbidden intermarriage, but also in an actual sense, is the Jew unmergable. By every patriotic test, he is an alien and unassimilable. Not in a thousand years of continuous residence would he form basic attachments comparable to those the older type of immigrant would form within a year. The evil influence of persecutions is upon him. It is as though he was here today and might be forced to flee tomorrow. He does not tie himself to the land. Jews owning farms are almost negligible; and it is largely only the Hebrew bankers and long established merchants that have their own homes.

"Rarely do you find him engaged even in the binding ties of constructive labor. Although charitable with each other, as a class the Jews are mercenary minded, money mad. To get, to have and to hold,' is their materialistic motto, and always, always do you find them seeking some tangible, quickly convertible, easily movable, kind of wealth which is in no vital way related to and dependent upon social and national values.

"The Catholic a Oanger."

"I must speak now of a third element among our people whose assimilation is impossible without the gravest danger to our institutions.

"No nation can long endure that permits a higher temporal allegiance than to its own Government. Throughout all history, medieval and modern, every churchly encroachment upon school and State, every attempt at temporal power by a religious organization, has been attended by sinister results both to church and State. A divided allegiance is the deadliest, most menacing, of national dangers.

"The hierachies of Roman and Greek Catholicism violate that principle. They demand, and increasingly seek to exercise, dominion outside the spiritual. To them the presidence at Washington is subordinate to the priesthood in Rome. The parochial school alone is sufficient proof of a divided allegiance, a separatist instinct. They demand that our future citizens be trained, not in public schools, but under the control and influence of a priesthood that teaches supreme loyalty to a religious oligarchy that is not even of American domicile.

"I make no attempt to show cause and effect. In this connection you may make your own deductions, but do you realize, my friends, that the illiteracy of Europe is practically confined to Catholic countries?

"In Italy, 37 per cent. of the population over ten years of age are without education and 38.7 per cent. of all marriages are by illiterates. Spain has 58.7 per cent. of illiterates; Portugal, 68.9 per cent.

"Consider the Greek Catholic countries and the comparison with our own standards is even more alarming. Greek illiteracy is 57.2 per cent.; that of Serbia, 78.9; while in Bulgaria and Rumania more than 60 in every hundred are illiterate.

"Is it unfair to suggest that catholicism, if not acually desiring that condition, thrives upon ignorance?

"Since 1900 millions of Catholics from such sources have poured into America. They are coming now, under the quota law, in predominating numbers."

Tonight the Klan is holding a public initiation at the race track. It is announced that about 5,000 men will take the oath while 2,000 women are to be initiated into the women's branch of the order.

At 11 P. M. the klansmen parade through the city. During the parade all traffic stops by order of the authorities.

PRESS WHIPPING CASE

Officials Of Dallas Investigating Case Of Westbrook.

DALLAS, TEXAS, Nov. 2.—City and county officials pressed investigation this evening into the whipping of Joe Westbrook in the Trinity river bottom and kidnapping of Lon Johnson last night.

The Dallas county grand jury today called in special session, was charged by Judge Felix Robertson to bring the floggers to trial.

The Dallas chapter of the Ku Klux Klan this evening posted a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the whipping party who kidnapped the two men, D. Van Winkle, cyclops, announced.

FLOGGINGS STOPPED BY TEXAS VIGILANTES

The Daily News 10-4-23

Threaten to Go Unmasked and Retaliate on Leaders of Klan, Is Story

Chicago, Ill.

BY PAUL R. LEACH.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 4.—There have been no masked floggings or other outrages by masked men in Dallas county for a year. There were several such affairs before the beginning of this year. There is a reason, according to a story that was told to me to-day by a prominent Dallas county attorney, and the events surrounding that reason are leading, he said, to the formation of a state-wide "vigilante" society to oppose the Ku-Klux klan. The idea may spread beyond the wide expanses of Texas.

Along about Jan. 1 of this year a party of half a dozen men of Dallas every one of them prominent here every one of them Texans by birth and tradition, and every one of them around the 6-foot, 200-pound gauge, called on the head officers of the knights of the Ku-Klux klan in Dallas.

"You Know Us" Opens Parley

"You know us" the spokesman opened the parley, "and you know our reputations, and you know that we stick to our word, do what we say we will do?"

The klan officer admitted that he did.

"Very well, then," the spokesman of the visiting party went on, "we are white men with the hearts and souls of white men. We believe that when it comes time for law to be taken in the hands of individuals that Anglo-Saxon men go in the broad of the day, with their faces known to the world, and do that which they believe necessary to be done. There have been numerous outrages committed in this county against individuals by masked men.

"The accusation has been made to the effect that members of the Ku-Klux klan are responsible for those outrages, and that the persons whipped or otherwise punished had it coming to them.

"Now, we are not capable of judging that side of the case. We do not say that the Ku-Klux klan was responsible, or that klansmen were responsible. We are not informed well enough as to that. As to whether the persons punished by mobs of masked men had it coming to them, that is another question.

Threat Ends Texas Whippings.

"This is an organized community, with constituted law officers and courts for the punishment of law violators. We believe that such agencies are legally constituted by the laws of this country of ours, and this state of Texas to apprehend and punish law-breakers.

"If"—the air became tense and ominous—"there are any more such parties at night by masked men, we are coming to you in broad daylight without masks, and do unto you likewise! Good day, sir!"

There have been no whippings by masked mobs in Dallas county since that day.

There is another story that is told down here, somewhat similar in vein. A young man, not a klan member, was courting a Texas girl of good family. A rival was said to be a klansman, and he was running second in the race for the girl's hand.

One day a warning was received by the young man who seemed uppermost in the girl's affections. It directed that he stay away from the young woman her home and her presence, on the pain of severe penalty. It was signed with the dread triple "K."

Father Puts Quietus on Klan.

Whether the warning was sent by an organization or by an individual on his own account, was not reasoned fully by the young man, who took the warning note to his father. This father was an old Texan, who ranged cattle in the days when men stood on their own feet or sat their own saddles and told the world where it could go if it didn't like what those particular men were doing and the way they were doing it.

The father hesitated not a bit. He took the warning note to the head officer of the klan in Dallas and gave a similar warning to that delivered by the committee of promineht citizens.

"If anything happens to my boy," said the Texan father, "I'm coming after you. And, sir, by the Gods, I'll get you."

A few months later the young man was married, and it is presumed that they will live happily ever after.

TEXAS JURY FINDS KLANSMAN GUILTY IN FLOGGING CASE

The Times-Picayune

Alleged Leader of Band to Serve Sentence of Two Years.

New Orleans, La. 10-13-23

Amarillo, Tex., Oct. 12.—T. W. Sanford, alleged Ku Klux Klansman, was found guilty in district court of a charge of white capping in connection with the recent flogging of E. T. McDonald here and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Defense counsel immediately filed a motion for a new trial.

The state charged that Stanford was the leader of a band of masked men who ordered McDonald to leave Amarillo before flogging him.

The verdict of guilty was based on the third count of the indictment against Stanford, the jury reported. This count involved the wearing of alleged Ku Klux Klan robes by the men, which the jury held constituted a threat within itself. The men wore klan robes the night they ordered him to leave the city, McDonald testified.

Judge Bishop had instructed the jury to return a verdict of guilty if, in their opinion, the wearing of such regalia constituted a threat.

EVANS GIVES OUTLINE OF KU KLUX POLICIES

Atlanta Constitution

Dallas, Texas, October 24.—The Ku Klux Klan's attitude against negroes, Jews and Catholics was explained by Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in a speech here otday, announced as outlining "fully for the first time the policies of the Ku Klux Klan regarding restriction of immigration and its program in this respect." 23-23

Dr. Evans recommended that the United States make its own selection of the class of immigrants wanted.

"Our cause is true Americanism," Dr. Evans declared. "Our destiny is the common welfare, upon a plane high above any mankind has ever known. I recognize fully the problems of this generation. But the time has come to look far beyond to the greater American problem of our composite people. That is the bedrock of every national danger, and hope.

"The streams of population that have been and are pouring in upon us are ages old in racial character and capacity. We are the melting pot. Into it has been poured almost promiscuously every dross ingredient that the earth produces, the good and the bad. Out of it must come, in the end, our success or failure as a republic. The immigration stream is monthly more and more inferior, as I shall show by indisputable facts. Within the year congress must enact a new immigration law.

Anglo-Saxon Stock.

"The present population is much less than half, perhaps little more than a third, of native Anglo-Saxon stock. You have in this country today illiterates to the almost unbelievable number of 4,931,905 and mentally and physically diseased persons totalling more than 5,000,000. We have not more than 35,000,000 100 per cent Americans.

"There is no hatred in my heart for any individual, nationality or race. In the beginning of the national life, our policy was rightly that of the open door. Out of that grew the America of the last generation—prosperous and proud, pure and patriotic. Then suddenly the character of our immigration changed.

The problem of assimilation can not be measured by the 58,000,000 of native whites as against the 47,000,000 of alien and colored stock. The south is almost untouched by immigration. It is the east, the north and west that have received the inundation.

"The south, with its negro problem, and the east, with its hordes of inferior immigrants, are largely responsible for much of the political prostitution that is now a curse to our country.

"We already have at least three powerful and numerous elements that do not, and forever will, defy every fundamental requirement of assimilation.

"First there is the negro—10,500,000. They have not, they can not attain the Anglo-Saxon level. Both biology and anthropology prove it. The low mentality of savage ancestors is inherent in the blood stream of the colored race in America. No new environment can more than superficially overcome this age-old hereditary handicap. With the ever-increasing exodus from country to city it is an undoubted fact that another generation will be marked by retrograde session.

Attack on Jew.

Another absolutely unblendable element is the jew. To him, patriotism as the Anglo-Saxon fels it, is impossible. Already a fifth of the Jewish race is in this country. They are people apart from all other peoples. Were the melting pot to burn hundreds of years, Jew and Gentile would each emerge as he is today, only the Gentile would have been affected by many other elements and the Jew would not. As a race, the Jews are law abiding. They are of physically wholesome stock. They are mentally alert. They are a family people, but their homes are not American, but Jewish homes, into which we cannot go and from which they will never emerge for a real intermingling with America.

"No nation can long endure that permits a higher temporal allegiance than to its own government. The hierarchies of Roman and Greek catholicism isolate that principle. To them the presidency at Washington is subordinate to the priesthood at Rome. The parochial school alone is sufficient proof of a divided allegiance, a separatist institute.

"Do you realize that the illiteracy of Europe is practically confined to catholic countries?

"Congress should at the earliest moment enact two emergency measures.

"Stop all immigration with exceptions applying only to separated families and while the gates are closed, institute a thorough governmental investigation into every phase of alienism, upon which to base a permanent immigration policy."

EVANS SUED BY EX-GOBLIN.

KLAN DAY DRAWS 300,000 PERSONS AT TEXAS FAIR

Thirty Thousand of Order Hear Evans Discuss Principles.

The Times-Picayune

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 24.—Klan Day at the state fair of Texas today drew more than 300,000 persons, according to Secretary Stratton and tonight more visitors were pouring through the gates to the vast grounds where a public initiation was planned.

Upward of 30,000 klansmen from all parts of the Southwest and some from almost every realm, arrived on special trains this morning, George K. Butcher, Dallas Klan No. 66, general chairman, reported.

Twenty-one special trains of klansmen arrived before noon. The klansmen swarmed around the band shell shortly after noon to hear Dr. H. W. Evans of Atlanta, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan speak on the klan policies on immigration.

Immigration is the outstanding problem confronting the United States today besides which all other national difficulties were trivial, Dr. Evans declared. To determine and apply a just and lasting remedy is the supreme task of all true Americans and the ultimate objective of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, he said. 10-25-23

Preceding Dr. Evans' speech the only formal event on the program was the dedication of Hope Cottage, home for foundlings.

"So far as I know this is the only institution of its kind erected solely for the purpose of caring for the helpless babies that have come into the world unbidden," J. D. Van Winkle, exalted cyclops of the Dallas klan, presiding over the dedication, declared.

"Instead of indulging in tar and feather parties, as our enemies have accused us of doing, we have said nothing and built Hope Cottage," he said, "and by a little attention of the election precincts a short time ago, we gave Dallas the best city and county administration we have ever had."

Klansmen of Oklahoma were given a hearty hand when they arrived at the band shell. Wearers of the uniform of the klan with masks rolled back, were interspersed through the crowds.

Following Dr. Evans' address, athletic events were held in the stadium and in the evening before the grandstand fireworks, and a parade of klansmen and klan women in uniform was arranged with the public initiation ceremony taking place at 9 o'clock at night.

FORBIDS MASKED PARADES

San Antonio Passes Ordinance Directed at Ku Klux Klan.

(By Universal Service.)

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 11.—Declaring that an emergency existed which required action "necessary for the immediate preservation of public safety," Mayor John W. Tobin this morning summoned the city commissioners in extraordinary session and passed an ordinance prohibiting masked parades in San Antonio.

The ordinance is aimed at the Ku Klux Klan, following the public announcement by the local organization that a public "naturalization" ceremony will be held at the Speedway Sept. 21. The announcement declared that 25,000 klansmen would be present from all over the "realm of Texas."

Various rumors have been circulated indicating that the klan intended to march, under hoods and robes, through the city streets. Mayor Tobin, elected on an anti-klan platform, has frequently declared that if the klan ever parades in San Antonio it will be over his dead body.

The advertised "naturalization" ceremony is scheduled to be held outside the city limits. The literature of the klan represents that 2,500 "aliens" will be initiated in the "invisible empire."

Mayor Tobin, for 20 years sheriff of Bexar County, of which San Antonio is the metropolis, has been one of the most vigorous opponents of the klan in Texas. In may of this year Tobin and the entire anti-klan ticket was elected on the pledge that there would "never be a klan parade in San Antonio."

The ordinance passed by the city commission this morning is the opening gun of the administration in its fight on the invisible empire."

Confederate Fund Now $155.85; Klan Donates

Friday's contributions to the Confederate veteran reunion fund totaled $155.85, the largest amount received in any single day since the fund was started. The treasury now holds $625.85 of the $1000, which is needed to enable Houston veterans to make the trip to San Antonio. 9-22-23

The largest contribution was from Sam Houston chapter of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which donated $113.35. The Spencer & Sauer Lumber company gave $10, R. H. Spencer $5, Robert McKay of Navasota $2.50, Raymond Pearson $5, the Alaskan Fur company $5, the Crain Lumber company $10, and Dissen & Schneider $5.

TO GUARD TEXAS INITIATION

Hundreds of Officers to Isolate San Antonio Klan Ceremony.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 21.—As a precaution against masked members of the Ku Klux Klan appearing on the streets of San Antonio, 500 special policemen were sworn in by city authorities on the eve of a big initiation ceremony by the Klan tonight at the San Antonio Speedway, just outside the city limits. 9-22-23

Sheriff James Stevens of Bexar County announced he had sworn in several hundred deputy sheriffs. The officers have given orders that no one within the inclosure is to be molested, but that if any person goes upon the highway he will be ordered to unmask.

KLAN PARSON HOME AFTER 'FAKE' SUICIDE

Four Texans Indicted for Flogging Farmer.

Hooded Band Forces Butcher to Marry Girl—Klansmen Interrupt a Funeral.

The Rev. J. T. Renfro, Baptist minister and Klansman who disappeared under rather sensational circumstances a few weeks ago, has returned to his home here much like the Scriptural prodigal. 9-29-23

During the summer he had been making speeches for funds for a memorial hospital to be erected at Corpus Christi, Texas, and named for the late Fred Robertson, a Klansman. On Aug. 25 three pieces of luggage belonging to Renfro were found on the banks of the San Antonio River in the heart of this city. A typewritten note, signed "Sic Semper Ku Klux" and containing a statement that "your little Ku Klux preacher will not go around the country denouncing the Catholics and Jews any longer" was the only hint as to what had become of Renfro. Immediately State, city and National agencies were set in motion to find the "body."

A few days after the disappearance, however, Texas rangers learned that a telegram from Renfro had been received by a manicurist in a San Antonio barber shop. It stated that Renfro was in Philadelphia, Pa. Detectives then located the missing minister and his return to Texas followed. It is said by Renfro's friends that he was pressed by so many obligations he just decided to let the world think he had been slain.

Four Indicted for Flogging.

Four residents of Canton, Texas, have been indicted for alleged complicity in the flogging of Frank Martin, a young farmer near there. Sim West, W. C. Hollifield, a man by the name of Springer and a man who has not yet been arrested are named.

At Ft. Worth, Texas, Mark Livesay, a butcher, has brought suit for divorce, alleging that he was forced to marry Miss Ina Cartwright on a public road near Birdville on the night of Nov. 8, 1922, by a band of hooded men. His attorneys contend the masked men were Klansmen.

The local cemetery at Sinton, Texas, was the scene of an animated clash when members of the Klan, ignoring the protests of Mrs. A. A. Jenkins, appeared in a body at the funeral of Mr. Jenkins. Grabbing a fiery cross held by the leader, she tossed it aside and tore the robes off another Klansman while her father, J. D. Caddle, disrobed two others. He then routed the party with the sexton's shovel.

Deputy sheriffs invaded a secret meeting of the Ku Klux Klan barbecue and initiation at San Antonio, Texas, to serve injunction writs, issued upon application of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a corporation of Atlanta, Ga., restraining the San Antonio Klan from conferring degrees.

Three indictments charging aggravated assault have been returned by the grand jury at Eastland, Texas, in connection with the recent flogging of W. F. Jones by Masked men.

Three men are being held at Shawnee Ogla., as a result of disclosures made at a court of inquiry investigating the activities of floggers.

White House Initiation.

A statement of the Rev. Basil E. Newman at Charleston, W. Va., that Klansmen held an initiation meeting in the dining-room at the White House in Washington has been branded by White House officials as "too ridiculous to discuss."

By a plurality of 2,347 votes the Ku Klux Klan won its fight to take control of the city government of Portland, Maine. A new city charter, providing for the city manager form of government, was chosen to go into effect in January. A city manager may be chosen from any part of the State. A commission of five will take the place of the old city council.

Undismayed at the acquittal of Dr. C. A. Yarborough, known as the Ku Klux "whipping boss" at Macon, Ga., the State is proceeding with kindred flogging cases and will press other charges against the doctor. At his recent trial he was positively identified by four State witnesses as a member of bands of men who flogged them and six charges remain against him.

In a raid on an elleged gambling resort at Montpelier, Ohio, by men wearing Ku Klux regalia, Harold Britton was shot and seriously wounded. A former policeman, said to be an organizer for the Klan, and another citizen are charged with the shooting.

Losses N. Y. Charter.

Thru default the Ku Klux Klan has lost its fight to save its charter in New York State. Justice Staley granted an injunction against the order, but allowed a twenty-day respite for the Klan to file its exceptions. This time limit has now expired and leaves the Klan subject to the provisions of the Walker law, forcing all orders to unmask and reveal their memberships.

Application of the order for a charter in Pennsylvania has been held up pending the result of a fight being waged in the courts by the State against the Klan. The State contends that the very name of the Klan "is significant of a reign of terror, mob rule, lynch law, riot, disorder and unlawful killings, is associated with race and religious hatred and has been assumed to inspire fear and terror."

And ordinance prohibiting any person appearing in public in San Antonio, Texas, in disguise has been adopted by the city commission in anticipation that the Klan proposes to stage a big parade there.

Twelve hundred negroes fled from their homes in and around South Bend, Ind., recently when a warning signed "K. K. K." announced that the negro settlement would be "cleaned up," but they have nearly all returned and normal conditions again prevail.

KLANSMAN GETS 2 YEAR TERM IN FLOGGING TRIAL

Amarilla, Tex., Oct. 12.—T. W. Stanford, alleged Ku Klux klansman, was found guilty in District court of whitecapping at the recent flogging of E. T. McDonald here. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Defense moved for a new trial. 10-13-23

The verdict was based on the third count of the indictment, the jury reported. This involved the wearing of alleged Ku Klux Klan robes, which the jury held constituted a threat.

Judge Bishop had instructed the jury to return a verdict of guilty if, in their opinion, the wearing of such regalia constituted a threat.

REGALIA OF KLAN IS THREAT, JURY HOLDS IN VERDICT

Amarillo, Texas, October 12.—T. W. Sanford, alleged Ku-Klux Klansman, was found guilty in district court of a charge of whitecapping in connection with the recent flogging of E. T. McDonald here and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Defense counsel immediately filed a motion for a new trial. 10-14-23

The state charged that Stanford was the leader of the band of masked men who ordered McDonald to leave Amarillo before flogging him. 10-18-23

The verdict of guilty was based on the third count of the indictment against Stanford, the jury reported. This count involved the wearing of alleged Ku-Klux Klan robes by the men, which the jury held constituted a threat within itself. The men wore klan robes on the night they ordered him to leave the city, McDonald testified.

Judge Bishop had instructed the jury to return a verdict of guilty if, in their opinion, the wearing of such regalia constituted a threat.—Atlanta Constitution.

RECORDS ORDERED BY COURT

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, September 29.—A demand that a correct roster of the members of the Ku Klux Klan in San Antonio as well as of the entire state of Texas be produced in the Seventy-third district court is contained in an answer filed today by the defendants in the injunction suit brought September 21, against a local klansman by the klan headquarters at Atlanta. 9-30-23

The original injunction restrained the local klan from conferring the second or Knights of Kamelia degree.

TEXAS TO BRING KLAN ISSUE UP TO SENATE

Chicago Daily News

Challenge of Mayfield, Elected Last Fall, Expected to Bring Inquiry.

10-2-23.

BY PAUL R. LEACH.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 2.—The fulcrum upon which the lever of federal action is expected to heave the invisible empire, Knights of the Ku-Klux klan, into both houses of congress this winter and both national political campaigns next year, is being welded in Texas. It is the effort to prevent the seating of Senator-elect Earle B. Mayfield of Austin, who is charged with perjury (six counts), poll fraud and conspiracy with the Ku-Klux klan, to make him senator.

Chicago Ill.

A 100-page petition setting forth the case has been filed with the United States senate upon behalf of George E. B. Peddy of Houston, the defeated candidate who ran on the republican ticket, though himself nominally a democrat.

It is expected that on the first day's session of the senate in December the Mayfield case will be turned over to the committee on privileges and elections. A subcommittee then probably will be sent to Texas to examine important witnesses, and upon that body's return to Washington the klan as an issue will have been thrown into the senate, according to Luther Nickels, Dallas attorney, who has prepared the Peddy petition and who probably will conduct the petitioner's case through the senate hearings.

Promise Astounding Evidence.

Interested parties here assert that nothing this time can keep the klan issue from both senate and house, and attorneys associated with Nickels say that not only will their evidence in the Mayfield case be astounding, but evidence also will be brought out concerning the abortive attempt to investigate the klan two years ago by a house committee—when the invisible empire was dropped like a hot potato—which may be fully as startling.

Mayfield in these parts is called, by antiklan men, "ambassador of the invisible empire to Washington!"

In the petition seeking to prevent his taking seat in the senate it is charged that Mayfield and his campaign managers spent more than $200,000 in their campaign, and falsified reports to the secretary of state, reports that were necessary under the corrupt practices act, limiting candiates to $10,000 a campaign.

Charge Violation of Writ.

Fraud in conduct of the election is laid to the klan, not only in the polls where it is charged klan officials substituted their own ballots bearing Mayfield's name and not Peddy's, after an injunction restraining election officials from placing Mayfield's name on the election ballot had been issued. In 200 of the 245 counties of the state where elections were held this was done, according to the Peddy petition, so that Mayfield received a majority in the election by illegal ballots. Two injunctions were issued following the primaries restraining the placing of the name of Mayfield on the official ballots.

The petitioners contend that this practice gave the Mayfield supporters an undue advantage over Peddy because the people who caused Mayfield's name to be printed on substitute ballots, refused to print Peddy's name on the same sheets. Many thousands of votes for Peddy were written in, the petition states, but in many instances it alleges not half of such legally written ballots were counted for Peddy.

Mayfield is charged with personal unfitness to hold the office of United States senator, because of the charges of perjury and suborning of witnesses. The Peddy group says he testified in injunction cases that he was a member of the Ku-Klux klan up to January, 1922, but that he resigned then.

Specify Allegiance to Klan.

However, according to Mr. Nickels, it has been proved that Mayfield attended meetings of the klan, that instructions were issued to klansmen to vote and work for his election as a klansman, that meetings of the klan subsequent to this date were held for the purpose of raising campaign funds to help Mayfield, and that semi-official ballots were sent through the mails by the klansmen electioneering for Mayfield.

He is charged with unfitness to hold office also, because of allegations of using his office of railroad commissioner—similar to a member of the commerce commission of Illinois—where he was said to have wielded a powerful influence over oil and transportation companies and other utilities, public and private, compelling support in votes and in contributions.

Mayfield has claimed three counties as his residence, but he lives now in Travis county, of which Austin, the state capital, is the seat. He is about 42 years old, married, a graduate of Southwestern college and the state university, has a license to practice law, but has devoted little time to actual practice. He was a member of the state senate for two terms, and was elected railroad commissioner in 1912, which position he held until March of this year, when he resigned.

Peddy, who is in his early thirties, was born and reared in Texas. He lives now in Houston, Harris county. He is a college graduate. He attended training camp in 1917 and went overseas as a captain of infantry, being then a member of the state legislature. He has been practicing law since his return. Both men are protestants, and both are prohibitionists.

Brothers Say They Were Hired "by an Organization."

CONFESSION IS EXPECTED

Names of Those Who Have Financed Wholesale Whippings Are Expected to Be Made Public Shortly.

Memphis, Tenn.

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Aug. 20.—Judge A. W. Dicus of the corporation court and F. A. McBride, proprietor of a printing establishment, were today indicted by the Jefferson County grand jury for the alleged whipping of two I. W. W.'s. The whipping is alleged to have occurred some time ago when Port Arthur was "invaded" by members of the I. W. W.

(By the Associated Press.)

MACON, Ga., Aug. 20.—From information obtained from the three Hudson brothers, arrested last night in the act of flogging two negroes, the police tonight were preparing to round up an organized flogging band which has been terrorizing Macon for several weeks, according to the police.

During the last fortnight several men have been whipped and ordered to leave town within 48 hours, and at intervals during the last six months scores of men have been flogged. The climax in the disorders was reached early Saturday when the police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers after they had kidnaped a man from in front of the railroad station. Gov. Walker threatened to place the city under martial law.

The police also announced tonight that the Hudsons and other members of the flogging band were paid men, and that through the Hudsons they had learned they were being financed by an organization. A confession from one of the Hudsons, the police said, was expected during the night, and names of those who have been financing the floggers would be made public.

"We expect to make other arrests within 48 hours," said Sheriff J. B. Hicks, Jr. The county official would not tell what had been disclosed in his examination of the three brothers.

Wholesale Whippings.

The police admitted that they were at work on the theory that the three men, who were caught by officers last night in the act of flogging, one with a mask still covering his face, are part of a gang that has been conducting wholesale whippings in the city.

"We are trying to bring out of these men the names of those whom we believe financed their operations," the sheriff declared. "It seems almost certain that others supplied the money and issued orders for the operations of the gang," he added.

The federal government entered the case today when postoffice inspectors joined forces with the city authorities to apprehend gangsters who held up a mail motor truck Saturday and attempted to remove Charley Mike, negro, from the vehicle for the purpose of whipping him. The driver today was unable to identify the automobile used by the three Hudsons when they were caught last night.

R. A. Hartley, World War veetran, the last man to report he had been flogged, was committed to jail during the day on a writ of lunacy. His brother is also being held on an insanity charge. Hartley has declared his brother's condition was due to a fright because of a threat of the floggers when he was taken out three weeks ago and lectured.

Hartley was taken into custody while attempting to obtain a warrant for the men who whipped him, he said. He did not disclose the names of the floggers.

FOUR CITY OFFICIALS OF PORT ARTHUR HELD

Chicago Tribune

Consolidation

Port Arthur, Texas, September 8.—Eight arrests and two warrants for arrest of men, four of them city officials, today made up the tally so far scored by Texas rangers into their investigation into recent flogging parties. 9-9-23

Three of the Port Arthur officials indicted by the grand jury have been arrested and made bond. They are Fred White, assistant city attorney, M. E. Bailey, assistant chief of police, and W. L. Pool, policeman. Chief of Police W. W. Covington, the fourth, had not been arrested early today.

The others arrested are Ernest Broadway, J. H. Davis, L. E. Byrnes, C. B. Whittington and H. E. McBride.

All men with the exception of McBride, are charged with being principals or accomplices in the flogging of Clay and Carl Dunn at Port Arthur, near here on August 17. McBride is under indictment in connection with the flogging of A. A. King on August 9. McBride was required to make $3,000 bond, while all the others made bonds in the sum of $500.

The flogging of the Dunn brothers had become widely known since its occurrence but the first public report of the King flogging was not made public until last evening when McBride was arrested. King declared a party of unmasked men had taken him into the woods, lashed his body, sandpapered him and poured iodine over the wounds.

The Dunn brothers flogging resulted in both men being laid up for several days. Clay had been detained at Port Arthur city jail following the killing of Detective Bass Harris. It was thought that he might give some evidence valuable to the state. Carl Dunn came to his brother's rescue and when he appeared at the jail Clay Dunn was released on his own recognizance. As they stepped from the jail door, they were seized and taken to the country and beaten.

K. K. K. WIZARD ANSWERS SUIT IN COURT HERE

Houston Post

Houston, Tex.

Motion to quash proceedings in a libel and damage suit brought by George Kimbro Jr., against S. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, was filed in federal district court Monday morning by attorneys representing Mr. Evans.

The Kimbro suit was filed for record August 2. It alleges that the imperial wizard has declared in oral and written communications that Mr Kimbro owes the klan large sums of money, and it mentions various utterances alleged to be of a defamatory nature. Mr. Kimbro, in his petition, sets up the claim that instead of being indebted to the klan, the organization owes him large sums of money which he can not collect. He asks $100,000 damages. 9-25-23

The motion filed by Mr. Evans seeking dismissal pleads that he is a non-resident. He gives his residence as Atlanta, Ga.

ALLSTORM ASSAILS MASK; QUITS KLAN

Houston Post

Houston, Tex.

Denouncing the mask of the Ku Klux Klan as unmanly, un-American and Un-Christian, Oliver Allstorm, Houston poet and lecturer, publicly resigned his membership in the invisible empire. In a letter to the newspapers, he characterized the klan's leadership as composed almost entirely of "small calibre men."

Allstorm's letter stated that H. C. McCall, Houston leader, is ambitious to become imperial wizard of the secret order. He said he had been initiated into the order by George Kimbro, but that upon representations by McCall he consented to being initiated a second time. Referring to a "partnership" which he said he and McCall entered into during his early membership in the klan, Allstorm said this did not concern the public at present. 9-25-23

His advice to "the boys" out over the State, Allstorm adds, is to call a "full house" meeting and put the question to a vote: "Resolved, that the mask of the Ku Klux Klan is ungodly, unmanly and cowardly, and the members of this Klavern from this night on, and forever, refuse to use it in any way whatsoever, so help us God."

Ku Klux Klan - 1923.

Texas

To the Clearly Enunciated and Unmistakable Principles of Americanism Advocated by the Ku Klux Klan

American Forum - San Antonio, Texas 2-24-23

There is something very remarkable, and decidedly suspicious, about the sudden outburst of condemnation and opposition, on the part of that very excitable element, now opposing the Ku Kuux Klan, in America. No sooner was the announcement made that there had been a reorganization of the Klan in this country, than there came a yell of opposition.

From the very beginning, the Klan had cheerfully and openly published its motives, its aims, and aspirations—and if these were true, it seems passing strange, that any person loyal to this government would be found opposing the order.

The fundamental principles, as have been openly avowed and published all over the world, would apparently strangle all opposition except those who do not believe they are just, patriotic, and for the betterment of America. Condensed, they are as follows:

First—To protect the weak, the innocent, and the defenseless, from the indignities, wrongs and outrages of the lawless, the violent and the brutal; to relieve the injured and oppressed; to succor the suffering and unfortunate, especially worthy w.dows and orphans.

Second—To protect and defend the Constitution of the United States of America, and all laws passed in conformity thereto, and to protect the States and the people thereof from all invasion of their rights thereunder from any source whatsoever.

Third—To aid and assist in the execution of all constitutional laws, and to preserve the honor and dignity of the State by opposing tyranny, in any and every degree attempted from any and every source whatsoever, by a fearless and faithful administration of justice; to promptly and properly meet every behest of duty "without fear and without reproach."

The above clear, and unequivocal statements regarding the aim, and ideals, to be followed by Klan members, are not the imaginary conclusions of the writer. They come frmo the heart and lips of the patriotic man, who is responsible for the reorganization of this great American order, and he is a fool who doubts this sincerity, and a traitor to America, who does not endorse them.

Going further, he declares:

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, regardless of statements made to the contrary either through ignorance or with deliberate intent to misrepresent it, has not made, is not now making and does not intend to make any fight on the Roman Catholic church as a religious institution but it will unalterably and unequivocally oppose any move of the Catholic church or of any other church, individual or organization, which attempts to bring about a combination of church and state in the United States.

"The Ku Klux Klan does oppose the attitude of the Catholic church on our public school system, believing that the public schools as an institution should be protected from its enemies regardless of who they may be."

What fault can justly be found in the open, manly declarations of the Klan? Why these torrents of villainous abuse, that have been hurled upon 100 per cent white Protestant Americans through the columns of subsidized papers, just because they do not choose to bend the knee in obedience of the self-styled vice-gerent of God, who holds high court in Rome?

On what meat, hath this modern Caesar fed, that induces him to entertain the fatuous idea, that Imperial America cares a tinkers dam, what he may say or do concerning this government, and this people? Let the Roman bulls paw the air, and bellow forth their challenge to battle—just so these hot-air bombs are exploded along the banks of the Tiber. American people are mighty good natured, and not given to hasty and quest.onable excitement, but they are patriotic to the core, and the individual, or the nation, that imagines our Uncle Sam is too cowardly to protect his own, will be woefully deceived.

It would not look so bad, had the Klan showed the slightest disposition to try to interfere with the Roman Catholic religion. The declaration, that it would continue to uphold purely American principles, and still remain a Protestant nation, seems to have supplied the Casus belli, and set the Roman watch dogs to barking when no attack was contemplated. Had haughty Rome been the real friend of this nation, and this government she would certainly have hesitated, before turning loose her pack of subsidized editorial curs in this country, to gap and yelp at the heels of patriotic, Protestant Americans. From somewhere, comes a nauseating odor to the nostrils of Protestant Americans, and from the smell, it must be either hell, or garlic—probably both.

All over America, anti-Ku Klux Klan newspapers are springing up, edited by the ever-ready element of alleged writers, who would defame the good name of any man or woman, now living, for dirty dollars. This very fact, if there was no other reason, is more than enough to enlist the support of every patriotic 100 per cent white man and woman in this white man's Republic—and accentuates the truth, that America needs just such an organization as the Ku Klux Klan. She not only needs it, but she has got it—and it is here to stay, until the enemies of our great and glorious nation, are silenced forever. Keep your eyes and ears open, and your mouth closed—and remember what you see and hear. Those who are now spewing forth lies and slander, are convincing no sensible man, that the Ku Klux Klan is an enemy to this government. They have shot their bolt, and from now on, wat' them fizzle out.

DONATE TO TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH

San Antonio, Texas,
February 18, 1923.

Rev. H. C. Leonard,
Trinity Church.
Dear Brother Leonard:

We are pleased to inform you that we have noted the splendid service which you are rendering as a Christian minister. We know that you stand for what is best in government and in every day life, and we congratulate Trinity Church and San Antonio upon having you in our midst.

The crying need today in Church and State is:

"Strong men to stand beside the weak,
Kind men to hear what others speak,
True men to keep our count.y's laws
And guard its honor and its cause;
Men who will bravely play life's game
Nor ask rewards of gold or fame."

We feel that you embody this fine sentiment to a marked degree.

Believing in you, and in the God you serve, we are tendering you herewith ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS IN CURRENCY to be used as you shall deem best. This is merely a small token of our esteem, and it comes from an organization which stands at all times for the Open Bible, Freedom of Conscience, the Constitution and laws of the land, Free Public Schools, and the tenets of the Christian Religion, in short, an organization composed of Protestant Christians.

May the blessings of the Heavenly Father ever be upon you is our fervent prayer.

COLORED CHURCH ALSO REMEMBERED

Feb. 14th, 1923.

Rev. I. H. Kelley, Pastor,
Second Baptist Church, (Colored)
Dear Sir:

It is with pleasure that we have had brought to our attention your campaign to raise the sum of Five Thousand Dollars for the Second Baptist Church. This would indicate a substantial expansion of your church activities to the extent that you are required to provide additional facilities which will be in keeping with the growth and progress of your church and its work.

To the end that we may share in this laudable undertaking we are enclosing the sum of Fifteen Dollars which we trust you will accept in the spirit in which it is sent.

Be assured that this organization stands ever ready to back up to the limit the Protestant Christian Ministry in the fight it is waging against present-day evils and in its effort to benefit humanity by appealing to the finer senses and higher ideals and inculating the witness of a purely Protestant Christian Americanism.

May your good work continue and your noble efforts be attended by an ever increasing response. This is the sincere wish of,

KLANSMEN ON JURY

Six Men on Inquisitorial Body Admit Membership

Montgomery Advertiser 2-27-23

HOUSTON, TEX. Feb. 26.—Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson, Jr., empanelling a new grand jury today, asked of each member if he belongs to the Ku Klux Klan. Six men admitted membership. Judge Hutcheson said he previously had had the department of justice check up on the affiliations of the members of the panel.

Judge Hutcheson said that so much had been said about the attitude of Klansmen that he thought it advisable that all might know the affiliations of the grand jurors.

"You have, by your answers," he said "shown yourselves qualified in law to serve as grand jurors in this court. Other disqualifications, other than those fixed by law, I have no power to declare."

MAY TRICK MINORITY ON MAYFIELD BATTLE

Harding Would Make Capital Out of Ku Klux Issue,

PLAN FIGHT ON TEXAN

Commercial Appeal

Democracy, If Suporting Mayfield, Will Be Branded as "Ku Klux" in Next Campaign, Political Experts Believe.

2-21-23
Memphis, Tenn,

BY CHARLES MICHELSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20.—Col. Creager, Republican state chairman of Texas, is in town and has had several visits with President Harding, and out of those visits has developed a piece of political strategy reckoned by the party leaders as of vast effect and importance. In fact in some circles it is considered the biggest stroke since Mr. Harding decided to make inexorable prohibition enforcement the battle cry of the campaign of 1924.

The plan is to force the Ku Klux Klan issue on the Democrats; to compel that party in its platform to dodge the issue as they did in the 1920 prohibition straddle.

The details of the scheme have all been worked out and they are ingenius enough to cause a lot of concern to some of the Democrats even though there remains more than a year in which to do some countermanding. Col. Creager in addition to being Republican state chairman is the spokesman for the Texans who fought Senator-Elect Mayfield on the ground that he was a klansman, and bears the arraignment of Mayfield, which runs to 90 typewritten pages, and not only narrates the Ku Klux connection but also the detail of the charges that the senator-elect spent a great deal more in accomplishing his nomination and election than the law allows, and a lawyers argument on the legality or illegality of the election with Mayfield's name the only one printed on the ballot for the office of senator.

Will Go to Senate.

This arraignment is to be presented to the Senate within a day or two as a petition to have Mayfield denied his seat. It will be referred to a committee and will slumber in the committee files until next December, when it will be hauled out for action. The Republicans, mindful of the terrific influence of the Newberry case on the fortunes of their party in the last election, hope to make the Mayfield case equally potent in the other direction.

They are figuring that the southern Democratic senators will be put in a deep hole when the question is up, whether Mayfield shall or shall not be seated, and they are not far wrong as to some of them.

These have constituencies in which the Ku Klux Klan is strong; possibly as strong as it was shown to be in Texas by Mayfield's election.

Regardless of their personal opinion on the subject of the usurpation of the law by secret orders none of them is particularly keen to incur the active enmity of the hooded nightriders, and thereby make possible the loss of nomination, which is equivalent to election, for the benefit of some man who is perhaps as much opposed to ku kluxism as the sitting senator, but who has been able to avoid declaring himself. They may decide that Mayfield has forfeited title to the Texas seat on one of the other grounds, but the ku kluxers are not likely to give them the benefit of such a decision.

While the Democrats are determising, each for himself, whether he will make the test of the domination of the klan in his state, arguing, perhaps, that membership in a secret society is not a legitimate cause for unseating an elected senator, the virtuous Republicans from the north, where there is no Ku Klux Klan worth political attention, will be hammering away at the menace represented by the invisible government; the affront to the dignity of the Senate involved in the presence in its membership of man, oathbound to such an organization, and all the rest of it.

FORMER IMPERIAL WIZARD OF KU KLUX KLAN DISAPPEARS; GOVERNMENT WILL CONDUCT NATION-WIDE SEARCH, IS PLAN

Atlanta Attorney Says Edward Y. Clarke Left Georgia Capital Thursday Morning; Federal Court Refuses to Continue Case

Montgomery Advertiser

(Associated Press)

HOUSTON, TEXAS, March 15.—A nation-wide search by federal officers for Edward Young Clarke, former Imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, probably will be the next step ordered by the government in its case against him for alleged violation of the Mann act.

This developed here today when Sidney Smith, Atlanta attorney, appeared in federal court here to ask for a continuance of Clarke's trial.

Mr. Smith said that Clarke had left Atlanta this morning, and that his whereabous were unknown, but that he was no longer within the jurisdiction of the federal court of southern Georgia.

A decline in health, due to strenuous activities in the klan, was given as the cause of Clarke's disappearance.

Though M. Holden, federal district attorney would make no definite statement, it was intimated that a bench warrant or capias, returnable in Houston would be issued.

Clarke, according to his attorney, disappeared immediately after being arrested and released under $1,000 bond by the United States commissioner there.

A few days later this bond was raised to $5,000 by Judge Hutcheson, who designated March 12 as the date on which Clarke should appear here to make a plea in answer to the charge against him. Neither Clarke nor his attorney was present. Mr. Smith today said the commissioner in Atlanta set the time for his appearance in Houston as the Septemmber term of court.

Judge Hutcheson refused Smith's plea for continuance, stating that the Atlanta official had no authority to fix the date of trials in the Houston court, and hinted that the government would use drastic measures to bring Clarke here during the present term of court.

"The government had made no request for a continuance," said Judge Hutcheson, "and in the absence of such a request, the court thinks there should be none. The court considers Clarke to be situated as any other citizen, and he should have obeyed the dictates of this court, in which he was indicted, instead of those of a commissioner in another district. Had he done that, he would not now be in the position of a fugitive.

"If the government cannot find him, that is the government's misfortune. It will make an attempt to locate Clarke, to apprehend him, and to secure an order for his removal here during this term of court."

Prior to Thursday's developments, it was believed that Clarke's trial would be held early in April.

Mr. Smith said he had no connection with the klan.

"I am not a member," he said. "I am merely Clarke's attorney."

Following the court's refusal of continuance, Mr. Smith held a conference with Mr. Holden. Both stated afterwards that no agreement had been reached.

Klan Members Present U.S. Flag At School Meet

Houston Post

Houston Post Special.

ORANGE, Texas, March 25.—A large audience was present at the West Orange school house last night for the public declamation contest for places in the Texas University Interscholastic league. 3/26/23

At the close of the program which was featured with patriotic sentiment, a party of 15 men attired in Ku Klux Klan regalia appeared with a letter which was handed to Superintendent Brown and presented a large United States flag.

The winners in the contest were as follows: junior girls, Miss Laversa Brown, first place; Emma Burns, second place.

Junior boys: Jimmie White, first place; Otto Saunders, second place.

Senior boys, Clyde Martin.

At the close of the declamation contests, short patriotic talks were made by Rev. Brown, Attorney Kinard and Dr. Nichols, O. V. Creamer and A. F. Burns, of the school board, were called on for a few remarks.

KLAN RULER WILL COME TO HOUSTON

Houston Post
Houston, Tex.
3-10-23

Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, will be in Houston Monday when the preliminary hearing of E. Y. Clarke, former acting wizard, charged with violation of the Mann act, opens in federal court. This became known here Friday. Dr. Evans was in New Orleans Friday and will return to his home in Dallas before visiting Houston, according to the same source.

United States District Attorney Holden announced Friday he was ready to proceed with the government's part of the preliminary hearing of Clarke. He added, however, he had heard nothing from either the defendant or his attorneys.

The former acting wizard, who was indicted by the federal grand jury recently, is at his home in Atlanta, Ga., under bond of $5000.

Former Acting Klan Wizard Indicted in Texas

(Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Texas, March 1.—Edward Young Clarke, of Atlanta, Ga., former acting imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was indicted by the federal grand jury here yesterday on a Mann act violation charge.

The true bill was kept secret until today when department of justice agents here allowed it to become known they expected the arrest of Clarke momentarily. 3/2/23

Clarke was indicted by a federal grand jury, six of whom were Knights of the Ku Klux Klan by their own admission. In the course of a "frank talk" with Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson, Jr., the half dozen klansmen openly acknowledged their affiliation and declared they would not hesitate to indict a fellow klansman should he be guilty of law violations.

The indictment does not show the names of the witnesses, who appeared before the investigating body.

CLARKE, EX-HEAD OF KLAN, INDICTED ON MANN CHARGE

Edward Young Clarke of Atlanta, Ga., former acting imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, was indicted by the federal grand jury here Wednesday on a Mann act violation charge. 3-2-23

The true bill was kept secret until Thursday, when department of justice agents here allowed it to become known they expected the arrest of Clarke momentarily.

At about the same time, the former head of the klan gave out a statement from his Atlanta office denying he is guilty of the charge against him here. According to the indictment, the specific violation occurred in 1921.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923

WHO IS DRAWING THE LINE?

American Forum

Under the above heading the following article recently appeared in the Chronicle, published at Jayton, Kent County, Texas, and was written by Mr. Walter J. Wade, editor of that spicy and interesting weekly journal. It is seldom that we read a fairer and more interesting article upon the very important subject under discussion, and for that reason we pass it along to the Forum readers, whom we know will enjoy it. Shorn of every semblance of hate, animosity or ill-will, the author shows by his fairness and candor the real spirit of open and outspoken journalism—which elevates any newspaper writer in the estimation of honest, patriotic Americans.—Editor.

San Antonio, Texas

During the past few months we have heard much discussion on the streets of Jayton of the Ku Klux Klan. It is being said now that the Klan is ruining the churches, the lodges and even dividing families, etc. It is noticeable, however, to any man who will keep his ears open and his mouth shut that it is a one-sided discussion. Those who are opposing the Klan are doing all the talking. Some of the things they say and do do not measure up to any standard of good morals or Christianity. They, the anti-Klan people, say the line is being drawn, but as a careful observer we are forced to the conclusion that they are drawing it themselves. And the mean, hateful and insulting words that have been said and the things that have been done so far as we are able to hear and see have been done by the anti-Klan people. Their insults have been heard and allowed to pass as cheerfully as possible and little if any resentment has been shown by those who are supposed to be Klansmen. We take the position that if a man thinks it is his right and privilege to indorse the Klan no man has the right to challenge or deny him that right. No man has been insulted or browbeaten or cursed for not being a Klansman and no one is going to be forced against his will into the Klan. It is said that the Klan has been in Jayton for several months. No act of violence or lawlessness has been laid at their door. They have appeared in uniform in Jayton twice. The first time they appeared in church and gave an evangelist some money. The second time they attended a funeral and put some flowers on a comrade's grave. They gave a widow a contribution to help her put her little children in school. To another family in sorrow and distress they gave substantial assistance. Further than that their activities are not known. They have cursed, abused and persecuted no one, man or woman, old or young. The abuse has all been on the other side. Conservative, sensible, peace-loving, God-fearing white American people should take note of these things and be guided in their determination accordingly. With the principles of the Klan as officially set forth by its spokesmen no white men who are law-abiding and believe in the Christianity of our fathers find any fault. Personally, we are for them every one, and don't care who knows it. They are dear to every true American who loves his country and his God. They are the things the Protestant ministry have suffered and labored for from before the discovery of America. Therefore, no minister violates his conscience when he accepts for his church donations from the organization and thanks God for an organization that pledges its membership to practice and promote the things that make for better citizenship, purer morals and a greater degree of safety for the character and reputation of the rising generation, both male and female.

A favorite target for the insults of Catholic and foreign dominated politicians who fill the daily papers with their slanderous utterances is the Protestant preachers of America. Our sincere conviction is that they are digging their political graves with their mouths, and the sooner they sink into their political oblivion toward which they are heading, the better off will the nation be. The ministry can get along without their support and does not ask their approval. It is also noticeable that the national spokesmen of the anti-Klan as a rule favor the return of whiskey or a modification of the Volstead law permitting the sale of wine and beer. They also favor the opening of the ports and admitting a tide of foreigners who are both aliens in heart and in fact to everything held dear by the white people of the nation. A class that foment all the strikes, throw all the bombs, murdering women and children, who in their own lands have, by oppression of Catholic rulers, been made to hate all law and authority, and who come now to the land of the free to make another Russia with its starving millions of our glorious country.

The readers of this article are free born American people who can do as they please, and so can this writer. If we want to join the Klan and have a reputation and character that will bear the light so that we will be accepted, it is our business, and anybody nat don't like it can, as they used to say in our boyhood days, lump it. We are white, we serve the God of our fathers, we do our own praying and thinking, and we think we have sense enough to get around without kowtowing to any priest pope, puke or political puppets who jump and squawk whenever the pope pulls the string, pin-headed editors who are trying to shape the course of public thinking according to their own narrow-minded and short-visioned policy. Granting to every man every privilege we claim for ourselves. This is with all due respect and consideration for our friends who may not agree with us, realizing that the propaganda inspired and emanating from Catholic sources has poisoned the minds of many good and patriotic citizens.

ANOTHER SLANDER LAID TO REST

American Forum

Quebec.—The series of fires that have destroyed or partially destroyed a number of Catholic churches and institutions in various parts of Canada which have been so readily laid at the feet of the Ku Klux Klan were in reality to be blamed upon the construction of the heating plants in the burned buildings according to the belief of Deputy Minister of Public Works Guyon.

San Antonio, Texas 3/31/23

As each fire has occurred, those opposed to the Klan have been quick to express their belief that the organization has gone beyond its limits in the United States and crossed the border into Canada to carry on a campaign of terror. Much has been whispered about concerning threatening letters and so on and every effort made to cast aspersions upon the Klan.

It seems to take the whole force out of the arguments of those seeking to detract from the honor due the Klan, when a public official whose work is concerned with buildings and building regulations, comes out and expresses his belief that the fires were due to faulty installation of heating plants. He scouts emphatically any suggestion that incendiarism was responsible and is so firm in his belief that failure to observe proper precautions in setting up and operating heating plants was responsible that he has issued drastic orders that in the future the regulations must be lived up to the letter of the law.

Another canard appears to have been well disposed of.

Chicago Tribune 3-4-1923

That poor old negro woman down at Waxahachie who thought to take revenge against one of her dusky neighbors by hanging a K. K. K. placard on the neighbor's gate and was arrested for the offense, was an emblem of childinsh innocence compared with some other people who have taken advantage of the K. K. K. costume and protection for the commission of crime. In some communities it's all right for a bunch of brutal men to cover themselves over with the protection of the Klan regalia and go out to commit the most heinous crimes against the persons of both men and women, but when some small prank is committed by a poor, ignorant and helpless old negro woman it's all wrong, DEAD WRONG, and she is promptly arrested for it. Fine old system of justice we have in these modern days of the modern Ku Klux under the protecting folds of Old Glory.

Women in Masks Parade Downtown Dallas Streets

Reported Women's Auxiliary to Klan Marches Clad in White Robes.

Dallas, Texas, April 7.—The downtown streets of Dallas were jammed at 8 o'clock tonight, traffic was at a standstill and police reserves were stationed at five-foot intervals while near the county criminal courts building members of the "American Women" reported as being an auxiliary of the Ku Klux Klan in Texas, assembled for parade, the first to be planned by the women's order since its organization about a year ago.

Chicago Tribune 4-8-23

The parade started at 8:15 o'clock, led by horsewomen, three abreast, carrying the American flag the Lone Star flag of the Texas republic, and the American Woman's flag, followed by a 75-piece band, playing "Onward Christian Soldiers."

The women, in long lines following the band, marched two abreast, wearing long white robes with red crosses on the right sleeves. They wore a peaked cap with a red tassle and were masked.

Women from all over the state were in line, and sheriff's deputies were on hand, following report today that rats, snakes and mice would be turned loose.

It was reported that the organization is not in any way connected with the "Kamelia," or klan auxiliary being formed by Emperor Simmons of Atlanta.

ARKANSAN IS FLOGGED AFTER HIS TESTIMONY

Paul Merritt of El Dorado Attacked at Denton, Tex.

DENTON, Tex., March 31.—Paul Merritt of El Dorado, Ark., was seized by unidentified men near here last night, carried to an isolated point and severely flogged, officers announced today. He was a defense witness in the case of Barney Cloninger, tried here on a criminal assault, in which the jury returned a verdict this morning finding Cloninger guilty. Merritt said his assailants told him if he would go before the jury, then deliberating, and tell them he had testified falsely, that they would not hang him.

Chicago Tribune 4-1-23

Merritt, in a statement today, said he had testified truthfully at the trial of Cloninger, who was sentenced to five years in prison. He said he was seized from an automobile on the Denton-Sherman Road and carried to a creek bottom. His captors first threatened to shoot him, he declared. Then he was placed on the ground. With one man holding a foot across his neck four others severely flogged him. He was left in the woods near Denton and reported the matter to officers about midnight. He was not seriously hurt.

Merritt, who is 22 years old and married, said his assaulters wore dark overalls and black hoods. Officers investigating the case today expressed the belief they were "rough necks" from outside this county.

MORE CONCERNING OATH OF THE KLAN

The American Forum - San Antonio, Texas 3/10/23

The American people have not forgotten the extraordinary excitement and consternation, into which the Catholic militant order, known as the Knights of Columbus, was thrown, when an oath, purporting to be the K. of C. obligation was published in this country.

I fancy I must have received not less than 100 copies of that very wonderful oath. While at the beginning, these alleged oaths were quite similar, they began to change materially, until finally, they became positively absurd, and too ridiculous to even interest a sensible reader.

The transformation of this alleged oath, struck me as being the work of some interested individual, or combination of individuals—and I still entertain that idea. No novice, ever composed, and wrote the first copy of this so-called Knights of Columbus oath. From the Catholic standpoint, there was nothing to deny, or detract, for it was simply a reinforced agreement by contracting parties, to do any and everything possible, to change Protestant America into a Catholic nation—to finally be ruled and controlled, politically and religiously by the Pope at Rome. All Catholics endorse these principles.

A few days ago, some one sent me an advertisement, stating that a large sum of money had been placed in a certain bank, to be paid to anyone who could prove that the much discussed K. C. oath was genuine. It was about the silliest, and most childish proposition, I have encountered. The man who "Thought it up," and printed it, should be boxed for the simples. It sounds like the small boy, who wants to bet two million billion dollars, on some ridiculous proposition—when he hasn't a copper cent in his pocket.

So far as the Knights of Columbus are concerned, it makes very little difference, what sort of an oath they pledge themselves to uphold. If the oath is loyal to America, with no mental reservations on their part, then why discuss it?

Just as soon as the news went abroad that the Ku Klux Klan had been reorganized, you began to hear the K. K. K. oath discussed. The negro population, immediately sat straight up—like penguins—and showing a disposition to take to the brush when the first bush rattled.

The American nigger is not superstitious—nor really afraid of spirits, ghosts, and strange things, often seen at night. As one of my nigger friends recently said—"No sah, boss—de niggah ain't skeered of no ghos'—he don't even 'believe in 'em—but lie jes' nachally won't have no truck wid 'em."

So much discussion has been indulged in over the K. of C. oath, we next hear comments on the K. K. K. obligation. The obligations usually given to the new members, in any secret order, are not supposed to be discussed on the street—but I dare say, it would make precious little difference, if most of the actual ritual of secret orders were made public. I am an ancient and antique Odd Fellow, a pious Elk, and while each have their secret work, that does not prove they dangerous to society, or good government.

Here is the Klansman's oath, word for word. What's wrong about it:?

KLANSMAN'S OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

I most solemnly assert and affirm, that to the Government of the United States of America, and any State thereof, of which I may become a resident, I sacredly swear an unqualified allegiance, above any other and every kind of government in the whole world. I here and now pledge my life, my property, my vote and my sacred honor to uphold its flag, its constitution and constitutional laws, and will protect, defend and enforce same unto death.

"I swear that I will most zealously and valiantly shield and preserve, by any and all justifiable means and methods, the sacred constitutional rights and privileges of free public schools, free speech, free press, separation of church and state, liberty, white supremacy, justice laws and the pursuit of happiness, against any encroachment, of any nature, by any person or persons, political party or parties, religious sect or people, native, naturalized or foreign, of any race, color, creed, lineage or tongue whatsoever.

"All to which I have sworn by this oath, I will seal with my blood, be Thou my Witness, Almighty God."

TEXAS OPPOSES SIMMONS.

Klan of Lone Star Will Support Dr. Evans As Imperial Wizard.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 5.—Texas is the bulwark of the Ku Klux Klan and Texas klansman will support Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in his fight against Colonel William J. Simmons, emperor, according to George W. Keeling, kleagle of the klan in Texas, who is in San Antonio. Mr. Keeling said that the constitution of the klan confers upon the wizard, Dr. Evans of Dallas, Texas, absolute executive authority while the emperor has no authority to administer affairs of the organization.

Mr. Keeling quoted from the constitution:

"Being the supreme chief executive of this order, the imperial wizard shall have and hold supremacy and power within this organization in all administrative matters, and act in any and all matters not prescribed in this constitution, when in his judgment the best interests of the order warrant."

Mr. Keeling said that it would not be practical for the klan to recognize any women's organization at this time as there were eight or ten in existence and that anyone of them would mean friction.

He predicted that the courts would uphold Dr. Evans' contention and said that information received by him did not show that thousands of klansmen were flocking to Atlanta for a conference.

FLOGGERS MAKE BOND

Texas Officer Charged With Assault With Deadly Weapons

GEORGETOWN, TEX., April 4.—Bond of $1,000 each on charges of assault with deadly weapons and $250 each for unlawfully carrying pistols was granted Eldridge Dewlitt, of Taylor, Tex.; Sam Threadgill, Dewey Ball, Olin Gossitt, and Murray Jackson, all of Taylor, by Judge C. R. Fanson, following hearing conducted here in connection with the flogging of R. W. Burleson near Jonah last Sunday night by unmasked persons. Each of the men made bond late today.

FIVE ARE ARRESTED FOR FLOGGING MAN

Georgetown, Texas, April 5.—Five men arrested yesterday after an investigation by a court of inquiry in connection with the flogging by unmasked men of R. W. Burleson, traveling salesman, last Sunday, were out on bond today at $1,000 each on charges of assault with deadly weapons and $250 for each for unlawfully carrying pistols. Each of the men made bond late yesterday. They will be held under bond to await action of the grand jury, which will meet in May.

The men are H. A. Hewlitt, chief of police, of Taylor, Texas; Sam Threadgill, Dewey Ball, Olin Gossett and Murray Jackson, all of Taylor.

The flogging occurred on the San Gabriel river, eight miles from Georgetown. Burleson, from Weir, a town near here, was taken from an automobile, whipped and beaten on the head with pistols, then brought to Taylor and chained to a tree near the city hall, according to the police. Three buckets of creosote dip were poured on him, Burleson said.

According to Burleson's story told the police, he was notified by a preacher that an attack was to be made on him and that he was handed a card bearing the name of the "Ku Klux Klan, No. 176, Georgetown."

He was told to leave off going with a certain woman, he said.

Hooded Mob Flogs Man; Was False Witness, Claim

DENTON, Texas, April 1.—Local officers were unable to produce any tangible evidence today in connection with the severe floggings given Paul Merritt of Eldorado, Ark., in a creek bottom near here last night by a band of black hooded men wearing mechanics' clothing.

Merritt told officers today that the men said they would not harm him if he would tell the jury that found Barney Cloninger guilty of a charge of criminal assault, that he falsified when on the stand as a defense witness.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

Houston Informer

A few days ago the Texas senate wired the governor of Louisiana commending him for his stand in the Mer Rouge horror and atrocity, but all the time these Lone Star State solons were apparently closing their eyes to the evil and menace of mob-law and gang rule within their own commonwealth. Houston, Texas

During 1922 Louisiana staged three lynching fests, excluding the Mer Rouge disclosures of mobocratic barbarism and brutality, while Texas led the lynching league and copped the pennant of the circuit with 18 lynching bees. Houston Informer

At the very time the Texas law-makers were wiring their congratulations and felicitations to Governor Parker of the Pelican State, our own Goose Creek was "strutting its stuff" and had just attained the limelight with a bold defiance of constituted authority, and Bishop, in the valley section, enacted one of the most revolting and barbaric atrocities in the history of civilization, when Dr. Smith, former Wharton County race physican, was incarcerated, tormented, dismembered and his body cremated in a "mysterious" fire that destroyed the jail at this little Texas burg.

So often we fail to see our own faults and sins, but we are ever ready to take cognizance of those of our fellow man. 1-27-23

The Informer is not condemning the Texas solons for commending the governor of another state for his stand for law and order, but in the language of the Great Teacher, we wish to admonish our representatives and governor, "Go thou and do likewise."

Charity should begin at home and then spread abroad, and if this be true, then Texas certainly needs to clean up her own premises before lauding those of other states so vociferously.

Like the ostrich, we are apparently hiding our head in the sand, all the while leaving our body exposed, yet such procedure does not remove the fact one whit or change the situation one bit.

Texas is mob-ridden, mob-controlled and mob-infested, and unless the legislature takes due cognizance of this menace and passes and enforces legislation to suppress this reign of lawlessness, outlawry and anarchy, we are in for ome perilous times.

Crimes are multiplying with painful regularity and the written law is treated as a joke in too many quarters for the safety and perpetuity of the commonwealth.

We need to get back to our first love, constitutional government, and press the machinery of the state into service to the end that all men will have the utmost respect for law and constituted authority.

Resolutions of commendations will not alter the internal conditions of our state, and if the solons are in earnest and not merely playing to the galleries, they will show more interest in lynch law at home and seek to correct and eliminate these evils.

Foreign missionary endeavor is all right, but home missionary work should and must take pre-eminence over the former, for charity begins at home and then spreads abroad.

Let Texas clean her skirts of the shame and disgrace of mob-rule and then her representatives can consistently commend officials of other states for their stand and action to remove the scourge of mobocracy from the confines of their commonwealths.

GOOSE CREEK MASKERS WHIP MAN AND WOMAN

Memphis Scim.

No Statement Given as to the Cause of Flogging.

1-13-23

Commercial Appeal

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 12.—After many monts of apparent inactivity the masked band at Goose Creek, an oil field near Houston, has again made itself felt. The merciless flogging of Mrs. R. H. Harrison, a 30-year-old Goose Creek widow, and R. A. Armand, aged 28 years, last Friday night, is its newest exploit. Since the flogging Mrs. Harrison has been confined to bed too badly injured and too frightened to move out of the house.

No warning was issued to either Armand or Mrs. Harrison. Neither wuold the men tell their victims why they were being subjected to the flogging. Mrs. Harrison was separated from her husband several months ago.

Mrs. Harrison stated that on the night of the whipping she had been confined to her bed on order of her doctor. She and her three-year-old daughter, Bonnie Lee, were in the house alone when Armand drove in his car to bring her some fruit.

"We were all in the room together—Mr. Armand, Bonnie Lee and myself—when a knock came at the door. Bonnie Lee ran to answer it. But in a moment she ran back into the room terribly frightened. "Oh, mamma," she said, "There's the funniest looking man at the door. He's all white."

"I told her to tell the man to come in," Mrs. Harrison stated, "and a man, his face whitened with grease paint, with red paint marks under his eyes and a wild-haired wig powdered white—walked into the room. I asked him what he wanted, and in answer he pulled two revolvers out and shouted, 'Hands up.'

Men Dressed Like Women.

"Two other men, dressed like women, then came into the room and made us captive. Then about 12 other men entered and one of the men threw a gunny sack over Mr. Armand's head. I was clothed only in night garments, and they pulled me from the bed and threw a robe over my head. Altogether there were about 15 men in the band.

"We were then led out into the street and thrown into automobiles. Mr. Armand was thrown in one car and I was thrown into the other. Before the men started they shot the tires off of Mr. Armand's car.

"In spite of all this commotion," she said, "none of the neighbors offered us any assistance. My little girl was screaming and the white-faced man said he would blow her head off if she didn't stop.

"The cars started off and made several stops before the men finally agreed that they had reached the proper place. They took Mr. Armand off into a field, and when they began flogging him his screams and the horrible noise of it all overcame me and I fainted," she said.

"When we left the house the men told me that they were not going to whip me, but that I was to watch the flogging of Mr. Armand. After they had finished whipping him they jerked me to my feet and took me to the place where they had flogged him.

"First they cut off all my hair, leaving nothing but ragged stubbs too short to bob. The thing they hit me with must have been a large leather strap. I fainted when the first blow fell and was restored to consciousness after they had finished," she said.

"When the crowd had finished beating us they carried us within two blocks of my house and threw us out of the cars. They had rubbed crude oil into Mr. Armand's wounds."

SAYS LEGISLATURE HAS SURRENDERED TO KU KLUX KLAN

Kaufman County Man Upbraids Members For Present Stand

Houston post 1/9/23

Houston Post Special.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 8.—Representative J. Roy Hardin of Kaufman today gave out a statement in which he upbraided members of the legislature who are members of the Ku Klux Klan for the stand they are taking. Representative Hardin asserts these members stood one way at home and are now voting another in the legislature.

Representative Hardin's statement on the issue follows:

"The legislature, to all appearances, has surrendered, lock, stock and barrel, to the Ku Klux Klan. The house of representatives will be dominated by the Klan from speaker to page, regardless of which candidate for the speakership is selected.

"There are more than 50 anti-Klan members of the house and, with the ranks of the Klan broken, they could easily have named the speaker. But they threw away their opportunity and are safely stowed away in some section of the Klan camp. Men who won their election on the Klan issue seem afraid to speak of the Klan above a whisper. Members who are planning anti-Klan legislation are whooping it up for a candidate who would rather cut off his good right arm than to take an anti-Klan stand.

"It is surprising to me that a man can run on one side of an issue at home and then vote on the other side of that issue at Austin. There is absolutely no support to be had for a candidate for speaker who stands squarely and unequivocably against hooded lawlessness. It looks to me like these fellows who talk one way at home and then vote another way down here would have some explaining to their constituents when they get back home. Of course, the prospect of sharing in the swag which the speaker controls influences some. There has been much jockeying, much parleying, much caucusing here at Austin the past few weeks, and it is rumored that some huge chunks of pie are to be passed around to the faithful."

MASKED MEN FLOG WOMAN AND CALLER

CHILD TELLS OF MOB'S ACTS

Says 15 Men In White Dragged Mother From Home, Cut Off Her Hair and Whipped Her.

1-14-23

New York Times

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 13.—Goose Creek is in a state of excitement as a result of the events of the past week following the flogging by masked men of Mrs. R. H. Harrison, 30, a widow, and R. A. Armand, a caller in her home. Mrs. Harrison is on her way to Houston today to ask protection from Judge J. C. Hutcheson. Before leaving Goose Creek she said she would appeal to the Federal authorities.

Goose Creek citizens, who did not approve of the flogging administered Friday night a week ago to Mrs. Harrison and Armand, whose home is in Middletown, Texas, attempted to hold a protest mass meeting Monday night of this week. Five hundred persons gathered in the vicinity of a filling station, blocking vehicle traffice in all directions. For more than an hour, according to witnesses, the crowd milled about, but there was apparently no one to take the lead and finally the crowd dispersed.

Aided by Mrs. Harrison's 7-year-old daughter, Bonnie Lee, who says she saw a mob of fifteen or more disguised men drag her mother from home, cut off her long hair and whip her, authorities were expected today to come out in the open with their investigation. The whipping had been kept secret until Friday, when rumors were circulated.

The child was the first to see the mob members, one of whom knocked on the door of the Harrison home at Goose Creek, an oil town thirty-five miles southeast of Houston, about 9 P. M. on Jan. 5. She told her mother that the caller was dressed "all in white." Later the victims of the mob told how two of its members wore the garb of women, although obviously they were men, while others were dressed as circus clowns, comedians and other odd characters.

Mrs. Harrison, when interviewed by newspapermen, refused to describe the alleged assailants other than to say they were disguised. Armand also failed to throw light on the identity of the fifteen or more men.

At least one of the mob members is expected to be identified by the little girl. She told Deputy Sheriff Hamilton she would know one of them.

"Two or three members of the party kept insisting that Mr. Armand and I be killed right there," Mrs. Harrison said. "'Kill them both!' they cried, and 'throw their bodies in the bayou.'

"I heard threats to mutilate both of us. I expected death every instant. Others in the party, though, declared that the whipping was sufficient, and so they finally took us back to within a few blocks of my home and threw us out of the car.

"Dazed from our experience, almost too weak to drag ourselves along, we wandered around for a while but finally managed to reach the house, where I dressed Mr. Armand's wounds. Both of us were in frightful pain, but his was worse, as the men had rubbed tar or oil into the bleeding places on his body.

"Upon my return I found that my home had been completely ransacked. Every drawer, trunk and box in the house had been opened and the contents strewn about the floor. I don't know what they were looking for. There was nothing of special value."

Armand is confined to his bed, his back lacerated by many lashes. Armand said Mrs. Harrison had been ill several days and he had gone to her home with fruit only a few minutes before the masked mob arrived.

Sheriff T. A. Binford, who was said to have had indorsement of the Ku Klux Klan at the election last Fall, denied that the Klan had anything to do with the flogging.

Similar cases previously had been reported in which residents of Goose Creek were taken from their homes and whipped, but few of those who returned covered with bruises are willing to talk.

WOMAN TELLS OF FLOGGING GIVEN BY MASKED BAND OF MEN

Judge Charges Jurors on Sanctity of Home; Investigation Begins

(Associated Press)

HOUSTON, TEX., Jan. 15.—Mrs. R. H. Harrison, a widow who was taken from her home in Goose Creek on the night of January 5 and flogged by masked men, appeared before the Harris county grand jury here today. At the conclusion of her testimony, she collapsed.

R. A. Armand, another victim of the hooded band, was brought to Houston late Sunday and is receiving medical treatment. He will appear before the grand jury as soon as the attending physicians advise that his strength is sufficient.

A federal agent, said to have laid the foundation for the present hearing in Bastrop, La., is in Houston. It is believed he will investigate the case, although department of justice officials deny any knowledge of his activities.

The grand jury was called into court this morning and charged by District Judge C. W. Robinson to devote its labors exclusively to investigation of the whippings of Armand and Mrs. Harrison.

The charge of Judge Robinson is said to have been the most vigorous charge against masked lawlessness that has ever emanated from any bench in the state.

In making his charge to the grand jury, Judge Robinson said:

"I have called you down this morning to impress upon you that of all of the violations of the law that you come into contact with in the discharge of your duties, they fall into insignicance compared to the invasion of the home. I have called you here this morning to tell you to waste no more of your time upon burglaries, upon thefts, or any other species of crime under the statutes of this state until you have exhausted every remedy known to the laws of this state to run down the men, the set of men that cruelly, unlawfully, wilfully, cowardly invaded the home of this woman and took her from her sick bed out into the chill night and beat her into unconsciousness. * * *

"Now, through you, I want to call upon every citizen of Harris county, whether he be Jew or Gentile, whether he be Ku Klux or anti-Ku Klux, whether he be Mason or anti-Mason, whether he be Elk or anti-Elk, I want to call on every good citizen in Harris county, whether man or woman, to help you find out who the people were that committed this dastardly deed."

(By Universal Service.)

BEAUMONT, Texas, Jan. 14.—Tarring, feathering and flogging of Dr. J. S. Paul, widely known physician, here the night of May 7, 1921, an attack which aroused the country and was the inception of a campaign against the Ku Klux Klan, which since has grown to nation-wide proportions, was committed by men wearing black masks. 1-15-23

The Beaumont branch of the Ku Klux Klan, in an official communication to newspapers here, admitted responsibility for the attack on Dr. Paul, a fact which substantiates testimony of witnesses called in the Louisiana probe of alleged klan activities that men wearing black masks were responsible for the kidnaping and eventual killing of Watt Daniel and Tom Richards in Morehouse parish.

J. F. Burba, formerly a reporter for a local newspaper, now engaged in newspaper work at Lima, Ohio, who witnessed the attack on Dr. Paul at the klan's invitation, minutely described the apparel of the assailants in his article the day following, and in subsequent issues of his newspaper.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Jan. 20.—Coincident with adjournment of the Harris county grand jury's investigation of the flogging of Mrs. R. H. Harrison and R. A. Armand, both of Goose creek, until Monday it was learned that warrants in the whipping case are expected momentarily.

M. P. Rogers, Goose creek man against whom a charge of assault with intent to murder was filed Friday night, now is at liberty on $500 bond. Rogers was identified by Armand, who signed the complaint.

Klan Awards $750 For Capture of Man Charged With Murder

Wichita Falls, Texas, January 19.

Chief Deputy Jack Miller has departed for Oklahoma City to bring Harry Toussaint back to Wichita Falls to face for a second time a charge of murdering his own father, following his capture last night by Deputy L. P. Barry. Toussaint, criminal of nation-wide repute, broke out of county jail here recently. 1-19-23

Miller took with him a check for $750 as the amount of reward offered by the local Ku Klux Klan. Sheriff Pat Murphy has had two telegrams from Deputy Barry affirming the capture of Toussaint.

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 31.—Complete returns in Saturday's city Democratic primary election give Mayor Holcombe a majority of 1,177 votes in his campaign for re-election against Judge Murray B Jones. Victory in this primary is equivalent to election.

Judge Jones admittedly had the endorsement of the Ku Klux Klan. It was charged that Mayor Holcombe also was a member of the Klan. Three City Commissioners, said to be opposed by the Klan, were returned to office, while one, said to have the endorsement of the Klan, was first man in a five-cornered race.

Anti-Ku Klux Ticket Wins El Paso Election

(Associated Press Report.)

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 24.—State Senator R. M. Dudley, heading the anti-Ku Klux Klan ticket, was nominated mayor of El Paso tonight. P. E. Gardner, who ran for office on a klan-indorsed ticket, conceded the election to Mr. Dudley. Dudley's entire aldermanic ticket, with possibly one exception, still in doubt, won. The anti-klan candidates also won out for minor places.

Reaction Sets In Against Rule of Hooded Bands; Police Forces of Whole Cities Are in the Klan

Mayfield's Election to U. S. Senate Opens Way for War by Antis; Many Crimes by Masked Men

NEW YORK HERALD
FEBRUARY 4, 1923

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.
HOUSTON, Texas, Feb. 3.

TEXAS is the rotten borough of the Ku Klux Klan. Six of its hustling, thriving cities—Waco, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Beaumont and Austin, the capital, are powerful political units of the Invisible Empire. A small coterie of Klan titans, with headquarters at Atlanta, dictate the policies of the government of those municipalities.

Dr. H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard, is the actual ruler of the great Lone Star State. What he says has great weight at the State House at Austin. He is the political boss of Texas. He overlords the Governor, the House of Representatives, judges, mayors, boards of aldermen, sheriffs and members of the Congress of the United States. Some of his followers whip men and women when they see fit and do not fear the law.

There is suspicion that Gov. Pat Neff is a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but whether that be true or not, he has made little effort to stop the outrages committed by hooded mobs on citizens of his State.

Discussing the situation in Texas with THE NEW YORK HERALD correspondent, former Gov. James E. Ferguson said: "If Gov. Neff is not a member of the Klan he is the best friend it has."

Gov. Neff has devoted much time to running down bootleggers and other minor criminals, but has not been aggressive against the mobs that flog men and women for some real or fancied infraction of the moral codes of the Klansmen.

Hundreds of persons have been beaten in Texas. A very small per cent. of the cases has reached the newspapers. These acts of violence were committed by Klansmen or persons in their garb and behind their masks.

Testifying in the kidnaping and murder inquiry at Bastrop, Fred Cobb, a husky Texan, who had been taken out and lectured for alleged immoral conduct, said he could not understand the Morehouse parish idea, as he had been used to Texas, where men, without masks, met and fought in the open. Cobb would not now recognize some counties in his native State, for the mob has become the rule.

Three Women Beaten By the Hooded Mobs

Within a year three women have been seized by hooded parties and brutally beaten. One frail creature at Fort Worth was held by a strong man, while four women of "the Invisible Eye" gave her 100 lashes. Recently at Goose Creek, a suburb of Houston, fifteen or more men kidnaped a woman, the mother of three small girls, cut off her hair and whipped her until she became unconscious.

That is the sort of protection religious fanatics and hoodlums of the hooded bands are giving women.

That is the new kind of chivalry that has sprung up in Texas.

The Texas Klan, the most powerful and radical in the country, was organized in Houston in 1920. The organizers took advantage of the Confederate veterans' reunion, held there in October, to get it going. But very few of the civil war soldiers belong to this new order.

Col. W. S. Simpkins, a Confederate veteran, now professor of law at the University of Texas, has denounced the Klan and predicted that it will soon die. He thinks it is a disgrace to the United States. Col. Simpkins helped organize the old Klan in reconstruction days.

Soon after the Invisible Empire got a foothold in Texas its members started to interfere with individuals and deprive them of their privileges and Constitutional guaranties. The knight of the black mask was busy. First, the victim was the negro, but soon it was anybody. To-day, it is the Catholic and the Jew and all non-Klansmen.

Early last year the Klan entered the political arena in Texas and brought forward Earl B. Mayfield, now waiting to enter the United States Senate March 4.

Two other Klan candidates, Robert L. Henry, former Representative, and Sterling P. Strong were double crossed by the titans. Henry went so far as to get the permission of the Imperial Wizard at Atlanta to let him announce that he was a Klansman. But it had been decreed that Mayfield was the man, and all others were eliminated. Henry and Strong quit the organization.

The secrecy observed by the leaders of the order kept them in the dark until the last few days of the primary campaign; they did not even have time to withdraw from the contest gracefully.

Say He's a Klansman And Spent Huge Sums

The nomination of Mayfield was challenged in the courts of Texas, and for a time it appeared likely that he would be barred from the ticket. Two reasons urged for throwing him out are:

First, that he is a Klansman, and, as such, his oath to that order is more binding than that to his country, his real allegiance being to the Invisible Empire. Mayfield denied, at a hearing before Judge Hawkins Scarborough at Corsicana last October, that he belonged to the Klan. Evidence will be presented before the Senate to show that he was a member up to last June or all through the primary campaign.

Second, it is alleged that he expended between $50,000 and $100,000, collected by the Klan, far in excess of the legal limit provided by the Texas laws.

One of the strangest facts in the history of the Klan in Texas is that many wealthy men have been active members. Merchants who wanted to cripple Jewish competitors were aggressive Klansmen.

In a few localities Jews have bought immunity from the Klan "boycott" by giving money for campaign funds and "voting right."

Large numbers of Catholics have been intimidated and did not vote in hotly contested elections.

Texas Democrats are preparing a vigorous protest against permitting Mayfield to serve in the Senate. Attorneys will go to Washington in a week or ten days to file papers. A Klan lobby to put him over is being maintained at the national capital.

The Klan is now fighting for life in Texas communities where it was strong six months ago. A recent election in Houston showed that a split in the organization had weakened its strength at the polls. A Statewide league to fight it is being developed and many prominent members have quit.

Recently Judge J. D. Harvey, District Court Judge at Houston, withdrew. He explained that the only reason he joined was that he feared an uprising of the negroes just after the war.

The antis are getting ready to sweep the Klansmen from high places in Texas. Lynch Davidson, who resigned as Lieutenant-Governor, has consistently fought the order. He is being groomed for the Gubernatorial nomination. This is one of the many plans on foot for a "down with the Ku Klux" movement.

An effort to convince the public and the Senate that Mayfield is not a Klansman is being made. Mayfield denied he attended Klan meetings, but when put on the stand at a Corsicana hearing to keep his name off the ballot he admitted he had taken part in secret sessions at Dallas, Gainesville and other places. Soon after this Mayfield, addressing a meeting at Dallas, boasted that the Klan almost got the judge who presided at Corsicana.

Mayfield referred to "one Hawkins Scarborough, a disgrace to the judiciary of this State, who ought to be impeached."

"Let the Klan have him! Let the Klan have him!" came cries from the crowd.

And Mayfield replied: "They came near to getting him down at Corsicana. I'd just like to have this Judge Hawkins Scarborough tell the people of Texas just what the Ku Klux said to him."

At Houston November 6, just before the election, Mayfield described the lawyers who took this matter to the courts as "dirty, lousy hirelings of the Republican party," and had more to say about the district judges who granted the injunctions in the movement to bar him from the ballot.

"They tell me that I should not speak disrespectfully of the courts of the State," he said. "I have already told what I think of Hawkins Scarborough. I am not going to say what I think of this Judge Blackman, but I am just going to repeat his name again."

Mayfield leaned forward over the edge of the platform and said: "Black man! Black man!"

Mayfield was a member of the Texas Railroad Commission before he ran for the Senate. He resided at Meridian, Bosque county, but passed much of his time at Dallas and at other Ku Klux centers. When the question of his eligibility for the Senate nomination arose his friends tried to make it appear that he got out of the order "before he entered the race." But his opponents propose to show that he was an active participant in Klan affairs and got his support financial and otherwise, from that organization.

Early in the campaign this circular ticket was printed and distributed by the Ku Klux Klan:

TAKE THIS HOME WITH YOU AS A MEMORANDUM.

The tenets of the Christian religion.

White supremacy.

Closer relationship between capital and American labor.

Protection of our pure womanhood.

Preventing the cause of mob violence and lynchings.

Preventing unwarranted strikes by foreign labor agitators.

Testifying before the court that investigated the Mayfield matter, L. M. Ballowe threw interesting light on the situation. He had attended Dallas Klan meetings. He said that between the middle of February and the first of April of last year he had seen Mayfield at the meetings. Mayfield had sworn that he quit the January before.

"I was present at two meetings where campaign funds were solicited from the membership of the organization to carry on and effect the election of what were known as Klan candidates," Ballowe said.

Ben Richards, one of the Mayfield managers, was there to look after the money collections.

The Rev. A. C. Parker and Z. E. Marvin presided over the two meetings.

Say He Was Introduced by Evans as a Good Klansman

"Mr. Parker stated they were trying to elect those men," Ballowe testified. "It was stated that it was costing a great deal of money to get those candidates elected and that several of the men (on the ticket) had underwritten the expenses and that they had gone into the hole about $2,000, and they felt like the boys, the other members of the Klan, did not want those fellows to stand that expense so they asked for contributions. That was before the election."

The witness said the secretary of the Klan took down the names.

Mayfield addressed the meeting three times, according to Ballowe, being introduced once or twice by Dr. H. W. Evans, now Imperial Wizard, who presented him as a "good klansman and the next Senator."

"They were closed meetings, so far as I know. They made me give the pass word and exhibit my authority to get in," Ballowe said.

By way of instructions, the Klan leaders marked a ticket for the voters. This declaration was printed on the top with a rubber stamp: "Protestants, we submit the following for your consideration."

The laws of Texas prohibit the use of sample tickets, such as were used in Missouri, Indiana and other States last fall, but all the "undesirables" were scratched from the Texas ticket.

The opposition to Mayfield was so intense that for almost a month court proceedings were devoted to his case. He finally won out and was elected, running about 100,000 behind other Democratic nominees. His opponent, George Peddy of Houston, had the support of Republicans and Democrats. Mayfield called him "the Republican candidate." He is an anti-Klan leader.

Peddy denounced the order and charged Mayfield with being a member.

"One hundred and twenty thousand votes were secretly pledged to Mayfield," he added.

Mayfield, according to Judge Scarborough of the Thirteenth District Court of Texas, spent more money than the law allows for his nomination and his reports to State and Federal authorities fail to give the facts. In finding against Mayfield, when the matter was before him, Judge Scarborough said:

"Based on the undisputed and uncontradicted testimony relative to the answers made to questions instructed by the court as well as other uncontradicted testimony, and on the answers made by the jury of its own accord, judgment is rendered for the relators and against the defendant.

"The judgment is based on the uncontradicted testimony that the reports of Richards, Lyday and Mayfield do not show correctly all receipts and disbursements in the campaign, said reports not including the money spent in Dallas, Harris, Tarrant counties, or in Wichita Falls, or any money contributed by various individuals testifying here by deposition, and none of the amounts were contradicted by testimony and were made with the knowledge and consent of said Mayfield, he having discussed them with Lyday and Ben Richards.

"As to issue No. 13, the uncontradicted evidence shows that in Mayfield's campaign, despite the fact that $10,000 was spent by him and his two campaign managers, in addition the Dallas County Mayfield Club spent $2,000, Jim Straughan $1,500 or better, Wichita Falls people $3,500, Harris county $7,500 to $10,000 and the Dallas Klan not less than $12,000, and J. L. Hunter approximately $1,000, these amounts totaling $40,500.

"All these amounts, under the law, are chargeable against Mayfield, and none was denied by him and no contradiction was offered by any witness as to the expenditure of the amounts in behalf of Mayfield."

With big financial advantage, and the Ku Klux Klan behind him, Mayfield got only a small per cent. of the State vote. The normal voting strength of Texas is 1,150,000. At the last general election approximately 400,000 people voted. Between 33 and 35 per cent. of the qualified voters exercised their suffrage privilege, and but two-thirds of those voting supported Mayfield, who was nominated by 22 per cent. of those entitled to cast ballots.

The Membersip and How It Is Distributed

It is estimated that the membership of the Ku Klux Klan in the State totals 125,000, but by secret methods and Klanish tactics they hold the balance of power in the larger cities. The Klan is not strong or popular in the rural sections.

All sorts of people with axes to grind use the Klan for selfish purposes. In one place a doctor joined with the understanding that he would get the Klan practice. But, eager to get the dollars, the local Klan took in other doctors and soon there was rivalry inside the camp, and the physicians withdrew.

The Klan ridden cities of Texas in the order of their prominence as units of the Invisible Empire are: Waco, 38,500 population; Houston, 138,000; Dallas, 160,000; Fort Worth, 106,000; Beaumont, 40,000; Austin, 35,000.

San Antonio, the largest city in the State, and Galveston and El Paso, border cities, have resisted the Klan sentiment and are not organized.

Churches active in the Ku Klux movement, and the rank they hold are:

The Baptist Church; almost all of its preachers.

Methodists, 80 per cent. of the preachers.

Presbyterians, less than 50 per cent.

Christian, about 45 per cent.

Episcopal ministers, as a rule, have nothing to do with the Klan.

The Texas Legislature is divided: The Senate is anti-Klan and the House strongly pro-Klan.

The Klan has not stopped the flow of liquor, which is to be had anywhere for the effort to get it.

The Texas Citizenship League has been set up to combat the Klan and other un-American orders.

The Klan first caused Dallas people to take notice early in April, 1921, when some of its local members took Alex Johnson, negro elevator boy at the Adolphus Hotel, out and whipped him. The negro was severely flogged for "improper conduct." His assailants wore masks and branded their victim across the forehead with "K. K. K."

That performance was soon followed by a big parade. On May 22 the lights of the city were turned off and the Klan marched through the dark streets.

The first banner carried in the procession bore this inscription: "The Invisible Empire—Here yesterday, here to-day, here forever—White supremacy—One hundred per cent. American—All native born—Parasites must go."

July 18 of that year Mrs. Buelah Johnson was taken from her hotel, tarred and feathered. Hot tar was poured on the woman's head after the hair had been cut.

The same day J. W. Knight of Nacogdoches was seized at Tunson, taken to the woods and beaten. He told friends that about a week before he had received a Ku Klux Klan warning.

The same day also G. C. Benson of Dickinson was kidnaped by three masked men at 9 o'clock in the morning, escorted a half mile from town and whipped with a leather strap.

At Chandler July 20, 1921, Earl H. Peters was robbed and gagged and left helpless on the roadside. A note found by him was signed "K. K. K."

July 2 at Lufkin, Sherwood Vinson was seized by four masked men and tarred and feathered.

July 20, 1921, W. J. McKnight was taken out and tarred and feathered. The next day he shot at a man whom he took to be one of those who humiliated him. He was arrested for carrying concealed weapons.

July 20, 1921, W. M. Hoopingarner, former cashier of the Bay City Trust and Savings Bank, was tarred and feathered by a gang of masked men and ordered to leave town.

Six Pay Fines and the Victim Kills a Seventh

At Teneha July 23 Forrest Johnson, a white man, more than 50 years old, received a "K. K. K." note to leave town, and he obeyed. The same day George Lee, service car driver, was tarred and feathered. He was the third victim at Lufkin within a week.

On July 29 at Metador six members of a party of seven who called on Henry Adams to give him a flogging paid fines aggregating $82 for forming an unlawful assembly. Adams killed a seventh member of the mob.

August 1, 1921, a notice signed K. K. K. was posted on the door of the Ector State Bank, telling ten citizens of the town to go to work or leave the State.

August 8 all bellboys in Texarkana hotels quit work and left after receiving a "K. K. K." warning.

August 9 an "all law-breakers beware" notice was circulated at the Branenridge oil field.

August 18 A. W. Hodde, a lawyer and graduate of the Texas State University, was seized at Brenham, tarred and feathered and told to leave town. On the same day at the same place Joe B. Guybon, 60 years old, received similar treatment.

September 4 four automobile loads of masked men tried to seize Grover Powell of Texarkana, but gave it up when he threatened to shoot them. Later Powell was locked up for carrying a concealed weapon.

September 6 the negroes of Corsicana were warned to "go to work." On the same day hooded klansmen paraded through the negro districts of Nacogdoches.

On September 5, at Sweetwater, notices were posted in the sections of the town occupied by negroes and Mexicans, telling the residents there to leave in ten days.

Two negro bellboys, Sherman W. Kite and Theodore Feamster, were whipped at Austin September 12.

Fred J. Zeegler, a clerk at the Binkley Hotel, Sherman, was taken out on the night of September 20 and tarred and feathered.

Ballinger knew nothing of the Ku Klux Klan until September 23, when notices appeared warning two citizens to pack up and go.

Woman Is Beaten by "Ladies of Invisible Eyes"

Mrs. I. C. Tatum, who lives near Fort Worth, on the Dallas-Fort Worth highway, was severely whipped by a man and four women on September 12 last year. She was accused of failing "to correct immoral tendencies" in a fourten-year-old girl she had adopted.

The man in the party slipped handcuffs over Mrs. Tatum's wrists, drove the machine and held her while the women bared her back and lashed her with a leather strap. The party was masked, but a note to the newspapers said those in it belong to the "Ladies of the Invisible Eye."

Mrs. R. H. Harrison and R. A. Armand were taken from the home of the former January 5 and severely whipped. Mrs. Harrison was permanently injured. This crime has not been fixed on the Klan, but it is known that several of its members took part in the flogging. This is known as the "Goose Creek flogging."

Goose Creek, an oil town thirty miles from Houston, is a radical Klan community. It is controlled by the Standard Oil Company through its subsidiary, the Humble Oil and Refining Company. The Klan here has conducted thirty whippings in the last eight months. It has an official whipper and a whipping squad.

Fort Worth, near the oil region, is in the hands of Klansmen. Two out of three of the Judges that serve the community are avowed members of the Klan, and the third is non-committal. The Judge of the Criminal Court belongs to the order. The District Attorney is a member. His assistant, Robert Hanger, is a son of Exalted Cyclops Bill Hanger, a lawyer.

Ninety-five per cent. of the policemen of the city are Klansmen. All city officials except the Water Commissioner, who is a Canadian and ineligible, are active members of the Fort Worth Klan. The Sheriff of Tarrant county, of which Fort Worth is the capital, and all his deputies wear the Ku Klux brand. All school teachers, including the superintendent, either willingly joined or were coerced to do so.

Men in control of the big business enterprises at Fort Worth have allied themselves with the Klan. Some of them took this step for self-protection.

The present Mayor of Fort Worth is the Rev. Dr. E. R. Cockrell, a Baptist preacher. In the coming spring the town is to have an election, and W. D. Davis, an ex-Mayor, is running against Cockrell. It is a Klan and anti-Klan fight.

Fort Worth has a voting strength of 19,000. The Klan polled only 4,000 in a recent contest.

Conditions in Waco, Houston and Dallas are worse than in Fort Worth. McLennan county, in which Waco is located, is run by the Klan.

Dallas has five courts and Dallas county three. Six of the eight judges are Klansmen, and the Sheriff and a majority of his deputies belong to the order. Ninety per cent. of the police officers of the city are active Klan members. Three of the city judges and all of the county judges have sworn allegiance to the Klan. The District Attorney and his assistants are Klansmen. All of the judges, except one, that serve Waco and McLennan county, and more than 90 per cent. of the county and city enforcement officers are Klansmen.

The Situation in Houston And Other Klan Centers

Austin is not quite so bad. Beaumont has improved in the last two years. Resistance there is effective.

Houston was in bad condition up to the recent election, when the voters reelected Mayor Holcombe, who used to be a Klansman, but withdrew and made the fight on the Klan. He won by 1,300 out of a total voting strength of 18,000.

The Klan divided on Mayor Holcombe. Many union labor members supported him.

Organized labor controls the Klan in Houston and is a powerful factor in other Texas cities.

The District Court Judges in Houston are free from Klan influence. All the County Judges are Klansmen.

Judge C. W. Robinson of the Criminal District Court of Houston, an old time Texan, is the most unrelenting foe the Klan has in his community.

The Sheriff of Harris county and his aids are Klansmen. The District Attorney and his assistants are 100 per cent. Ku Klux; he was elected on a Klan ticket.

The Houston Police Department, due to the efforts of Mayor Holcombe, is comparatively free from Klan influence. Gordon Murphy, former Chief of Police, a Klan leader, resigned some time ago.

In Dallas and Forth Worth the decks are being cleared for Klan and anti-Klan contests in the coming city elections.

The drift now is away from the order. Lawyers and others who played with it a while now see the danger in its further progress. Within the last ten days a Dallas attorney, Patrick C. Short, made public some correspondence between himself and Imperial Wizard William Joseph Simmons.

Short refused to take dictation from the Dallas Klan in political affairs and got out. Later he received a communication from the Atlanta headquarters, in part as follows:

"Official document—To all genii, grand dragons and hydras, great titans and druries, giants, kleagles of every grade and station, exalted cyclops and terrors, and to all citizens of the invisible empire, in the name of the valiant and venerated dead, I affectionately greet you:

"Whereas a certificate of guilt, duly executed and sworn to by the proper officers of Dallas Klan, No. 66, Realm of Texas, certifying to the guilt of Patrick C. Short, a member of Dallas Klan, No. 66, the specifications thereto attached being sufficient cause for banishment.

"Therefore, by virtue of authority which I hold, I do officially decree and proclaim Patrick C. Short is, from this day and date, banished from the bounds of the invisible empire and from membership in the Ku Klux Klan, and he shall not be recognized as a Klansman and is barred from any and all privileges, communions and conversations with Klansmen in any and all matters pertaining to our fellowship. After this day and date he shall not be recognized by Klansmen as being a member of the Knights of the Ku Kluxx Klan. All Klans and all Klansmen will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly under the penalty of our constitution and laws."

To that letter Short replied:

"Jan. 25—To His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of the Invisible Empire, Atlanta, Ga.; Majestic and Imperial Sire—In the name of the valiant and venerated dead and with fear and trembling I affectionately greet you.

Mr. Short's Answer to The Emperor at Atlanta

"Your imperial and terrible edict of an unknown date, but bearing your divine signet, has been delivered to me by your imperial messenger, to wit, a 2 cent stamp.

"I am overwhelmed with grief, humiliation, regret and penitence at your disfavor. Why, oh why was I ever permitted to be born into this world and to live to a time when I should invoke your royal anger. Your punishment, as indicated in your edict, is almost too great for a frail and weak mortal like myself to bear.

"It is true, your royal highness, that I sinned grievously against your imperial empire, for I did actually on the desolate day of the weeping of the terrible month of the year of the Klan LVI. in the city of Dallas, and in the county of Dallas, and in the State of Texas, being a part of your imperial domain, tell a bunch of your imperial slaves who were then and there assembled in Room 921 of the Adolphus Hotel in said city, in said county, in said State of said realm, to take a good running start and go to —— when they demanded of me a native born Texan, that I submit to their dictation as to how and for whom I should cast my ballot, and demanded that I surrender to them my rights as a citizen and support a gang of men for office whom a small clique of political ward heelers had secretly selected, and to this act I again admit that I was and am guilty.

"You also say, most high and mighty, that I can appeal from your decree to the imperial kloncileum within ninety days. Would you kindly convey for me to the said imperial kloncileum the same message that I declared personally to the political ward heelers in the Adolphus Hotel as hereinbefore set out?

"I therefore now inform your imperial and majestic highness in my capacity as a citizen of the State of Texas, for whose independence my forefathers fought under Sam Houston, that your imperial edict creates in me a feeling of supreme and limitless disgust that I can find no words suitable for mailing purposes to express both toward you and your august, imperial and invisible empire exactly how I feel toward you.

"PATRICK C. SHORT."

CHOP BODY OF DOCTOR; DESTROY IT

Texans Throw Physician's Mutilated Frame in Cell; Set Fire to Prison

Chicago Defender

Bishop, Tex., Jan. 19.—Suffering the agonies of the machine-crushed victims of black-hooded mobs in Louisiana, Dr. John Smith, former Wharton county physician, is reported to have been burned to death in the jail here after his feet and hands had been cut off. 1-20-23.

Dr. Smith was charged with crime. His felony, so-called, consisted of having collided while driving his car with an automobile driven by whites.

The people in this section, ignorant and docile to a great extent, have been aroused to unprecedented action by the murder of this leading citizen by the Huns of Texas.

Body Torn Apart

The physician was brutally and barbarously treated, parts of his body torn while he still lived and cried in pain, and then, yet alive, put in the jail, which was set afire.

Reports gathered from scattered conversation among the whites showed that they had become angered after hearing of the collision. Dr. Smith had no trouble with the white occupants of the car. After he and they had taken stock of their damages, these being so slight, the whites refused to accept damages or to institute charges against the doctor.

Later, however, the physician accidentally injured a Mexican woman with his car and, while here, the Wharton county officers came for him, arrested him and placed him in the local jail.

The dismembered body of Dr. Smith was found in the ruins of the burned jailhouse. How and why the bastile was burned, outside of a desire to satisfy the craving of bloodthirsty Texans for murder, and just who the firebugs were, or the contributing cause, or why the fire was not discovered and extinguished, cannot be determined. It was just the usual Texas way of doing things.

Law Doesn't Care

Revolting, shameful and fiendish as was the crime, officers of the law are exercising no extra diligence, in fact none whatever, to ferret out the crime and apprehend and punish the criminals.

The murder of a white mechanic and a bootlegger in Louisiana arouses the entire nation. The atrocious torturing and burning to death of a Race physician in the wilds of Texas proves nothing, save perhaps the suggestion that he ought to have known better than to have been there.

His brothers are awakening, however, and the hordes of somber-hued laborers, dumb driven in the twilight, are seeking and finding a way up—up to the North.

WILL PROBE FLOGGING

Texas Grand Jury Investigates Whipping of White Woman

(Associated Press)

HOUSTON, TEX., Feb. 5.—The Harris county grand jury will continue its investigation into the whipping of Mrs. R. H. Harrison and R. A. Armand, of Goose Creek, until the mob members have been indicted or until further investigation has been barred by the statute of limitations.

This was the ultimatum handed down this afternoon by Judge C. A. Robinson in criminal court to the new grand jury. The judge included the Odd Fellows, the Masons and the Ku Klux Klan in his mention of organizations which should be investigated for proof of maintaining whipping mobs for corrective purposes.

In referring to the Masons and the Odd Fellows, the judge declared that while he did not believe either were in any way responsible for the Goose Creek crime, he stated that it was his belief that the grand jury could find at least one member in each body who could throw light on the floggings and that it was also his belief that "you ought to find one truthful member of the Ku Klux Klan."

A TWADDLING TWADDLER

American Forum

Governor Silzer of New Jersey says "Publicity will wipe out the Ku Klux Klan." Continuing, this self-appointed "wiper," with the trans-Antlantic name, says: San Antonio

"The Ku Klux Klan should not exist," he said. "There is nothing worse than this sudden revival of bigotry, it is radical antagonism which is being roused against the Catholics and the Jews. 2-10-23

"What is the cause of it? Commercial bigotry.

"There is no need for immediate legislative action. Publicity will wipe it out. If not, we will have to pass a law compelling these people to show their faces, subject to severe criminal law of the state. If this bigotry does not end in the near future I shall be first to participate in this stand, not for political purposes, but for the good of others."

Why, certainly wipe 'em out—but who is going to do the wiping? If you are counting on the Catholics and Jews, you are going to be sadly disappointed—for they can't do it—not even with your help.

Keep your shirt on, Governor, for your noise alarms no one—especially in Texas. Thousands of 100 per cent Americans who live in this great white man's state have been along the Rio Grande most of their lives, have heard jackasses bray from early morn to dewy eve—so your noise doesn't frighten them. We presume, like the rest of your ilk, that you are well paid for your talk, and if so, you are cheating your employer. Such twaddle is not worth ten cents per twad.

Says Texas Klans Support Evans

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 4.—The Texas organization of Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is supporting H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in a controversy between him and Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor, which is now being aired at Atlanta, according to George W. Keeling, kleagle of Texas, who is in San Antonio.

Mr. Keeling said he is in touch with all of the Texas organizations and has received information from every section of the State that the klansmen in Texas are a unit in supporting Evans. It was admitted by Mr. Keeling that there is an insurrection among the klansmen led by friends of Colonel Simmons, but he said that there is no split among the Texas organizations and that the split in other States is known to be slight.

"The insurrection has been caused by the injection of politics in the klan," said Mr. Keeling, "which is contrary to the teachings of the order. Texas klansmen ridicule the efforts being made by Colonel Simmons and his followers to overthrow the imperial officers. The officials of the klan have powers which are conveyed upon them under its constitution and the imperial klonvocation only can change them."

No delegates will be sent from Texas, he said.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT UNDERGOES RADICAL CHANGE AT WACO

American Tower
San Antonio, Texas

The reading public will remember that several months ago the sheriff of McLennan County, Texas, decided to win fame and notoriety by preventing a Ku Klux parade at Lorena—a small town near Waco—stabbed to death one of the most popular and patriotic citizens of Waco, got shot himself and played the devil generally. He is still under indictment for the murder.

This belligerent peace officer will never try to stop another peaceful parade of 100 per cent Americans in McLennan County—or any other county. He has learned that the days of "wild-and-wooly-bad-men" has played out in Texas, and it is stated that he licks salt with the herd, and has stopped kicking—while stopping is good.

2-10-23

The little village of Lorena has a law-abiding population. The citizens wanted to witness the Klan parade—but the sheriff craved notoriety—got it, accompanied with a .45-caliber bullet—and would probably have gotten more had he not been supposed to be mortally wounded.

In order to show how things quickly change in this world—despite the Devil and his angels—just read what took place in Waco recently. A newspaper reporter, who was present, sent out the following dispatch:

"Waco today settled down after a Ku Klux Klan parade last night which for a time furnished plenty of excitement, occasioned by reports of a wreck of the two special trains carrying Klansmen from Fort Worth here, but which proved to be a case of engine trouble on one of the engines.

"The trouble occurred a few miles from Maypearl on the way out of Fort Worth. The regular train pulled the two specials back to Fort Worth. The incident was the only incident out of the ordinary.

"Mayor Ben C. Richards deputized 100 citizens to aid the police in preserving order, and the parade included delegations from Fort Worth, Dallas and other cities in North Texas, while Temple and cities south of Waco also were represented.

"Four mounted policemen were at the head of the parade, followed by the American flag and the fiery cross, with about a dozen unmasked men on foot.

"Then there were two bands and two smaller illuminated crosses. Automobiles, driven two abreast, bore 'Original Members, 1886.' Then came the drill team, followed by 55 mounted men, robed and masked. There were 513 lines of four men each, or over 2,000 hooded and masked, on foot."

Only two classes of people today in America are opposing the Ku Klux Klan.

The first are those whose allegiance and loyalty is not to the Government of the United States—and they are natural enemies of any 100 per cent American organization.

The second are those whose loyalty to America cannot be questioned and who do not fully understand the basic principles of the Klan.

Two years from now the opposition to the Ku Klux Klan will be composed solely of those who prefer to obey the Roman government instead of the American government. There's the whole story.

ARKANSAN FLOGGED BY TEXAS MOBBERS

Atlanta Constitution

Denton, Texas, March 31.—Paul Merritt, of Eldorado, Ark., was seized by unidentified men near here last night, carried on an isolated point and severely flogged, officers announced today. He was a defense witness in the case of Barney Cloninger, tried this week on a charge of criminal assault, in which the jury returned a verdict this morning finding Cloninger guilty. Merritt said his assailants told him if he would go before the jury, then deliberating and tell them he had testified falsely, that they would not harm him.

TAYLOR, Texas, April 2.—R. W. Burleson, a salesman, reported to police today that he had been removed from an automobile by a band of seven unmasked men near here last night and severely beaten with leather straps. Tar and feathers also were applied to his head an darms. He said he did not recognize any of the men. Burleson, whose home is said to be in Waco, reported to the police that two weeks ago he had received a warning to leave Taylor, purporting to come from the Ku Klux Klan. Burleson told officers he was driving with a friend and the latter's wife and a yong lady when the attack occurred. Afte rthe flogging he was brought to Taylor and turned loose on the lawn of the City Hall. Officers investigating today said they had no clue to Burleson's assailants, but they believed the men came from some nearby town.

KU KLUX KLAN CONTROVERSY FINDS WAY INTO SENATE WHEN PROCEEDINGS ARE FILED AGAINST EARL MAYFIELD

Montgomery Advertiser

Contest Brought by George E. B. Peddy Against Texan Taking Seat; Charge Excessive Expenditures In Securing Election 2-23-23

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The controversy over the Ku Klux Klan was brought into the United States senate today with the filing of proceedings contesting the right of Earle B. Mayfield to become a senator from Texas.

The contest was brought by George E. B. Peddy, republican, an "independent democratic" candidate for senator in the election last November, who declared himself elected despite the majority credited by election officials to Mayfield, the regular democratic nominee. A scathing indictment of the klan, of which it was charged that Mayfield was a member, was included in the petition and was placed on file with Mayfield's credentials to be considered when the new congress meets next fall.

Klan officers already charged with "illegal and fraudulent" acts in the petition, which also alleged fraud in counting the ballots, illegal expenditures of more than $150,000 in Mayfield's behalf, and numerous other irregularities. Among the charges laid at the door of the klan were that it had attempted to erect a super government, to "seduce and defile the public conscience to gain commercial and other dominion, to accomplish "prostitution of the Christian religion", to exercise "brutal and tyrannic control and discipline" and to engage in illegal and immoral practices."

The senate was asked to preserve and recount the Texas ballots to investigate the Texas primary and election and to prohibit Mayfield from taking the oath when the next congress convenes. His credentials having been received, however, the whole matter, under the senate procedure, would be referred to the privileges and elections committee when congress reassembles, and pending the committee's investigation, the oath would be administered.

The contestant's petition declared that Mayfield's was "not honestly or lawfully elected" by virtue of the fact that Peddy's name was kept off the printed ballot, because of the alleged "conspiracy" of the klan, and for other reasons. The document comprised about 25,000 words, and was accompanied by many exhibits, including alleged copies of letters between klan officers, naming Mayfield as a klansman, and urging klansmen to support him.

In support of a charge that Mayfield abused his power as state railroad commissioner to further his campaign one of the papers accompanying the case quoted him as threatening oil and other interests, in seeking campaign contributions.

"You tell those d—— that if I am not elected to the senate, I will be railroad commissioner four years more and they had better kick in or they will be sorry," Mayfield was quoted as having informed Mike McNamara, deputy oil commissioner. It was charged also that McNamara was told to get $20,000 in contributions and did turn over some of the receipts.

18 INDICTED IN GOOSE CREEK RULE OF FEAR

Ring of Fifty Began Reign of Terror in Which 20 Adults Flogged

The Montgomery Advertiser 2-6-23

HOUSTON, TEXAS, May 5.—The Goose Creek "reign of terror"—so described in the final report of the February term grand jury—was submitted to Judge C. W. Robinson in criminal district court today with 26 indictments based on six cases of mob violence. Eighteen men are named.

The report recites that the jurors had "no idea" of the extent of the operations of the "ring" of not more than 50 men, which, it claims, was responsible for conditions threatening the ruin of the community. Witnesses however, gave testimony 20 men and women and one boy were flogged.

Twenty of the indictments charge assault with prohibited weapons, five chrage perjury and one charges aggravated assault, a misdemeanor.

Tom Staples is named in four of the perjury bills, Bill Ogden in one. Staples and M. P. "Slim" Rogers are named in three each of the weapons bills, Bill Darby in two and Bill Ogden, Ed Vial, Earl Smith, K. A. Kubley, Walter Harvey, S. B. Herbert, A. F. Grodehouse, Woodie Bonds, E. T. Arnet, George Howell and J. E. Harper, in one each. The aggravated assault indictment names C. M. Brewer, John Roberts, Jess Fowler and E. C. Slaughter.

Bond has been fixed by Judge Robinson at $2,500 in the perjury cases, $1,000 in the weapons assault cases, and $500 in the aggravated assault cases, which will be transferred to county court.

The defendants, according to announcement by John M. Mathias, attorney, will make bond tomorrow.

Excusing the jurors with regret that they could not be retained for another 30 or 60 day term, Judge Robinson said, "in all earnestness," that they had "accomplished a work equal, if not greater than that of any 12 soldiers led by Sam Houston at the battle of San Jacinto."

The Goose Creek outrage came to an end with the whipping of Mrs. R. H. Harrison, who was taken from a sick bed, and R. A. Armand. Several persons were tried for this offense and acquitted.

18 GOOSE CREEK MEN INDICTED BY GRAND JURORS

26 True Bills Returned After Probe Into Mob Violence

ACTION TERMED REIGN OF TERROR

The Houston Post 5-6-23

The Goose Creek "reign of terror"—so described in the final report of the February term grand jury—was submitted to Judge C. W. Robinson in criminal district court, Saturday with 26 indictments based on six cases of mob violence. Eighteen men are named. 5-6-23

Instructed by the court when they took the oath, the jurors recite that they had "no idea" of the extent of the operations of the "ring" of not more than 50 men, which, it claims, was responsible for conditions threatening the ruin of the community. Witnesses, however, gave testimony 20 men and women and one boy were flogged.

Twenty of the indictments charge assault with prohibited weapons, five charge perjury and one charges aggravated assault, a misdemeanor.

Tom Staples is named in four of the perjury bills, Bill Ogden in one. Staples and M. P. "Slim" Rogers are named in three each of the weapons bills, Bill Darby in two and Bill Ogden, Ed Vial, Earl Smith, K. A. Kubley, Walter Harvey, S. B. Herbert, A. F. Grodehouse, Woodie Bonds, E. T. Arnet, George Howell and J. E. Harper in one each. The aggravated assault indictment names C. M. Brewer, John Roberts, Jess Fowler and E. C. Slaughter.

Bonds Fixed.

Bond has been fixed by Judge Robinson at $2500 in the perjury cases, $1000 in the weapons assault cases and $500 in the aggravated assault cases, which will be transferred to county court. The Houston Post

The defendants, according to announcement by John M. Mathis, attorney, will make bond this morning. 5-6-23

Excusing the jurors with regret that they could not be retained for another 30 or 60 day term, Judge Robinson said, "in all earnestness" that they had "accomplished a work equal, if not greater, than that of any 12 soldiers led by Sam Houston at the Battle of San Jacinto." 5-6-23

"These soldiers established this State," the judge said. "You, by your earnestness, zeal and patriotism, have saved this State for law and order. Your work and your patriotism, with the American flag flying over your heads, without the tar bucket and the strap, has let it be known to all masked bodies that masks can be penetrated in a legal and lawful way and, when you have demonstrated that to mobs, then mobs will cease.

Judge's Praise.

"I have had grand juries ahead of you, good men who have worked on this thing. You are the only gentlemen who have accomplished the work. You have entered into an impenetrable forest of darkness and, by constant work, earnest and honest labors, have torn it down. You have taken the mask from them, and I want to say to each of you that so long as you live, so long as your children or grandchildren live, while I live they and you will have one friend."

The judge expressed the wish that he could hold the jury so that they might complete the work of "driving from Harris county and the State of Texas the people who conceive the idea that they can delegate to themselves the right or authority to punish people for any crime in any way other than that fixed by the constitution and laws of this country."

The Goose Creek outrages came to an end with the whipping of Mrs. R. H. Harrison, who was taken from a sick-bed, and R. A. Armand. M. P. "Slim" Rogers was identified January 19 by Armand, who swore to a warrant charging assault with intent to murder.

Unlawful assembly charges, growing out of a gathering alleged to have been for the purpose of flogging E. C. Slaughter, Goose Creek postmaster, were tried in county court but the four defendants were discharged.

In addition to the Goose Creek inquiry the grand jurors investigated "third degree" methods by law enforcement officers, reporting there has been a "more or less general practice among certain peace officers of maltreating persons under arrest with a view of securing confessions from them."

Jury's Report.

The full text of the grand jury report follows:

The Hon. C. W. Robinson, judge of the criminal district court of Harris county, Texas.

Sir.

Your grand jury for the February term, 1923, is compelled to adjourn because this term of court ends today.

We have worked diligently on all violations of law over the entire county and during the term we have presented to this honorable court indictments covering eight capital cases, 151 felonies and four misdemeanors.

When this grand jury was empaneled, in addition to general instructions, this honorable court directed our attention with much emphasis and much zeal to the prevalence of mob violence in certain portions of this county. At that time we had some general idea of mob violence which had prevailed in this county and over the nation, more or less, for about two years, but we had no idea of the extent of it in this county, although, so advised by the judge, until we went into our duties and began to have it revealed by many witnesses.

"Reign of Terror."

Beginning about two years ago and continuing until the 5th day of January, this year, there was in the Goose Creek vicinity a reign of terror unparalleled in this county. This was brought about, not by the whole citizenship of Goose Creek, but by a small minority, probably not more than 50 men.

During that time something like 20 persons were beaten. Among these were men, women and one boy about 16 years old. Just how this reign of mob violence started, or why it started, does not clearly appear from the testimony. In most cases, as far as we have been able to learn, the whippings were easily gotten up.

It seemed to have been sufficient to start a report on some man or woman, detrimental to his or her character, and let this circulate a little while, when it would be followed by an organized mob, generally in disguise, who would go to the home or place of business of such person, always in the night time, and by force take him, place a sack over his head and carry him hurriedly away, giving him a desperate whipping and such moral advice as they might deem proper, then release him, sometimes to walk several miles; sometimes they would carry him back to a definite point and release him. In one instance, after whipping a woman, the mob held prayer and then delivered her back close to her home, badly beaten, and in another instance left a man and woman chained together.

"Point of Murder."

If this honorable court had not many months ago commenced and continued vigorous and bold operations in fighting mob violence, it probably would not have been checked. If it had not been checked, it is perfectly plain to this grand jury that it would not have stopped, but sooner or later would have reached the point of murder itself.

While mob violence was at its zenith it seems that a majority, perhaps, of the citizenship in Goose Creek was so terrorized and overawed that they were afraid to tell anything they knew. They felt that this band of night-time marauders would just as soon land on those who opposed them as not. No man knew when he was secure and safe in his own home.

While we have not worked out all of the whippings, we are glad to report that we have made progress, as will be observed by the indictments filed this day. If we had 30 days more, with our present facilities and understanding of the facts we believe that the whole business would be cleaned up. While we adjourn without finishing the job, we feel that your honor will direct the next grand jury's attention to this report, and stimulate it to go forward with the work.

We beg to note that conditions are changing for the better in the Goose Creek vicinity. Within the last six weeks conditions have been loosening up. We are now able to advise you that the great majority of the people in Goose Creek, perhaps nearly all of them, are radically opposed to the reign of terror heretofore prevailing there. They know and appreciate the fact that such conditions are ruining their splendid little city. In fact, some of the very men who participated in the mobs mentioned are now openly declaring that the thing went too far and must be stopped, or the town will be disgraced and ruined.

It must be remembered, and we take pleasure in saying in this report, that in Goose Creek there were many, many faithful law-abiding citizens who never indorsed, encouraged or condoned the lawlessness prevailing in that vicinity about which we are talking. We have recently had much help from the citizens, and we take very great pleasure in thanking them for such co-operation.

"Purpose of Government."

It must be borne in mind by everybody that the chief purpose of government is to secure to every man, charged with any violation of law, a fair and impartial trial in open court before a jury of his country, and our laws provide for such a trial no matter how humble the citizen may be. The court house is the place to settle disputes of every character. No mob has a right to try anybody in secret, or otherwise for that matter, and then inflict punishment.

There has been some evidence before us indicating that there has been more or less general practice among certain peace officers of maltreating persons under arrest, with a view of securing confessions from them. The grand jury has not been able to find sufficient evidence to bring indictments in such cases, but wishes to emphatically condemn such practices.

While the evidence before us indicated that the maltreatment of prisoners was done during the absence of, and without the knowledge of the chief of police, we had Mr. Goodson before us and he not only assured us that he had never countenanced such practices in the past, but that in the future he would adopt plans which would absolutely prevent such abuse of authority.

Ask Legislation."

In our investigation of certain crimes, the grand jury came to the conclusion that many public garages are being used as a rendezvous for criminals, especially those guilty of robbery and bootlegging. Unless this condition is materially changed, we would recommend appropriate remedial legislation, including perhaps the licensing of such places.

In conclusion we desire to unanimously commend this honorable court upon his courageous and fearless course in stamping out mob violence, as well as the enforcement of all other criminal laws of this State, and we thank this court for the many courtesies shown us during our service as a grand jury.

Respectfully submitted,

R. L. Blaffer, foreman; Rawle Buckner, J. W. Evans, A. C. Ford, Herbert Godwin, E. F. Gossett, Harry Kendall, Perry Mack, T. F. Maurin, Frank W. Murphy, J. W. Reynolds, and Sam Taub.

SHERIFF NOTIFIED "MASKED MOB" MEN WILL MAKE BOND

Houston, Texas, May 5.—Notification was sent this afternoon to Sheriff T. Binford that all the men named in indictments returned shortly before noon today by a grand jury which delivered a scathing arraignment of "masked mob" rule and reported on investigation of floggings at Goose Creek, Harris county, would make bond early tomorrow. 5-6-23.

Twenty-six indictments were returned. Twenty of the counts charge assault with prohibitive weapons, five charge perjury and one aggravated assault. It is understood that all of these indictments were based on testimony submitted concerning floggings at Goose Creek.

There are considerably less than 26 persons involved, as in some instances a number of indictments were returned against the same individuals.

Americanism and the Great Ku Klux Klan

Rev. C. P. Bridewell.

Considerable publicity has been given the Ku Klu Klan, and its activities have been severely criticized. The organization has been given such wide notoriety in certain places that even state officials have sought to put it under ban. Most of the probes and official investigations have been dropped, and the Klan increases in membership. The organization is strong enough to make itself felt in the political and social life of the nation.

What are the purposes of the Ku Klux Klan, and who are the enemies of this so-called "Invisible Empire?" It is said that no alien, nor citizen of foreign birth is eligible for membership. No Jew may become a member, not because the Klan is against the Jew, but because it professes "the Christian Religion." No Roman Catholic may be admitted because of Church and State," and does not believe in "Freedom of Speech and Press." In fact, these are the chief tenets of the order.

The Roman Catholic is regarded as holding alliance to a foreign power—the Vatican. Therefore, twenty millions of Roman Catholics in the United States are vigorously opposed to the Ku Klux Klan. Many representatives of the American Federation of Labor oppose the Klan as also do Socialist and radical organizations, because the Klan is committed to the upholding of the Constitution of the United States and the sovereignty of state rights. It is said that some organizations have been formed to resist the activities of the Klan and to do everything in their power to crush it. In the meantime this secret sociey is said to be adding thousands almost weekly to its membership. No doubt many activities attributed to the members of the Klan are absolutely false. All sorts of evils, for which they are not responsible, have been charged to them in order to create sentiment against the order.

The purpose of the organization, as we understand it, is to suppress crime and to uphold American ideals. The members of the Klan point to the decrease in the crime wave through their instrumentality. The society was doubtless raised up to combat certain un-American influences and evils. If it works secretly and invisibly, it is because other organization are working in the same manner. There is no basis for the charge that the Ku Klux Klan is an un-American society. Organized Catholicism is doing all in its power to gain control of this country. Look at the police force in every city and you will find is largely Roman Catholic. Our public schools have been denounced by Roman Catholic authorities, and yet Roman Catholic teachers are altogether out of proportion to their population. Roman Catholic districts have given their vote to those who promised favors to the church. There is no greater peril to American institutions than political Romanism. The Roman Catholic machine in this country is not influenced by American ideals and by fair play. The time has come for some organization to combat the work of this machine. The Ku Klux Klan has a right to exist so long as this machine exists, and so long as the Knights of Columbus are sworn to look after the interests of the papacy. There must be less domination of city halls and less of Rome in politics; less obstruction of the process of law, and less corrupting the ballot box. The Ku Klux Klan stands for Americanism, for equality and purity, for the enforcement of law, and is a terror against lawless elements.

There is no more un-American institution than political Rome. Someone cites Tammany Hall as an example of Rome's machine-clutch on our polities, for when did Tammany Hall ever have a boss who was not Roman Catholic? Rome fattens during election campaigns and is at her best in corrupt politics. The Roman Catholic church can never be depended upon to stand for American ideals. Therefore we say, that before we hurl our invectives at the Ku Klux Klan, let us have a house cleaning on the part of the Roman Catholic machine. If it is the secret, invisible activities of the Ku Klux Klan that are objected to, then why not object to the invisible methods of some other societies, namely, the Knights of Columbus. The Ku Klux Klan has been provoked into existence by the secret, underhanded methods of Romanism. When the Roman Catholic machine abandons her bad qualities and come out into the open, then the Ku Klux Klan will doubtless be ready to do the same. Let us get rid of the plotting ecclesiastic, the corrupt boss, the undesirable citizen, the bootlegger, and everything else that is undesirable. Let the Ku Klux Klan insist upon American ideals and American fairplay, and tolerate no favoritism for Rome.

From the old reliable Klan paper—The Missouri Vally Independant, we have clipped the above, solely on it's merits—for it is well worth reading by every 100 per cent white native born patriot, in this greatest of all countries. That the Klan has long been needed in America, is conclusively proven, by the activities of the 20 millions Catholics in the United States. Our population is over 100 million—and most of them, are 100 per cent Americans. I guess we can get along all right.

BIG CROWD HEARS COL. SIMMONS IN BEAUMONT SPEECH

'Emperor' Says Klan Will Live; Doesn't Mention Evans Regime

Houston Post Special.

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 29.—Declaring that the Ku Klux Klan movement will sweep onward and onward; that the organizations principles are those of righteousness, and that onslaughts directed against its membership will prove futile, Colonel William Joseph Simmons of Atlanta, emperor of the klan, spoke here tonight at the South Texas fair grounds before klansmen and others from many parts of Texas and Louisiana.

Every train arriving in the city today had attached to it special cars filled with those bound for the address and the big barbecue which preceded it.

15,000 in Crowd.

Estimates of Beaumont newspaper men placed the crowd which heard Colonel Simmons at between 15,000 and 20,000 persons. The traffic jam around the fair grounds was not unscrambled until after 11 o'clock. Local klansmen worked as unofficial traffic assistants aiding the big crowd and the hundreds of automobiles away from the fair grounds.

The founder of the klan made no reference to Imperial Wizard Evans or reports of discord at Atlanta. Nor did he mention the battle in the courts which preceded his trip to Texas, in which State he is scheduled to deliver many addresses. Instead, he devoted his talk to an exposition of the aims, the principles and the activities of the klan.

Defending the right of klansmen to keep their membership secret, Colonel Simmons asserted the robe and helmet memorialized the Ku Klux Klan of the South's reconstruction days. They saved the South untold horrors, he declared, adding that to him and all true klansmen these garments were "sacred vestments," a symbol of the South's travail and its victory over forces of destruction.

Simmon's Talks Vigorous.

Colonel Simmons' talk was vigorous. His voice a trifle husky from the strain to which he has subjected it, the speaker nevertheless strove to make those on the outskirts of his audience understand each sentence.

At one point in his discourse he referred to printed attacks on him, saying:

"I'm that old decrepit, half-drunken wretch you've read so much about. * * But I want to tell you that I'm here in all the glory of my youth, fighting the fight that Providence meant I should."

Referring to the struggle he and other pioneers made at the outset of the klan's existence, the speaker declared that he had conceived the organization to be the outward physical expression of a great movement which ultimately will cleanse America so no other agency could.

"It's a part of my soul," he exclaimed, "and I've dedicated my life to it."

Well down in his speech came reference to the Kamelia, the new order founded for women. Colonel Simmons declared that this order was to be for American women what the klan had been for its manhood. It isn't an auxiliary of the klan, the speaker added, but a full-fledged order.

U. S. Has Drifted.

"America has drifted," Colonel Simmons went on; "drifted away from the principles it was founded upon in Colonial days. Instead of a government of the people as it was intended to be it has become a government for politicians.

"What America needs just now is a movement which will enshrine in every man's heart an ideal made up of three parts," he continued. "These are home, family and country."

Turning his attention again to what he described as "newspaper talk," the speaker asserted vehemently that the klan is "anti-nothing but 'anti-wrong.'" And he urged klansmen to be "anti-wrong" regardless of criticism.

After visiting numerous cities of Texas, Colonel Simmons told his auditors, he intends to go to Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas. "I am assured that in these States more than 250,000 klansmen await my coming and to receive my instructions."

Colonel Simmons will leave Saturday morning for San Antonio, where he is scheduled to deliver another address.

Prominent Texans On List Banished By Ku Klux Klan

Houston, Texas, June 29.—Mayor Oscar F. Holcombe, Campbell Overstreet, a justice, Rev. E. P. West, pastor of the Baptist temple at Houston Heights, and A. C. Winborne, city gas inspector, were on a list of those banished from the Ku Klux Klan at the meeting held last night at the city auditorium over which Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard, presided, according to The Houston Chronicle. The article goes on to say that Cyclops H. C. McCall started reading the list of those to be banished, but he stopped when he reached the fourth name, that of Rev. E. P. West, and then made a motion that the entire list be banished. The motion carried amid considerable whispering and grumbling.

McCall, The Chronicle states, said the list was of former klansmen who refused to vote the klan instructions and who had criticized the leader of the organization. He said he thought it best for the klan to kick them all out.

Dr. Evans will leave Dallas for Atlanta on Saturday night.

TEXAS KLANS BREAK WITH HEADQUARTERS

Scores of Locals Withdraw Demanding House-Cleaning.

TIRED OF FRICTION, CHAOS

Will Not Send Money to Atlanta, Where There Is Squabble as to Who Spends It, Says Kleagle. Changes in Conduct Asked.

(By the Associated Press.)

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 23.—The San Antonio Ku Klux Klan and scores of other local klan organizations in Texas have adopted resolutions breaking with the Atlanta headquarters of the klan and declining to withhold all money, reports, and other information from Atlanta officers until some order is brought out of the chaos into which the national organization has been thrown by reason of the contests for control of the klan.

Certain Concessions Demanded.

This was admitted today by George W. Keeling, kleagle for Texas, who declared that the local klansmen and representatives from other klans in the state have demanded certain concessions from headquarters and certain changes in the klan constitution. He declared that the klansmen of this state will no longer send their money to Atlanta where there is a squabble as to who will spend it, and asserted that the present leaders of the klan had brought about no constructive work on the part of the klan and in some instances had sought to make a political organization out of a religious and christian body of men.

He also said that an invitation had been sent to the imperial state and province officers to come to San Antonio Tuesday and show cause why the resolution adopted by the klansmen would not stand. Whether the klan wizard will accept the invitation, he said, he did not know.

Want Present Regime Purged.

The resolution in part provides for:

"The purging of the present regime and removal of all friction. Such changes in the constitution that will make same comply with democratic ideals and principles, namely that:

"The military character of the order be changed to comport with democratic principles; the local unit to be the basis of representation; the election of officers to graduate from the local unit to the imperial wizard; make pledges of loyalty to principles instead of titles and individuals; reduction of per capita taxes to the minimum, only $1 of which shall go to headquarters, cessation of the extortionate charges for supplies.

A copy of the resolution, the effect of which is to withdraw the Texas klansmen from the national organization, was sent to the imperial wizard along with an invitation to attend a meeting in San Antonio Tuesday next to defend "under parliamentary usage according to Roberts' Rules of Order, your position as to why the demands set forth in the enclosed resolution shall not prevail."

EVANS DISCHARGES KLAN KLEAGLE FOR DISTRICT OF TEXAS

Keeling Blamed for San Antonio Revolt by Imperial Wizard

Associated Press Report.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 26.—George W. Keeling, kleagle of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan for the fifth district of Texas, has been discharged from his post, according to announcement made late today by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, who arrived in San Antonio early this morning and remained through the day in conference with large and small gatherings of klansmen.

With the discharge of Keeling, Evans said, he believed the talk of a break in the ranks of the klan, or any sort of revolt, would come to an end, as he ascribed to Keeling authorship of the revolt as well as of the report that too great a percentage of money paid into the klan funds was being sent to headquarters of the organization in Atlanta.

Blamed for Rumors.

Investigation in San Antonio had shown him, Evans said, that Keeling, whose home is at Aransas Pass, Texas, had started all of these rumors and had given rise to reports of the revolt.

"There will be no change in the laws or constitution of the klan," said Evans. "The klan and the mask were here yesterday, are here today, and will be here tomorrow."

He pointed out the fact that he was only a paid official of the klan and could not do anything that would have the effect of changing its constitution.

Evans said he had come to Texas for the purpose of meeting the chiefs of the klan in the State and conferring with them. Aside from the situation which he said he had found and which resulted in Keeling's discharge, the day had run smoothly.

Will Visit Houston.

His primary object in coming to Texas was to arrange for a meeting to be held in August at some place not yet chosen. He will visit Waco, Fort Worth and Houston before returning to Atlanta, he said.

Two meetings of the Ku Klux Klan representing as many factions of the order, were held in San Antonio this afternoon. One of these composed of the klansmen who have remained true to the sway of Evans, and held at Turner hall, the other composed of the so-called receding klansmen, headed by Kleagle George W. Keeling, took place in Beethoven hall.

Wizard Evans is said by followers of Keeling, to have called a meeting of klansmen of province 5, to be held at Beethoven hall and they could not understand the sudden change of front of the chief of the klan in refusing to attend a meeting which he, himself, had called.

IMPERIAL WIZARD VISITS HOUSTON; ADDRESSES KLAN

Denies All Rumor of Split in His Organization

EVANS, M'CALL GO TO DALLAS

On a swing around Texas which will take him to most of the important cities of the State, H. W. Evans of Dallas, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, addressed several hundred members of Sam Houston Klan No. 1 at the regular meeting Thursday night. The meeting was held in the city auditorium. Immediately afterward, Dr. Evans, accompanied by H. C. McCall, cyclops of the Houston klan and grand titian of the order, left for Dallas.

The national leader of the klan arrived early Thursday and registered at the Rice. In an interview granted newspaper men in his rooms at the hotel, he denied reports which had been circulated concerning a split in klan ranks in Texas. "On the contrary, klansmen over the State never were better organized," he said.

Dr. Evans also denied there was any friction between himself and Colonel Joseph Simmons of Atlanta, who likewise is in Texas on a speech-making tour.

"There is no split between Colonel Simmons and me," he declared. "If there is a misunderstanding it is because he left the klan. I will have no break with him."

A squad of city detectives and motorcycle officers were stationed outside the city auditorium to direct the traffic during the meeting. Operators of traffic signal lights also were kept on duty until after the meeting was over. No other arrangements were made by the police department, according to Acting Superintendent Martin.

Beside Mr. McCall, the imperial wizard of the klan was accompanied by Mrs. Evans and Z. K. Marvin.

Evans Shorn of Title and Official Power by Temporary Edict

Preston Reynolds, Member of Klan, Asks Injunction and $100,000 Damages

Wizard Arrested by Federal Officer While Speaking Before Members of Ft. Worth Klan

FORT WORTH, Texas, June 29.—Injunction papers were served Friday night upon H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan by Deputy United States Marshal J. W. Chalke in a suit to prevent his using the title of wizard or performing any of the functions of that office and to recover $100,000 damages.

The suit was filed before Federal Judge E. R. Meeks in Dallas late Friday afternoon by Preston P. Reynolds, a life member of the organization, and the injunction was granted at 5 o'clock and the papers turned over to the deputy for serving. 6-30-23

The papers were served on the imperial wizard while he was addressing a meeting of several thousand of the members of Fort Worth klan No. 101, at the Stockdale on Evans avenue.

Reynolds was recently banished out of the organization by direct orders of the imperial wizard because Reynolds openly opposed the actions of the imperial wizard and the great titans of province No. 2 and the secretary of Dallas klan No. 66, whom Reynolds charged with acts of forming a political body out of the klan organization, which according to the charter of the klan, is a violation. Immediately after being banished from the Dallas klan Reynolds stated publicly his banishment was in direct violation of the constitution and by-laws of the national body, which grants to all the right of a trial and defense.

Tells of Suspension.

The suit filed by Reynolds in federal court Friday afternoon comprises ten typewritten pages, and contains a review of the actions of the members of the Dallas klan which brought about his attempted suspension by Z. E. Marvin, great titan, and George K. Butcher, kligrapp of Dalas klan No. 66, acting as the agents and under the instructions of Imperial Wizard Evans.

Reynolds bases his claim for an injunction to prevent Evans from using the title of imperial wizard and performing the functions of that office bacause of the fact that while W. J. Simmons, who was given the title of emperor while holding the office of imperial wizard, never resigned the imperial wizard's office.

Reynolds, in his petition, further sets forth the claim that Evans and his cohorts have expended more than $250,000 in recent elections, a large part of which, according to Reyonlds, was used in electing Senator Earle B. Mayfield.

Reyonlds, who is a Dallas attorney, bases his claim for $50,000 actual and $50,00 exemplary damages because of the alleged charges which have been made by those named in the suit and their attempt to injure his law practice in Dallas county, and by the promulgation of the fact among members of the klan that he had been banished and that he was a traitor to the klan.

The plaintiff in the suit is a relative of Governor Pat M. Neff by marriage and managed the campaign of the executive. He also published for some time a paper called "The Common Sense."

Reynolds with a newspaperman accompanied the deputy marshal from Dallas Friday afternoon and waited in Fort Worth until the papers had been served on the imperial wizard.

Evans was surrounded at the stockade by a number of deputy sheriffs as a bodyguard when the papers were served, but made no statement. He left immediately after the Fort Worth meeting for Dallas, where he was scheduled to address the members of the Dallas klan. The suit, however, prevented Evans from discussing the Reyonlds affair with members of the Dallas klan, and also prevents him from revoking or suspending any more charaters of klans in the State, or otherwise acting in the official capacity of imperial wizard.

In a statement tonight Reynolds declared that similar action as that taken by the San Antonio klan in demanding a strict accounting by the imperial officers of the klan is being made by some 1500 members of the Dallas klan. Reynolds did not attend the recent klan meeting in San Antonio, but arrangements for that meeting were perfected in his office in Dallas.

Evans Sued for Criminal Libel by George Kimbro

Houston Post Special.

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 29.—Criminal libel proceedings were instituted today against H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, by George B. Kimbro Jr., of Houston, former grand goblin of the Mississippi valley domain, as the result of an interview with Evans published in a Houston paper.

The suit was filed before Frank R. Davidson, assistant county attorney, and arrangements were being made for the issuance of process to be served on Evans while in Dallas.

KLAN IN NORTH TEXAS SUPPORTS H. W. EVANS

Keeling, Kleagle, Is Deposed by the Wizard.

FORT WORTH, Texas, June 27.—At Ku Klux Klan headquarters for north and northwest Texas in Fort Worth today, a formal statement was issued, saying that the organization in these two sections is loyal to Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 27.—George W. Keeling, kleagle of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan for the Fifth district of Texas, has been discharged from his post, according to announcement made late today by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, who arrived in San Antonio early this morning and remained throughout the day in conference with large and small gatherings of klansmen.

With the discharge of Keeling, Evans said, he believed the talk of a break in the ranks of the klan, or any revolt would come to an end, as he ascribed to Keeling authorship of the revolt as well as of the report that too great a percentage of money paid into the klan funds was being sent to headquarters of the organization in Atlanta.

Beaumont Klan to Stage Barbecue for Simmons

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 16.—A mammoth barbecue and picnic for 15,000 or 20,000 people is being planned by the local branch of the Ku Klux Klan for June 28 in honor of Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor, who will visit Beaumont on that date and make an address. The affair is open not only to members of the klan, but to their families and friends as well, it is announced. There is no secrecy connected with the barbecue and picnic. Plans indicate that the affair will be a big family picnic and spread while the klan will provide barbecue for the crowds which is expected. 6-17-23

From klan headquarters here comes the information that 15,000 to 20,000 visitors are expected, besides the Beaumont people who will act as hosts. The local klan expects thousands of klansmen to flock to Beaumont and hear Colonel Simmons on his second visit to Texas.

Receiver Asked In Suit Against Klan Officials

Dallas, Texas, June 30.—Suit asking appointment of a receiver to "demand an accounting of the defendants which shall show the amount of funds collected and received by them as officials of the Ku Klux Klan" was filed here this afternoon in district court by E. G. Senter, as attorney for Preston P. Reynolds. The defendants were Z. E. Marvin, M. M. Hinton, J. D. Van Winkle and George K. Butcher of Dallas, and H. C. McCall, of Harris county.

The suit was filed before Judge Towne Young in special district court.

The petition also requests that the defendants show how they disbursed the money received by them as officials of the Ku Klux Klan and when the amounts are known that they be required to pay to the recevier any funds which may be shown to have been expended improperly or in ways not authorized by the charter of the klan.

In case the defendants should refuse to make payment to the receiver, the petition asks that judgment be rendered against them "in f vor of such receiver for such amount and amounts which the plaintiff avers will be found to exceed the sum of $250,000."

The plaintiff also asks judgment against the defendants for $50,000 alleging damages.

The suit states there are 2,000,000 members of the klan in the country and 150,000 in Texas. The plaintiff says that he is a member of Dallas klan No. 66, and that William J. Simmons is the supreme executive officer.

H. C. McCall is alleged to be the great titan and grand dragon of the realm of Texas; Z. E. Marvin the great titan of province No. 2, and George K. Butcher, the secretary and treasurer of Dallas klan No. 66. J. D. Van Winkle is said to be the exalted cyclops of the Dallas klan and M. M. Hinton is named as chairman of the klokan committee of the Dallas chapter.

Reynolds alleged that the defendants control the policies and plans of the Texas klan and have employed large sums of the klan's money to nominate and elect national, state, county and municipal officers.

The petition alleges that $250,000 was misapplied to carry out political purposes, and that efforts have been made to make the klan a political machine.

Reynolds says he was a life member of the organization until time of his alleged "banishment."

BEATEN BY MASKED MEN

Former Pound Keeper at Goose Creek Kidnapped and Maltreated.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 1[illegible]—Henry Haeker, former pound keeper at Goose Creek, was kidnapped by masked men about 8:30 last night while on his way home from the business part of Goose Creek and taken to the woods, where he was beaten over the head, according to a report made to Deputy Sheriff A. C. Hamilton.

The deputy reported to the local authorities and sheriff Binford, district attorney C. Dixie Smith and Deputy Sheriff [illegible] went to Goose Creek this morning to begin an investigation.

Great Principles Of The Ku Klux Klan Lauded By Initiate

An Address Delivered by a Prominent Citizen of Plainview, Texas, on the Night of His Initiation into Plainview Klan No. 260, Realm of Texas, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan

Having been duly conducted into the secret mysteries of your order, I presume that I have the right to address you as brothers and fellow-klansmen. Gathered here tonight under the arched canopy of an open blue sky, which "showeth forth the handiwork of God" bound together as brothers in a common cause by that sacred, solemn and patriotic obligation to which we have voluntarily and gladly subscribed, arrayed in robes of white, like the redeemed host of heaven, emblematic of a pure life and a spotless character; in the light of this fiery cross, the symbol of heaven's richest gift and earth's greatest tragedy; under the fluttering folds of the stars and stripes the symbol of Freedom and Justice sworn to defend the right, uphold the law and oppose the wrong! we are a part of a Great Invisible Empire, like unto the Church of the Living God, during the dark ages of Roman rule.

As I speak to you of these things, there comes trooping to my memory a long chain of incidents, conditions and circumstances that have inspired me to seek admission into the Invisible Empire "that is every where spoken against." I was born in the state of Georgia, not far from the famous Stone Mountain, that stands like a lonely sentinel guarding some secret sacred treasure; lifting its majestic head heavenward, like the sphynx and Pyramids of Egypt, venerable with age and immovable, it gazes out upon the swiftly passing centuries and ever changing conditions.

A few years ago I climbed its steep and rugged side, stood upon its sublime and lofty heights, and gazed out over the valleys more than a mile below! while I contemplated its magnitude and grandeur. But little did I dream then, as I stood upon its highest peak; that a few months later there would eminate from that very spot, a mighty movement of possibly object. I am positively sure that its opponents either owe allegiance to some foreign power, religious or political; else they are grossly ignorant of the tenents of this truly American order, or they are lawless men, criminally bent, with no regard for American law, its authority or its flag.

Back to my reasons for being here tonight:

FIRST—I believe that any cause that can marshall a force of more than two million men, full-blooded, native-born, white Protestant, American citizens under its banners within a few short years against the most determined opposition and bitterest fight, since the days of Rome's persecution of the church, is entitled to the serious and friendly consideration of all-fair-minded, honest men. I do not believe that so many men of that type and character could be induced to embrace an unjust cause, or to organize with criminal intent. I do not believe that two million such men would ever endorse or approve, much less commit and conceal such crimes and lawless astrocities as have been charged to the Ku Klux Klan.

SECOND—After charging the Klan with every conceivable crime in the catalogue, and the declaration of lawyers, judges and courts, from New York to San Francisco and from Galveston to Chicago, that the Klan is a lawless mob, illegal and unconstitutional, not a single one of these sacredly constituted authorities, entrusted with the enforcement of law and the suppression of lawlessness, has ever been able to prove their baleful charges anywhere, from a justice court to the congress of the United States.

THIRD—I have watched, with no small degree of interest, at least three Federal investigations of this order, with a view of stopping its illegal activities and dispersing its membership. The Post Office Department, the Department of Justice and the Congress of the U. S. have each looked carefully into its workings. Three times the Federal government has said, as Pilate said of Christ, "We find no fault in them." But still the angry, blood thirsty, lawless, un-American mob cries, outside the Halls of Justice, Crucify them. Crucify them. If you turn these white robed, hooded monsters loose, you are no friend of the Pope."

FOURTH—I have noted the further fact that Georgia, my native state had chartered the Ku Klux Klan under her state laws. I did not believe—YEA, I KNEW, that she would not charter a secret order or band of men to practice lawlessness, override the courts, and take the reigns of government from the state and nation. I also knew that men engaged in such business do not seek a charter under any state law. Criminals and mobs do not ask for charters to do business. The very suggestion is absurd.

FIFTH—If the order stood for nothing else on earth but opposition to the political encroachments of Romanism, against our free institutions, through the treasonable, un-American oath of the Knights of Columbus, I would cast my lot with it, and be where I am tonight. For the records of history confirm the fact this baneful power that has ruthlessly destroyed all the nations of Europe seeks to lay its slimy, blood-stained murderous hands upon our free schools, our sacred marriages, our freedom of speech and thought and upon the very government itself.

SIXTH—In the next I proudly assert the glory of my race, and the pride of my American manhood. The Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is the ONLY 100 per cent American organization I know of in the whole world. All other organizations, political parties, schools and colleges, churches and lodges, states and nations, admit in one way or another, all nationalities, races and religions. The Jews have their B'nai B'rith which is purely Jewish. The Germanian Society is purely German. The negroes have their separate race societies, in which they teach social equality. The Catholics have the Knights of Columbus, the most gigantic political machine in the world. In the face of these well known facts, who can deny the same rights and privileges to native-born, white American Protestants?

SEVENTH—Another feature of the Klan obligation that impresses me, is it unqualified allegiance to the constitutional government of the Union, to the laws of its several states, and its repudiation of all foreign potentates whatsoever, political, religious or otherwise. This is really the thing that excludes Catholics, because they swear allegiance to the Pope at Rome, above every government, power and authority on earth. The symbol of this undivided and unqualified allegiance to our native land, is the American flag, painted red with the life's blood of American heroes; made snowy white by the spotless character of American womanhood with a patch of blue snatched from America's unclouded skys; and bedecked with the glitter- stars of an undefeated nation. This emblem we raise above every ensign of every nation on earth and swear to defend it with our life's blood.

"Long may she wave, over the land of the free, and the home of the brave."

EIGHTH—Again I learn from this sacred obligation which I have just assumed, that this truly American order stands unequivocally for the protection and perpetuation of our free public school system, which Rome seeks to demolish; for the eternal separation of Church and State, which Rome seeks to establish; for the freedom of thought, speech, the press and worship, all of which Rome seeks to utterly destroy; We stand also for the Protestant religion, bought with the life blood of millions of martyrs, midst the flames at the stake, fired by the cohorts of an intolerant, blood thirsty Roman power. Furthermore, we stand for the protection of American womanhood, and the sacredness of Protestant marriages, which Rome denounces as adultery. We stand for the sacred rights of Protestant children, whom Rome anathematizes as illegitimate offspring. Brethern, who shall hestiate to choose sides on these great American moral issues?

NINTH—I do not believe that men will swear to uphold the Constitution of the United States; to defend her unsullied and undefeated flag; to enforce her just and equitable laws through constituted authorities; to defend the purity of her womanhood; to suppress crime in all of its hideousness; to accept the tenets and teachings of Protestant Christian religion, then go out as lawless, criminal anarchists and desperadoes, disregarding every principle of their honor-bound and sacred obligation. If so the whole fabric of civilization is wrong, and no faith or confidence can be placed in any man, under any condition.

For these reasos, and many more that I could name, I have pledged my heart and hand to this cause. In the firey language of the immortal Patric Henry, a member of the Invisible Empire of the Salons of Liberty, I feel like saying, "Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish," I cast my lot with The Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, pledged to support and uphold every principle of right and constitutional law.

In the face of these indisputable facts, how can any loyal American citizen oppose the Klan? Only through ignorance and prejudice, or on account of an allegiance to some foreign power. Only those who are blinded by prejudice, enslaved by native-born, white American citizens, that would shake the very foundations of the religious and political world, and cause the enemies of this flag and its sword, of this Divine Book and its cross, to quake and tremble with fear.

I have always been of an investigating mind and open to conviction. I have tried to be fair, honest and just toward my fellowman. I have ever sought to accord to others the same rights and priveleges that I claimed for myself. I have tried to withhold judgment nor form no conclusions or opinions, until all the evidence on both sides has been considered. In this frame of mind I have not maliciously condemned the Klan; but have sought to hear both sides, in the interest of fair play; believing that every cause must stand or fall upon its own merits. Accordingly, I went to hear the address of Dr. Minor at the court house, recently, because I had heard the other side, both from the platform and the press. As every fair-minded man who heard him knows, his address was masterly, reasonable and free from abuse. His manner was genteel courteous and fair. The address was not characterized by that vindictive sarcasm, wholesale denunciation and ridicule that forms a large part of the anti-Klan propaganda. His statement of the principles of the Klan were the things for which I have always stood, and to which no true American citizen can be opposed; and I am frank to confess that I have found them to be exactly as he represented them.

I stand firm, and immovable as Gibralter itself, for the fundamental principles of American government as expressed in the Declaration of Independence, and incorporated into the Constitution and laws of the United States; that "all men are created free and equal, and are entitled to the inalienable right to life, liberty and the persuit of happiness." I believe in the freedom of speech, the freedom of the press, the liberty of conscience, separation of church and state, the right of peaceable public assembly, and self defence. I believe that every man and every cause is entitled to a fair and impartial hearing, both in the constituted courts of justice and before the bar of public opinion. And in the tenets of this faith I am more determined and confirmed than ever before, since taking the solemn obligation of the Ku Klux Klan.

Time will not permit me now, to mention all of the things that have contributed to bring me to this decision and hour, and into the midst of this white-robed, native-born, full-blooded, Protestant American assembly of brother Klansmen; but, with your forbearance, I would like to discuss just a few of them. Permit me to say, before doing this, that having assumed your sacred, solemn, binding and patriotic obligation. I am thoroughly convinced that there is absolutely nothing in its motives or methods, purposes, principles or practices, aims or ambitions when properly understood, to which any truly loyal American citizen could lend countenance, deluded and deceived by false reports, too narrow-minded to investigate, and too intolerant to be fair can oppose the fundamental principles of the Ku Klux Klan. They are to be pitied, rather than censured. Like the principles for which we stand, We are here today, we were here yesterday, we will be here tomorrow, we are here forever. All the Satanic powers of hell cannot crush or stay the progress of an institution that stands for these principles of right and justice.

IMMONS DENIES PEACE AND QUIET IN RANKS OF KLAN

San Antonio, July 1.—William J. Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux klan, addressing an audience in an open meeting here Saturday night, denied that all was well within the klan ranks and asserted that Imperial Wizard Evans is supported by only 20 per cent of the klan membership, while his following comprises the other 80 per cent. He pointed to the spontaneous welcome he received at Beaumont, in which he was honored at an open meeting by approximately 20,000 persons.

A scathing denunciation of the present imperial wizard was made by Dr. W. E. Thompson, of Atlanta, Ga., a member of the party. He referred to Evans as the imperial wizard "pro tem" and charged that he had been elected illegally.

THINK MASKED BAND KILLED WRONG MAN

Lange, Farmer, Had Received No "Warning Letters."

SOMERVILLE, Texas, July 3.—Officials today are continuing their investigation into the fatal shooting Monday of Otto Lange, farmer and railroad employe, who was killed in a fight which is said to have followed the efforts of masked men to take him from his home.

It was understood today that officials have uncovered the fact that 10 automobiles had been parked that night in a baseball field a short distance from the Lange home and this was taken as an indication that there had been planned a concerted effort of some kind to "get" somebody.

It is the theory today that the masked men got the "wrong man." Before he died, Lange was reported as saying that he did not recognize any of his assailants and as he had received no warning letters and there had been no indication of possible motive of masked men in spiriting him away, this interpretation has gained credence.

KLAN WANES IN TEXAS.

Publicity Is Putting It Out of Business, Says Publisher.

M. E. Foster, a newspaper publisher of Houston, Texas, declared that the Ku Klux Klan has now become disorganized and disrupted in his part of the country.

"The big thing we have had to contend with down in our section has been the Ku Klux Klan," said Mr. Foster, who has been at the Hotel Astor. "We have fought it so bitterly against every character of threat and intimidation that I now think it a passing frenzy. Many went into it through lack of knowledge—some to use the organization, and politicians seized upon it to capture votes. For a time it was well organized, but it has now become disorganized. In our town we had quite a remarkable election in which the Ku Klux Klan was the paramount issue and we defeated the Klan, but it was a very close race.

"We are now trying to forget the Ku Klux; they brought on their own downfall and are now fighting among themselves. We want to forget it and turn our minds to bigger and better things. They are not inspired with any desire to do good, but want the money—they want to get the dues. They have a very thrilling ritual, put out lights and wave a fiery cross and go through a lot of ceremonies that appeal to a lot of men who could not join any other order. We claim to be a free republic, but in reality we are a lot of hero-worshippers. The secret orders all put on robes of authority and look as if they are aping power.

"I am sure that many men went into the Klan with honest motives, but when they get up in their meetings and talk about some man who is against them, they implant the idea of assassination in the weak-minded men, and undoubtedly they are the ones who commit the crimes. Reporting all their meetings did more to put the Klan out of business than anything else. They disdained the law and all they feared was publicity—and when their names came out they were so astounded to have the world know of it they kept away—so publicity, I believe, will eventually end the Ku Klux Klan."

DALLAS MAN ASKS $100,000 OF KLAN OFFICERS IN TEXAS

Associated Press Report.

DALLAS, Texas, June 30.—Additional litigation against officials of the Ku Klux Klan in Texas by a man who says he is a member was started here this afternoon, when Preston P. Reynolds of Dallas sued for $200,000 damages and asked that the officials he named be ordered to account to a receiver for moneys they have received in their official positions.

Those sued today were: H. C. McCall of Houston, named as grand dragon of the realm of Texas; Z. E. Marvin, great titan of province No. 2; George K. Butcher, secretary-treasurer of Dallas klan No. 66; J. D. Van Winkle, exalted cyclops of the Dallas chapter, and M. M. Minton, chairman of the klokan committee of the Dallas klan.

The suit filed in the recently created special district court follows one filed by Reynolds against H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in federal court here yesterday.

Reynolds avers he does not know the amounts the defendants may have received, but believes it to exceed $250,000. He alleges they have usurped control of the Dallas klan, and wield great influence throughout the organization in the State. He also avers that the defendants have attempted to make a political organization of the klan and have spent large sums in furtherance of their plans, which, he declares, were contrary to the purposes of the klan.

According to the petition, Reynolds held a life membership in the klan granted him by William J. Simmons. He alleges that the defendants circulated reports that he was unfaithful to the organization and issued an order attempting to suspend him. For those reasons, he declares, he has been damaged greatly. The petition declares that Simmons is the supreme head of the klan and that H. W. Evans declared himself the head without lawful authority. While Dr. Evans' name is mentioned in the petition filed today, he is not named as a defendant.

MASKED BAND KILLING WILL BE INVESTIGATED

Texas Ranger at Scene of Death of Farmer.

AUSTIN, Texas, July 5.—Ranger Captain R. W. Aldrich left Austin late today, accompanied with Clint R. Lewis, sheriff of Burleson County, for Somerville, to begin the state's investigation of the fatal shooting last Monday night of Otto Lange, farmer and railroad employe.

Aldrich, who was sent under direction of Acting Governor T. W. Davidson, will be followed by a detachment of rangers, Davidson announced.

Lange was shot to death by a band of masked men who invaded his home, demanding that he accompany them. Later it was disclosed the band had sent no "warning letters" to Lange, and it is believed that they killed "the wrong man."

Klan Mass Meeting Tonight at Auditorium

Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans of the Ku Klux Klan and H. C. McCall, cyclops of Sam Houston Klan No. 1 are expected to be the principal speakers at a mass meeting at the city auditorium tonight.

Thursday is the regular weekly meeting night of the Houston klan, and the mass meeting is expected to attract many members of the Houston chapter, as well as klansmen from surrounding branches.

KLAN OFFICIALS WILL VISIT CITY THURSDAY NIGHT

Simmons And Evans Expected Here; May Address Conclave

Houston Post Special.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 25.—Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, will tour the principal cities of Texas this week in the interest of his Knights Kamelia and the Kamelia, women's secret order.

Colonel Simmons' first speech is to be made at Beaumont, Wednesday night, following which he will speak in San Antonio Friday night. While it has not been definitely decided, it is understood the Klan emperor will be in Houston Thursday night and will talk before klansmen siding with him in his dispute with Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans of Dallas.

After touring Texas, Colonel Simmons will go to Kansas and Missouri.

Houston Post Special.

DALLAS, Texas, June 25.—That Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans of the Ku Klux Klan will arrive in Houston simultaneously with Colonel William Joseph Simmons became known in authentic circles here tonight. No announcement could be had, but it was reported Mr. Evans intended to meet with Houston leaders Thursday night. Leaving that city, he will visit a number of other cities of the State before returning to Dallas, it was said.

Klan Plans Meeting At Auditorium

A call has been sent out for a meeting Thursday night of the membership of Sam Houston Klan No. 1, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, it was learned Tuesday, simultaneous with the announcement that klan officials had leased the city auditorium for that night.

Klan officials who engaged the auditorium refused to comment on it. Telegraphic dispatches from Dallas, however, were to the effect that Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans would be in the city Thursday and it was presumed he would address local members.

Colonel William J. Simmons, emperor and founder of the klan, is scheduled to reach Beaumont Friday for an address there in behalf of the Knights of Kamelia, organization of which he has undertaken.

Whether he will visit Houston during his visit to Texas has not been learned.

Texas Klan Chapters Rebel.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 28.—Revolution of national Ku Klux Klan methods or secession of the Texas chapters forecast in a resolution passed by the San Antonio organization of the invisible empire, according to an announcement made by George W. Keeling, kleagle for the State.

BEAUMONT READY FOR KLAN LEADER

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 27.—"All ready" is the report of the committees of the Ku Klux Klan which have been at work preparing for the big barbecue and picnic with which the local Klan will greet Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Invisible Empire.

Construction work on the barbecue stands and electrical displays was started Wednesday on the South Texas Fair grounds. The barbecue stand will be 150x150 feet square. Approaches will be marked off by small fences so that about 40 lines will be continually moving toward the counter where a serving committee of 150 men will be on the job. This committee will be provided with 20,000 paper plates and 40 barbecued beeves fresh from the pits.

MASKED MEN MURDER FARMER IN HIS HOME

Also Wound Baby and Escape in an Automobile.

NEW TRAGEDY IN TEXAS

Four Maskers Invade Home of Otto Lange, Murdering Him When He Scorns Orders That He Accompany Them.

(By the Associated Press.)

HOUSTON, Texas, July 3.—Otto Lange, farmer, living near Somerville, Burleson County, was shot to death during a scuffle with four masked men who came to take him from his home last night, according to word received here this afternoon.

Three of the men entered the Lange home, according to reports to officers, and attempted force Lange to leave with them. Lange and his wife resisted and in an encounter, the fatal shot was fired, passing through Lange's chest and wounding his three-year-old baby.

Escape in Automobile.

The fourth man remained in a car, the statement went on, and after the shooting, the three others joined him and fled.

Lange lived for a few minutes, but was able to tell his family that he recognized none of the assailants.

Lange's brother, arriving on the scene, fired a shot at the fleeing car, but it is not known if anyone was hit.

The baby's finger was cut off by the shot, which passed through Lange's body.

EVANS ENJOINED FROM FUNCTIONING IN KLAN

Banished Klansman Sues Wizard for $100,000.

INJUNCTION IS GRANTED

Numerous Texas Klansmen, Including Mayor of Houston, Banished for Lese Majesty—Evans Hints at Further Banishments.

(By the Associated Press.)

FORT WORTH, Texas June 29.—Injunction papers were served Friday night upon H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, by Deputy United States Marshal J. W. Clarke, in a suit to prevent his using the title of wizard or performing any of the functions of that office and to recover $100,000 damages.

The suit was filed before Federal Judge E. R. Meeks, in Dallas, late Friday afternoon, by Preston P. Reynolds, a life member of the organization, and the injunction was granted at 5 o'clock and the papers turned over to the deputy for serving.

Papers Are Served.

The papers were served on the imperial wizard while he was addressing a meeting of several thousand members of Fort Worth Klan No. 101.

Reynolds was recently banished from the organization by direct orders of the imperial wizard because Reynolds openely opposed the actions of the imperial wizard and the great titans of Province No. 2 and the secretary of Dallas Klan No. 66, whom Reynolds charged with the act of forming a political body out of the klan organization, which, according to the charter of the klan, is a violation.

Immediately after being banished from the Dallas Klan, Reynolds stated publicly his banishment was in direct violation of the constitution and by-laws of the national body, which grants to all the right of a trial and defense.

(By the Associated Press.)

HOUSTON, Texas, June 29.—Mayor Oscar F. Holcombe, Campbell Overstreet, a justice of the peace; Rev. E. P. West, pastor of the Baptist Temple at Houston Heights, and A. C. Winborne, city gas inspector, were on a list of those banished from the Ku Klux Klan at the meeting held last night at the city auditorium, over which Wesley Evans, imperial wizard, presided, according to the Houston Chronicle. The article goes on to say that Cyclops H. C. McCall started reading the list of those to be banished, but he stopped when he reached the fourth name, that of Rev. E. P. West, and then made a motion that the entire list be banished. The motion carried amid considerable whispering and grumbling.

McCall, the Chronicle states, said the list was of former Klansmen who refused to vote the Klan instructions and who had criticised the leader of the organization. He said he thought it best for the Klan to kick them all out.

"Dissension within the klan is impossible, and any who attempt to promote such dissension will face immediate severance from the Klan," Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, declared at Dallas.

The imperial wizard asserted his present trip through Texas was for the purpose of arousing more interest in the organization. Indiana now leads in membership and enthusiasm, he said.

Crifinal libel proceedings were filed today in Beaumont against H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, by George B. Kimbro, Jr., of Houston, according to a special to the Houston Chronicle this afternoon. The basis for the action is given as an article published in a Houston afternoon paper yesterday, purporting to quote Evans in a statement about Kimbro.

LARGE CR[illegible] [illegible]ARS KLAN SPEAKER AT LUFKIN, TEXAS.

The American

Lufkin, Texas.

George E. Hadley of Bryan, Texas spoke before a large and appreciative audience here Saturday night, in the interest of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. 8-18-23

The speaker was introduced by R. B. Bledsoe in a very fitting manner. He proved to be a very forceful talker, dealing in his address with the mis-informed, the un-informed and those who are prejudiced thru in-eligibility, referring to the latter in terms of sarcasm at times.

Mr. Hadley declared that the Klan is not anti-anything and he contended, forcefully for the right of protestant gentiles to organize, the same right being given to men and women of other nationalities and creeds.

His speech was very interesting and entertaining and was very much enjoyed by all present.

Flashes From The Fiery Cross

The American

A short time ago, I received a clipping from a very dear friend of mine, mailed from Taylor Texas. As will be seen, it is an interesting write-up, and was printed in the Taylor, daily Democrat, published by another compadre of mine— Herbert G. Wilson. It would have been printed in the last issue of the Forum, but for the lack of space.

Taylor, ranks high, in the list of good Texas towns, and has a citizenship, that would make any town good, no matter as to its location.

The writer was born in that county—Williamson—and naturally feels intensely interested in anything that tends to the welfare and prosperity of the good people therein.

In the old days, that magnificent stretch of fertile country, stretching from the Colorado river to Waco, was as "wide open',' as New Laredo, or Jauraz, is today.

At that time, the Forum editor, was a callow youth, who spent much of his time astride the slippery back of a Spanish pony, following herds of the fat cattle, that roamed at will, through that vast territory.

Only now and then, (along the water courses) were human habitations—magnificent, and artistic structures, of logs, and post-oak, hand-made boards—but in all of these premitive homes, dwelt real, 100 per cent white, American Men—many of whom, have left behind enviable records.

No wayfaring man ever failed to meet a hearty and sincere welcome, from these generous, and patriotic pioneers.

The word "Stranger," was enough to guarantee food and lodging, and the longer he stayed, the better they liked him—especially if he was from a distance, and was the bearer of any outside world news, regardless the vintage of the information.

Everything was "News," in those pioneer days, and the people cared very little about when anything occured—just so it had happened somewhere, and at sometime.

I knew every cow, and buffalo trail on that far-flung territory at that time and the broad miles of fertile lands, that are now worth from $300 and upward to infinity, could then be bought at less than $5 per acre—and pick your location.

I'm glad I didn't buy 'em—for had I done so, I would have been branded on the ribs, as a fool—and today, would have to work, or starve—raising cotton, and corn, and selling it at cost of production to pay my merchant, and taxes. So you see, I was wise.

I saw the first railway passenger rtain, that ever came thundering into Taylor—but only saw it a minute—for when the whistle turned loose, that glass-eyed Spanish bronco on which I was mounted, decided to go back to Mexico, via Austin. Before I finally got him rounded up, I had crossed Walnut Creek—and it was too late to go back.

The clipping I referred to in the beginning, will follow in a few minutes. I'm sorry I have delayed it so long—but whenever I get on the back-track, and begin to go over my early days in Texas—I am just like that Spanish broncho—and can't be stopped until I get punctured, or run down.

Here it is, a good one:—

The Klan parade, open air initiation, speaking and barbecue last night, proved to be far and away, the biggest and from many standpoints the most spectacular and impressive event ever staged in Taylor, or the whole of Williamson County, for that matter.

Nelson's race course, just outside the city limits was the site of the major portion of the program, where some twelve choice beef cattle and twenty six goats and mutton had been barbecued in a fashion to delight the palate of an Epicurean, under the ample supervision of E. C. Bond.

A total of 5,263 pounds of mutton and beef were consumed, and 320 loaves of bread used in feeding the multitude of Klansmen.

Long before dark automobiles bearing Klansmen from all over the county, and neighboring cities began rolling into Taylor and by 8:30 there was between six and seven thousand Klansmen concentrated at Nelson's pasture, and so greatly in excess of expectation was the number that, in order to carry out the full program of the evening only 4 hundred or more Klansmen paraded Main Street, hurrying back to the pasture for the main event.

Exactly 93 candidates took the oath of allegiance to that purely patriotic American order, the K. K. K.

While the secret work was being exemplied Rev. B. B. Crimm the noted Cowboy Evangelist arrived from Granger, and after a brief talk to the newly initiated Class as a Klansman, exhorting them to a greater love of Country, flag, laws and home, stated that, a due observance of their oath would make them better citizens, better husbands, fathers, sons and finally that as the Fiery Cross typied the blood of the Savior so its followers must necessarily find themselves at the feet of Jesus.

A brief but clear cut and splendid address was delivered to a portion of the monster crowd that blocked the lanes in all direction; immediately following which address that part of the crowd of Klansmen, who had not already been served partook of the delicious barbecue.

Five thousand platters had been provided and filled by the Committee, thinking this number would certainly be adequate for the number of Klansmen expected, but the filled platters were exhausted before much over half the crowd had been served and some two thousand Klansmen had to feed themselves with Natures implements.

A conservative estimate of the number present, consisting of Klansmen and spectators, was by those competent to judge, at least twelve thousand. As the Taylor Klan has been said to be dying out fast, this event would seem to indicate considerable activity for a corpse.

A KLAN REPORTER.

DALLAS KLAN CASE RESET FOR JULY 30

DALLAS, Texas, July 16.—Hearing on the application of Preston P. Reynolds, local attorney for a temporary injunction restraining Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, from enforcing an alleged ouster decree against Reynolds, has been postponed until July 30, it was announced today when the hearing was to have started in federal court here.

The hearing was continued on application of attorneys for Dr. Evans on the grounds that principal counsel was engaged in a case elsewhere. Reynolds is seeking $100,000 for alleged damages caused by the decree ousting him from the klan.

The petition of George W. Keeling, former kleagle of the San Antonio klan, seeking to be a party to the injunction suit will be heard at the same time with Reynolds' application.

PORT ARTHUR PAIR REFUSE TO TELL WHO FLOGGED THEM

Port Arthur, Tex., Aug. 18, 1923.—Badly beaten, but both refusing to make a statement to police as to what transpired after they were spirited away from the Police Station here last night, Clay Dunn and his brother, Carl Dunn, were found in bed at their respective homes this morning.

Asked if they recognized any members of the mob that kidnapped them, both men said that they did, but declined to tell who they were.

VICTIM OF MOB IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Texan in Hospital, Following Kidnaping and Severe Clubbing.

Amarillo, Tex., Aug. 16.—E. E. McDonald, railroad laborer, kidnaped by five unmasked men last night, returned to his home early today, bearing 50 or 60 slashes on his body, telephoned the police for assistance, and was hurried to a hospital, where his condition is said to be serious. Two men are being detained, and other arrests are expected officers said.

McDonald, who was seized on a downtown street at 10 o'clock last night, gave officers a description of his kidnapers. He said he was taken several miles north of Amarillo, beaten with a club similar to a barrel stave, and turned loose on the prairie.

Officers said McDonald was warned a month ago by a secret organization to leave the city. At that time he was under bond on charges of slander and carrying a pistol. He is to be tried on these charges late this month.

Suddenly surrounded by five unmasked men, overpowered after a brief fight, hurled headlong into an automobile and spirited away late last night, McDonald had not been found late today.

No motive for the kidnaping was offered by the police. McDonald, 47 years old, is a laborer on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad bridge crew. There were but two eyewitnesses, an old woman and a small boy. According to the officers, who rushed to the scene, in the midst of this city, this was the substance of what occurred:

Five men lolled in a touring car across the street. Although the car was idle, the engine had been running for more than 15 minutes. One of the occupants got out when McDonald came by, and accosted the laborer. Three other men then jumped out and rushed McDonald off the sidewalk into the car. The car picked up speed. The victim screamed desperately: "For God's sake, help, help. Can't someone help?"

The big touring car flashed out of the scene. Following the witnesses story, the policemen found an open knife and a hat. Sheriff Whitaker with police officers took up the chase, but the trail was lost.

Today all byways and main roads were being carefully covered.

K. Lamity On Clannishness.

The man who preaches against Clannishness, is simply combatting the first law of Nature—Self Preservation. This law, or instinct, is not only possessed by every Man born of women, but the lower creations— animals, birds, fishes, and every insect that creeps, or crawls or flies in the air, obeys it instinctively.

This universal law is in fact a double law.

It not only causes a man to instantly preserve, and save himself from all harm, or danger, but it automatically couples.. him to rush to the rescue of the objects of his affection, when threatened, and if necessary, will die in their defense.

Men will defend their dogs, or other domestic animals, at the risk of their own lives—and there is no other word that so clearly defines such an action, as the word "Clannishness"— meaning, preserving, defending, and taking care of someone, or something, you love.

Therefore, when you hear a man branding Clannishness as a crime remember that he is opposing one of the Virtues, rather than a fault.

The God of heaven set the example, when He commanded the Jewish people to be a nation of Clansmen—keeping strictly to themselves, mixing up with no other nation tribe, or clan—and disobedience of God's commands, is the only reason why the Jewish people today, are not the absolute rulers of the earth.

The Jews of today, know this—and will acknowledge that I am speaking the truth—provided they will do the same thing.

For nearly 2000 years, they have been trying to regain their lost estate—but they will never add to their chances, by blaming their Gentile friends for being Clannish.

The Jews are just as Clannish as a can of fishing worms—and it always amuses me, to see a kettle, laughing at a pot—for being slightly black.

The Ku Klux Klan is based upon Clannishness--or self-preservation. You can positively guage, his degree of merit, by his daily practice of that virtue—not by his words, but by his deeds. Every thought, of a 100 per cent Klansman, is not for self—but for the welfare of others.

Oil and water will not mix—though confined in one bottle.

Selfishness, and Clannishness, is even more difficult to blend,—for they won't even stay in the same body. If you find Selfishness in a man's heart, rest assured that true clannishness has fled.

There are many things, that a 100 per cent Klansman will not do,—simply because of his clannishness.

He won't lie.

He won't betray a trust, placed in his keeping by a Klansman.

He won't break the laws of the land—national, state, county, city or town. When he does so, he automatically ceases to be a 100 per cent Klansman. If he does not like a law, he may endeavor to have it changed, or repealed—but he will not break it. If he does, he has violated his sacred oath—committed a perjury—for the 100 per cent Klansman does not break the law of the land, or the law of the Klan.

The Same Old Creed.

The tenets of the Christian religion.
White supremacy.
Closer relationship between American capital, and American labor.
Protection of our pure womanhood.
Preventing the causes of mob violence, and lynching .
Preventing unwarranted strikes, by foreign labor agitators.
Preventing of fires, and destruction of property by lawless elements.
The limitation of foreign immigration.
Closer relationships of Pure Americanism.
The upholding of the Constitution of these United States.
The sovereignity of our state rights.
The separation of Church and State.
Freedom of speech and press.
The much needed Local Reforms.

The pact very truly says:—

"There is a Divinity, that shapes our ends—

Rough hew them, as we may"—and the reorganization of the old war-time Ku Klux Klan, at a critical time in the history of this country, seems to bear the ear-marks of some power greater, and wiser, than that of puny Man.

The world, and civilization was wavering in the balance—and a menace, more dreadful than Death itself, hung over, and threatened this great white man's country.

It is no evdience of superstition on my part to say, that the hand of God pointed out the way for saving White Protestant Americanism from destruction—and that, that this great work will be accomplished, through the Ku Klux Klan.

It has been fought viciously, but the enemy has shot his bolt—and from this time on, the opposition will grow weaker and weaker—and posterity will credit the victory, to the efforts of the Ku Klux Klan—and the 100 per cent Clannishness of its members.

Tarred and Feathered; Dumped Out in Church

Associated Press Report.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 24.—Covered with tar and feathers and wearing only a sheet, a Honey Island, Texas, man was dumped in a church there last night while services were being held, according to a report received here today. The name of the man was not ascertained here.

The man was seized while driving from Honey Island to Saratoga, an oil town in Hardin county, by six unmasked men, all of whom were unknown to him, he said, according to the report. He said his captors charged him with failing to provide for his wife. After coating him with tar and feathers and warning him to leave the community, he said, they returned him to the church. His appearance caused immediate adjournment of the services, it was reported.

AUSTIN ANTI-KLANNER AGAIN IN THE LIMELIGHT

The American Forum 8-18-23

Earl Shelton Seeks To Have Indictment Quashed For Various And Sundry Reasons,

San Antonio

Earl Shelton, the stormy petrel of Austin, Texas, is again flopping in the surf.

At the last grand jury, 216 bills were returned, at Austin, and by some error perhaps, only one bill was found against Earl, for gambling—while in other cases, several bills were found against individuals—which naturally aroused jealousy and resentment, on the part of Earl. However he is not inclined to tamely lie down, and permit an ordinary Mexican charcoal burner, or some black-and-tan cotton picker, to excel him, even before a grand jury—so he has filed a man-sized protest, and as the case is set for Monday, August 13th, it will probably be tried before this article is in print. No matter how it terminates, we feel confident, that Earl will be winner—one way or the other—probably the other.

In his allegation, this alligator places all his trouble, upon the Ku Klux Klan.

Shelton seeks to have the indictment against him quashed alleging that the indictment is defective on the ground that Oscar T. Martin and W. C. Luedecke, two of the three jury commissioners who selected the grand jury returning the indictments, were disqualified by law from performing the duties incident to such office.

The petitioner further alleges that Oscar T. Martin and W. G. Luedecke are not citizens of the United States or of the State of Texas because they and each of them, prior to and at the time of their actions as such grand jury commissioners, were members of a secret organization known as the Ku Klux Klan, a hooded secret organization of persons, which has for its purpose the destruction of democratic government, the stifling of American ideals, the subversion and prostitution of officers and governmental agencies to officers and agencies of the Ku Klux Klan and not of the people and their governments; the corruption of the English language and the erection of an empire invisible to rule the citizens of these United States, through fear, violence and superstition, and the furthering by any means of the interests of the emperor of said klan and its individual members, and to be amenable to no law save that of such emperor and klan, and to hold their obligation to such organization superior to their duty to the state of Texas and to protect the members thereof in violations of the laws of the state of Texas and the United States of America.

Shelton contends that when Luedecke and Martin were initiated into the klan and took the oath of allegiance to the imperial wizard, the two men renounced their allegiance to the United States and to the state of Texas and disqualified themselves for service as members of the grand jury commission.

The petitioner further alleges that the two men named also "became interested in, directly and indirectly, all criminal prosecutions against any members of said organization and obligated to protect all such members on violations of the laws of the state of Texas and the United States and were precluled from taking the oath as members of the jury commissioner and were not lawfully qualified to appoint any person or persons as grand jurors."

The filing of such wild, visionary, and totally untruthful allegations in the daily papers, is merely part of the dirty game, that has been in progress, ever since the Klan was organized.

The first news of it, threw Rome into the delirium tremens, and affected her emissaries in every land—especially in America—in every location, where the air is scented with garlic—and bootleg whiskey.

In the end, such malicious charges, will avail nothing, for they are a mess of malignant lies—spewed forth from a source, totally irresponsible in it's own locality—yet might possibly impress, and influence some weak, or wobbly minded individual, whose mental equilibrium represents a weather vane.

If membership in the Ku Klux Klan disqualifies a man for performing the highest and noblest positions in this world, civilization must surely be in direful straits, and civilized, Christian tenets have fallen below the German Mark—in true valuation.

The world now knows, and acknowledges, that the Klan tenets are worthy of the consideration, love, respect, and practice, of every real 100 per cent, patriotic man or woman, in this country—or any other country.

This great government, with it's 120 millions of people, will either stand or fall—according to the avowed principles, as expressed in the Constitution and by-laws, of the Ku Klux Klan. You cannot evade the question—despite the ravings of 25 per cent lawyers, and dark room crap-shooters.

Let 'em rave—and pow the air—but it won't get them any where.

Thank God, one solitary, strong man or feeble woman, can put them to flight—when armed with the sword of Righteousness, and the shield of conscious purity of heart.

The farce is nearly ended, and the curtain will soon be rolled down, upon the inspired opposition to 100 per cent Americanism.

Keep your eyes and ears open—for the big show is yet to come.

Texan Seeks $100,000 for Attack on Character.

8/5/23

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 2.—George B. Kimbro, Jr., former grand goblin and [illegible] Ku Klux Klan in Texas and in Mississippi, today filed suit in federal court against Dr. H. W. Evans of Atlanta, grand wizard of the klan, for $100,000, alleging defamation of character.

Kimbro alleges that statements were published in a Houston newspaper, credited to Evans, in which Kimbro was referred to as "hot air merchant" and a "man who is not a klansman, but a man who profited through the organization of the klan, both personally and financially, and now won't pay his debts."

Shortly after the publication several weeks ago of statements about him Kimbro filed in Houston a criminal libel charge against Evans.

Associated Press Report.

LUFKIN, Texas, Aug. 22.—Damages of $100,000 was asked in a suit filed here today against the Ku Klux Klan by Mrs. Jessie Wiley, whose husband, Ben Wiley, joints in the action, on the ground of alleged defamation of character. The petition charges that klan "did without any cause circulate and cause to be circulated reports of improper conduct against plaintiff," and makes specific denial of such alleged reports.

Plaintiff also alleges that her husband, Ben Wiley, was seized and brutally beaten and disgraced on or about July 20, 1921.

STARKEY PLEA IS DENIED

Faces Second Trial in Eastland For Death Of Pet Brown

8-29-23

KU KLUX ISSUE BEING RAISED

Houston, Texas

Judge Promises Impartial Jury; Veniremen Examined

EASTLAND, Texas, Aug. 28.—Change of venue was denied by Judge Davenport of the Ninety-first district court at 3:50 p. m. Tuesday in the case of L. J. Starkey, charged with the murder of Elmer D. (Pet) Brown who was killed at his construction camp east of Cisco last May, and for the second time Starkey faces trial in Eastland county. His first trial, held two months ago, resulted in a hung jury.

Judge Davenport stated that it was the desire of the court and State to protect the rights of the defendant in every case and that such would be done in this particular case.

The judge stated he was slow in believing that any man, merely from reading newspaper reports of this case, could be prejudiced so as to not be able to give a fair and impartial trial.

Due to the huge crowd that crowded the corridors and aisles Tuesday afternoon, the judge asked that the sheriff keep all seated and keep the windows clear. With the afternoon session, the defense introduced but a few witnesses to show that a prejudice existed in this county.

The State used five witnesses in rebuttal testimony and closed its case against the motion.

J. E. Givens and B. L. Lay of Eastland were used by the defense and both testified that in their opinion the wide publicity given the case would cause trouble in securing a jury in Eastland county to try the defendant.

The State rebuttal witnesses were L. W. Flewellen, city judge of Ranger; John Irwin of Cisco, J. Frank Dean of Gorman, R. C. Underwood of Gorman and Judge J. J. Butts of Cisco.

Night Session Likely.

Both sides closed their testimony at 3 p. m. Tuesday, and were allowed 15 minutes each in which to discuss the case.

Defense Attorney Patterson stressed the allegation that there existed in Eastland county a combination of men who were seeking to send Starkey to the penitentiary.

Judge Burkett of the State counsel alleged that the defense witnesses had not a single time stated they knew of such a combination and that out of about 40 witnesses used by defense 11 of them stated in cross examination that in their opinion a jury should be able to render a fair and impartial trial in this case.

The case was called ready for trial at 3:50 andthe examination of veniremen began. Night sessions will in all probability be held.

The Ku Klux Klan issue was brought into the testimony of Tuesday morning which had to do entirely with the question of whether there was a possibility of Starkey getting a fair trial in Eastland county.

First witness on the stand Tuesday morning when court reconvened was S. J. Vaughn of Cisco, a retired Methodist minister. He is not a member of the klan he stated. But in discussing the Starkey case, he said, he had heard the klan issue mentioned. Due to so much publicity and the klan and anti-klan issue in the case he declared he would like to see the case removed from this county.

Mr. Vaughn stated he had supported Starkey in his race for constable.

In cross examination by State Attorney Burkett, he stated that if he were chosen as a juror he could lay aside all reports that he had heard and render the defendant a fair and impartial trial. He stated, on question from the State, that he did not know any conspiracy existing in the county and Cisco seeking to send Starkey to the penitentiary.

J. H. Duke of Sabana community, some ten miles southwest of Cisco, stated that he had heard the case discussed intensively. He stated that the majority of the people were against Starkey. Duke said he is not a member of the klan. He did not think Starkey could get a fair and impartial trial. When asked by State Attorney Burkett if after laying all reports aside and abiding by the law and evidence he could render a fair and impartial trial as a juror, he answered in the affirmative. The witness stated that he did not contribute to the Starkey fund and had never been approached on the matter.

Juryman Indicted.

N. M. Garrett of Eastland stated that he had heard the case discussed over the county and had heard the Ku Klux Klan discussed in connection. He also said he had heard that one of the grand jurymen of the first trial had been indicted. When questioned by defendant Attorney W. B. Patterson, he testified to seeing demonstration in the court room at the first trial in June. He had seen a woman laughing and nudging another when the defendant was testifying in his own behalf.

J. A. Cheatum of Eastland, oil man, was next on the stand and stated that he had heard some discussion but that, if chosen as a juror, he could abide by the evidence and render a fair and impartial verdict.

B. P. Cozart of Scranton stated that he heard case discussed in his community and had heard opinions on both sides. When asked by defense whether or not he saw a demonstration in the court room during the other trial, he said that while one of Brown's negroes was testifying and seemed to be balled up as how to answer questions fired at him by attorneys, that a woman would nod her head.

He stated, however, that he did not see the negro look at the women. Cozart said he had contributed to a Starkey fund, to keep him from resigning when Starkey stated that he could not make an honest living without some help from law abiding citizens of the county. He contributed two dollars to the funds, he stated.

Pastor Testifies.

H. B. Ellis of Scranton, pastor of the Methodist church, next on the stand, said that the case had been discussed there. He said the klan issue had been mentioned in the case in his community. He expressed the opinion that such a prejudice existed in the county, that Starkey could not get a fair trial in the county. The minister had been a member of the klan but had only attended one meeting. He also said he had helped support the Starkey fund. He said he had heard that Starkey was a klansman and had talked to him before he was summoned.

Joe Hansal of Gorman, a drug clerk, was next on the stand. He said he had been a klansman but was not a member now.

W. W. Speer of Carden, a merchant, said that the case had been discussed extensively in that community, and both klan and anti-klan had been mentioned in the case and he said in his opinion it would be hard to secure a jury.

A. F. Miller of Scranton stated that he saw a demonstration in the court room at the former trial, saw the woman nodding her head. He was not a klansman he testified, and had never subscribed to a fund for Starkey.

Is Klan Issue.

Walter Gilbert of Carbon stated that, in his opinion, the case was a Ku Klux Klan issue straight through. Here the Eastland County Constitutional club was brought into discussion. He stated that he had attended a meeting at Cisco, but was not a member yet. He said he believed Starkey could get as fair a trial here as in any other county.

S. K. Mitchell of Carbon said that 7[illegible] per cent of the people he talked w[illegible] had fixed opinion, and held out that he did not think the defendant could get a fair trial.

John Gorman of Carbon, merchant, stated that in his opinion that he could not get a fair trial as the Ku Klux Klan issue was involved and negro witnesses in the case had prejudiced the people. He admitted membership in the klan. He said he had not an opinion made for or against the case, and believed the defendant might be able to secure a fair trial here.

Roy Camp, of Carbon, a barber, stated that he was a member of the klan and had contributed a small amount to the Starkey defense fund, and was in favor of Starkey.

E. M. Nance of Rising Star, merchant, said that discussion was heard there but that he thought a jury should be found here to render a fair trial.

Joe Norton of Olden stated that he believed the defendant would not be able to secure a fair trial here.

Judge A. Freeman of Ranger, a member of the County Constitutional club was next on stand, and testified that he had heard a speech made by Judge Butts of Cisco at a meeting held at Ranger sometime ago about Starkey.

Scott Key, attorney of Eastland, one of the executive members of this organization, was then called to the stand. Both witnesses testified that it was not the principle of that organization to work againt Starkey, and that it had been organized before the Starkey case came up.

Frank J. Huey, publisher of the Cisco Daily News, stated on the stand that he believed Starkey would get as fair trial in Eastland county as he would in any other county, and further stated that, in his opinion, any jury from any county that would not convict Starkey was a sorry county.

Dr. Bettis, a physician of Cisco, was next on the stand and stated that he believed that there was a prejudice existing against the defendant and believed that he could not receive a fair trial in this county. Said he had heard men say that Starkey's neck should be broken.

Uncle Sol Eppler of Cisco, a blacksmith, was called to the stand and stated that he was always on the streets of Cisco and that he heard the case discussed often and believed that prejudice existed.

J. A. Reese of Cisco, manager of the land department of the Texas company, was placed on the stand by the defense and stated that he believed that prejudice existed in Eastland county against the defendant and did not believe that a jury could be picked that would render a fair trial. Asked by Burkett if he was a klansman, said "No," but after a moment or two of silence stated that he had been, over a year ago, and had visited a meeting only once, but did not see Starkey there.

Davidson Renews Probe At Somerville as Neff Returns to Helm of State at Austin

8-19-23

Associated Press Report.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 18.—Texas rangers, known the nation over as guardians of law and order, tonight were dispersed over the State investigating a series of kidnapings and floggings during the past few nights.

Houston Texas

Reports of floggings have reached the State executive offices from Texarkana, at the northeast corner of the State, to Amarillo in the Panhandle, more than 500 miles away; at Wichita Falls in the north central portion, and at Port Arthur on the Gulf.

Acting Governor T. W. Davidson today ordered a detachment of rangers to Port Arthur where two men were kidnaped in front of the police station last night, flogged and turned loose. Mr. Davidson says he probably would order rangers to Wichita Falls, near where Lonnie Davis, a farmer, was seriously lashed with a wet rope by five unmasked men late Wednesday night. Rangers permanently located there were ordered to Amarillo but undoubtedly will be recalled, the acting governor commented tonight.

Sheriff Arrested.

Ranger Captain Frank Hamer reported from Amarillo the arrest of Sheriff Less Whitaker of Potter county on charges of conspiracy to commit a felony and of having been an accomplice in an assault with a prohibited weapon.

The rangers were ordered to Amarillo in connection with the flogging of E. E. McDonald Wednesday night.

Reports from Texarkana have reached officials of the alleged whipping of Miss Ollie Tucker, 14 years old.

Excitement following floggings at Amarillo, Wichita Falls and Port Arthur apparently had died down tonight, according to reports to Acting Governor Davidson. No official report had been made of the alleged Miss Tucker flogging as court records in Bowie county showed Leonard Johnson had paid a fine for the alleged act. Johnson was shot and wounded Thursday by M. M. Tucker, Miss Ollie's brother, and Johnson's brother, Clarence, killed.

No further disturbances were reported this evening, Lieutenant Governor Davidson announced.

Information reaching the governor's office that Clay and Carl Dunn of Port Arthur, originally reported killed, had been found at their homes suffering from the effects of floggings. Ranger Captain R. W. Aldrich left here today for Port Arthur to join Ranger Captain Roy Nichols from Marshall, in investigating the Port Arthur case.

Back to Lange Case.

Ranger R. W. McCormack has been detailed to investigate the beating of Lonnie Davis at Iowa Park, near Wichita Falls. Z. W. Davis, brother of the flogging victim, made the request for rangers. Davidson said he had talked over the long distance telephone with the Wichita county sheriff today.

Ranger Kountsman has been sent to Canyon City to replace Captain Hamer during the Rayne murder trial there. Captain Hamer will be free, Davidson announced, to return to Somerville in South Texas, to continue the investigation into the killing of Otto Lange by disguised persons on July 2. Hamer is expected to reach Austin Sunday.

Governor Neff reached Austin tonight and Mr. Davidson declared he would leave for his home at Marshall tomorrow morning.

A court of inquiry behind closed doors, conducted today at Amarillo by Justice C. G. Landis, with the aid of Texas rangers, had disclosed no striking developments, according to reports to the executive offices tonight.

TEXAS RANGERS ARREST SHERIFF IN LASH PROBE

The Houston Post

Amarillo, Texas, August 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sheriff Less Whitaker of Potter county, was placed under arrest shortly before nine o'clock tonight on complaints of conspiracy and accomplice filed by Texas Ranger Captain Frank Hamer, in connection with the kidnaping, tarring and feathering of E. E. McDonald, bridge worker, Wednesday.

Whitaker's bond was set at $2,500 on each charge by Justice C. G. Landis, which was made soon after.

Four arrests had been made in the case up to the time the sheriff was arrested.

KU KLUX KLAN SCORNED BY BISHOP T. F. GAILOR

"Curse of Country," He Tells Lions Club Here.

FAVORS OAKVILLE REPORT

Commercial Appeal

Lions Club Committee Recommends $300,000 Bond Issue by City and County for Increased Facilities at T. B. Sanitarium.

12-27-22
Memphis, Tenn.

The Ku Klux Klan was denounced as "the curse of the country and an anti-society organization" yesterday by Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, speaking before the Lions Club of Memphis at their Hotel Gayoso noonday luncheon on the subject of "Positiveness of Action in Every Channel of Life."

Bishop Gailor recalled an incident some months ago in Dallas, Texas, when he saw 4,000 Knights of the Ku Klux Klan march in parade down one of the pricipal streets of the Texas metropolis. His sorching remark regarding this group of men came near the close of a talk in which he stressed that we should eliminate the "don'ts" in the advice which we give others, and substitute for them "positive 'do-s'." These marching knights, he said, carried banners favoring religious intolerance.

"The trouble, generally, with our religion," said Bishop Gailor, "is a prevalence of don'ts which has exhausted nearly all the spiritual possibilities of the nation. A man should be told to do a specific thing that is good (a positive virtue) rather than an attempt being made at the suppression of one of his faults. The fault will take care of itself, for the best way to be good is to do good things."

"The more life you have, the less possibilitity there is of disease," Bishop Gailor stated in his closing summary of an address which had presented the two opposed ideas of "activity and positives" and "passiveness and negatives."

Read Oakville Report.

"The Lions are doing a positive work with no anti-s," the bishop asserted in commenting on the report of the special Oakville Memorial Sanitarium investigating committee, chairmaned by Israel Peres, which recommended that the Lions' Club of Memphis advocate and push a $300,000 bond issue, equally by the city and county, for the addition of needed facilities at that institution.

The addition of two infirmaries to the present equipment at the Oakville Sanitarium is, in the opinion of the trustees, the first and immediate need of the institution of Memphis and of Shelby County. These buildings, the committee report says, should be of hollow tile and as near fireproof as possible. Three pavilions or open-air sleeping porches are also needed, it is said, one for white men, one for white women and a combination pavilion for negroes.

Possibly 20 per cent, it is estimated, of the city board of health's 2,000 recorded cases of tuberculosis in Memphis are children. No Memphis or Shelby County institution, the committee reports, will at the present time accept for treatment a child having tuberculosis of the throat or lungs in an active form. The trustees of the Oakville Memorial Sanitarium have provided a special tract of 10 acres for the building of a children's unit, and the investigating committee urgently recommends that this be done at once.

The sanitarium is now filled to its capacity of 150 patients, while there are nearly 200 awaiting their turn for admittance as improved or cured cases are discharged.

The governing board of the Lions' Club will meet today to consider action on the report which further recommends that the club devote its entire efforts during the next 90 days to the enlargement of the institution, and that in support of the bond issues, in case they are approved, a committee be appointed to aid in securing the necessary enabling acts from the next Legislature which meets shortly after the first of the year.

Mrs. Frank Hoyt Gailor, the bishop's daughter-in-law, was a guest of Lion Peres. The membership speaker of the luncheon was Walter Reinhardt, while Milton Knowlton and Adolph Steuterman furnished the musical entertainment. Lion H. J. M. Jorgensen gave an amusing report on the Christmas celebration at the Lions' Open Air School in North Memphis.

Bishop Gailor was a member of the Memphis Lions before leaving here for New York several years ago. He will again be a Memphis Lion now that he has returned to the Bluff City.

KLAN'S ACT DISAPPROVED.

Masked Men Give Negroes Cash and Then Lecture Them.

AUSTIN, Texas, April 27.—Disapproval of the demonstration of the Ku Klux Klan in the house of representatives last night when a concert by the St. John Orphanage for Negroes was in progress, was voiced by Lieut. Gov. T. W. Davidson in a statement read into the journal of the Texas Senate this morning. He declared the incident to be "unfortunate and inopportune." 4-28-23

About 70 klansmen, in full regalia, entered the hall, presented the negro leader with a purse of money and delivered an address on the principles of the organization.

SOUTH RAVES AT POLA AND HER DARK LOVER

HOUSTON, TEX., June 16.—One of the greatest furores to have shaken the South in the last decade has been occasioned by the film "Bella Donna," featuring Pola Negri, the distinguished Polish actress. In this film, Mlle. Negri, the tragic heroine, deserts her English husband and falls in love with an extremely brown-skinned Egyptian.

Chicago Post 6/16/23

Although the film makes no allusion to the attachment of American white women to dark skinned Americans, it has been outlawed by practically every city in the South.

Particularly incensed is Colonel Mayfield, a "befo' de war rebel," who publishes a Ku Klux weekly known as Colonel Mayfield's Weekly here.

In a recent issue of his paper, the colonel has the following to say:

The first picture of the Polish vamp in America is an open insult to the nation. Chicago

It is a brazen propaganda for social equality. It is a stench in the nostrils of the Southland an affront to the Caucasian race.

Europe's alleged star should be sent back to Poland to twinkle among a people where the white instinct is not pronounced as it is in America, and with her should go the depraved second-hand clothing merchants who foisted the production on the American people.

The picture was barred from Houston by the local censor board and permitted entry, over their protest by the mayor of Houston.

Thank God for the censor board, and —well, you can guess my sentiments for the mayor.

Egyptian the Hero

The story of "Bella Donna," Pola Negri's dirty play, deals with the mad infatuation of a white woman for a dark-skinned North African, yclept an Egyptian.

Those who saw the play witnessed the horrible and revolting spectacle of a white woman, clinging in the arms of a colored man. The white face of the woman melting into the passionate countenance of the black man, and those Jews made the Egyptian good and black, as if to vent some ancient grudge.

The picture is an insult to all Americans and a direct thrust at the Southland. 6-16-23

I told you some time ago that the depraved and degraded bunch of Kikes who control the movie industry of this country had deliberately and with malice aforethought planned to break down the moral life of Protestant America with the subtle and convincing propaganda of the screen. I told you how, inch by inch, they dragged the heroes and heroines of the youth of this land into the utter depths of sin, depravity and human nakedness. I told you of the foul and immoral lessons they daily schooled into the children of this land and I predicted then that the day was coming when they would seek to carry that degradation to further depths by introducing the Negro on the screen to act in conjunction with white people and attempt to foist that on a white Protestant race for whom they seem to have nothing but contempt. I told you it was coming, and here is its approach. Already Negroes are being given roles in screen plays, more and more they are intruding into the plays and the latest step is the love affair of a white woman with a black man.

Ye Gods!

Is it conceivable that such a play could be presented in the Old South?

Worse than that, open insult follows rapidly on the heels of displayed immorality.

This bulletin is flashed on the screen. Read, white sons of the South—read it and reflect. Read it again and again, and see to what revolting depths the depraved Jews have dragged the moving pictures.

Read and Reflect

"WHITE SKINNED LADIES WILL FLIRT WITH BROWN SKINNED MEN WHEN THEIR HUSBANDS ARE AWAY."—Pola Negri in "Bella Donna."

So help me God, that bulletin was flashed on the screen in the leading theater in the city of Houston. So help me God, that foul and blasphemous lie was sent over America by the depraved and conscienceless Jews of Hollywood.

Where are the thunderbolts of Jove?

Where is the manhood of the Old South?

The South has never been safe from the Negro rape fiend. We have hung them by their necks, we have burned them at the stake, and still no woman is safe beyond the range of her husband's rifle.

Jews Criticised

Conditions have ever been deplorable in the South, watch as we would along this line and now comes the Jewish propaganda that

"White-skinned ladies will flirt with brown-skinned men when their husbands are away."

That brutal lie and that dirty play will lead more Negroes to the funeral pyre than all of the other influences that ever combined to lure the black man to death for ravishing.

That dirty lie will play upon the lips of ten million Negroes now dreaming of social equality; that dirty play will stir up more turmoil and strife than all the influences of rabid Negro papers ever published in the history of America.

At this time when the colored man is chafing under the lash of incendiary writers, goading him to impossible dreams of social equality, Pola Negri's dirty play will lure him to extremes that lead but to the tomb.

Jews Hate K. K. K.

And that is but the beginning of the Jewish assault upon social equality. They hate the Ku Klux Klan; they have no interest in nor love for the Gentile race, and the batteries of their tremendous power are turned to social equality. They think, in their money-crazed lunacy, that they can get away with it. They will send out kindred pictures to Pola Negri's bestial act. They will have white men wildly infatuated with saddle-colored women; they will do anything under God Almighty's sun to degrade the Protestant people.

Pola Negri's play was barred from Houston and Mayor Holcombe overrode his censor board and permitted it to be shown here.

Falls Madly in Love

It is the story of a white woman who falls in love with an Egyptian coon, and is despoiled by him in his tent, and then goes madly in love with him, meets him nightly, and to make the picture more hellish, if that were possible, the white woman is spurned and kicked by the coon, while she swoons pleading at his feet.

Pictures of that kind are going to cause more bloodshed in the South than flowed during the Civil War.

The manhood of the South will not stand for such stuff.

It is a specie of propaganda that must and will be stopped RIGHT NOW.

There is a line beyond which the propaganda of the depraved Kike can never pass, with all of his power and wealth.

Klan Stages Open Air Initiation at Yoakum

Houston Post 6/23/23

YOAKUM, Texas, May 31.—The first open air naturalization ceremony to be witnessed in this section under the auspices and staging of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was offered between Yoakum and Cuero. A large private pasture was used.

Those visiting the scene estimate 1500 as the number of automobiles parked along the staked territory and fully 200 candidates initiated into the order. The American flag and fiery cross were much in evidence. It is stated several klans were represented.

A heavy rain broke up the affair. Fully 25 autos picked up tacks, the large roofing paper variety, en route to Yoakum, and boards containing large nails were found nailed to several bridges. Many auto tires were damaged and some cars suffered two and three punctures at the time.

PROCLAMATION CREATING KAMELIA

(The Woman's Organization)

American Woman

Seven years ago the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan were organized by myself and chartered under the laws of the State of Georgia as a patriotic, fraternal and benevolent order. From a very small beginning the order has grown until it is established in every state in the Union, and its membership comprises a large part of the native-born, white, Protestant citizens of America. The membership of the organization from the beginning was narrowly restricted to such citizens only as could claim nativity in America, of white antecedents and of the Protestant Christian Faith. This order, so composed, has grown to its powerful present proportion, and is rapidly extending to embrace the entire population of the country, qualified to membership in the Order. San Antonio, Tex.

The order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was a dream of my youth and early manhood. The vision of years has been partly comsummated in the organization of men. This organization stands as impregnable as a tower in defense of our distintive American institutions and in resistance against every invasion that menaces our inheritance. 3/31/23

It was given to me, in the providence of Almighty God, with all of the limitations and restrictions of my humanity, to create by vision and to found in fact the Order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. As Emperor and Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, I have invested in the organization all that I have, and all that I am, so completely that nothing has been reserved. My life has been built into this great American institution. Therefore, there are certain rights of supervision and regulation and control residing and inhering in me, as the creator and founder of the organization which I shall continue to exercise as long as mortal life shall last. To the administration of details and the conduct of routine affairs, others have been from time to time assigned. But my relation to the organization as creator and founder has been unchanged and is unchangeable.

In the course of Human events, the time has now come when the foundation shall be laid for the consummation of the other part of my early vision. Always in my dream of a great renewal of Americanism and the reclamation of all that we have lost by alien and enemy invasion, there was the contemplation of a great woman's organization, adhering to the same principles, committed to the same purposes and impelled by the same motives as the organization of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. For a considerable period the demand upon me for an organization of women has increased until the demand has become a clamor from well nigh every section of the United States. A response to the appeal of the earnest, devoted, patriotic women of America cannot longer be deferred. They must take their place alongside the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and co-operate with them in all their worthy movement and co-ordinate their activities with all their noble enterprises, helping to save the white man's civilization on the American continent, and thereby saving the white man's civilization throughout the world.

It is my peculiar privilege and honor, and one of the proudest moments of my life, now and here, to proclaim the creation and the foundation of the Woman's Organization, to be known as "KAMELIA," and in making this proclamation, to declare as the founder and creator of the KAMELIA my official designation and title to be El Magus.

This organization of the KAMELIA shall have the same deep concern, the same investment of resources, the same unreserved devotion to its growth and prosperity as has characterized me in my relation to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. From time to time directions, mandates and edicts shall be sent by me to the organization and, within a short space of time, the ritualistic work for the KAMELIA will be communicated.

Meantime, let there be an immediate response on the part of native-born, white Protestant women of America above the age of eighteen years to the uplifted ideals of American citizenship. Altogether, let there be a new consecration to the American home, to the American Government and to the American creed of Christianity as taught by the Protestant Church.

Given under my hand and seal from the Krown Kourt of El Magus, on this, the twenty-second day of March, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-three.

(Signed) WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS,
El Magus.

OFFICIALS INDICTED ON FLOGGING CHARGE

Oklahoma Charges Hundreds of Klansmen Attended Flogging. Gov. Walton Asks Tulsa Officials to Step Down.

Memphis, Tenn.

(By the Associated Press).

AMARILLO, Texas, Sept. 12.—Indictments against Sheriff Less Whitaker, County Attorney Henry Ford and four other men in connection with the recent flogging here of E. T. McDonald were today returned by the Potter grand jury. Whitaker and Ford are charged with misconduct in office, while the other four men are charged with assault with a prohibited weapon.

(By The Associated Press.)

SHAWNEE, Okla., Sept. 12.—Flogging charges involving the Ku Klux Klan were filed here late today by County Attorney Claude Hendon against C. M. Reber, former major of the Oklahoma National Guard, and Malcolm Couch, formerly chief of the Shawnee fire department. 9-13-23

The county attorney alleges that Reber and Couch directed the abduction and whipping of Claude McCanon and Frank Cole, local taxicab drivers, in an alfalfa field near Shawnee, on or about March 10, 1922.

Three or four hundred Ku Klux Klansmen took part in the flogging party, the information alleges.

Reber, it is alleged, was in charge of the mob. It is charged that he wore the regalia of the K. K. K., with a black mask, and was armed with two revolvers which he had obtained from the National Guard.

9-13-23

In Regular Session.

County Attorney Hendon asserted that he had sworn statements in his possession to the effect that the whipping of McCanon and Cole was planned and ordered by the klan in its regular session, and that these plans were revealed to Ira Sims, local chief of police, who declared that he favored such action and would not interfere with the proceedings in any way.

The county attorney's statement alleges that Chief Sims agreed to detail his men in different parts of the city on the night of the whipping so that they could not perchance interrupt the flogging plans.

Other officers and members of the klan and several city officials are said to have taken part in the flogging, Hendon alleges.

His office has not yet obtained sufficient evidence to warrant their arrest, however, he said.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 12.—Declaring that Tulsa County's three jury commissioners, sheriff and police commissioner of Tulsa are dominated by the Ku Klux Klan, Gov. J. C. Walton today demanded the resignations of the jury commissioners and asked a committee of citizens to call upon the sheriff and police commissioner to retire, giving the terms on which he will revoke his martial law order here.

The governor, who came here today to make a personal survey of military rule presented his terms at a conference with a delegation of representative business men which lasted more than two hours. After the meeting a committee was formed to negotiate further with the governor. There was no indication as to whether the executive's proposals were acceptable.

Declaring that Tulsa's courts, jury commission and other officials are "in the hands of a secret organization" Gov. Walton stated at the conference "We have reached the point where the issue is the survival of invisible government or the permanency of our own visible government. I am going to clean that situation up if I have to stand out alone and let them shoot at me."

Proof of the governor's charges was asked by Judge L. M. Poe, in behalf of the courts, who declared he was reluctant to believe were true, with his knowledge of the integrity of the bench. When conclusive evidence is presented, he said, he felt the people would agree to the changes asked by the governor.

"I am just as anxious to get the soldiers out of Tulsa and eliminate martial law here as any citizen in this room," Gov. Walton told the conference.

"The invoking of martial law in your fair city involved nothing whatever of a personal nature on my part.

"An investigation developed that your courts, jury commission and some of your other officials were in the hands of a secret organization. It was found that your civil officials made no attempt whatever to stop mob violence. In fact, they encouraged it in some instances.

"Whether the Ku Klux Klan is responsible for this alarming condition is not the question. Had any other organization been responsible my attitude would have been the same.

Flogged Even Women.

"It is a certain fact that there are in this community bands of men who have taken people of all classes out, even women, and flogged them in defiance of law. That must be stopped.

"We have reached the point, gentlemen, where the issue is survival of invisible government or the permanency of our own visible government. I want to say to you that I am going to clean that situation up if I have to stand out alone and let them shoot at me in order to do so.

"I don't believe we are going to be able to clean up here with the present police commissioner, present klan sheriff or present jury commission. With these officials in power and this commission selecting the juries, I don't believe we are going to get convictions of those already arrested on whipping charges, no matter how strong the evidence we present.

"That state of affairs is not right and I am not going to permit it to exist if the situation can be remedied. I want it so every citizen, even the most humble, will get full protection against mob violence under the law.

"Since this cannot happen with these men in office, I believe you good, representative citizens, who are for law enforcement and who have the interests of your city at stake, should go to them and ask them to resign.

"Then I am going to ask you to put others in their places who are neither klan nor anti-klan, but will go down the line for law enforcement, whether it be against mob violence or against the ordinary statutory crimes.

Not the Only Place.

"Tulsa is not the only place where these serious conditions exist. There are many others in the state. Oklahoma County (Oklahoma City) is one of the worst. In fact, the head and the front of this opposition to law and order is there. Before we are through we expect to clean up those places too, if it remains necessary.

"This state and county must be put in a position so mob violence can be stamped out and law and order enforced. When that is done here I will take the military out of Tulsa immediately.

Ouster proceedings against Henry W. Kiskaddon, the police commissioner, already have been prepared by the state attorney general's department on grounds of mistreatment of police prisoners. The charges have not yet been filed, however.

KLANSMEN GATHER FOR DALLAS FAIR; WIZARD IS THERE

Houston

Whole Day's Program Turned Over to Texas Ku Klux

Houston Post

Associated Press Report.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 23.—The arrival of Imperial Wizard Hiram W. Evans and his personal staff and members of the kloncillum of the Ku Klux Klan, this evening foreshadowed Ku Klux Klan day at the State Fair of Texas here Wednesday.

Brown Harwood, imperial klazik; H. K Ramsey, imperial kilgrapp; F. L. Savage, imperial klaklonsel; Judge C. J. Orbison, imperial klokard, were in the party.

10-24-23

The first event on the Klan day program will be the formal dedication of the New Hope cottage for foundlings, built by Dallas klansmen. Mayor Blaylock of Dallas will deliver the principal address.

The Oklahoma klansmen will meet at 11:30 o'clock and Wizard Evans will speak at 1:30 o'clock. A klan football game and athletic events are scheduled in the afternoon, while a public initiation will be held at night. A downtown celebration will close the festivities to be engaged in by klansmen from many States.

The Stars and Bars of the Confederacy scored today, set aside for the "boys in gray" and the tune of "Dixie" was heard over the fair grounds.

Panting bronchos, bellows of maddened steers and clatter of hoofs in the arena, accompanied by calls of "Stay in there, cowboy!" marked the third day's rodeo. So far six persons have been injured, two of them seriously.

Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois was the principal speaker at the fair as a guest of the Fair association, the Holstein Breeders association and other organizations today.

Sitting tight, high up on the driver's seat of the "Wolfville and Red Dog Stage," the former governor waved his hat in response to the cheers of nearly ten thousand Texans in the grandstand.

The rodeo was on and Mr. Lowden was in the best of spirits. Cy Cullen, native Texan, drove the ancient coach.

Mrs. Lowden occupied a box in the grandstand and watched her husband with the greatest of interest.

TEXANS TO PUT KLAN BEFORE THE SENATE AS NATIONAL ISSUE

Will Charge Its Political Dominance in Move to Keep Mayfield Out.

ALLEGE THREATS TO VOTERS

Declare Election Machinery Seized, Ballots Printed, Big Sum Spent by Knights.

HEFLIN FOR THE DEFENSE

Klansmen Say He Will Retaliate by Seeking to Unseat Lodge—Mayfield Shows Concern.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 26.—The Senate will have to meet the Ku Klux Klan issue in the next session of Congress. It is a matter of common knowledge that a very considerable number of Senators, most of them from States in which the Klan has developed great strength, have been hoping that they would be spared this ordeal at least until after the 1924 election has passed into history.

N. Times

Such, however, will not be the case, for it is the intention of the men who are behind the move to unseat Earle B. Mayfield, the Ku Klux Senator from Texas, to bring that question before the Senate soon after the Congress assembles on Dec. 3.

10-27-23

The Mayfield case, in the opinion of those who are familiar with the evidence which is to be submitted to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, is destined to create an even greater interest in the nation than did that of ex-Senator Truman H. Newberry of Michigan. The evidence which will be submitted to the Senate by Bailey, Nichols & Bailey of Dallas, who will direct the fight to unseat Mayfield, will place before the country what is declared to be irrefutable evidence of how the Klan works when it sets out to elect one of the hooded brothers to high office.

In advance of its presentation to the Senate it is not now possible to disclose some of the most important of the charges which will be submitted, charges involving intimidation of voters, the taking over of the election machinery in important counties by the Klan, the spending of a vast sum of money many times in excess of the $10,000, which is the maximum permitted under the Texas law, and, as a climax, the submission of documentary evidence which, it is alleged, will prove beyond all reasonable doubt that Mayfied was before and after his election a member in good standing of the Klan. Mayfield will contend that he resigned from the Klan prior to the election.

Says Klan Relies on Heflin.

At the big Klan mobilization in Dallas on Wednesday the Mayfield case was continually under discussion. One of the most prominent of the Klansmen in Dallas County told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the Klan will back Mayfield to the limit.

"And if they unseat him," he decared, "we will send him right back."

Another Klansman who was present, a man who holds a high State office, said that Mayfield would not be without friends in the Senate. Asked to identify these friends, he mentioned just one Senator who, he said, was going to resist all efforts to unseat Mayfield.

The Senator he named is Heflin of Alabama who, according to the Klansmen, will move to investigate and unseat Senator Lodge in the event the move to declare Mayfield's election null and void comes to a vote in the Senate.

"What will you do in the event there is no evidence warranting the unseating of Mr. Lodge," the Klan spokesman was asked.

"Oh," he replied, "we will leave that to Heflin."

It was recalled that during the Newberry fight the Senator who spoke more often than any other Senator, the Senator who was the most bitter in his denunciation of Mr. Newberry, was Mr. Heflin of Alabama.

"Will Senator Heflin vote to seat Mayfield if the charges against him are proved?" the Klan spokesman was asked. "Will he be so inconsistent as to vote to seat Mayfield under such circumstances in view of the stand he took in the Newberry fight?"

"We can't say; ask Heflin," was the reply.

The Klan is also counting on support from certain Senators whose terms expire in 1925. It is not expected that all of these Senators will espouse the cause of the Texan, but they are expected to use their influence to keep the matter in committee and off the floor of the Senate, at least during the first session, which is expected to adjourn a few weeks in advance of the meeting of the national conventions.

Peddy's Counsel Confident.

10-27-23

On the other hand Luther B. Nichols, of Bailey, Nichols & Bailey, who will personally represent George E. B. Peddy of Houston, who was Mayfield's opponent in the election of 1922, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that his case is complete and the evidence is ready for submission to the committee on Privileges and Elections.

"I cannot discuss that evidence in advance of its production before the committee," said Mr. Nichols, "but I can assure you that every charge we make will be substantiated. There will be no hearsay evidence or guess work in this case. Once this mass of evidence, which will be backed up by Texans of the highest standing, is before the committee we will be content, for then we are absolutely certain that even those who now oppose us will have to admit the truth and justice of our case."

Mr. Nichols declared that the issue in this matter of Peddy vs. Mayfield, involving as it does the whole Klan issue must be met, and he is confident that the Senate will not fail to meet it squarely and fairly when the time comes.

Mr. Bailey declared that despite Mayfield's assertion that he had resigned from the Klan he attended many Klan meetings after that declaration, that the Grand Dragon on Texas is on record as subsequently endorsing him as a klansman.

It will be charged in behalf of Mr. Peddy that in certain counties the Klan not only took over the management of elections but that it actually had printed and delivered to voting precincts 75,000 ballots on which appeared the name of Mayfield and the name of Pelly was missing.

State Committee Threat Alleged.

Documentary evidence will be submitted which it is declared will conclusively prove that the Democratic State Committee threatened with party excommunication any Democrat who dared to vote for Mr. Peddy, the Independent Democrat-Republican candidate.

It will also be charged that in certain counties election officers who were of the Klan, printed Mayfield's name on the ballot, that in other counties they pasted Mayfield "stickers" on the ballot, while in other counties they wrote with pen or pencil the name of the Klan candidate. In these counties Mayfield's name had been left off the ballot because of a court injunction.

Mr. Mayfield is said to realize the seriousness of the predicament he is in. He conferred a few days ago with Senator Morris Shephard and when the conference was over Mr. Shephard was asked if he had anything to say about the Mayfield contest.

"I can't say anything now," he replied. "But I am doing a lot of thinking."

Mr. Shephard, who is not a klansman, comes up for election next year, and all Texas is waiting for his decision in the Mayfield matter. He is admittedly one of the most conscientious men in the Senate, and his brother-in-law, Cullen F. Thomas of Dallas, who was a candidate for the Senate nomination against Mayfield, is one of the leading anti-klansmen of the State. Mr. Thomas was prominent among those who welcomed Senator Underwood to Dallas yesterday.

Other Senators from States in which the Klan has shown commanding strength, and who come up for election next year, are Robinson in Arkansas, Owen in Oklahoma, McNary in Oregon, Capper in Kansas and Harrison in Mississippi. Like Mr. Shephard, these Senators have so far pursued a policy of silence so far as the Mayfield case is concerned.

NEW YORK CITY WORLD

ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE TEXAS KLAN.

It may be that the Ku Klux Klan in Texas has some more admirable purpose in view than is to be gathered from Lieut. Gov. Davidson's rehearsal of what the organization has been doing lately in his State. No evidence is available on that point. The Klan, by its own proclamation, is against Negroes, Jews and Catholics. By what means it intends to suppress them the proclamation leaves to the imagination. Whether the order is bound to stop at injustice to members of these three groups is also left to surmise—and to an examination of the evidence.

The evidence indicates that the Klan in Texas has quietly extended its intolerance to everybody it dislikes, irrespective of race or religion. It is now a secret society out to terrorize the community in its own interest. Some of its outstanding recent accomplishments, according to Lieut. Gov. Davidson, are the murder of a respectable workman named Otto Lange, the wounding of his daughter and the beating of his mother into submission with pistol butts; also the shooting of a merchant in front of his store, the flogging of a venerable Baptist minister, an assault on a man named E. T. McDonald, mob revenge on several citizens in the neighborhood of Port Arthur, the whipping of a drug clerk at Wichita Falls with copper wire, bits of which were found in his wounds, and a series of other outrages less specifically described. In no single case was the motive of the Klan traceable to the three prejudices named in the speech of the Imperial Wizard as fundamental Klan doctrine.

Despicable as are the stated principles of the Klan, its practice in Texas is, if such a thing is possible, worse. Its one activity is pure hoodlumism, human depravity in its most vicious and dangerous form. It is a Government by the worst—and at present it is governing Texas. How long will Texas endure so complete humiliation?

ILLITERACY AND INTOLERANCE.

The Imperial Wizard has spoken. The great gathering of the Klan in Texas furnished him his platform, and from it the former Atlanta dentist read the speech which, he confided to his friends, he had spent five months in writing. Evidently he regards it as the whole gospel of the Ku Klux Klan. Yet no one can read it without somehow associating it with his former occupation, in which he doubtless inflicted the usual amount of suffering upon the victims in his chair. One is reminded of the lady who asked the poet ROGERS why he was always saying such disagreeable things. He replied: "My dear, I have a very weak

"voices and if I didn't say disagree-
"able things no one would take the "trouble to listen to me." The Imperial Wizard gives the impression of a speaker who knows that his words will not carry far unless he makes them as disagreeable as possible.

After jumping together Negroes, Jews and Catholics as the elements of our population upon which the Klan declares war in the name of pure and undefiled Americanism, the Wizard came out strong on illiteracy. He was shocked by the great numbers of people who cannot read or write in Italy, in Spain, in Greece and Bulgaria. This is peculiarly delightful coming from a Southern man. The South can hold its own in the matter of illiteracy, as the army statistics showed, and has been notoriously backward in providing the means of public education. Unfair discrimination against negroes in sharing the school funds has long been a ground of complaint in several Southern States. If the Imperial Wizard would buckle to the task of increasing the number of literates among the colored people, a part of his objection to them would be removed. But, of course, it is much easier to rail at other countries.

It apparently never occurred to the Imperial Wizard to ask if there are not some things worse than illiteracy. According to the soundest American tradition, intolerance is one of them. A citizen who can read but who shuts his mind to the meaning of what he reads may be more undesirable than an illiterate person who accepts and acts upon the general principles of human brotherhood and of hearty co-operation in the work of building up the country in all that makes for its prosperity and peace and stability. There are some fundamental qualities of civic character which are more important than a knowledge of books. It does not require a scholar to understand the great experiment in democracy which has been tried all these years in the United States. Its best hope of success lies in valuing a man for what he is and can do, rather than for his learning, and above all in the spirit of friendly sympathy with all sorts and conditions of men. Nothing could in reality be more un-American than the unthinking and ferocious intolerance which the Ku Klux Klan is at present making one of its cardinal doctrines. It exhibits ignorance enough, but we could endure a great deal more of this provided that it would recognize the fact that all Americans are in the same boat, and that they will never reach their destination safely unless they insist upon fair play all around and a considerate and tolerant treatment of their fellows.

HONEY ISLAND, Texas, Aug. 25.—No arrests had been made late today in connection with the flogging and tarring and feathering Thursday night of a man giving the name of Simmie Knapp, according to W. O. Williams, deputy sheriff of Hardin County, sent here to investigate the affair. The officer said Knapp had a number of welts on his back, bearing out his claim to having been flogged with a whip. Tar and feathers were applied after the whipping and Knapp, wrapped in a sheet, was turned loose near an apostolic tabernacle about a mile from Honey Island.

Deputy Sheriff Williams said Knapp told him the men who kidnaped him were dressed in white robes with something on their heads, that they parted in the middle to see. Knapp said he recognized a number of his assailants, but repudiated this assertion when asked before a justice of the peace to make complaint, according to Williams. Mistreatment of his 17-year-old wife and six-months-old baby was the reason assigned for his punishment by the masked band, Knapp said, according to Williams.

WAGONER, Okla., Aug. 25.—Acting on the report that the flogging of Ben Wagner, Wagoner County farmer, had occurred in this county instead of Tulsa, authorities today instituted criminal action against nine men on charges of riot. The defendants are those arrested in Tulsa following an investigation by a military court there. Informations filed in district court charging the men with having whipped Wagner, were signed by John S. Moss, Wagoner county attorney.

Warrants were issued and Sheriff Corgan left at once for Tulsa County to take the defendants into custody.

The men named are: Ben Sikes, Grover C. Sikes, Earl Sack, A. M. Galloway, W. M. Bills, Avery Barbour, T. V. Venator, W. M. Lewis, Hal Bensen, Dick Fisher and Harve Akers.

Both the Sikes, who are brothers, and Sack, pleaded guilty in Tulsa, and were sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the state penitentiary. Both admitted membership in the Ku Klux Klan.

It was thought probable that the will be taken before one of the three district judges into whose jurisdiction the cases have been moved and permitted to re-enter their pleas.

CONVICT KLUX IN TEXAS

GIVEN 2 YEARS AS A WHITE-CAPPER—FLOGGED WHITE MAN

Amarillo, Tex., Oct. 12, 1923—T. W. Stanford, alleged Ku Klux Klansman, was found guilty of a charge of white-capping in connection with the recent flogging of E. T. McDonald here. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Defence counsel filed a motion for a new trial. The State charged that Stanford was leader of a band of masked men who first ordered McDonald to leave Amarillo and later flogged him.

The verdict of guilty was based on the third count of the indictment against Stanford, the jury reported. This count involved the wearing of alleged Ku Klux Klan robes by the men, which the jury held constituted a threat within itself. McDonald said the men wore robes the night they ordered him to leave the city.

KLAN SEEKS FACTS IN KIMBRO SUIT

Setting forth that it will be impossible to proceed with the suit against George D. Kimbro Jr., for an accounting without knowing the facts of the records kept by the defendant, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have filed a motion "for discovery" to force Kimbro to reveal the contents of all records kept by him during the time he was grand goblin of the order.

Judge Charles E. Ashe has cited Kimbro to appear before him at 9 a. m. on Thursday, November 15, to show cause why he should not produce all books and records of the office for examination by officials of the order.

The motion sets forth that the records are now out of the State and in the hands of Kimbro's father in Baton Rouge, and that Kimbro has refused to allow the klan to inspect these records.

Books and records alluded to include the cash book and journal kept by the grand goblin, correspondence with king kleagles of various States under the jurisdiction of the defendant, together with check books showing remittances during the period Kimbro was grand goblin.

The klan's suit against Kimbro for $24,000 is set for trial November 15.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923. Tennessee.

Spying and Lawlessness.

The exalted cyclops or one of the speakers at the Ku Klux meeting Thursday evening stated that telegrams had been sent from The Commercial Appeal office Tuesday night in an effort to get something on Rev. Spurgeon, who is one of their imported orators.

One telegram was sent to New York, the other to Denver, based upon statements that this orator made here and recently in Knoxville, that the Associated Press was a Catholicized institution and that an Associated Press man had conferred with others when he was beaten up in Denver. The managing editor of the Denver Post was asked the particulars as to the alleged beating. The Associated Press was asked as to its investigation about the charge. These telegrams were sent by the Postal Telegraph Company. An answer came in from The Denver Post the next morning and from the New York office of the Associated Press in the afternoon.

There seems to be an underground spying system between the Ku Klux organization and someone in the office of the Postal Telegraph Company.

There was nothing that required concealment in the two telegrams that were sent, no necessity of concealment in the replies received. They were sent because they bore on news sources of papers. We are printing both replies in full. The first is from Mr. Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, with headquarters in New York. Mr. Martin is the executive chief of this organization, the president being Mr. Noyes of Washington. This telegram should stop the reiterated charge of Klux orators that the Associated Press is dominated by Catholics. It probably will not because the falsity of this assertion has been denounced time and again. Here is the telegram:

"Cooper away today. We refused to make inquiries religion directors, but a Missouri member did it and reports there is not a Catholic on the board. There is no executive officer or division superintendent who is a Catholic. Investigation Denver case revealed Associated Press man any action whatever therewith. Spurgeon kidnapped, April taken into country and beaten. Six men indicted, we have their names. Charge of Associated Press connection therewith preposterous."

The name Cooper in the telegram has reference to the fact that the inquiring telegram was sent to Kent Cooper, assistant general manager.

The telegram from the managing editor of the Denver Post is as follows:

"Spurgeon lectured in Denver April fifth, nineteeen fourteen, before Ku Klux was an issue. Night after his lecture he was kidnapped from local hotel in which he was stopping, taken outside Denver County and beaten up. Six men were arrested and were tried twice. In both trials juries disagreed. The gossip was that Knights of Columbus were back of kidnapping but that was only inference and gossip. I will be glad to furnish any other information you may desire"—Managing Editor Post.

In order that employes of companies may not be guilty of betraying their trusts and that the sin of spying be at least reduced any klucker hereafter interested may come this office and go through from day to day and inspect copies of all messages and all letters sent from The Commercial Appeal and sent to The Commercial Appeal on any sort of news or editorial business whatever.

To beat up any man is wrong, no matter what may be the provocation. A great wrong was done Mr. Spurgeon when he was beaten up and those who did it should have been punished. Nothing justifies men in breaking the law. That is why The Commercial Appeal has always opposed mobs, floggings, and lawlessness whether in a clan or out of a clan.

The Associated Press is composed of a large number of the daily papers. The directors are elected by the papers. The directors in turn elect officers and managers. It just so happens that no Catholic is on the board. One Jew out of 12 or 14 directors on the board, but America has no finer citizen nor patriot than Adolph Ochs.

Ninety-five per cent of the papers belonging to the Associated Press are owned by men who are Protestants. American daily newspapers are non-sectarian, but we believe their aggregate opinion on all questions is genuinely American, as Americanism is defined under the Constitution and Declaration of Independence.

Ignorance or Perversion?

The awarding of the Pulitzer medal to The Commercial Appeal seems to have jarred the mainspring in the mental apparatus of the editor of the weekly Sun-Times, published at Monette, Ark.

After using up two columns on the front page of his paper to successfully demonstrate his ignorance of the ethics and principles of journalism and show the possibilities of wilful perversion, the editor of the weekly apparently enjoyed a placid interval and stated the cause of his acute attack of mental indigestion in these words:

"What riled us was a miscarriage of justice in the profession of which we are a member."

He informs us that for 35 years he has held membership in the fourth estate. We shall not question his statement. It seems reasonable. We could cite instances where men have plodded along at a trade or a profession for more than 35 years without making progress.

It is true that in the majority of cases such a lengthy period of time is not required for human intelligence to suggest the impossibility of a square hole being plugged by a round peg. Nevertheless, there is yet hope. Sometimes a man may not find his proper sphere until the blood ceases to run hot and the brain cells are stored with a knowledge that silvers the thinning strands on the scalp.

For that reason we bid the "riled" brother be of good cheer. Now and then the best work of a man is done as he nears the three score and ten mark. Rare, we admit, but not so rare as to strangle the hope that springs eternal in the human breast.

But why should the editor of the Monette paper hold us responsible for his disappointments in life?

We do not even know him. At the risk of being chided for our ignorance of biography, we admit that we never heard of him. How, then, could we know that this veteran journalist of 35 years' experience was a contender for the Pulitzer medal?

The real purpose, however, of this self-confessed journalistic sage in delivering himself of two columns of venom and falsehood is so thinly veiled that it is obvious. His tirade is a defense of the Ku Klux Klan, and his anger is aroused by editorials and news stories of The Commercial Appeal dealing with the organization and incidents resulting from its activities.

So far as the editor of the Sun-Times is concerned, his opinions are of no moment to us whatever. Neither would we give heed to his juggling of facts were it not for our readers in Craighead County.

We feel it our duty to these readers to reiterate the statement that every story having to do with the klan in Morehouse Parish, La., in the recent hearing before Judge Trieber at Little Rock, and in every other instance, was founded on fact and true in every particular. Any statement to the contrary is false and may be likened to "a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

The Commercial Appeal, in handling the Louisiana investigation, did not try the men accused of murdering Daniel and Richard; it did not say they were guilty; it did not say the Ku Klux Klan had anything to do with it. It merely printed the privileged testimony brought out in the proceedings. It gave only facts as they came to light. We stand by every statement made in our columns.

We did dwell on the fact that the Klan leaders made no attempt to turn up the men, who they alleged were alive, and no move to apprehend their slayers.

We have between 85 and 100 subscribers in Monette, Ark. Doubtless The Commercial Appeal is on file there. We invite anyone to turn to the issue of May 15, page 13, and read our Little Rock story under date of the previous day, and ascertain for himself what The Commercial Appeal printed regarding the case of Herbert Sease, under sentence of death, and the expression of Judeg Trieber in denying Sease's petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

In the rush to get to press on time one of our make-up men transposed two lines at the end of the story, but this mechanical error did not make us misquote the judge. We did not print the court's decision verbatim, but here is what our correspondent had to say:

"Judge Trieber took occasion to express his opinion of the klan, stating that 'the organization was a menace to the country and in direct conflict with the federal and state constitutions.' While he deplored the existence of organizations of that kind, he knew of no way to prevent people from joining it so long as they did not violate the law."

He also said the claim of Sease that the Klan had to do with his trouble was not borne out by the evidence.

We know nothing of what the Little Rock papers had to say about the case. We are not dependent on them for our Arkansas news. The Commercial Appeal has at Little Rock a salaried correspondent who wires to us on an average of 1,300 words a night. It also has the Associated Press service out of Little Rock. On the occasion of this decision our correspondent happened to be the only newspaper man in the courtroom.

In keeping with our long-established policy of making a full investigation whenever a statement appearing in the columns of The Commercial Appeal is questioned, we went to the bottom of this. Not only does our correspondent maintain that the story was accurate, but he is corroborated by a well-known Little Rock attorney. The attorney's name will be given on request. Here is what he says:

"I have read the report of the hearing in The Commercial Appeal, under date of May 15, and it substantially reflects what was said by the court. The matter is very clear in my mind, as I listened with extreme care to what was said about the matter."

As to the religious issues the editor of the Sun-Times attempts to raise, he may thresh them out with bigots of any creed, if he can find enough of them to start an argument. There are none on our visiting list. The majority of Memphis pastors, of every race and creed, are our very good friends. They are in our office most any hour of the afternoon or evening. We work hand-in-hand with them for the religious and educational uplift of this community. Perhaps, as our "riled" brother states, 90 per cent of the ministers of the south are members of the Ku Klux Klan. If so, the klan is to be congratulated to that extent. If we believed it we might even be persuaded that there is hope for the organization's efforts being directed along lines that will be helpful.

In the meantime The Commercial Appeal will go right along chronicling the happenings of the day from Dan to Beersheba, from pole to pole, from the black-diamond studded walls of the coal pit to the airship that dips its wings in the clouds of the sky.

In doing this it probably will be necessary to tell about the row between Emperor Simmons and Wizard Evans as they flirt with Kamelia, and mention some things about the cyclops and the kleagles. The Ku Klux papers will not print anything about such happenings and the public wants to know what is going on.

We shall continue to use every endeavor to secure the full facts, and stand ready to acknowledge and correct any error that may inadvertently creep into our columns.

We may win another Pulitzer medal in time for "performing the most distinguished and meritorious public service" by routing ignorance and nailing falsehood.

KLAN DEFEATED, MEMPHIS BALLOT COUNT INDICATES

Unofficial Returns Show Straight Inti-Mask Ticket Wins.

Times Picayune

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 9.—Complete unofficial returns tabulated today by the Commercial-Appeal place Mayor Rowlett Paine's majority over both opponents in yesterday's mayoralty election at 1244. This figure is approximately 1000 votes less than the majority indicated by returns available last night. 11-10-23

Reelection of the mayor and the entire membership of the city commission is viewed here as a decisive victory over the Ku Klux Klan inasmuch as the klan had a full ticket, headed by W. Joe Wood, in the field, and the administration candidates made the race on an anti-klan platform. Another anti-klan ticket headed by Lewis T. Fitzhugh, present city judge, ranked third in the running yesterday.

The complete vote for mayor:

Paine (anti-klan) 12,978: Wood (klan) 8639: Fitzhugh (anti-klan) 3095.

Only one candidate supported by the klan was elected. Clifford Davis, former secretary to Mayor Paine, who was dismissed summarily several weeks ago, was elected city judge with a plurality of approximately 3000 votes. Davis made the race as an avowed independent candidate, but he received the endorsement of the klan faction, which had no candidate in the contest for the judgeship.

Klan candidates for commissioners were defeated by pluralities ranging from 2000 to 3000 votes, the vote being consistent with that in the mayoralty contest. The most decisive defeat was recorded in the race for tax assessor, where T. G. Scarbrough defeated his klan opponent, Harry Roynon, by a majority of more than 5000.

MASKED MEN DELIVER WARNING TO NEGROES

Factory Workers Told Where They Must Trade.

Employers of negro labor in the South Memphis factory district were perturbed yesterday over what they believed to be an overt attempt to terrorize their employes.

The appearance of a band of masked men in the negro settlement around Florida Street and Trigg Avenue Tuesday night, has resulted in commotion among the ranks of the factory workers, particularly as the visit of the white men in disguise followed so closely upon the heels of the recent political campaign during which they heard so much about bed sheets and white-hooded klansmen.

Memphis

Investigation yesterday by operators of industrial plants in South Memphis brought out the fact that a band of several masked men visited the settlement and made a house to house canvass of the negro citizens.

In one instance, a masked man entered the home of a negro, employed for many years by one of the most important industries of the city. The negro responded to the knock at his door after darkness and was frightened when the masked man walked in.

11-16-23

The first demand of the strange visitor was to for whom the negro voted in the election of last Nov. 8.

"I didn't vote, boss," the negro replied. "I wasn't registered."

"Who do you trade with?" he next was asked.

"Oh, jes' round and about," the negro explained.

"Well, we don't want to hear of your spending any money with Jews, Italians or other foreigners hereafter," he was told.

Down the street was other masked white man, who were entering other negro homes and issuing similar warnings.

When first reports reached factory owners, they feared an effort to terrorize and intimidate nego labor, and called several of their employes in to verify the information. The negroes explained what had taken place. They did not know the men, except that they were white men, and seemed to be making a house to house canvass during the night hours.

The result of the investigation was made known yesterday afternoon to downtown business men.

Klan Foe Carried Memphis by 2,500

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 9.—Figures on the anti-Klan victory in yesterday's municipal election today showed that Mayor Rowlett Paine was re-elected with a majority of 2,500 votes. The tabulation of The Commercial Appeal gave Paine 12,488; W. J. Wood, who was endorsed by the Klan, 7,816, and Lewis T. Fitzhugh, a Klan opponent, 2,947. Klan candidates for the four seats as Commissioners ran second, but Clifford Davis, who had the Klan's endorsement, was elected City Judge by a majority of 3,000.

NOV 7 1923

A Matter for the Grand Jury.

Tuesday night a body of masked men made a tour of the factory district in South Memphis and tried to intimidate negro laborers living in that section.

A house-to-house canvass was made. Negroes were asked as to how they voted in the recent municipal election. They were asked whom they traded with. It is reported that the intruders gave one negro this warning:

"We don't want to hear of your spending any money with Jews, Italians or other foreigners hereafter."

This warning itself is proof of the ignorance of the maskers. Many of the most substantial citizens of Memphis are men who were born here and have lived here all their lives. A man cannot be a citizen and a foreigner at the same time.

As to whom a man votes for or trades with is his own business. Any man who believes to the contrary is unfit for citizenship. No man in authority, from president down to constable, has the right to interfere with another man's vote or with his business so long as the commodities of traffic are not contraband.

It is not the ignorance of these maskers, however, that constitutes the offense so much as it is the despicable motive that brought them together to do an unlawful thing. Intimidation and coercion are counter to the law.

It is deplorable that such an outrage could occur at any time. The exodus of negro labor to the north adds to the gravity of the offense at this time.

In the eyes of the law these law-abiding negroes have the same rights and privileges as those enjoyed by men of any color, faith or calling. The law should see that they are protected in them.

We do not know to what class of humanity this masked mob belongs. Its members may be bootleggers or just ordinary hoodlums on mischief bent.

But, whatever they are, the law-enforcing machinery of the county ought to make an earnest effort to learn their identity, secure the evidence and lay the matter before the grand jury.

Such lawless outbreaks should not be permitted to go unchallenged by the law.

KU KLUX VISIT CHURCH IN LEBANON

Four Robed and Hooded Members Present Pastor With Cash Donation.

The Tennessean 10-16-23

(Special to The Tennessean.)

Lebanon, Tenn., Oct. 15.—In the midst of the revival services at the Lebanon Baptist church tonight hooded and robed members of the Ku Klux Klan entered the church and approached the pulpit. They bore in their hands a message which was delivered to the Rev. M. G. Leaman, the pastor. It was found to contain $40 in cash and the following letter:

"Rev. M. G. Leaman, Lebanon, Tenn.

"Dear Brother Leaman:

"Steadily believing in the principles which you stand for and have been preaching, and desiring to assist in the promulgation of truth, we ask that you personally accept this little token and use it for the glory of God and the upbuilding of the Christian religion.

"We are an organization that stands for and seeks to develop and maintain that quality of character that will stand the ultimate test of God's just and unerring judgment. We believe in white supremacy, purity of womanhood, separation of church and state, the upholding of the constitution of these United States, to protect public schools from its enemies and 100 per cent Americanism.

"We, the members of the Lebanon Klan, wish you Godspeed in your work which is duty to God without fear and without reproach.

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of Lebanon, Tenn."

Upon receipts of the letter and its contents the Rev. Leaman said that if these were the things for which the Klan stood, he did not see how any man or woman in America could fail to stand for the same principles.

For the first time, since Civil War days, the fiery cross of the Klan was exhibited in Wilson County tonight, when a large class was initiated into the mysteries of the order.

The Harvest of Outlawry

The Commercial Appeal

There is a mathematical axiom that things equal to the same thing are equal to each other.

And in St. Paul's epistle to the Galatians we read these words: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

8-22-23

These truths are forcefully brought home to us today by acts of violence in various sections of the country by bands of men who are trampling underfoot the law of the land, some of them setting up the claim that they are operating in the name of justice.

In Port Arthur, Tex., a judge of the corporation court has been indicted for participating in the whipping of two members of the I. W. W.

We have no sympathy with the principles of the I. W. W. We believe the organization to be a menace to peace and prosperity. But whenever a member of the order transgresses the law he should be handled by the law in the legally prescribed way. The two men who were whipped may have deserved punishment, but that punishment should have been administered lawfully after guilt was proven.

In Tulsa, Okla., a special deputy sheriff is accused of being one of a band of men who took the law into their own hands and flogged a man whose opinions didn't agree with their own.

An Oklahoma lawyer has written a letter to a St. Louis paper in which he claims that, under threats of being flogged, he was forced to leave Arkansas.

A man held in a Florida jail was removed by a band of masked men Sunday night, after the deputy on duty had been overpowered.

The sheriff of a Texas county is under arrest, held for action of the grand jury. He is alleged to have taken part in one of these numerous flogging cases.

The "Knights of the Blazing Ring" have been organized at Kane, Pa. The members announce themselves as opposed to all clans, and that they have started a "movement that will ring the earth with blazing justice to all."

The "invisible empire" doctrine seems to have spread to the colored race, for a news dispatch from Chattanooga informs us that the negroes there have organized "The Invisible Colored Kingdom." The objects of the "kingdom," as set forth, are laudable, but the name may prove its undoing.

Details of these activities were carried in news stories in the columns of The Commercial Appeal yesterday.

Ever since that tragic affair at Mer Rouge, La., floggings and kidnapings and threats have been reported all over the country.

With the majority of these lawless outbreaks the Ku Klux Klan may have had nothing to do directly. We do not say the klan had a hand in any of them. We feel sure that the better element of the klan disapproves of all of them.

But, reasoning from cause to effect, we want to ask the better element of the klan these questions:

Do they not realize that the attempt of otherwise upright citizens to take the law into their own hands, under any circumstances, is but a signal to start the vicious on a campaign of outlawry?

In view of this widespread outbreak of the lawless, can respectable klansmen convince even themselves that they are not indirectly responsible for these ruthless assaults on the law, it matters not whether the outlaws are inside or outside the ranks of the klan?

When the Ku Klux first became active in this section we pointed out the impossibility of controlling such a movement. We warned those who were at the head of the organization that the inevitable result would be just what is happening every day in every section.

The klan itself, it seems, is divided into blocs.

One bloc maintains that it has no religious prejudices. We believe that some of them do not.

One bloc insists that it harbors no racial prejudices. We believe that some of them do not.

Another bloc says it discountenances any act that has even the appearance of violence. We believe that perhaps the majority of them are opposed to violence.

But the facts indicate that some of the klansmen do hold religious prejudices, that some hold racial prejudices, and some of them arrogate unto themselves the administering of what they call justice.

If there were no religious prejudice, no racial prejudice, no desire to attempt the regulation of a community's affairs and punish wrongdoers without due process of law—what, then, may we ask, is the object of the klan, and what profiteth it a man to affiliate with it and contribute to the support of its high salaried officers?

There can no longer be any doubt that the motives of some of those in high places are purely mercenary. Emperor Simmons and Wizard Evans are keeping up a merry war over the spoils. The rank and file of the membership are called on to put up the money for which emperor and wizard contend.

However, the point we want to emphasize is that, regardless of the good intentions of the respectable members of the organization, they must now suffer for acts they repudiate.

We can not believe that the good men who have lent their names and influence to the klan realized at the time the kind of seed they were sowing. But the fact remains that the seed were sown, and now we are reaping the harvest of outlawry.

The foundation of this republic and the prosperity and welfare of the people composing it rest on the supremacy of the law. Break down the law and chaos is inevitable.

Voluntary obedience to law is the duty of every person who believes in law. Those who will not voluntarily obey the law must feel the hand of the law, but only through the orderly processes of the law.

The man who attempts to take the law into his own hands, setting himself up as judge, jury and executioner, becomes a lawbreaker himself and defeats the very purpose which, professedly, he would attain.

Wherever the law is weak, strengthen it. Don't try to destroy it.

The best way to strengthen the law is for every decent citizen to respect the law himself and co-operate with law enforcing officers in such a way that the vicious will be forced to respect it or suffer its penalties.

The better element of klansmen now owe it to themselves to join forces with those outside the klan in holding up the hands of authority, and in this way putting an end to this wave of outlawry.

Mississippi Chivalry Is Not Dead

The Commercial Appeal

In the Mississippi primary of Aug. there were four candidates in Madison County for the State Senate, a woman and three men.

Miss Belle Kearney was the woman. She lacked only about 100 votes of having a majority over her three opponents. Failure to secure the necessary majority, however, necessitated a run-off between Miss Kearney and the candidate who received the next highest vote. This second primary will be held next Tuesday, Aug. 28.

8-26-23

Fully 50 per cent of Memphis citizens who take an interest in politics are intensely interested in the result of Tuesday's primary. So closely are our interests joined that anything happening on either side of the line that marks the boundary of the states concerns those living on the other side of the line.

Regardless of our interest in the welfare of Mississippians and the glory of their state, we would not attempt to suggest to a citizen of that great commonwealth how he or she should vote or seek by undue means to influence a voter.

There is one phase of the campaign in Madison County, however, which we regard as so foreign to the chivalric spirit of Madison's citizenship that it will be disapproved of at the polls and makes comment in our columns privileged.

Letters and campaign circulars forwarded to us show that not only has the religious issue been injected into the campaign, but that Miss Kearney is accused of having denounced both the Catholics and the Ku Klux.

The absurdity of such a charge against any candidate, it seems to us, should be obvious on its face. Even if a candidate were willing to forsake principle and go to any extreme in order to insure success at the polls, most certainly political sagacity would prevent him from deliberately offending both sides in a dispute of any character. Political expediency would impel such a candidate to defend the faction that was numerically the stronger and oppose the weaker one.

One of the printed campaign documents before us contains Miss Kearney's denial of the charges brought against her. To those who know her this denial will be all the refutation that is needed. And such method of attack is so manifestly unfair that we believe the chivalry of Madison County will show its disapproval at the polls.

We know nothing of Miss Kearney's church affiliations. But we do know that she is a conscientious Christian woman, a woman of superior intellectual qualifications, whose life work has been the uplift of humanity, a woman who was fighting for abolition of the liquor traffic and social purity when some of those now in public life were children. We know further that she has brought added glory to the state in which she lives, and that her influence in any legislative body of the world would make for peace, purity and prosperity.

THE EVILS OF HATE.

To The Commercial Appeal:

Klansism plus Anti-Klansism equals Bolshevism. Bolshevism plus hatred equals war. A few years back, just about the end of the war, there met on Stone Mountain less than 200 men by the light from a fiery cross and proclaimed themselves 100 per cent Americans. They took a solemn obligation to do certain things and see to certain things being accomplished, and if need be, by force. Many of the things the organization hoped to accomplish were altrustic ideals, some were not.

That organization had just gotten a toehold when in another section on another mountain another body of men formed an opposing organization, for they believed the ideals of the first organization un-American. Today, if my information is correct, there are over 200,000 klansmen in the U. S. A. There are also 700,000 anti-klansmen in the same country. The last named are divided into three branches, viz. the anti-klansmen, the secret circle, eighth and the Knights of the Kougar, the last being an order of the "Four Brothers."

Men of high standing in their respective communities have joined these organizations, and their influence has drawn in others who looked to these men as leaders. Let me ask is the United States government not better off if you gentlemen of brains and money would withdraw from these various masked organizations. I claim that the courts of the United States are big enough and good enough for all mankind, and that we need no organizations who, through their terrorist squad, endeavor to enforce their standards of law on American citizens or foreigners.

LEXINGTON, Tenn., Aug. 15.—Judge N. R. Barham of Jackson, convened circuit court here last Monday in an adjourned session. After speaking at some length on the necessity of strict enforcement of the law to curb the wave of crime prevalent in all sections of the country, he delivered a scathing denunciation of bands of men going masked. He called attention to the law forbidding such, and did not mince his words in referring to the Ku Klux Klan, which is said to have a newly formed organization in this section.

NEGROES ORGANIZE INVISIBLE EMPIRE

AUG 21 1923

Designed to Put Race in Its "Proper Place"—Headquarters in James Building.

Chattanooga Times Special.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 20.—An invisible empire has been formed by negroes of Chattanooga. The new order known as the Knights of the Invisible Colored Kingdom, Monday morning filed its charter of incorporation issued under the law regulating general welfare organizations in the office of Secretary of State Ernest N. Haston. The incorporators were named as follows: R. A. Borden, John Ellis, D. H. Perryman, H. E. Center and J. M. State. The society will maintain offices in Chattanooga. According to the charter record its purpose is:

"To teach male members of the negro race good citizenship and their political duties and responsibilities as citizens of a great republic;" also "To elevate members through exalted ritualistic secret form of work and fraternal government into better social, moral and religions life; to instill in their lives visions and ideals of manhood and brotherly love; to teach the negro race its eternal and God-given sphere in the forward movements of the present day civilization and its relations to other races of mankind so it may take its proper place in the social, economic, religious and political development of the future."

White Men Charter Big Secret Order

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 20.—The order of K. I. C. K., which has been thought to have been an order of Negroes following along the lines of the Ku Klux Klan among the white folks (its name is "Knights of the Invisible Colored Kingdom") has been revealed an organization chartered by white men.

K. K. K. Act Opposed

The following editorial, headed "A Mistake, We Think," is taken from the Winston County Journal, published at Louisville, Miss.:

"What we believe to be an unfortunate occurrence happened in our little city on Friday night of last week, when four members of the K. K. K., in their Kluxer robes, entered the old Masonic Hall where the boys and girls of our city were having a dance, and handed them a note, requesting that no more dances be held in the building.

"Do not for one minute let it into your head that we indorse the present style of dance, for we do not, and have long since condemned it. But it is the mode adopted on this occasion to stop it that we fear. A reading of this note, reproduced below, will convince any thinking man or woman that it did not require a hooded party to deliver it to these young people, whose parents are more to blame than anyone else for the present careless way in which the young people are conducting themselves. There can be no other reason for putting the robe on such an occasion, in the eyes of many people, save for intimidation, and any thinking man is compelled to know that intimidation is bad anywhere or on any occasion save that of men who are seeking trouble, or who at least look upon trouble indifferently.

Another feature that made the above affair uncalled for is the fact that the city authorities have full control of this building and are allowing the American Legion to use it free of charge and could have at any time demanded that no dances be had there if they were objectionable, and it seems to us that a request by the good people of the city could have secured this safety with less danger of creating friction and a difference among our people, such as has already occurred. The peace and harmony of our people are much more important than the evils of a dance, whatever that may be, for everyone is concerned in the former, and the whole fabric of our being is at stake in the former.

"It is rumored and believed by some that our ministers indorse the act of the K. K. K.'s on the above occasion. We do not think so. We have pastors of our churches the equal of any in the universe for right thinking, love of peace and harmony, and we believe, for farsightedness, and while we know they deplore the evils of dancing, we do not believe they would sanction anything calculated to create strife, or a division of the people, such as is now raging throughout the world. And if we do have any ministers anywhere in this section who do indorse the hood on such occasions, then we say to them, beware of what is ahead of us, for when a minister of the Gospel exhausts moral persuasion and prayer in an effort to moralize the country, his labor is done, for the Good Book which must direct all his work, teaches brotherly love, peace on earth, good will to man, gained by prayer and faith in God's ability to control these things over man's inability to do so, if it teaches anything. And as we understand it those are the ministers' only weapons. At least that has been our 36 years' observation.

Now, what we say is said in the best of feeling and respect to all, and with the hope that our people will stop and think; for it is far from us to speak in ridicule or harshness of any secret order, and it is our opinion that what was done on the above occasion was done in the best of spirit and intention, but without due regard and consideration of the opinions of others, and as to what might be the result. The lack of due regard for the other fellow's freedom and position, coupled with the loss of that moral suasion taught by Him who rules the world is responsible for the evils of today, if we are any philosopher.

"We are not excited, nor do we believe anyone should become excited over this occurrence and speak unthoughtedly about it, but rather do we believe everyone should work to the end that peace and harmony should reign among a people who are one blood, for what is good for one is good for all. And the last thing a community like ours can afford is discord and ill feeling, for we have much at stake at this time, when it is by the hardest that we will be able to save ourselves financially and civically with the greatest co-operation possible. And the suggestion of this paper, which is published for all the people, is for our people to get at these evils in a different way. If these dances are an evil, surely the mothers and fathers have more at stake than anyone else, and certainly if approached rightly they will get busy and correct it, for they, more than anybody, hold the reins. If, when shown the evil of their way they act not, then pray tell us what you are going to do about it. Create two evils in the correction of one? Isn't this lesson being taught throughout the world today? Is there no sanity anywhere? Are we going against the rocks in spite of all that can be done? We almost believe it.

"It was our first impulse to ignore this K. K. K. note by simply a short mention of it. But believing it the duty of all papers to make an effort to put our people to thinking in this time of world storm we have written the above in the best of feeling for all, and we trust it will be so accepted. But should our intention be misconstrued and ignored, then we say man's freedom is no more; the constitution of this government is for naught, and without that guarantee of civil law we have nothing, and all hope as well vanish.

"We reproduce below the note handed to the dancers by four persons wearing the regular K. K. K. robe. It is very courteous and friendly. It bears no seal, and it is our information that the klan issues no papers without the official seal. If this is correct, and if the persons who delivered the note are members of the klan, which we have every reason to believe they are, and acted without the consent and instructions of the official body, then another error has been committed, and one which seriously effects the principles claimed by the K. K. K.'s. The note follows, verbatim:

"Young Gentlemen and Ladies Assembled:

'We, your daily associates and friends, members of the order of the Knights of the Ku Klux, Col. Ward Klan No. 106, send you this communication:

'First, we would state that our order stands for what our churches and state respectfully indorse, and that as such we are deeply concerned for your welfare. We would further suggest that your steps are being critically observed by the public and that you cease to hold your "dances" in this hall.

'We do not mean this for a threat but merely to let you know that we, your seniors in years, are interested in the moral welfare of the young people of our town and community. We would finally entreat of you to honor more sacredly your parents and their wishes.

'Respectfully submitted,
'Col. Ward Klan No. 106, Realm of Miss.

'Communication No. 1.'"

WHITE MEN CHARTER NEGRO ORGANIZATION

Chattanooga, Tenn., August 21.—The order of K. I. C. K. which has been thought to have been an order of negroes following along the lines of the Ku Klux Klan among the white folks (its name is "Knights of the Invisible Colored Kingdom") has been revealed an organization chartered by white men.

The incorporators include D. H. Perryman, a Chattanooga white man, and J. S. Tate, of Lafayette, Ga., C. E. Center, R. A. Borden and John Ellis, all white.

Tennesse Branch Plans to Shelter Widows and Orphans.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 18.—A $200,000 home for widows and children of Tennessee klansmen will be built at Lea Springs, Grainger county, Tenn., by the state organization of the Invisible Empire, it was announced today by the secretary of the board of directors. The board was in session here to complete arrangements for the project. The institution will be known as "Klan Home, Tennessee."

Option on 678 acres of land at the base of Clinch mountain, twenty-two milse north of Knoxville has been attained, it was said. Plans probably will be completed in a few weeks.

Chattanooga Scene Of Klan Initiation

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., August 20.—This city is the scene Monday for hundreds of members of the Ku-Klux Klan from surrounding towns in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee coming to attend the naturalization of approximately 1,000 new members into the klan here Monday night.

Preparations are being made to handle a crowd of 10,000. The ceremonies will be held on a cleared hillside ½ mile north of the city, and will be preceded by a barbecue and patriotic speaking.

Invisible Colored Knights Organized

NASHVILLE, Tenn., August 21. Knights of the Invisible Colored Kingdom Tuesday loomed as an outstanding organization for the purpose of drawing American negroes closer together when Governor Austin Peay was informed that the body was seeking a charter under laws of Tennessee.

The society, formed in Chattanooga, will have branches over the entire Southland, according to its incorporators, and will attempt to teach its members their "eternal and God-given sphere in the forward movement of present-day civilization." Governor Peay said that a full investigation will be conducted from the state capitol before action is taken.

HOODED, MASKED MEN GIVE NEGRO BIG SCARE

Tell Him to Boycott Jews and Italians Under Death Penalty.

Eight men, hooded so that only their eyes showed and with long robes, on Sunday night threatened Sam Manney, a negro, with death in the event that he traded any more with "Jews and Dagoes," as they termed them. Manney was at the courthouse yesterday morning still so frightened that he could hardly tell his tale to Judge Richards and Charlie Garibaldi, chief deputy sheriff and acting sheriff during the illness of the sheriff.

Sam's story was that he did not know that there was anything unusual when there was a knock at his door late Sunday night at the rear of No. 252 Poplar Avenue, and he was astounded when he opened the door to see the eight masks and robes with only the eyes of the men showing. There was nothing visible by which he had a chance to recognize or later identify any one of the men.

When the masked men entered they asked Manney for whom he voted in the city election. He replied that he voted for Mr. Paine, and when they asked why he did so he replied that it was because some white men in whom he had faith told him that Mr. Paine was the best man running and the man who ought to be elected.

Threaten With Death.

They then asked where he did his trading, and when he said that it was at various places they directed that he trade no more with Jews and Dagos. Sam said that he then asked them if he was employed by a man who paid his good wages and ran a store if he could not trade with that man? The reply was that if that man was a Jew or a Dago he could not, and that they would return Monday night and kill him in the event that he had in the meantime violated their injunction as to where not to trade.

The maskers did not tell Sam with whom he might trade and he says that there was no mention of "klan" or "ku-klux."

Sam is an asphalt worker and has the reputation of being a reliable negro at work. He was so badly frightened that he did not go home last night, but spent the night with a friend.

Judge Richards was much exercised about the affair and assured Sam that if there was any way to identify the men they would feel the weighty hand of the law quickly, but there was no clew that the negro could give as to their identiy. Judge Richards stated that he would give the grand jury a special charge along that line this morning when the body has its regular semi-weekly session.

The affair was parallel to the one that occurred in South Memphis a few nights ago, both of which are shrouded in as complete mystery as were the men themselves.

Jackson Charge to Grand Jury Denounces It as Un-American.

JACKSON, Tenn., Jan. 2.—Strong denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan was contained in the charge this morning of Judge N. R. Barham of the Twelfth judicial circuit of Tennessee when he addressed the Madison County grand jury upon the convening of criminal court for the regular January session. Judge Barham stated that while Madison County had no trouble from the klan so far, and he did not know that the organization had a foothold here, yet he thought it not amiss to express the court's opinion in the matter. Judge Barham declared that the klan had no part to play in American life, that it often undertook to usurp the powers of the courts and in doing so was un-American and should be stamped out. The judge let it be known in no uncertain terms that he would not countenance any organized lawlessness, that he would devote a whole term of court to apprehending and punishing any who undertook to violate the law or take the law into their own hands in the name of Ku Klux Klan or any other organization.

The grand jury is composed of the following: Lawrence Taylor, foreman; J. M. Marsh, G. L. Davis, C. M. Hudson, S. N. Thompson, Owen Shelton, Swan Harris, Robert Allen, Noble Raines, C. C. McCaslin, A. M. Gullett, J. P. Rice, A. T. Gibbs.

The trial of cases will begin tomorrow morning. The docket is heavy. The case of chief interest is that of W. J. Harvey, former head of the Harvey Steel Products Company, charged with embezzlement and breach of trust.

TENNESSEE JUDGE DENOUNCES THE K.K.K.

The Path of Anarchy.

1-25-23 Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn.

The one who has succeeded best in placing the original Ku-Klux Klan before this country and the world in its true light is the one who is most bitter in his denunciation of the present organization that is using the regalia and ceremonies of the older body for evil and un-American purposes. He is Thomas Dixon, the southern novelist whose novel, "The Clansman," was made the basis for one of the greatest motion picture dramas ever filmed. Mr. Dixon is but one of millions of Americans who recognizes that the Ku-Klux of reconstruction days was one of the greatest blessings, just as the Ku-Klux of today is one of the greatest curses that ever came to American civilization.

Commercial Appeal 1-25-23

Before the American Unity League, an organization whose purpose is to combat the modern Ku-Klux, Mr. Dixon told of how he had been invited to become a member of the present klan and of how he had declined, with the warning that if the oath-bound organization should make use of disguise in defying the courts of the land at a time when they were functioning under a civilized government, then "the end was sure—riot, anarchy, bloodshed and martial law." And then he observed:

> We have already reached the riot and bloodshed, and unless the thing is throttled promptly we are in sight of martial law.

Of this there can be no doubt. Happenings at Mer Rouge and elsewhere in this country have caused the organization of an antiklan body, and unless the courts assert their authority over the klan there will be a complete settlement of private grievances with resultant vengeance outside the legally constituted agencies for such adjustments. The nation would then be floundering around in the morass of anarchy and civil strife. We would be a country governed alternately by Ku-Klux and anti-Ku-Klux, which in the final result would be no government at all.

Mr. Dixon asserts very truthfully that a klan campaign against the negro at this time would be inhuman, and he speaks as a true southerner. Furthermore, he insists that it "is the acme of stupidity" for any organization to wage war on foreigners, since to do so would include everyone in the country save possibly the native Indians. And it is against the very spirit of this nation for any body of men to seek to proscribe some other body on religious or racial grounds. The admitted aim of the present day klan to wreak vengeance upon certain races and certain creeds and its undeniable actions in constituting itself judge, jury and court in regulating the affairs of citizens cause Mr. Dixon to utter these bitter words of contempt:

> If this is 100 per cent Americanism, I, for one, spit on it.

And there are millions of Americans who will echo this sentiment of the brilliant, high-minded son of North Carolina, who is a minister of the Baptist faith. He sounds a clear warning that Klu-Kluxism leads to anarchy and his warning should not go unheeded.

NEGROES [illegible]UB SUNDAY AS MEMBER OF KLAN

Baltimore Herald Baltimore Md. 1-7-23

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 1.—Is Billy Sunday a Ku Kluxer?

The colored ministers of Knoxville say he is; the noted evangelist is silent on the point, while his secretary has issued a statement that Mr. Sunday does not belong to the order of hooded knights.

Sunday is holding a highly successful revival services at Knoxville. He invited ministers of the city, and the colored people, to ateend one of the sessions and hear him. The colored ministers met, and refused.

They sent a reply saying that they would not attend the services or sit on the platform with Sunday, "because he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan." They claimed this statement had been made by a klan speaker some time before and added: "This statement has never been denied."

NEGRO HOME BOMBED

Montgomery Advertiser 1-14-23

Portion of Cave Springs, Ga., Is Thrown In Panic by Explosion

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Feb. 13.—News was received heer tonight that Cave Springs, a village fourteen miles east of Rome, Ga., was thrown into a panic late last night by the explosion of a heavy charge of dynamite in the negro quarter. The home of Rene Stocks, a negro, was badly damaged, but the occupants were not injured. A short time ago, it is said, Stocks received a note signed "K. K. K." warning him to leave, but had been advised to pay no attention to it, as other negroes had received simuar warnings. Cave Springs officials have offered a reward for the miscreants and Governor Thomas W. Hardwick has been urged to supplement the amount for the state.

Floggings Might Begin at Home.

Those persons who are members of the Ku Klux Klan because of an honest belief that it represents 100 per cent Americanism are furnished rich food for thought and reflection by the fight being made for control of the organization and by the charges and counter charges being exchanged by the rival factions. The imperial emperor and wizard arrayed against each other for control of the imperial castle and behind them in marked division are ranged goblins and cyclopses and all the lesser dignitaries down to the plain knights of the night. The veil of the invisible empire is being torn aside rather rudely by its own subjects in their efforts to secure the imperial throne for their particular choice, but at the last accounts the prosaic sheriff of Fulton County at Atlanta sits high in the seat of the mighty.

The Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn. 1-6-23

The whole trouble it seems had its origin in the organization of a woman's auxiliary to the Klan by Emperor Simmons, whose imperial robes ceased to be recognized some time ago at klan klonvocations. Wizard Evans put the ban of interdiction against klan aid to the ladies' organization and the fight was on. Emperor Simmons by court order came into brief possession of the imperial castle and there followed warrants charging embezzlement against the cashier and chief investigating officer of the rival faction. Then came another court order restoring Wizard Evans to power and the final event of the day left the lord high sheriff supreme over the klan klommanders.

But while these events were happening, hot and bitter charges and counter charges were being exchanged. Wizard Evans accused Emperor Simmons of having used the klan for personal aggrandizement and the emperor responded with his allegation of the embezzlement of klan funds. So that it must appear as if the treasury as much so as the throne was the main objective of the attacks and counter attacks. In fact the Emperor Simmons faction asserted that the rival wing had instructed the cashier and investigator to leave town with all the cash and available records to prevent them being taken over. Around the cash box, therefore, as around some strategic and highly fortified position the machine guns of small talk puttered and the high explosive shells of court action whizzed and banged, making it evident that the key to this box was also the key to the whole position.

For as little and, in fact, much less offense than the rival factions are charging each other men in hoods and gowns and acting apparently in the name of the klan have taken any number of people from their homes, flogged them, tarred them and otherwise subjected them to indignities. Now it will seem to those outside the magic circle of the flaming cross that if 100 per cent Americanism can be flogged into small offenders it can be flogged also into large offenders. And if the klan officials are half as guilty as their rivals say they are, then it must appear as if the inculcation of undiluted Americanism by means of the cat o' nine tails would be a remedy that could be made of good use in more intimate quarters. There will be any number of persons who will believe that when the same need exists, floggings, like charity, should begin at home.

"Dupes of Klan Officials."

The Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn. 1-2-23

Admitting that his clients had participated in the assault on Wagner, Attorney Crossland delivered an eloquent plea for judicial clemency, declaring that the defendants were "but dupes of officials of the Ku Klux Klan. They went into the klan without knowledge of what they were doing," Crossland said. "They are hard working men; they make no money out of this order. They were misled and beguiled into an insidious order that has sought to and has now covered the country, disseminating hatred and intolerance, and teaching men to use the lash. The real guilt of this thing lies at the door of the men who are getting the money out of it and who are willing to prostitute their talent for the sake of money, and politicians who are willing to sacrifice anything for a vote."

Members of the mob that arranged the abduction of Wagner had told his clients, Crossland said, that Wagner had mistreated his family and had torn up a Bible.

"Black Hand" Letters Threaten Life Of Baptist Preacher Who Endorsed Police Raids.---Maiority Of Ministers Denounced Attitude Of Police As Official Oppression.

East Tennessee News
Knoxville, Tenn.

Special To The News.

Memphis, Feb. 27.—The Reverend C. W. Graham, pastor of one of the local Negro Baptist churches, has appealed to the sheriff and police chief for protection following his receipt of threatening letters, which tell of plans to take his life. The preacher is in for his share of disfavor coming from the majority of the negro citizenship following a state ment which he issued Sunday giving endorsement to the tactics employed by the police in enforcing the vagrant laws.

Ministers' Alliance Registers Protest.

A committee of Negro ministers representing the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance here filed a lengthy memorandum with the chairman of the welfare department of the Chamber of Commerce of Memphis last Tuesday morning.

Among the most important things cited as to why Negroes are leaving the South and Memphis in particular for other sections is police oppression. This is given as the principal cause of Negro migration, which is seriously affecting the labor supply.

The officials of the Chamber of Commerce immediately took up uthe matter with the police department and city authorities. The ministers cited two recent killings of Negroes on Scott street as unwarranted. It is claimed that officers unlawfully search Negro homes. Pointed out that on one occasion a Negro told the officers that they had no right to enter his home without a warrant. He is said to have told them that he would protect his home against invasion. The police paid no attention to his statement and forced their way into his house. One officer was killed and another was wounded. A riot call was sent in and this Negro was killed. Following this several homes were entered by the officers, evidently for the purpose of striking terror into the hearts and minds of Negroes. Two other killings occurred that same night. These unforunate outrages were followed by an exodus of several hundred Negro families.

The ministers told the officers of the Chamber of Commerce that they were having a hard time in the face of such affairs to convince Negroes that they should remain here in Memphis. One minister said, "I believe that I voice the sentiment of every well meaning Negro in the South when I say that Negroes naturally love the South, but they are human, cannot and will not tolerate police oppression, Ku Kluxism, and lynching. If business men, city and state officials, employers and white people of every walk in life will begin to treat the Negro according to the golden rule labor shortage, shiftlessness and rowdyism will decrease considerably. Things will be better for all."

Graham Did Not Concur.

According to the reports coming from the "Bluff City," Rev. Graham published a statement in which he took the position of not concurring with the other ministers and contended further that the tactics as employed by the police officers were necessary in suppressing lawlessness in the city. County and city officials have given Rev. Graham assurance that he would receive ample protection even if it became necessary to throw a body guard about him.

White Clad Horsemen Stir Tennessee County

Associated Press Report.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 31.—The appearance of white clad, hooded horsemen in the Sixteenth district of Gibson county is reported to be causing excitement there.

Reports from the county say that there is nothing to indicate that the hooded horsemen are connected with the Ku Klux Klan and it is suggested that the purpose of the organization is to put an end to hen house and smoke house robberies that have been prevalent.

Baltimore Herald & Commonwealth

Cat[illegible]olics, Jews And Negroes U[illegible]i[illegible]e To Defeat Propagandists Of [illegible]eligiou[illegible] And Racial Hatred

Chattanooga ,Tenn., March 31.—The extent to which the Ku Klux Klan can hope to aspire in attempted political domination of Chattanooga and Hamilton county will be todl April 10, at a city election, which will be an out-and-out contest between klan and anti-klan, with few other extraneous issues even introduced. 4-4-23

At a preliminary skirmish in a municipal primary, March 13, the klanites obtained a few wounds, but the real test is to come April 10, and all Hamilton county is waiting with bated breath to see the outcome.

The kla nis in its third or political phase in East Tennessee, and the coming election will tell whether it is to have a new lease of lif or is to lapse into a state of innocuous desuetude. The leaders of the hooded organization are making a desperate effort to stave off defeat, and the chance is that they may be abye to elect some of their members.

The odd combination in the South of the colored voters being besought to cast their ballots for the normal Democratic candidates, while the Ku Kluxers and Republicans in essence join together, is being brought to light—a combination never before known in this part of the South, which is giving puzzlement to the politicians and political observers. The problem seems to be: Can a large enough vote of the Catholics, Hebrews and colored people be cast, to add to the liberal anti-klan Protestants to outmass the large residential ward strength of the klansmen.

In the first primary there were two wounds struck at the klan; the first was when Mayor Alexander W. Chambliss, a candidate for re-election, an able executive, defeated Prof. H. J. Huffaker, an avowed candidate of the klan, by almost two to one. The strength of the order had been thrown pretty strongly against Chambliss, and for Huffaker, but the fact that the Mayor was a son of a Baptist minister, himself a leading churchman here an had given a clean administration, prevented his opponent's success.

But the surprising thing about the election was that in the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh wards, residential wards whicr usually roll up huge majorities for "good government" tickets, the klan candidates swamped their opponents, while in the Fourth and Seventh wards, with heavy Negro votes, the anti-klanites had their main strength. The analysis of the vote alarmed the politicians excessively and made them redouble their efforts.

A supplemental registration was held shortly after the primary for the election, and again the politicians were startled; over 3,300 people registered and the heavy bulk of them ere in the Ninth, Tnth and Eleventh wards. The last few days of the supplemental registrations the Negroes of the Fourth and Seventh wards registered in droves also, so as to balance the pro-klan additions in the residential wards.

The forces of good government, the men who want the city to have a commission which will forget religious prejudices and cleave to the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution, are depending on the ballots of the Negroes and the other klan targets, the Jews and Catholics, to elect their men, while the usual mainstay of a good government ticket, the residential wards, are feared as almost solidly in the klansmen's camp.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923. Tennessee.

Ku Klux Firemen Reinstated.

The Commercial Appeal 5-6-23

Two members of the Chicago fire department, who were suspended because of affiliation with the Ku Klux Klan, have been reinstated.

This was the charitable thing for the city authorities to do. Perhaps if all the facts in the case had been known, the men would never have found themselves in the shadow of official reproach.

Probably, like thousands of others who join these transitory orders, the natives of the Chicago firemen were whole souled and their natures were of the congenial sort that makes "jiners" of so many.

Memphis, Tenn.

It is easier to sell membership in a new lodge than it is to sell orange groves in Saskatchewan; but even at that some of us never take time to consider that a tropical plant is averse to cracking the ice before it blossoms and fruits. That's why Barnum made reference to the joy American people get out of being hornswoggled.

The salesmen themselves are sometimes without guile, having been imposed on by the cunning rascal higher up, the one who supplies the brains and receives the money.

Of course, when a wizard assumes the form of a hobgoblin, he can frighten a kleagle into handing over the dollars. How, then, is the kleagle to break even unless those in the parade shake out the dimes and the pennies?

To some of those who bought membership in the order of Wizard Simmons the "100 per cent American" propaganda sounded good until the recent fight over the spoils convinced them it was 100 per cent bunk. Then many of them had their sheets laundered and replaced on the beds. Others will do likewise as the novelty wears off.

In view of the circumstances, we think it unjust to discharge men merely because they joined the order. Doubtless the two Chicago firemen will ere long admit that as a diversion pinochle is superior to kukluxing and put their faith in kings, queens and spades rather than in wizards, cyclops and kleagles.

We were not surprised that in some cities toy balloon salesmen and popcorn venders should ignore intellectual qualifications and launch pocket handkerchief weeklies in an effort to preserve wizardry and pickle freedom. But we must admit that we did not expect any of our country editors, usually safe and sane, to allow a bed cloth to temporarily come between them and the flag. Our confidence in them, however, is so great that we feel sure they will be making faces at Simmons and Evans before the courts have decided who is to get the coin.

In the meantime we hope that city authoritise and other employers will permit unoffending kluxers to hold their jobs.

And if Kamelia must have a fling with the "jiners," may she come through like the woman who riseth while it is yet night, and may her husband be known in the gates when he sitteth among the elders of the land, rather than with wizards and kleagles.

Soiled So Soon?

The Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn. 6/23/23

According to the claims of Ku Kluxers, as set up in some of the weeklies on our exchange list, the Klan is a powerful factor in Memphis. We have read reports sent out of this city about the growth of the order here and the congestion in that particular section of the county where the flaming cross flames and the "jiners jine" by the tens of thousands. If these reports are true, the census enumerators played us a dirty trick in their last workout by crediting us with only 162,351 population. By the simple process of addition, assuming the Kluxers' reports to be true, we find that Memphis should have been set down as a city of about half a million souls, population, Ku Klux, or whatever you care to term them.

Be that as it may, almost everybody in Shelby and the Tri-States territory reads The Commercial Appeal, and we feel sure most of our readers were interested in the Houston (Texas) story carried in yesterday's issue under the heading "Cleansing of Klan Movement Is Started."

A former grand goblin of the Klan in Texas, with 20 other states under his jurisdiction, is heading a movement for cleansing and purifying the organization. He calls upon the faithful throughout the United States to join in restoring the Klan to the pristine purity of which its wizards, goblins and kleagles boasted.

Alas and alack, that the swaddling clothes of an infant should have become soiled so soon and sweet innocence subjected to such an early ablution in order to remove the marks of defilement!

As we have stated before, the good intentions of a certain element of the Klan are beyond question, but the history of such movements is only being repeated when mercenaries and men with axes to grind, either by surreptition or usurpation, assume leadership.

Those things that take on the nature of the weird and supernatural are appealing. There is an element of witchery about midnight assemblages, with white-robed figures flitting about under the glare of artificial light.

Such things, however, are not conducive to a membership in an organization that is altogether desirable when qualification is not difficult. It is a matter of no surprise whatever, therefore, that those who are conservative and fit are soon crowded to the rear, or that self-servers seize the reins.

It is an easy matter to start such an organization as the Ku Klux Klan. It is a difficult thing to control it, so difficult that the wrongful use of its power is almost inevitable.

Despite the silence of Klan organs, the fight between the money-handlers of the organization for control cannot be denied. The plea for cleansing and purification sent out by a grand goblin is evidence that the better element has lost control.

It has been less than three years since this modern Ku Klux Klan began making a noise in this section. We shouldn't think that those who believed it had a mission would feel encouraged by the fact that its garments have become soiled so soon.

THE KLAN MEETING.

The Commercial Appeal 6/25/23

Monday night a crowd estimated at over 2,000 assembled in the court yard to listen to a speech by one of the leading members of the Ku Klux Klan, Rev. R. M. Jennings of Covington. The only criticism we have heard on the speech was the severe attack on the Jews, and while the Jew is not eligible for membership by reason of nationality and his religious beliefs, yet the Jews of Ripley are among the leading business men and stand well in the estimation of the people. One of the oldest establishments here is conducted by Jews. The Jews here contribute to every worthy cause, have helped to build our schools and churches and are law abiding citizens, and the attack as regards the Jewish citizens of Ripley we do not think met with the approval of a large per cent of our people. — Lauderdale County (Tenn.) COLORED INVISIBLES LIKE WHITE KLANS, THE RACE GOING TO SEED.

The Star of Zion Charlotte, N.C. 7-12-23

It is announced from Nashville that the state of Tennessee has granted a charter to an organization known as the Knights of the Invisible Colored Kingdom whose headquarters are in Chattanooga. The purpose of this organization as given in the application is: "The organizing of male members of the race into grand and subordinate organizations, teaching them the principles of good citizenship and their political duties and responsibilities."

We think the organization's purpose is praiseworthy but we deplore the name which it has adopted. The sentiment of the race is against invisible government both in politics and in private organizations. We believe that this is essential to loyal American citizenship. We cannot consistently oppose the Ku Klux Klan as the race universally does while adding to the confusion in a similar organization of Negroes. It is similar in suggestion if not in reality. Besides it is a useless imitation and notorious and despicable in every respect to the Negroes vocabulary and to the American ideal. 6-23-23

Undoubtedly, the southern Negro should have some combining influence that will associate its leadership in arousing the race everywhere to the importance of "good citizenship and political duties and responsibilities." But it cannot be done by imitating the Ku Klux Klan. The Ku Klux Klan is the white man going to seed in the effort to find a social panacea and the Invisible Knights will represent the Negro going to seed at the same point. But the seed of neither will produce the desired fruit.

The World's Work.

Chattanooga Times 7/11/23

"Counter-Mining the Ku Klux Klan" is the title of the third of the series of articles by Robert Duffus now running in the World's Work to expose the practices and program of this super-law organization. This article in the July number deals with the constructive work of the Inter-Racial Council in its endeavor to bring about better relations between whites and blacks and to dispel fear by implanting a new hope of justice and right treatment. It shows the advances already made. "Closing the Mail Box to Frauds" is the title of a valuable article by Postmaster Harry S. New. North Dakota politics are discussed by Chester H. Rowell; Mark Sullivan tells of Democratic presidential possibilities; Sir Phillips Gibbs gives his first impression of America. Two other interesting articles are "Why Plants Blossom and Bear Fruit" and "Lighting for Health and Profit."

The Twelve Masked Gentlemen of Oklahoma

Commercial Appeal

Twelve "gentlemen" of Oklahoma last week called a reporter to their gathering place and recited to him how they had poured acid on a woman and so disfigured her face and figure that she will carry the scars to her grave. These gentlemen were masked when they gave their statement to the reporter. They were in masks when they poured the acid on the woman.

Not satisfied that their numbers would sustain their valor when they came to chastise and maltreat the woman, they fortified themselves behind masks. They justify all of this by saying that the woman was bad. They charged that she, in company with some man, attempted to defraud some Oklahoma "gentlemen."

So Oklahoma has come to a period in its history when men in the absence of the accused pass upon her guilt and, without giving her a chance to explain, pour vitriol on her face and otherwise torture her.

Memphis Press

Two thousand years ago women were stoned to death, but they were not stoned to death by a mob. The job was not done by masked men. It was done after a trial before duly selected judges.

7-22-23

If those 12 "gentlemen," who covered their faces and became as beasts, had remembered the Bible story they doubtless read when young, they might have acted otherwise. It runs like this:

And the Scribes and the Pharisees brought unto Him a woman taken in adultery, and when they had set her in the midst,

They say unto Him, "Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

"'Now Moses in the Law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest Thou?'

This they said, tempting Him, that they might have to accuse Him.

But Jesus stooped down, and with His finger wrote on the ground as though He heard them not.

So when they continued asking Him, He lifted up himself, and said unto them, "He that is without sing among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

And again, he stooped down and wrote on the ground.

And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

When Jesus had lift up himself, and saw none but the woman, He said unto her, "Woman, where are those thine accusers? Hath no man condemned thee?"

She said, "No man, Lord." And Jesus said unto her, "Neither do I condemn thee: Go, and sin no more."

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth Me, shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

Particularly would we call the attention of these men who got behind the masks when they were maltreating the woman to the last verse in the quotation.

Jesus believed in the light. There was little concealment in His plans. He was for the open road. He did not walk in the darkness; what He had in wisdom, in goodness and knowledge He shared openly with all. He believed in the law and encouraged obedience to those in whose hands was given the administration of the law.

Over in North Carolina a number of men are on trial for laying a lash upon the bare back of a woman. She may not have been a good woman.

It is admitted that the woman's assailants wore masks. They concealed their identity. Knowing they were doing an unlawful thing, they sought to avoid the law. They, too, passed upon the case of a woman without giving her a chance. Even though the woman was bad, their offense was not lessened.

The members of the masked mob of course claimed that they were doing right. The men are on trial. They deny that they were in the whipping party. Then, if they are not, those who beat the woman are also acting in the role of cowards.

If they believe that what they did was right they would come into the courts and say "these men who are on trial are innocent, we wore the masks, we beat the woman, we thought we were doing right, we think so now, do with us as you will."

If the men who are on trial are guilty, they are committing perjury. No oath and no obligation to any power, visible or "invisible," justifies a man in committing perjury before a court of law or in telling a falsehood to any other human being.

We are hearing of maskers doing their work all over the south. It is poor business to wear a mask. Only the executioner in the performance of his duty when men were beheaded wore a mask.

The mask was never a part of the garb of the Savior.

The Essence of Asininity.

The Commercial Appeal

In our "Scissored" column yesterday we reprinted a squib taken from a weekly paper published at Crowley Ridge, Ark. Those who appreciate humor and laugh at boneheads may have thought that we clipped the bit of nonsense for their sole benefit.

7-16-23

We knew, of course, that anyone whose brains have not yet been embalmed would find amusement in the absurdity, but our motive in publishing it was twofold.

Memphis

Not only did we want to bring a smile to the faces of intelligent readers, but we desired also to show the need in our country of familiarity with the Declartion of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and the history of this country and its institutions.

It might be well to establish night schools in some sections for this purpose. And if anyone thinks attendance on these schools should be confined to illiterate immigrants and native-born children, let him read this paragraph, which is the antonym of logic and the essence of asininity:

"We see from the dispatches where Coolidge takes early occasion to laud the K. C.'s for what he styles patriotism and steadfast devotion to American principles and ideals. The next thing in order, perhaps, is for the fledgling president to give the K. K. K.'s a good cussing. . . . . Nobody will be very greatly surprised at Coolidge praising and lauding the K. C.'s, especially if he is contemplating trying to be elected to the office to which he has only succeeded temporarily, because the K. C.'s are reputed to be about the strongest political organization in the country, and Coolidge as a politician would naturally court the favor of this strong organization in promoting and furthering his aspirations for the presidency."

Assuming that Mr. Coolidge aspires to succeed himself as president, would he be so stupid as to attempt the furthering of his ambition by courting favor with the Knights of Columbus and "cussing" the Knights of the Mask?

Certainly not. Any candidate for constable in a cross-roads village would have more political acumen.

There are probably a dozen organizations in the United States whose numerical strength is far in excess of that of the Knights of Columbus. Some of these bodies are active in politics at all times.

The American Federation of Labor has a membership of 4,000,000, and at least five times that number advocate the principles and policies of the federation. Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, is spokesman for the body. Can you recall a national election during the last quarter of a century when the voice of Gompers was silent?

Why, the Ku Klux themselves, if there is a semblance of truth in their published statements, must have a membership of at least 10,000,000 in the United States.

If President Coolidge wants to play politics, why shouldn't he, instead of "cussing" the Ku Klux, play up to them and to the Federation of Labor, two organizations actively in politics, rather than to an organization that as a body is not interested in politics? He would thus assure himself of 14,000,000 votes, more than half the number cast in the last presidential election.

The total membership of the Knights of Columbus in the United States and possessions, in Canada, Cuba, Mexico and Newfoundland, is only 800,000. Probably not more than 600,000 of these are in the United States.

Would any man who knew better than to blow out the gas or pick his teeth with a "live" wire go angling after a block of 600,000 votes, knowing that in doing so he would alienate the sympathies and lose the support of more than 25,000,000 other voters?

Does the trembling editor of the Arkansas weekly and his fellow followers of wizard and kleagle think for a moment that the 2,600,000 Masons in the United States would hold their peace if a president should prostitute his high office and attempt to betray the liberty of the American people?

Every man capable of marking a ballot knows that the Masonic order is non-political, despite surreptitious efforts of a certain element to arouse in the members racial and religious prejudices for political purposes.

But every man knows that when the liberty and prosperity of the American people were threatened Masons and Knights of Columbus and members of every other organization fit to exist in America went to the front.

The abortive conclusion in the paragraph quoted from the weekly is a fair sample of the tommyrot being peddled by publishers of nickel-grabbing sheets sold on the streets of some of the cities.

It may have been that Solomon had something like it in mind when he said:

"A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fools back."

ALABAMA MASON RESIGNS.

Throws Up Job When Klan Activities Are Criticized.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Judge George Fleming Moore, past foreign grand commander of the supreme council and inspector general of Scottish Rite Masons in Alabama, resigned from the supreme council today after a discussion over the Ku Klux Klan.

During the debate Mr. Moore was charged by members of the council with using his weekly publication, "The Fellowship Forum," issued here, for furthering the aims of the klan.

Although the publication has designated itself as a digest of fraternal news from all over the world, Masons have regarded it as a Masonic publication. Consideration of Mr. Moore's resignation was postponed.

LAW ENFORCERS HALTED.

Klux Stops Deputies in Public Highway.

Lockport, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Two men are under arrest and the possibility of an investigation loomed as the aftermath of an armed clash early today between police and deputy sheriffs and an initiation party of 600 Ku Klux Klansmen near Cambria Center.

Those under arrest are William Lozier and Charles Turver, both of Niagara Falls. Thirteen others including one woman were questioned at the district attorney's office today but were not held.

Sheriff Benjamin Gould received reports from motorists that armed men garbed in white, were stopping automobile parties on the Saunders settlement road. The sheriff with two deputies and three Lockport policemen investigated. When their car reached the vicinity of a field in which a klan initiation was purported to be taking place, it was stopped by two white robed sentinels.

According to the officers, when the sheriff's party failed to leave as ordered, one of them was struck by a klan guard. The sentinel was felled with the butt of a revolver in the hands of one of the investigating party.

Shouts of guards attracted klansmen from the field and as the sheriff started to advance toward the enclosure, the little knot of officers was surrounded. Gould and his men retreated toward the road and made a dash for their car. As the machine sped away a scattering volley of shots broke out. No one was hit.

After the sheriff's party had broken free and his car had edged its way through the lines of machines at the roadside, some of which had started in pursuit, he rushed to Lockport with Lozier and Turver, who were seized in the melee.

The prisoners were locked up and the sheriff returned to the scene with reinforcements. Several automobile loads of citizens followed. Arriving at the field the second time, the officers charged the crowd at once. The resistance broke and there was a concerted rush for the cars surrounding the meeting place. The officers said they fired no shots except at fleeing automobiles which had been commanded to stop.

GREENWOOD, S. C., Jan. 29.—Assailing the Ku Klux Klan in his charge to the Greenwood county grand jury here today, County Judge C. C. Featherstone, who is holding his last term of court before taking up his duties as circuit judge in the eighth judicial district to which he was elected recently by the legislature, declared that "never has any organization been such a menace."

"Good save us from the K. K. K." said the judge.

"This K. K. K. has been organized because some felt that they had to take the law into their own hands. Their excuse is that courts and juries are not enforcing the law. Never has any organization been such a menace. It gives opportunity for a few cowards to punish their enemies with it. Unless checked, it won't be long before there will be no government at all."

The vote was preceded by a debate in which the Ku Klux Klan was attacked and heatedly defended.

KLAN NOT STRONG IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Special Dispatch to New York Times From Columbia Says Organization Probably Numbers Less Than Five Thousand Members—State Steers Clear of Road Building Craze.

That the Ku Klux Klan has probably less than 5,000 members in South Carolina and that South Carolinians simply "would not join the klan" are statements printed in a special dispatch from Columbia to the New York Times.

The dispatch also says that so efficiently has the ship of state of South Carolina been steered that the state debt is less than $6,000,000. "Again" the dispatch says, "South Carolina has steered clear of the road building craze that has played such havoc with the farmers and other land owners in Arkansas and to a lesser degree in some other states."

The dispatch, in full is as follows:

The most un-American state in the union, as measured by the Ku Klux Klan standard, is South Carolina. Here in the state of nullification, Calhoun, the Butlers, Wade Hampton and Ben Tillman, the klan is absolutely impotent. Out of more than 180,000 white voters, it is probable that if all the members of the hooded horde were counted they would be less than 5,000.

In a two days' investigation, few of the score of well informed residents with whom The Times correspondent talked placed the klan strength at more than 10,000. In two-thirds of the counties evidently there are no klansmen at all, and in the other third the number is insignificant as compared to the total population.

"There are probably a few klans in the state," said former Gov. Richard I. Manning, "but they are so few in number and their strength so negligible that South Carolina has not had the time to take them seriously. The gist of the situation, so far as this state is concerned, is that our people are fairly contented. We are coming out of the woods, and, that being so, we have been busy getting our house in order and working out a program for the betterment in every way of all of our people. Maybe that is the answer to the question as to why the klan is said to have made no headway in this state."

Thomas G. McLeod, the governor of the state, as did former Governor Manning, emphasized the soundness of the South Carolina situation, and when asked if he was of the opinion that there are as many as 10,000 "masked knights" in the state he gave it as his opinion that that number was excessive.

The only two instances in which the klan issue has been raised was in the recent city election in Charleston and in the ambushing of a farmer in Horry county. In both cases the evidence shows that the charge of klan influence was not based on facts.

Fails to Win on Klan Cry.

In Charleston, John P. Grace, the former mayor, a follower of former Governor Blease and prominent in Irish-American and Anti-British propaganda activities, charged during the campaign that the Ku Klux Klan was behind the effort to unseat him. It was an 11th hour effort on his part to rally the Catholics and Jews of the city to his support. He was badly defeated and the voters who retired him to private life included some of the leading citizens of the Catholic and Jewish faiths. So in that instance, the klan issue failed of substantiation.

The young Horry county farmer had closed up a private road through his farm. He received several threatening letters signed "K. K. K." He paid no attention to them, but one day while he was on his way home he was fired on from ambush, and the horse he was driving ran away. The farmer was wounded, but not seriously. The men who committed the crime were promptly apprehended, tried before a Horry county jury, convicted and sent to prison, and all the facts show that the klan, as elsewhere in the state, is practically without strength or influence in that county. There was no evidence that those who committed the crime were even members of the masked organization.

Find Hard Going.

That the klan has tried to organize South Carolina, however, is undisputed. The missionaries of the masked tribe have been in all parts of the state, but they found the going hard from the start. They were not long in finding out that the people of South Carolina do not, as a rule, think the same way as do a lot of their fellow citizens in the neighboring states of Georgia and Alabama.

The South Carolinians simply would not join the klan, and that was all there was to it. Some of the oldest Jewish families in the United States live in South Carolina. They have been here for generations, have held high office; they fought for the Confederacy, and the average South Carolinian refused to brand them as un-American. The same was true of the Catholics of Charleston, Columbia and the other cities in the state, where there are many upstanding citizens of the Catholic faith.

It appears that South Carolina is the only state in the South without a dragon. There may be a cyclops or two at large, but if so, The Times correspondent has failed to find anybody who ever heard of them. As a young Columbia banker expressed it, "We may have a goblin here and there, and we may even have some furies in isolated localities, but, if so, I don't know where they are, or who they are."

Tom Watson Prepared the Soil.

The fact that the klan is strong in Georgia and practically without strength of any kind here in South Carolina probably is due to past political conditions in the two states.

The late Tom Watson, more than any other man, was probably responsible for the great growth of the masked order on the other side of the Savannah. Watson preached anti-Catholicism for years and in the controversy over the Leo Frank case he was one of the leaders in the anti-Jewish agitation in Georgia. The result was that when the klan came along the soil in numerous localities was ready for the seed, although, as stated in the New York Times yesterday, the klan, even in Georgia, does not include, according to the best evidence obtainable, more than one-third of the electorate.

On the other hand, South Carolina has not developed any agitators of the Watson type. About the time Watson was at the zenith of his influence in Georgia, Benjamin R. Tillman came to the front in South Carolina and for many years dictated the political affairs of the state. Tillman, however, was tolerant, and among his supporters were men of the Jewish and Catholic religions. "Old Ben," his followers say, never would have stood for the klan as now organized.

Then, of course, there has been the influence of such men as former Governor Manning, George B. Cromer, Governor McLeod, former Governor Heyward and a host of other influential Carolinians. The men in the last decade have steered the Carolina ship of state in a way so efficient that today the state debt of South Carolina is less than $6,000,000. So it is that, while other states are having their klan battles, South Carolint is planning a program for the further relief of her people, especially the farmers. They are now considering a proposition which will probably take the tax off farm lands for a period of years, or until the farmers have had a chance to get on their feet again.

Road Building Craze.

Again, South Carolina has steered clear of the road building craze that has played such havoc with the farmers and other landowners in Arkansas, and to a lesser degree in some other states. In Arkansas millions in taxes were piled against the land for roads, while the people who pay the taxes had no word to say about them. In South Carolina they have built a splendid system of top soil roads and the cost has not exceeded an average of $3,000 a mile. The roads have been constructed on the "pay as you go" plan. There is talk of a state road bond issue of $50,000,000, but two-thirds of all the people must vote for the issue before it can be negotiated.

"We will never have in South Carolina any of this road district business, such as they have in Arkansas," said Governor McLeod.

In other words, South Carolina is working to reduce taxes all the time. That is why the state is apparently so contented and that is also the principal reason why the Ku Klux Klan has failed so utterly to make any headway in the Palmetto state, it is contended by those in a position to appraise public sentiment.

The Klan and Negroes.

Whatever may be the notions of the Ku Klux Klan around Atlanta concerning one of its three alleged antipathies, the negro, the wolf and the black sheep are sharing the fold, or den, of Long Island, New York, in great harmony. Some time ago negro preachers of Long Island who were solicited to join in an anti-Klan movement there declined participation on the ground that the hooded organization had given them no cause for protest or complaint. No Klan antagonism toward them had been indicated.

And now comes the Klan viewing with appreciation the efforts of negroes at Greenport to build a church, but realizing that "words alone are of little avail," it incloses a cash contribution for the building committee.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Jan. 13.—The police and Post Office authorities were asked today to investigate the sending through the mails of four letters, all signed with the initials "K. K. K." in red ink. One addressed to the Rev. Edward O'Donnell, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, contained a threat to burn the church. Another threatened the lives of State Senator Patrick J. Cox and his daughter. The other two letters asserted that the homes and stores of a druggist and a marketman in this city would be burned. The police were inclined to regard the letters as a hoax, but began an investigation at the request of Senator Cox.

KLAN IN NEW ENGLAND VIEWED WITH ALARM

Chicago Daily News

Republicans Fear Religious Strife in Campaign May Defeat Party.

10-2-23

Chicago, Ill.

BY WILLIAM HARD.

Special to The Chicago Daily News.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 2.—The protestant vs. Catholic issue has raised its head again in New England in new guises to the great discomfort and danger of the republican party. Far-sighted republicans are taking earnest measures to check this new outbreak of religious strife, which here in New England has the following peculiarity:

It is started in its organized form principally by Yankee protestants, who for the most part are republican in their political affiliations, but it threatens, in the end, unless checked and stopped, to undermine and gravely imperil the New England republican political supremacy.

The reason for this prospect is that the republican party throughout this region is dominated for the most part by the Yankee element, whereas the democratic party is for the most part dominated by the Irish element. The republican party, however, in order to have a winning strength at the polls is obliged nowadays in whole great sections of New England territory to acquire and retain a certain considerable percentage of Catholic votes. If now, then, the Ku-Klux klan is able to convince the Catholics as Catholics that the Yankees as Yankees are hostile to them the result foreseen is that large numbers of Catholic French Canadians and of Catholic Italians will leave the Yankee republican party and will retake themselves to the Catholic Irish democratic fold.

Klan Entrance Alarms.

In these circumstances the sudden emergence of the Ku-Klux klan in Massachusetts is regarded by responsible republicans as an event of the most distinctly menacing character. When, therefore, under the leadership of an ex-hypnotist of the vaudeville stage, began its campaign in Massichusetts last week with a "monster meeting" at Worcester it was at once answered and denounced by B. Loring Young, prominent republican, prominent "Yankee," member of the board of overseers of Harvard college and speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives.

Mr. Young's speech left nothing to be desired for frankness and courage. It declared that the klan is "false to every theory of our government," and it demanded, in effect, that republican leaders come out and say just where they stand on the klan issue.

"Those who are not publicly against the klan," said Mr. Young, "must be publicly counted as being with it."

So strong is the klan influence already in Massachusetts that certain timorous republicans have already remonstrated with Mr. Young for his outspokenness. He belongs, however, to the oldest Harvard tradition of free speech and free thought, and is determined that what he regards as the bigotry and intolerance of the klan shall not get permanent lodgment in Massachusetts.

The fight in a way could be said to be a fight between the Harvard spirit, which has just refused to make any discriminations against Jews or negroes in Harvard college, and the klan spirit, which has tumultuously invaded Massachusetts under the leadership of F. Eugene Farnsworth, "hypnotist," photographer, banjo player, Salvation Army drummer, lecturer, barber and montion-picture producer, now called by his followers "professor" and called by himself "the most loved and feared man in Massachusetts."

Rhode Island's Situation.

Meanwhile, in this state of Rhode Island, the republicans have already seen what the religious issue, in complication with other issues, can do to impair their political chances.

The "Yankees" in this state are a minority. A law passed by a recent legislature under the control of the republicans was interpreted—or misinterpreted—as an attack upon the French Catholic parochial schools. Other issues, growing out of the recent textile strike, were present and were influential in the ensuing political campaign, but by testimony of the absolutely best informed republicans in the state it is admitted that the issue of the supposed attack upon the parochial schools was no inconsiderable factor in giving Rhode Island its present democratic governor and its present unprecedented democratic membership in the state legislature.

Against these tendencies toward the mixing of political and social with religious antagonisms, the Masons have numerously stepped forward to rebuke the klan and to stretch a hand of social good will to their Catholic neighbors.

At Woonsocket, in this state, the prospective "social joint session" of the local Masonic club and of the local lodge of the Knights of Columbus has received so many acceptances both from Masons and from Knights that the largest hall in the city has been rented for the occasion.

The initiative in this affair at Woonsocket was taken by the Masons. Important Masonic leaders in Massachusetts have warned the klan to desist. It is thought that in New England the klan spirit may get its heaviest blows from the Harvard spirit and Masonic spirit.

Crowd Attempts to Halt Parade of Several Thousand Ku Kluxers at Carnegie, Pa., and Bloody Fight Ensues—Klan Trio Get Two Years Each for Oklahoma Flogging.

Chicago, Illinois. 9-1-23

CARNEGIE, Pa., Aug. 30.—One man is dead, a dozen lie seriously wounded in local hospitals and fully a hundred others are nursing cuts, bruises and gunshot wounds received in a battle here shortly before midnight between several thousand white-robed Ku Klux Klansmen and a crowd of citizens determined not to permit the Klansmen to parade.

The dead man, Thomas Abbott, 27 years old, of Atlasburg, Pa., was shot when he and his companion Klansmen attempted to parade thru the streets of Carnegie after they had been warned they could not do so without a permit. No permit had been issued.

While the air seems still surcharged, it is believed that all danger of renewed outbreaks has passed. Nearly all of the visiting Klansmen have left the city and a strong guard is being maintained by all available police, deputy sheriffs and detectives.

The battle began at the Glendale dam broke loose and for nearly half an over Chartiers Creek. All evening the hour there was a bloody riot.

Conclave Ceremonies.

The riot was preceded by one of the most elaborate ceremonies ever presented by the Ku Klux in this part of the country. A cross fifty feet high was erected, set pieces or fireworks bearing the letters "K. K. K." were placed at the head of the high knoll, bomb pits were sunk, and band and speakers' stands were put up.

As a car came up the hill, white robed guards received the password and the cars were passed on. An intricate parking system was put into effect, with almost a hundred robed Klansmen in charge. All around the field Klansmen were posted as guards at intervals of fifty feet.

Meanwhile, on the crest of the hill, about 8,000 were in full regalia and almost 15,000 in citizens' clothes. Red fire was being burned at a thousand different places and the lights of hundreds of oil torches made the hilltop as light as day.

A circle almost a half mile in circumference was formed and inside this the Klan candidates were gathered. A speaker mounted the stand and within the hearing of a reporter, who managed to slip into the field unnoticed, the oath was administered to the 1,000 candidates.

When the parade was decided on a cheer went up, bombs were set off, and wooden red fire embers tossed into the air. As thousands of Klansmen were falling into line a half dozen revolver shots were heard. More shots followed and a policeman's whistle sounded at the lower gate.

"Everybody to the gates," came an order from within the great circle, and as tho they were moving in a gigantic drill the angered thousands ran toward the road. Some one put a torch to the big cross and it blazed up. Several Klansmen fell and were trampled over by the hundreds behind them. Several dead trees lying in the field were stripped of their branches and stones and missiles of all kinds were picked up as the Klansmen moved over the crest of the hill and swarmed to the gates.

At the roadway the throng stopped. Challenges were flung at the hundreds of spectators in the fields across the road, and curses and jeers came in reply. The rioting in the streets followed.

NEW ANTI-KLAN ORDER LAUNCHED IN PA.

The Amsterdam (Crusader Service.)

KANE, Pa., Aug. 21.—"The Knights of the Blazing Ring," opposed to all "Klans," announced its organization to-day, following the display of a fiery circle at the eastern limits of Kane last week.

To-day a letter was received by Kane newspapers, typewritten and unsigned, which announced the formation of "The Knights of the Blazing Ring," and added:

"Kane is selected as the starting point of a movement that will ring with blazing justice to all. We are enemies of all Klans; we believe in liberty for every human being, black, white or yellow, regardless of race, religion or creed. We work within and without the blazing ring and do not cover our faces."

REWARD OF $7,500 NOW FOR SLAYER IN KLAN PARADE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 27.—Rewards totaling $7,500 have been offered by the Ku Klux Klan for information as to those responsible for the riot Saturday night at Carnegie, in which Thomas R. Abbott, a klansman, was killed and a number of others wounded, one seriously.

A detail of the Ku Klux Klan today continued to keep watch at the little house at Atlasburg which had been the home of Abbott.

The guard, it was said, would be maintained until tomororw afternoon, when funeral services will be held, with all of the Pennsylvania general officers of the order attending.

Will March in Scottdale.

Scottdale, Pa., Aug. 27.—Knights of the Ku Klux Klan will be permitted to march in Scottdale if they hold a proposed meeting here next Saturday, said Burgess W. L. Shaffer today.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 29.—A klonklave and parade of the Ku Klux Klan to surpass anything of the kind held in this territory and with every member "prepared" is to be held near Scottdale, Saturday night, September 1. One assertion is made that the Knights of Columbus disrobed Klansmen in this town on a former occasion.

This is the information contained in an official klan notice mailed to every member n western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio, western Maryland and northern West Virginia during the past week. One notice reads in part:

"Kindly notify each member of your organization regarding this celebration and see that they attend 100 per cent.

"Sentinels wearing white ribbon on left arm will be stationed at roads leading into town; also in town to direct you.

"Each member is urged to come prepared with robes. If you do not have a robe come any way, as we want a 100 per cent attendance.

"Come prepared and remember it was in this town that the Knights of Columbus held up the Klansmen and stole their robes returning from Uniontown.

"It is absolutely necessary to have a large number present to put the Klan work across in this community.

"Let's make this the largest demonstration in Pennsylvania.

"At his call I will answer. We have sent out that call.

"JAMES A. MILLER,
"Exalted Cyclops."

"P. S.—Buy gas at Northside Service Station as you enter town from the north, or Power Gasoline Company, south on Broadway. Both 100 per cent."

Sheriff Black of Westmoreland County stated today that he expected no trouble between Klansmen and persons opposed to them on Saturday night. He was making no unusual preparations to meet trouble.

Members at Rochester, Pa., Hold up Floral Cross

Rochester, Pa., Aug. 9, 1923.—Three silent figures, clad in the raiment of the Ku Klux Klan and bearing a large cross of red carnations, paid tribute to the late President Harding when the funeral train passed through here this morning.

As the train moved slowly through the station, one of the klansmen advanced with the cross in the hope that it would be taken aboard. There was no one on the platform of the funeral car and the floral offering was not taken.

As the train disappeared the klansmen, holding the cross upright, stood at attention. They were whisked away in an automobile.

Thousands of persons from all parts of the Rochester district flanked the railroad right of way as the train passed.

We are enemies of all Klans; we believe in liberty for every human being, black, white or yellow, regardless of race, religion or creed. We work within and without the blazing ring and do not cover our faces."

Catholics and Jews Astir

Like the usual political campaign, the present one has already offered its first installment of "wild rumor." This first "report" comes in the form of sneaking, deadly propaganda. The whole thing hinges upon the Ku Klux Klan, an organization which is supposed to have quite a little force in Allegheny County. The "force" of the organization is admitted to be greater just now than at any other time, and the campaign is probably responsible for most of the "force."

At any rate, one faction has already begun the rumor that certain men on the other ticket are members of the Klan. The report is spread as a confidential matter to be used among Catholics, Jews and Negroes. The truth about the whole matter is probably that there are members of the Ku Klux on the tickets of both factions, and in order to keep the matter as uncertain as possible, the rumors are spread to prevent an expose of the real and true situation.

Whether there are Klansmen on either or both tickets is a matter to be determined later, and it will be determined, if reports are reliable. But the people to be interested in the K. K. K. as a political factor are the Catholics and the Hebrews. The Negro is interested to see whether the Catholics and Hebrews are going to sit idly by and allow Klansmen to be elected to public office. 8-18-23

Of course, no Klansman who takes his oath seriously can respect his oath, and at the same time accept a vote from any Negro. On the other hand, there is not the remotest possibility of any Negro voting for any Klansman. The Klansman can not expect any Negro's vote, and there is little danger of any Klansman receiving any Negro's vote.

The Negroes can do very little in the way of arranging a ticket. They have a few available men, but not enough to furnish the personnel for any ticket. The Hebrews and Catholics are in better position. They are white, members of the white organizations, have the advantage of white banks, and white contacts, and can go before white audiences and ask for white votes with a reasonable degree of assurance that they will get them. A Negro candidate has no such advantage. Pittsburgh Gaz.

The Courier does not attempt to speak for the Catholics and the Hebrews, but it will venture the assertion in behalf of Negroes that there will not be cast a single black vote for any man who is a Klansman, or is reasonably suspected of being one. The Catholics and Hebrews can do as they please, since they and the Klansmen are members of the same race variety, but the Negro is put in his position by the very oath the Klansmen take. There is the impassable gulf between a Klansman and a Negro; and as far as we know, it will remain forever, growing wider with the passing years.

The Negroes know what they are going to do, but what will the Catholics and Hebrews do about it? We shall see.

KU KLUX DEFIED LAW IN CARNEGIE RIOT, SAID

Attempted Parade After Permit Refused.

Wizard Issues "Official Statement to People of United States Saying Constitutional Rights Violated—Reporter Sees Meeting.

Memphis Tenn.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 26.—Authorities tonight are taking every precaution to prevent a recurrence of last night's rioting at Carnegie between klansmen and their foes, resulting when members of the klan attempted to stage a parade after having been denied a permit by Carnegie officials. Both sides are in bitter mood and it is feared there will be serious outbreaks.

So far as known one man, a klansman, was killed and many wounded on both sides. It is difficult to get at the exact casualties, as both sides carried off their injured when possible. The identity of wounded klansmen in the hospitals is being carefully guarded, but it is said well known men are among them. Hospital authorities say they are private patients and refuse to give any information. Heavy klan guards surround the hospitals.

It was learned tonight that the flag-draped automobile at the head of the parade, which was the storm center of the fighting, had four women among its occupants. Whether any one of these was injured could not be ascertained.

Dead Klansman Identified.

The body of the klansman shot to death was identified in the county morgue today as that of Thomas Abbott, 27 years old, of Atlasburg, Washington County. At least a dozen persons are in hospitals with shot or knife wounds and probably 100 others are suffering from broken bones, bruises or minor knife wounds.

Patrick McDermott, an undertaker of Carnegie, is in jail on the order of District Atorney Samuel H. Gardner, with three other Carnegie men, W. K. Flaherty, Joseph Joyce and George Kimmel. It is understood these will be held pending an inquest into Abbott's death.

Late this afternoon a group of klansmen, estimated to number 500, were seen in conference on Wabash Hill, the spot from which their parade started yesterday afternoon. Chief Braun, in command of the Allegheny County detectives, at once sent word that no demonstration by the klan in the town would be permitted and warned the klansmen he would not be responsible for the consequences if they did not disperse. They told the messenger no meeting was contemplated and that they were merely removing paraphernalia used in yesterday's initiation.

Ten Klansmen Fined.

Ten klansmen were arrested yesterday, while armed. They were directing klan automobiles to the hill and were fined $10 each for illegally carrying weapons in police court this morning. Sixteen men taken from cars bearing klan insignia folowing the rioting, were freed.

The body of Abbott, taken from the morgue to the home of a brother klansman, B. F. McMillian, of Atlasburg, was guarded by a hundred members of the order tonight, and announcement was made that the guard would be maintained until after the funeral.

The state klan organization tonight increased to $5,000 a reward of $2,000 offered in the afternoon by Dr. H. V. Evans, imperial wizard, for the arrest and conviction of the slayer. Evans addressed a meeting of state kleagles, king kleagles and higher officers in the Fort Pitt Hotel and issued, what he called an "official statement to the people of the United States, concerning the murder of Klansman Abbott."

Carnegie was filled today with automobiles wending their way to Wabash Hill, overlooking the town, where the klan meeting was held, and where several thousand noviates received the klan oath.

Street Littered With Missles.

West Main Street, near St. Joseph's Catholic Church, the scene of most of the rioting, was littered with broken bricks, lumps of coal, stones andc udgels that were used by the fighters.

At yesterday's initiation ceremony a cross 50 feet high, was erected, set with pieces of fireworks bearing the letters "K. K. K." were placed at the head of the high knoll, bomb pits were sunk and a band and speakers' stands were put up.

As a car came up the hill white-robed guards received the password and the cars were passed on. An intricate parking system was put into effect with almost 100 robed klansmen in charge. All around the field the klansmen were posted as guards at intervals of 50 feet.

Meanwhile, on the crest of the hill, about 8,000 were in full regalia and almost 15,000 in citizens clothes. Red fire was being burned at a thousand different places and the lights of hundredso f oil torches made the hilltop ah light as day.

A circle, almost a half mile in circumference, was formed and inside this the klan candidates were gathered. A speaker mounted the stand and within the hearing of a reporter, who managed to slip into the field unnoticed, the oath was administered to the 1,000 candidates.

Decision to Parade Cheered.

When the parade was decided on, a cheer went up, bombs were set off and wooden red fire embers tossed into the air. As thouhands of klansmen were falling into line, a half dozen revolver shots were heard. More shots followed and a policeman's whistle sounded at the lower gate.

"Everybody to the gates," came an order from within the great circle and as though they were moving in a gigantic drill, the angered thousands ran toward the road. Some one put a torch to the big cross and it blazed up. Several klansmen fell and were trampled over by the hundreds behind them. Several dead trees lying in the field were stripped of their branches and stones and missiles of all kinds were picked up as the klansmen moved over the crest of the hill and swarmed to the gates.

At the roadway the throng stopped. Challenges were flung at the hundreds of spectators in the fields across the road and curses and jeers came in reply.

The rioting in the streets followed.

Notices scattered about the field told of a klan meeting scheduled for Scottdale next Saturday evening. The literature gives information how to reach the grounds and says:

"Come prepared and remember this is the town where the Knights of Columbus held up klansmen and stole their robes returning from Uniontown."

"Constitutional Rights" Violated.

Dr. Evans characterized his statement, issued tonight, as "an official statement to the people of the United States concerning the murder of Klansman Abbott during a riot when parading klansmen were attacked by residents of Carnegie, Pa., Saturday night."

The statement follows:

"The action of the mob of Carnegie residents senses of anarchy. The klansmen of Western Pennsylvania gathering on a hillside overlooking Carnegie early in the evening, and following the initiation of 1,000 men into the order paraded in the direction of the town. They were halted at a bridge separating Glenlale from Carnegie by trucks and other vehicles barring the road. Missiles of every description were thrown at the klansmen. Fence pailings, bricks, stones, coal, in fact every object that could possibly maim the law-abiding klansmen were hurled at them.

"In an effort to prevent their constitutional right of peaceable assembly being abridged by an element of citizenry absolutly dangerous to the safety and cause of freedom, the klansmen moved forward, a square where the attacking forces made ready for their coming with a bulwark of paving stones and bricks. A shower of these missiles fell on the klansmen, the civilians began firing from a dark street and Klansman Abbott fell mortally wounded. The klansmen in compliance with a request of assembled deputy sheriffs went back to the meeting place on the hillside then returned to their homes. Klansman Abbott was killed because he exercised his constitutionally guaranteed right of peaceable assembly, free speech and free movement over the highways of our country. . . . We are determined that this and all other parts of our great land shall be made safe for native born Americans and that every right given us in the constitution, made by our forefathers shall be preserved to us and our posterity."

"Dr. Evans also stated that the klan would pay a reward of $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Klansman Abbott.

METHODIST PASTOR ATTACKS KLAN IDEA

Montgomery Advertiser

Minister Who Ordered Robed Men From Church, Objects to Affiliation

4-9-23

PITTSBURGH, PA., April 8.—The Reverend Dr. Ralph W. Urmy, pastor of the Bellevue Methodist church, who ordered a group of white robed klansmen from his church Easter Sunday morning, tonight attacked the principles of that organization in a sermon on the Ku Klux Klan and the church. When the klansmen were ordered from the church last Sunday several of them were disrobed in the scrimmage with members of the congregation who followed them outside the church.

After disclosing that following the Easter day incident he had been waited upon by the King Kleagle of the Pennsylvania realm and leading klansmen of other states, Dr. Urmy declared:

"The increasing frequency of visits paid by delegations of klansmen to protestant churches, bringing donations of money with the possible intention of establishing a connection between the klan and the church, naturally raises the question of relationship between the two.

* * * * "The protestant church prides tself on its faithfulness to American ideals. But the klan in my opinion does not measure up. While I deny the right of any group of citizens to tell me or any other man what our type of Americanism ought to be, reserving the right to decide that for myself, I nevertheless asked the king kleagle of Pennsylvania what klansmen meant by '100 per cent Americans.'

"The answer given by one of the other high officials present, was "a hundred per cent American is a citizen who supports all the laws and constitution of the United States."

"But the klan is not even careful to support the laws. It is a common practice for its members to violate the laws that protect a church service from intrusion and disturbance."

Referring to the klan's activity in political and religious fields Dr. Urmy said he asked the klan delegation this question:

"Does the klan believe that public office should be held by Roman Catholics or Jews? The answer from one of the men was emphatic, "No." The others made no objection to that answer.

"Now, I believe that a true Americanism holds that the people have a right to elect any man they please to any office for which he is lawfully a candidate and that the right of such candidate to hold office depends on the will of the voters and on nothing else."

"The genuine American works in the open. He is a sportsman and a gentleman. He follows the rules when he plays the game. He is neither ashamed nor afraid to show his face, his purposes and even his methods."

Dr. Urmy concluded:

"The klan is very friendly to the protestant church and its friendship is undoubtedly sincere * * * * * but cannot help feeling that when it comes to the application of the protestant principles of life the church might well pray to be delivered from its friend."

Ordered From Church, Klansmen Lose Masks In Lively Scrimmage

Atlanta Constitution

Pittsburg, Pa., April 1.—Six members of a band of 16 white hooded Ku Klux Klansmen were shorn of their masks in a scrimmage after they had been ordered from Bellevue Methodist Episcopal church by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. R. B. Urmy, today.

The Easter Sunday services had just begun when the 16 figures entered and walked down an aisle toward the pulpit. They were stopped by Elmer L. Kidney, attorney and member of the church board. The Easter morning worshipers were startled and Mr. Kidney commanded the members of the masked band to leave. 4/2/23

At this point Dr. Urmy intervened: "Gentlemen," he said. "I shall have to ask you to retire. You are disturbing the services here, which is a violation of law. You will be welcome to remain if you remove your disguises. Otherwise you must go."

The hooded men about-faced and marched silently from the church followed by a number of men from the congregation. Outside the church a general scrimmage ensued and the hoods and flowing white robes of six of the band were torn away, revealing their identity. Before they left in automobiles parked near by the license numbers of their cars were obtained.

Atlanta

In a statement issued tonight Mr. Kidney declared his intention to request the district attorney to prosecute the members of the band. "I have no prejudice against this organization," he said, "but I protest against a band of masked men, whether their masks are black or white, entering my church in the midst of the most solemn service of the year and frightening women and children and disturbing the service. It is a violation of law and I think it has gone far enough. These performances of men in white robes and hoods are a violation of the law and they should be dealt with as such."

The Problem of the Ku-Klux.

Serious rioting which resulted in at least one death and in many serious injuries the other day proved that sheeted klansmen in the vicinity of Pittsburgh have been so unfortunate as to arouse the violent opposition of large numbers of persons. The klansmen protest that they have done nothing more than exercise their constitutional right of free assemblage. However, defiance of an official refusal to permit them to hold a parade in their mystic regalia seems to have been the direct cause of the attack upon them.

Baltimore News 8-25-23

The belief of the Ku-Klux klan that its members are entitled to go about masked and sheeted upon their mysterious business cannot change the fact that many persons who do not belong to the oath-bound order fear the klansmen—vaguely perhaps, but no less certainly.

Chicago, Ill.

The members of the order insist that theirs is a law-abiding organization and that they are banded together for good and patriotic purposes. However, the confession of three klansmen in Oklahoma the other day that they had participated in the unlawful flogging of a citizen—a confession that was followed by their sentence to terms of two years in prison for that offense—serves at least to prove that Ku-Kluxism does not necessarily make the klansmen law abiding. Consequently the epidemic of kidnapings, floggings and other outrages in various southern states may involve other klansmen. If it cannot prove that it is of value to the nation how is the order to overcome the dangerous prejudice that has been aroused against it?

What are the American people to do about an organization which has spread widely through the nation, which discriminates against certain classes of the citizens, which appears disguised in public, which is oath-bound and which arouses widespread fear and the antipathy that necessarily accompanies fear? This question must be answered. The answer when given should not be given in passion or in ignorance.

KLANSMEN OFFER CROSS OF RED CARNATIONS

Rochester, Pa., Aug. 15 (Associated Negro Press)—Three hooded members of the Klan drew up before President Harding's funeral train when it passed here with a huge cross of red carnations. No one on board offered to take it on and as the train pulled out they were left standing on the platform holding their offering.

KLAN KNIGHTS PUT OUT OF CHURCH

The Literary Digest
Mar. 3, 1923.

IN DRIVING KU KLUX KLANSMEN out of church, when they come in mask and gown, the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church in Pittsburgh set an example, says the Brooklyn Citizen, which "may well be followed." It was a lone and particularly irate trustee who started the retreat of the Klansmen, which ended in a rout. The hooded men came unheralded, according to newspaper accounts of the affair, breaking in on the Easter services being conducted by the pastor, Dr. R. B. Urmy. The visitors divided into three groups, one of which started up the main aisle, while the other two headed for the pulpit from the opposite sides of the church. Six of them were approaching Attorney Elmer L. Kidney, trustee, who was taking up the collection at the time, when he planted his "six feet and 200 pounds" in front of them and effectually barred their further progress. "Get out," he ordered tersely, "and be quick about it." From the pulpit came the voice of the pastor: "Gentlemen, you are disturbing the services here, which is a violation of the law. You will be perfectly welcome to remain if you remove your disguises. Otherwise you must go."

UNMASKS SIX KLANSMEN.

Trustee Elmer L. Kidney, who started a disorderly rout of hooded knights from a Pittsburgh Methodist church.

The Klansmen, thus rebuffed, turned to go, and as they reached the exit Mr. Kidney, we are told, got into action. When he had finished, he had the robes and masks of six Klansmen as spoils of war, and the visitors had incontinently and ingloriously fled the scene. Mr. Kidney, the son of a Methodist Episcopal minister, is said to be prominent in the work of his church. In 1921 he presided over an international conference of Methodist laymen in London. He has no feeling against the Klan, the Pittsburgh Post quotes him as saying, and he understands that the organization has "some very good principles." But he does think that "this thing of interrupting church services and handing a few dollars to the preacher ought to be stopt." Some newspaper editors agree with the redoubtable Pittsburgher. "If other pastors were to adopt the rigorous course of Dr. Urmy," says the Jersey Journal, "there would be less of this sensational tomfoolery, and a lot of Ku Klux advertising might prove very unprofitable." Nobody can object to the Klansmen going to church, in the opinion of the Baltimore Sun. "They will be welcomed in their individual capacity as saints or sinners in any church, so long as they observe religious proprieties and conventions." But, in this case, submits The Sun,

"The Klansmen apparently had not come to pray, but to create a sensation. They seemed to value their hoods more highly than their souls, for they declined the good pastor's invitation and departed hurriedly.

"It is a new thing for honest, one-hundred-per-cent. Americans to be ashamed of their faces. The Ku Kluxers profess to specialize in piety and patriotism. Pious and patriotic people generally do not hide their countenances under masks or their light under bushels when they attend church. They have nothing to be afraid of or ashamed of. The Ku Klux church fashion is not only a piece of cheap and ill-mannered melodrama, but it is in direct conflict with the honest Americanism that is not ashamed of its patriotism and of the honest humility that never wears a mask over head or heart in the presence of God."

If the Klan wishes to give money to a church, remarks the Fort Wayne News Sentinel, "the mails are still open, or representatives may call upon the pastor in his study and quietly make the donation. But the minds of men who go about their activities hiding their faces from the world, are the minds of swashbucklers." And the Newark News thinks it will do no harm to repeat what has often been said: "In the life of America there is no room for a band of men who are ashamed to show their faces while engaged upon what they insist is work of humanity. All the high professions of the Ku Klux Klan are of no avail as long as the mask and gown are retained in their ritual. And the height of impropriety is reached when, so attired, they invade churches, hoping to win condonation of their impertinence by a gift of money." To the Columbus Ohio State Journal "the effrontery of the Klan is amazing. It does not seem as if an organization which countenances such impudence could live very long among persons of good sense and respect for sacred things." "Down in Louisiana, where the evenings are dark and the country is wild," remarks the Baltimore American, "knighthood prospers better; but Mr. Kidney of Pittsburgh has demonstrated with startling vividness what knights will do when they meet a he-man in the daytime." And "when it is borne in mind that the Klan has never officially condemned the outrages which culminated in the Mer Rouge butchery, nor any other outrages of which men wearing the Klan regalia have been guilty," says the New York Globe, "Mr. Kidney's action seems warranted."

"REMOVE YOUR DISGUISES," said Rev. Dr. R. B. Urmy to the hooded Klansmen who invaded and startled his church during services.

"Before the Klan is received in church it may well be required to give evidence that its purposes are those of which tolerant and law-abiding citizens may approve. So far the evidence has run the other way. The Klan is certainly hiding something under a bushel, but it is darkness rather than light."

Klan Warns Squire For Mixed Marriage

The Pittsburgh Courier

Magistrate "Marked Man" After Uniting White Woman and Her Dark-Skinned Lover.

Pittsburgh

LEBANON, Pa., Aug. 9—Robert L. Miller, city magistrate and alderman in the Fourth Ward last week received a Ku Klux Klan warning in the form of a visit by two strangers. They told him they were from Harrisburg and questioned him about his performance of a marriage ceremony on June 28, in which the principals were James R. Johnson, colored, and Miss Mary C. Patterson, white, both of Harrisburg.

The couple got a marriage license here after Clerk Strauss was confronted with the fact that there is nothing in the Pennsylvania statutes forbidding the marriage of whites and negroes. First the couple asked a Presbyterian minister to perform the ceremony, but he refused. The next tried Alderman Miller, who consented after satisfying himself that it was legal.

Declaring that Alderman Miller would be "marked" when he comes up for re-election, the strangers left a card bearing the inscription "The Ku Klux Klan are here, there and everywhere. If you are interested address Postoffice Box 120 Harrisburg."

FOUR WARRANTS FOR CARNEGIE RIOT

The Morning Post

All are Charged With Inciting Disturbances but No One Held on Murder

Advertiser 8-30-23

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 29.—Patrick J. McDermott, Carnegie undertaker, arrested in connection with the klan rioting Saturday night at Carnegie during which Thomas A. Abbott, a klansman was killed, was released from jail today on $10,000 bond after a charge of inciting to riot had been filed against him.

Coroner Wm. McGregor declared in a statement tonight that the evidence obtained to date in the shooting of Ablott was not sufficient to commit any particular person upon a charge of murder. He declared that "due to the fact that those who were present will not make a statement, we have been unable to obtain the proper evidence."

Four other men were arrested during the day charged with inciting to riot and were released on $5,000 bond. Warrants were also sworn out for six other men upon a like charge.

Klansmen Offer Tribute, Rebuffed

The Pittsburgh Pa.

ROCHESTER, Pa., Aug. 16.—"Fools rush in where Angels fear to tread" fully expresses the situation brought about last Thursday morning when the Harding Funeral Caravan passed through here en route to Marion, O., for the final resting of the mortal remains of the late President.

Courier

Three silent figures, clad in the raiment of the infamous Ku Klux Klan and bearing a large cross of red carnations, attempted to pay tribute to the late Pres. Harding at the Pennsylvania railroad station here as the train slowed down in respect to the large crowd that had gathered to pay their respects to the lamented chief.

8-18-23

As the train moved slowly through the station one of the klansmen advanced with the cross in the hope that it would be taken aboard. There was no one on the platform of the funeral car and the floral offering was not taken aboard. As the train disappeared from view the klansmen, holding the cross upright, stood at attention. Then they were whisked away in a waiting automobile.

MARCHER SLAIN, MANY HURT AT PITTSBURGH, PA.

Chicago Tribune 8/26/23

Police Order Fails to Stop Parade.

BULLETIN.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 26.—Two men were arrested early this morning in connection with the killing of an unidentified klansman in rioting at Carnegie, a suburb, last night. In their automobile, when arrested, was found a shotgun and pistol, the police said. Their names were withheld.

8/26/23

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 26, 3 a. m.—One man was killed, another was probably fatally wounded, and an unknown number of others were injured at midnight tonight when citizens of Carnegie, a suburb, and robed members of the Ku Klux Klan clashed at the Glendale bridge over Chartiers creek.

Quiet had been restored three hours later, but with hundreds of policemen, deputy sheriffs, and Allegheny county detectives patrolling the streets. A motorcycle squad had been stationed at the edge of the borough to prevent any further attempt by the klansmen to enter the town and officers expressed the belief that they had the situation in hand.

Killed Man Wore White Robe.

The man killed, who was wearing a white robe, has not been definitely identified. He is believed to be F. Leoeler of Steubenville, O.

The most seriously injured was Steve Zarzolbeck, who, his friends say, was discharged a few months ago from the regular army after six years' service. He was a member of the party opposing the parade and was shot through the abdomen. William Williams, another ex-soldier and member of the opposing force, was picked up and hurled into Chartiers creek. The robed klansman died in the office of Dr. F. B. Jones as he was placing him upon the operating table to probe for the bullet through his head. Three other klansmen, wearing their robes, appeared later for treatment of minor injuries. They left with the robes hidden under their coats, the physician said.

Physicians' Offices Crowded.

The offices of physicians in Carnegie were crowded early this morning with people obtaining treatment for cuts and bruises. The list of those wounded in the shooting was increased one more when it became known that John Carrick, a bystander, had been shot in the leg.

Burgess John Conley stated early this morning that no permit had been issued for the parade. It was estimated that 10,000 klansmen had gathered on the hills above Carnegie and marched in the parade.

The klansmen had been gathering all afternoon and evening for what is understood to have been a state meeting on a hillside overlooking Carnegie. Early in the evening their leaders were told, police said, that a parade through Carnegie would not be permitted.

About 11 o'clock, however, the parade was seen to appear over the hill and start towards the town. In order to enter it the klansmen had to cross the Glendale bridge, which spanned a small creek. A crowd gathered at once at that bridge and automobiles were run on it and stopped, effectively blocking the structure.

Rush Blockade at Bridge.

When the automobile leading the parade reached the bridge it stopped. The klansmen immediately made no attempt to proceed and paid no attention to the cries to lower the American flag which headed the parade. Neither did they make any move to turn back.

After the impasse had existed for perhaps a half hour the leaders of the marchers seized an opportune moment and made a wild dash forward. The automobiles were rolled off the bridge and the crowd stationed at the one end swept backwards.

The parade continued for two blocks with only isolated instances of bricks and stones being hurled at the marchers.

Then the opposing crowd seeming to have collected their forces, rushed forward. Bedlam at once broke loose. All kinds of missiles were hurled through the air and firing commenced. One white robed man was seen to fall.

Ten Klansmen Arrested.

Ten klansmen are being held in the Carnegie jail, having been arrested yesterday afternoon when they appeared in the streets of Carnegie with pistols showing from holsters, according to the police, and began directing automobiles carrying klansmen to the scene of the meeting. David Cabel, who claims to be the exalted cyclops of the East Liberty klan, one of those arrested, said he together with nine other klansmen was assigned to direct traffic for the meeting and said he had secured permission to that end from S. H. Gardner, district attorney of Allegheny county.

Wear Army Uniforms.

Cabel and two others of those arrested wore army uniforms, being veterans of the world war, they said, while the other seven wore civilian clothes. Cabel in his cell this morning said that Sam Rich, who, he said was the acting grand dragon of Pennsylvania, had arranged for the meeting and had assigned him as traffic director.

Warrants for Floggers.

Wagoner, Okla., Aug. 25.—Warrants for the arrest of the nine men held by the military authorities in Tulsa, charged with participation in the flogging of Ben Wagner, a farmer living in Wagoner county, were issued late today by John Moss, Wagoner county attorney.

The warrants, however, have not been released, Moss said tonight, explaining he had filed informations against the men merely to be protected when the dispute which has arisen over the exact scene of the Wagoner whipping is settled.

Another Flogging Given.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 25.—State aid in apprehending floggers who victimized George Elver at Kingfisher three weeks ago was promised by Aldrich Blake, executive counsellor to C. W. Smith, county attorney of Kingfisher county, at a conference today in Blake's office, according to an announcement there.

Whipped by Robed Men.

Honey Island, Tex., Aug. 25.—No arrests had been made late today in connection with the flogging and tarring and feathering Thursday night of a man giving the name of Simmie Knapp. Knapp has a number of welts on his back, bearing out his claim to having been flogged with a whip. Tar and feathers were applied after the whipping, and Knapp, wrapped in a sheet, was turned loose near the Apostolic tabernacle about a mile from Honey Island.

Knapp said the kidnapers were dressed in white robes "with something on their head that they parted in the middle to see.".

His treatment of his 17 year old wife and 6 months old baby was the reason assigned for his punishment by the masked mob, Knapp said.

Imperial Wizard Offers $2,500 For Slayers Of Thomas Abbott. K. K. K. Men Fined

Pittsburg, Pa.—Five hundred or more Knights of the Ku Klux Klan recently assembled on a hill overlooking the suburban town of Carnegie where Thomas R. Abbott, of Atlasburg, Pa., a member of the order was killing in rioting attending an attempt of the Klan to march through the town.

Birmingham, Ala.

Chief Braun, of the Allegheny county detective force, immediately dispatched a deputy to the hill with orders to notify the Klan leaders that a demonstration in the village would not be permitted, and unless they dispersed before nightfall he would "not be responsible for what might happen."

9-1-23

When the officer reached the hill he found a large number of persons there, but was assured that no Klan meeting was in contemplation. The Klansmen declared they were simply removing the paraphernalia taken to the hill for the recent demonstration. Meantime Patrick McDomott, an undertaker of Carnegie, was in the county jail, charged, it was said by the authorities, with killing Abbott, and scores of persons were in hospitals and at their homes suffering from injuries sustained in the fighting.

Dr. H. W. Evans, of Atlanta, Imperial Wizard of the Klan, who was the principal speaker at a demonstration attended by Klansmen of the western Pennsylvania district, which preceded the march, issued a statement in which he declared the order would press for the punishment of Abbott's "murderers" and offered a reward of $2,500 for their arrest and conviction.

The most seriously hurt of the many persons injured in the fighting was Stephen Jarzombe, of Carnegie, who was shot in the stomach. Physicians said he had a good chance to recover however. A boy was sent to a hospital with a bullet in his foot, and many other persons were attended by surgeons near the battle ground. One Carnegie doctor said he had dressed no less than a dozen wounded persons in Heidelburg, a village near Carnegie while many Pittsburg doctors reported similar cases but said none of the injuries was serious.

KLANSMAN IS SLAIN IN PITTSBURGH RIOT

Crowd Stops Parade in Regalia and One of Procession Shot in Head

PITTSBURGH, August 25.—A force of deputy sheriffs was rushed to Carnegie, a suburb late tonight when a crowd of about 500 persons blocked a street and stopped a parade of Ku Klux Klansmen. The parade was led by an automobile but the klansmen on foot were reported to extend back for more than a mile. 8-26-23

After a momentary pause the paraders broke through the crowd and continued through the town singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." A number of shots were fired and one man, dressed in white robes is known to have been killed. He died in a physician's office shot through the head.

Many persons were injured in the fighting which was still in progress more than an hour after the first outbreak. The force of deputy sheriffs was reinforced by all available uniformed Pittsburgh policemen and Allegheny county detectives who were given the right of way on city streets as they sped in automobiles to Carnegie, six miles away.

Fighting Began at Bridge When Police Halted Parade and Misile Shower Started

Montgomery, Ala.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 26—Five hundred or more Knights of the Ku Klux Klan late today assembled on a hill overlooking the suburban town of Carnegie, where last midnight Thomas R. Abbott of Atlasburg, Pa., a member of the order was killed in rioting attending an attempt of the klan to march through the town.

Chief Braun, of the Allegheny county detective force, immediately dispatched a deputy to the hill with orders to notify the klan leaders that a demonstration in the village would not be permitted, and unless they dispersed before nightfall he would not be responsible or what might happen.

When the officer reached the hill he found a large number of persons there, but was assured that no klan meeting was in contemplation. The klansmen declared they were simply removing the paraphernalia taken to the hill for last night's demonstration."

Meantime Patrick McDermott, an undertaker of Carnegie, was in the county jail, it was said by the authorities, with killing Abbott and scores of persons were in hospitals and at their homes suffering from injuries sustained in the fighting.

Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, who was the principal speaker at the demonstration attended by klansmen of the western Pennsylvania district, which preceded the march, tonight issued a statement in which he declared the order would press for the punishment of Abbott's "murderers" and offered a reward of $2,500 for their arrest and conviction.

Many Injured, One Seriously.

The most seriously hurt of the many persons injured in the fighting was Stephen Jarzombe, of Carnegie, who was shot in the stomach. Physicians said he had a good chance for recovery although he was badly wounded. A boy was sent to a hospital with a bullet in his foot, and many other persons were attended by surgeons near the battle ground. One Carnegie doctor said today he had dressed no less than a dozen wounded persons in Heidelburg a village near Carnegie, while many Pittsburg doctors reported similar cases but said none of the injuries were serious.

PISTOL CARRIERS FINED

PITTSBURGH, PA., Aug. 26—Ten men arrested by Carnegie police before the rioting started were today fined $10 each under a borough law for having arms in their possession. They had stationed themselves along the principal streets, and were directing automobiles bearing the klan insignia, to the meeting ground on the hill. This action led the district attorney to declare that the county would direct its efforts in prosecuting those arrested in connection with the rioting, as there was no Pennsylvania law which prohibited such meetings as that held by the klansmen.

Twenty-Five Thousand Present.

The rioting came after the most spectacular meeting of the klansmen ever held in this section. Hundreds of automobiles began to arrive at the hill early Saturday evening, and by nine o'clock it was estimated that fully 25,000 persons had given the pass word and passed within the enclosure, scores of them women. The place was brilliantly illuminated with electric lights, and after a large class had been initiated, Dr. Evans delivered an address. Several thousands of the klansmen were then formed into lines and marched down towards the village.

The greatest excitement had marked the entire evening in Carnegie. The commanding position of the hill on which the klan had gathered had aroused the entire countryside, and thousands of persons had poured in. They lined the principal streets, and waited for hours for the parade to start.

The greatest assemblage was where the line of march passed over Chartiers creek, and just before the head of the parade reached that point an automobile was drawn up across the bridge.

Police Halt Parade.

As the klansmen wound down off the hill, preceded by an automobile carrying three men and a woman, Carnegie policemen on the bridge ordered them to halt, saying the parade could go no further as no permit had been given.

The klansmen appeared at a loss just how to proceed when suddenly the fighting began. Some one tossed a bottle and then a few stones and in spite of the efforts of the police to restore order the crowds surged into the street. An American flag was torn from the leading automobile and the klansmen's ranks broke as they rushed forward They fought their way on each side of the automobile and down the street There was a desultory shot or two, the combatants confining themselves to bottles, bricks and stones.

A county detective in the crowd made his way to the front and recovered the flag and the fight swept by him. Half a block further on, Abbott, a mine machinist, was shot and klansmen quickly carried him into a physician's office nearby. He died on the operating table.

Pennsylvania

Meantime a party of klansmen had swept around the block through side streets and engaged the crowd further in towards the business center. Four of their number were carried into a butcher shop where their wounds were attended and they were then hurried away by their friends. Many similar instances were reported to the authorities.

The greater number of klansmen had remained in the road near the bridge, watching the fight in the street beyond. County officers pleaded with them to go back to the hill and in the course of half an hour the order was given and they marched away. Soon they were in their automobiles homeward bound and before daybreak the hill was deserted, while the crowds in the streets gradually melted away.

County officers patrolled Carnegie all of Sunday, but the streets were almost deserted until late in the afternoon when it was seen that men again were gathering on the hill. Then little knots of citizens appeared, but there was no disorder.

Ku Klux Mob Rule Upheld By Minister

Pittsburgh Courier 9-22-23

YORK, Pa., Sept. 20.—"Why the Ku Klux Klan?"

This question was the theme of an address last week in the Bethlehem Evangelical Church by the Rev. C. C. Bergstresses, who took pains to explain that he was not an apologist for the Klan, but that he simply was presenting reasons for the development of such an organization.

Here are the reasons he gave:

1. Movies, which give their patrons a distorted view of life and quench a desire for spiritual development. 9-22-23

2. Automobiles, which have done some good but more evil.

3. Growing disregard for law and constituted authority.

4. Grafting, inner-circle clique of politicians, the "constituted authority and the makers of law," who, by their own example, encourage lawbreaking.

5. "Sporting" by men of other men's wives.

The pastor declared that the Klan is more feared than the law. While he professed to deplore mob rule and lynchings he said the law could not prevent crime as readily as the fear of dying at midnight, suspended from the limb of a tree on a lonely road. He said:

"There is an element that will respect the vision of a rope in the hands of an angry mob more than volumes of laws stacked on the shelves of brilliant lawyers.

"Disregard for law and authority is stalking boldly up the aisles of the church."

MISS COOL FORCED TO ANSWER INSULTING QUESTIONS OF CHIEF

The Pittsburgh Courier 8-18-23

"Investigator" Intimates That White Owner and Hotnit Were Disciples of "Free Love."

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Women Fleeing From Wrath Of Klan, Return To Be Insulted

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 16.—Abandoning their home near Florence in an attempt to flee the wrath of the "Hooded Band," which attacked their home, and forced James G. Hotnit to flee, Miss Effie Cool, white owner of the farm, whom Klan members accused of carrying on a "free love" affair with a colored man, Hotnit's wife and four children, returned here last week at the request of Chief of Detectives Reese.

Miss Cool was then insulted, when the questions which appear in the story below were asked her.

On Saturday night, August 4, members of the Ku Klux Klan, the "Hooded Terror," perpetrated one of the greatest travesties on law and order in the state, when they violated the home of Miss Effie Cool, white farm owner, and forced James G. Hotnit, manager of the farm, a colored man, to flee the house, under threats of violence, after they had intimated that he and his employer had been too "intimate."

Fleeing the house and leaving his wife, children and Miss Cool at the mercy of the men, Hotnit walked 20 miles in a blinding rainstorm, came to Pittsburgh and told a story far stranger than fiction, of the events of that fateful night.

Local officers sent him, under guard, to Washington, in order that the authorities of that county might act at once on the case.

The District Attorney placed the case in the hands of Chief of Detectives T. M. Reese, and that official, in questioning Miss Cool justified, in a large measure, the feeling that the Klan is obtaining such a hold on the affairs of this country, that a person attacked by this order, not only cannot be protected, but can hardly look for justice and fair play from the authorities.

Reese, in investigating the case, went to the farm of Miss Cool, and there asked questions of the most insulting nature, questions unbecoming a gentleman, and questions which clearly showed he was attempting to justify the action of the Klan.

The questions, most of them of a personal nature and which really had little or no bearing on the attack, were extremely embarrassing and proved that the questioner was less than a man in forcing a defenseless woman to be subjected to such.

"Has Hotnit ever had intercourse with you?" and "Has Hotnit ever made love to you?" were just a few of the highly insulting questions of the man who had been sworn to uphold law and order.

"People have said that they have seen you and Hotnit often stop on the road from market," was another impertinent statement.

Miss Cool, a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in the county, embarrassed and insulted at the tone and manner of the questions, swore to the following questions and answers before a notary public:

State of Pennsylvania,
Allegheny County, SS:

Before me, the undersigned authority, in and for the County aforesaid, personally came Miss Effie Cool, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says:

My name is Effie Cool, and I live on my own farm out from Burgettstown, Washington County, Pennsylvania, and my Post Office address is R. F. D. No. 1, Burgettstown, Pa.

Concerning the visit to my farm by a number of masked men on Saturday night August 4th, 1923, when James Granville Hotnit was driven from the farm house by the threats and revolver shot of the masked men, I was met by a Mr. Reese, who said to me that he came representing the District Attorney's office of Washington County, Pennsylvania, and that he was there to investigate the visit of the masked men to my house on Saturday night, August 4, 1923. He took me aside, denying me any witness in my own behalf, but having a man with him as a witness in his behalf, and this Mr. Reese asked me the following questions, and I made the following answers to each of them: This was on August 7, 1923.

Q. Your name and age?

A. Miss Effie Cool, age 28.

Q. Your father and mother's name?

A. Christopher Columbus Cool, my father, and Eliza Jane Cool, my mother's name.

Q. Your grandfather's name?

A. David Culberson.

Q. How many acres in your farm?

A. One hundred six acres, more or less.

Q. Is the farm clear of debt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much money did you have when your mother lived?

A. I had twelve hundred dollars.

Q. How much money have you at present?

A. I have thirty dollars.

Q. How did you spend your money?

A. I lent Mr. Hotnit some money to get some horses to work the farm.

Q. How did you get acquainted with Mr. Hotnit?

A. He come to my place in July, in 1916, he was hunting work. He lived not so very far away, and so we gave him work. My mother was living then.

Q. How much money did you lend Mr. Hotnit?

A. I just can't remember, but it couldn't have been more than four or five hundred dollars—all told.

Q. Did you like him?

A. Yes, sir; I thought he was a very nice man.

Q. Did you have any intercourse with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where do you sleep?

A. I sleep on the first floor of the house.

Q. Where does Hotnit sleep?

A. Up stairs.

Q. Did he make love to you while coming home from market any time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever stop on the road coming home from market?

A. No, sir. Mr. Reese told me that people said they had seen us stop on the road from market.

Q. Were you having changes at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Hotnit give you any medicine to knock it out of you?

A. No, sir; never, never.

Q. Did you experience the use of a man?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever had any relations with other men?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has Hotnit ever rubbed up against you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you keep a light in your room at night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Hotnit ever come to your bed at night?

A. He never did.

When Mr. Reese asked me if I knew any of the masked men, I told him that I thought I knew one man in the crowd, and I gave him the name of the man.

I told Mr. Reese that one of the masked men told me that I ought to have a white man on the farm, and asked me if I would go before a doctor and be examined. I told the masked man that I was not afraid to go to any doctor. They said they would blow up the house, and one of the masked men yelled to bring on the dynamite. And other vulgar words they said to me, meaning that I was intimate with a colored man. I told them they were wrong, all wrong.

I swear to all the above question and answers made to them, and to the statements made in addition thereto.

Sworn and subscribed this the 8th day of August, 1923.

MISS EFFIE COOL.

My commission expires March 6th 1927.

1 HELD IN FATAL KLAN-MOB RIOT AT CARNEGIE

Rewards Offered in Killing and Inciting Battle—Wizard Evans "Senses Anarchy."

By International News Service.

PITTSBURG, Pa., August 27.—As an aftermath to the rioting between civilians and the Ku-Klux Klan, when the latter attempted to parade through Carnegie, Pa., late Saturday night and early Sunday morning, Patrick McDermott, 65, an undertaker, is being held here in jail Monday in connection with the death of Thomas R. Abbott, of Atlasburg, Pa., a klansman.

Twenty-five hundred dollars has been offered by the klan for the arrest and conviction of Abbott's slayer or slayers, and another $2,500 offered for the arrest and conviction of the inciters of the fatal riot. More than 100 klansmen are guarding the paraphernalia on the hill just outside of Carnegie, where the 3,000 novitiates were initiated Saturday evening. Both rewards are understood to have been offered by the Pennsylvania Realm, Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan.

Dr. W. H. Evans, imperial wizard of the order, who attended the meeting, issued a statement in which he declared:

"Klansman Abbott was killed because he exercised his constitutionally guaranteed right to peaceable assembly, free speech and free movement over the highways of our country." He also said that "the action of the mob at Carnegie senses of anarchy."

Sixteen men who were arrested early Sunday in connection with the rioting were released. No charges were placed against them. Three men are being held in the county jail who are said to have had revolvers and a handful of bricks during the fight. The 10 reported wounded are recovering, according to authorities Monday. It is estimated that fully 20,000 klansmen attended the initiation Saturday night.

Simmons Blames Evans for Clash

Blame for the Saturday night rioting in Carnegie, Pa., which resulted in the death of one member of the Ku-Klux Klan, the wounding of several others and the creation of a spirit of unrest throughout the section, was laid Monday by Colonel William J. Simmons, Imperial of the klan, on W. H. Evans, imperial wizard.

Colonel Simmons declared that Evans' presence, surrounded by "armed guards," was an offense against peace and order and a challenge to law-abiding citizens to either arrest them or to fight them," and that the men involved were not only in the position of forfeiting American citizenship, but have also "at the same time forfeited all rights in the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan."

Colonel Simmons' statement follows:

"The riot in Carnegie, Pa., is a tragic demonstration of the correctness of my analysis of the conditions now obtaining in the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan. Mr. Evans, for the time being imperial wizard, was present, according to the report, and failed to prevent a clash between the klan and the citizens of that community.

As alleged, he evidently invaded Pennsylvania surrounded by his bodyguard, bristling with guns and daggers, and his very presence was an offense against peace and order and a challenge to peace-loving and law-abiding citizens to either arrest them or to fight them.

"There is no man connected with the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, whether in high position or in low, who can undertake to safeguard his goings and his comings before the American people and to enforce his rights, either supposed or imaginary, by a demonstration of arms, and at the same time, claim the right of peacable assembly or any other right guaranteed to American citizens under the Constitution.

CHALLENGES STATE.

"A company of men purporting to represent any cause, however, patriotic or Christian, invading a sovereign state and bearing arms is a challenge to the police power and to the self-respecting American citizens of that state to restrain them and to resist them. If such company is carrying the name and insignia of klansmen, they are not only in the position of forgeiting American citizenship, but they have also at the same time forfeited all rights in the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan.

"The gunmen in the Imperial Palace and the armed bodyguards surrounding the imperial wizard, for the time being, have gone a long way towards fomenting and precipitating the eruptions of lawlessness now breaking out in deeds of violence throughout the American nation.

RAPS ARMS.

"It is silly for Mr. Evans to give to the American people a statement that under his leadership and direction his bodyguard, armed to the teeth, and other klansmen in his company had the right under the American Constitution, or any other guarantee of American liberty, to parade the public highways, occupy the thorougfares, obstruct traffic and divert travelers, whether on foot or in vehicles, without the consent of the properly constituted authorities. Does Mr. Evans not know that the Ku-Klux Klan under his direction has no right to occupy and appropriate to the exclusive use of the klan the highways of the countryside, the thoroughfares of counties and the streets of cities without the consent of the people who built them and who own them?

NOT IN RITUAL.

"As founder and Emperor of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan I wish to say to the American nation that there is nothing in the fundamental principles of the order and nothing in the code of conduct which I have prescribed for klansmen, to justify or even to extenuate the defiance of properly constituted authority. Lawlessness under my administration has always been suppressed and severely penalized if even by implicatoion a single member of the order, or a klan, or a realm, were connected with the deed. But the stabilizing element of thoughtful, conservative, peace-loving and law-abiding men that I built into the order are all gone or are going. This great American organization has crumbled at the top and is now being so directed as that all of the fundamental principles are being subverted and all of the original purposes are being thwarted.

"It is lamentable, beyond the power of words to utter, that a good man and a klansman was killed and other reputable and worthy citizens were injured. My heart goes out in tender sympathy to their loved ones.

"It is especially a matter of shame and of regret, which I can not put in any form of speech, that the tragedy should have occurred in the presence and under the leadership of Hiram Wesley Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, for the time being.

"WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS.
"Emperor of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan."

KLUX VANDALS RUN HOME IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 22.—When it became known that colored persons had bought the property at 2402 W. Cumberland street, white residents went into the usual hysterics. Threats were made and meetings were called, and finally the house was entered by a mob of vandals. In the absence of the owners this mob hacked the walls and banisters, broke mirrors and doors, disconnected the bath tub and wrecked a new gas range. Weird warnings signed with the three K's were scrawled upon the walls by the invaders.

Immediately after this outrage the colored owners moved into the house and began repairing the $500 worth of damage done by their neighbors. During the first night of their stay all the front windows were broken out when a gang decided to throw stones from a safe distance.

Morning came, however, and the colored family still held its property.

Seveal nights later the neighbors held a meeting in a house across the street. At this meeting blazing crosses were displayed in the windows. Evidently the hyphenated Americans in the neighborhood had been told that Negroes feared the Ku Klux Klan. They realized their mistake when they noticed that tranquillity still reigned in the house with the broken windows.

The colored owners have announced their determination to remain in their home, and are ready to protect themselves against further molestations.

Colored families that live in the neighborhood are much incensed over the disgusting demonstration of the Cumberland street whites. Rev. J. T. Dwellie, of 2441 N. 25th street, held a mass meeting at his church early this week at which the affair was discussed, and steps were taken to see that police protection be given the colored family in the midst of its hostile surroundings.

Of all the principals in the affair the calmest and most composed is the colored family at 2402 W. Cumberland street, three women and a child, courageous and unafraid.

Klansman Slain In Carnegie Riot Is Laid to Rest

The Constitution 8-29-23 Atlanta, Ga.

Pittsburg, August 28.—With the declaration by Rev. Dr. W. J. Dempster that "this untimely death shall be as a bond to hold us more firmly together," the body of Thomas R. Abbott, klansman slain at the rioting Saturday night at Carnegie, was lowered into a grave in a cemetery near McDonald today after a 20-mile drive from Atlasburg by the funeral party, composed of relatives and hundreds of klansmen, including state and national representatives. The klansmen were robed but were unmasked and after the funeral services at the grave removed their regalia and dispersed quietly. The Rev. Dr. Dempster and the Rev. J. I. Brown, who conducted the services, each wore white robes.

More than 500 automobiles followed the hearse bearing the body of the slain klansman. Reaching the cemetery, the procession completely circled the burial grounds. An American flag was flying at half mast on the cemetery flagpole. Two lines of klansmen formed an aisle to the grave and through this the casket was borne, headed by two klansmen carrying the Stars and Stripes and the klan cross.

Meantime authorities continued their investigation into the riot, taking into custody during the day two men who gave their names as Michael S. Hays and William Meacock, both of Carnegie. Authorities declared that a charge of inciting to riot would be made against them. Earlier in the day a charge of inciting to riot was made against W. K. Flaherty, Joseph Joyce and George Kimmell, all of Carnegie, and Patrick McDermott, Carnegie undertaker, remained in the county jail awaiting the completion of the investigation.

At klan headquarters it was declared today that Arthur A. Wilbur, Williamsburg klansman, who was reported missing last night, had been located at Salamanca, N. Y., where he is visiting relatives.

KLAN CHARTER OPPOSED.

New York

Pennsylvania Women File Exceptions—Fear Reign of Terror.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 12.—The efforts of the Ku Klux Klan to obtain a charter in Pennsylvania is meeting with determined opposition in the courts here. The application, which was filed several weeks ago, was held up pending exceptions filed by a prominent attorney a few days later. Today three additional exceptions were filed with the court, two of them being signed by prominent women. 9-13-23 Times

The first exception filed today bore the signature of Mrs. Mary T. Horan, John J. Reilly is the exceptant in the second and the third bore the names of Mrs. Teresa M. Molamphy, Margaret L. Postner, Margaret A. Ebrens, Mary A. Neely, Elizabeth A. Weaver, Jane L. Buck, Grace Buck Ayres, Mrs. George Teger and Mrs. John Finn, all prominent in women's circles here.

The exceptions stated that the name Ku Klux Klan was significant of a reign of terror, mob rule, lynch law, riot, disorder and unlawful killings, was associated with race and religious hatred and had been assumed to inspire fear and terror. New York Times

The fact that Klansmen were habitually masked and held secret rites was also set up as a reason why the charter should not be granted.

Klansmen heer admit that the recent rioting and fatalities connected with Klan parades at Steubenville, Ohio, Carneige, Pa., have had much to do with the growing opposition to the klan for a charter.

Undertaker May Be Accused of Klansman's Murder—Knights Guard Body.

New York, N. Y.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 27.—Impenetrable secrecy has surrounded Carnegie's population of both Klan and anti-Klan persuasion since yesterday, and county officials investigating the trouble there declared tonight that their task of locating eye-witnesses of the fatal riot between the Klansmen and the townspeople Saturday night has become a most difficult one.

So far the investigation has disclosed little information that could be used as a basis for placing the blame and bringing before the bar of justice those responsible for inciting the riot which resulted in the death of one man, fatal injury to two others and more or less serious injuries to score of others.

None of the injured has been located. So far as Carnegie information is concerned, no person was injured, despite the continued hail of bullets, bricks, stones, clubs and missiles of every sort. Detectives have scoured the town, questioning in vain every person they met for a name or list of names of the injured.

The high lights of the clash are:

The arrest of Patrick McDermott, aged 65, an undertaker of Carnegie, in connection with the death of Thomas R. Abbott, aged 27, of Atlasbury, Washington County, a Klansman.

A report that two men, one in the Homeopathic and the other in Mercy Hospital, are believed to be dying. The hospital authorities refuse to give their names.

Rewards of $2,500 each for the arrest and conviction of Abbott's slayer or slayers made by Dr. H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, and Sam D. Rich, Pennsylvania King Kleagle.

An additional reward of $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of the inciter or incerters of the riot. Both rewards have been offered by the Pennsylvania Realm of the Klan.

The mysterious disappearance of almost a score of persons who are believed, according to the Carnegie police, to have been in close proximity of the riot.

The arrest of three men for a further investigation into their actions.

A sweeping and unbiased investigation into the affair directed by District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner.

McDermott is in the Allegheny County jail and will probably be charged with murder, Coroner McGregor said today.

Walter K. Flaherty and Joseph Joyce, arrested when a shot gun and a revolver were found in their automobile, together with Lawrence Kimel, alleged to have had his arms full of bricks, are lodged in the same jail for their alleged part in the riot.

An investigation will be conducted by Coroner McGregor and District Attorney Gardner into official Carnegie, it was announced today, to determine whether or not, in attempting to halt the parade, the officials were within their rights.

Officials have learned, they said, that considerable shooting was done by Klansmen.

In checking up the number of persons attending the meeting at the Forsythe farm Saturday, officials say there were nearly 25,000. More than 4,000 automobiles were parked on and near the fifty-acre farm.

ATLASBURG, Pa., Aug. 27.—A detail of the Ku Klux Klan today continued to keep watch at the little house which had been the home of Thomas R. Abbott, one of their number who was killed in the rioting in Carnegie Saturday night.

The guard, it was said, would be maintained until tomorrow afternoon, when funeral services will be held with all of the Pennsylvania general officers of the order and an "army of Klansmen" in attendance. The full ritual of the hooded knights will be used.

Scores of men and women visited the house last night and today.

Special to The New York Times.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Aug. 27.—Threats of ambusing the big parade of the Ku Klux Klan scheduled for Sept. 1 here may lead to the calling off both konclace and procession. The permit has been granted for the parade, but it will probably be revoked on the ground of public safety, as feeling between Klansmen and their antagonists is high in this area.

'RED KNIGHTS' FORM TO OPPOSE KU KLUX

'Flaming Circle' Admits Catholics, Jews and Negroes, but Bars Protestants.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 6.—The Knights of the Flaming Circle, declared by its organizers to be the foe of the Ku Klux Klan, is rapidly gaining recruits in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia., since its organization at Kane, Pa., several weeks ago. 9-7-23

For the first time it was made public today that the new secret organization welcomes Catholics, Jews and negroes and Jews as members, but excludes all members of Protestant churches. It is an avowed anti-Klan organization, but does not counsel parades of violence, except as a matter of self-defense.

All of the societies composed of foreigners who have been requested to join the Knights of the Flaming Circle are said to have entered en masse. During their initiation ceremonies the Knights of the Flaming Circle wore only masks. Each knight has a flaming circle over his heart, symbolic, the organizers say, of truth. The officers of the new order wear [illegible] the name "Red Knights" had been adopted in making the distinction between societies where white robes are worn.

Word was received from Youngstown, Ohio, today that several branches of the Knights of the Flaming Circle have been installed in that section within the last few days. According to organizers who are working in Western Pennsylvania, more than 15,000 men have joined the order.

Bishop McConnell Rebukes Ku Klux

Church Official Resents Interruption by Masked Party at Services.

10-20-23

KITTANNING, Oct. 18.—Nine hooded and robed klansmen, appearing in the First Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday night as Bishop Francis J. McConnell was concluding his evening sermon, were rebuked for what the bishop termed interrupting a religious meeting. An envelope proffered the bishop by the leader of the klansmen was declined. Then the klansmen left the church without comment and without disorder.

The Sunday sermons of the bishop in the church when a conference is in session are always well attended and almost 500 persons were in the church last night. Near the close of the bishop's sermon nine klansmen robed and wearing hoods marched down the center aisle to the pulpit and the leader, addressing the bishop in a low tone of voice proffered an envelope.

Without taking the envelope, the bishop, stopping his sermon, stated that he was not in favor of interrupting a religious meeting by members of the klan and also that he was not in favor of the mask.

Without any further reply the klansmen turned and walked out of the church.

Anti-Klan Knights Use "Blazing Circle"

The Commercial

KANE, Pa., Aug. 20.—The "Knights of the Blazing Ring," self-stated as opposed to all "klans," announced their organization today following the displaying of a fiery circle at the eastern limits of Kane last night.

Much attention was attracted last night by a large blood-red fiery hoop, 30 feet in diameter, a short distance outside the city on a large meadow. Motorists on the Kane-Mount Jewett Road were attracted and, investigating, found the hoop was made of red signal lights such as those used on railroads and for more than half an hour. Today a letter was received by Kane newspaper men, typewritten and unsigned, which announced the formation of the "Knights of the Blazing Ring," and reads:

"Kane is selected as the starting point of a movement that will ring the earth with blazing justice to all. We are enemies of clans and all klans, we believe in liberty for every human being, black, white or yellow, regardless of race, religion or creed. We work within and without the blazing ring and do not cover faces."

BISHOP REFUSES TO ACCEPT GIFT OFFERED BY KLAN

Philadelphia Constitution

Kittaning, Pa., October 8.—Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal church, was interrupted while delivering a sermon at the First church here last night by nine hooded members of the Ku Klux Klan. The klansmen marched down the main aisle and the leader offered the bishop an envelope. The bishop declined to accept it, saying: "You have a perfect right to your own convictions but you have no right to come into a religious meeting with masks on your faces. And you have no right to interrupt a religious service." The klansmen turned and marched out. 10-9-23

The scene was witnessed by 500 delegates attending the annual Pittsburg conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

KLAN LOSES IN PITTSBURGH.

Democrat Polls Record Vote as Result of Ku Klux Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 7.—The Ku Klux Klan thrust itself into a political campaign for the first time in overwhelmingly Republican and Protestant Allegheny County (Pittsburgh) in yesterday's election and as a result there was a time today, when the returns were coming in, that a Democratic candidate experienced the sensation of seeing himself leading the field of candidates, including two Republicans, for the three places as County Commissioners. 11-8-23

County Commissioner James Houlahen, Democratic candidate for re-election as the third of minority commissioner, drew the fire of the Klan because he happens to a Catholic, and was opposed by W. T. McCullough, Klan candidate, and nominee of the Prohibition Party. The final vote for the three County Commissionerships was: J. G. Armstrong (Rep.) 87,668, A. C. Gumbert (Rep.) 80,970, Houlahen (Dem.) 67,505, McCullough (Pro.-Klan) 39,097. Houlahen polled 14,762 more votes than the best previous vote for a Democrat in the county.

Fooling Themselves

DOWN in Coraopolis, a little town just outside of Pittsburgh, the K. K. K. donation committee visited a little colored church and donated $45.00 toward the building fund. The reports indicate that the Negroes took the money.

Pittsburgh Courier

The whole system of the Klan is one of deception. They hope to fool a few Negroes into thinking that the Klan is NOT against the Negroes. They are taking money to Negro churches with the hope that these donations will speak louder than words in indicating the friendliness of the Klan toward the Negro.

10-20-23

The Klan is fooling itself. It is rather expensive deception, too. They are laboring under a false impression. Negroes know the Klan is against Negroes, and the knowledge is certain. Negroes have the real goods on the Klan. The constitution of the Klan declares against Negroes, and when a Klansman takes the oath to support and defend the Klan constitution, he swears against the Negro. This constitutional provision is the bed-rock of all Klanism. If the constitution declares against Negroes, how can Klansmen deceive Negroes by handing in a little cash? The Klan is all wrong on the Negro question. The history of the organization is written in Negro blood and mutilation. Negroes are aware of the workings of the Klan. We have a living example of what the Klan thinks of Negroes. That living example is yet in the flesh, thank God, and is living to show what the Klan did to him, his family and his business. He speaks louder to us than any cash collection handed into a frightened congregation.

Then, too, the Klan just as well know that Negroes have discussed the whole scheme. Negroes have decided to take all the money in sight handed in by the Klan; but the church never receives the money. The money is employed for other purposes. The Klan ought to know that Negroes are not being fooled and The Courier is fair enough to say to the Klan that these little collections are turned into a different channel from the one the Klan suspects. Certainly, the church of Christ is not a subscriber to the Klan idea as long as Christ, a Jew, is accepted as the founder of the Christian church.. Negroes are too religious to take Klan money to build a church for Christ, who, because he is a Jew, is not eligible to join the Ku Klux Klan.

The Klan is fooling itself. When the Klan changes its constitution, and its oath, then the Negroes will pay some attention to the "whispered dope" that the Klan is "not after Negroes."

ANTI-KLAN ORDER BEGINS DRIVE HERE

Vigilance Association Enrolls Prominent Men—Seeks Aid of Churches and Lodges

Philadelphia Public Ledger 11-13-23

WOULD BAR HOODS BY LAW

Organized to "drive the Ku Klux Klan from the country," the National Vigilance Association, incorporated in Washington and numbering among its members college presidents, judges and public officials, has opened a membership drive in this city.

Seeking co-operation of political factions, fraternal orders and churches, the Vigilance Association or Anti-Ku Klux Klan, as it has been termed, already has listed on its membership rolls the names of prominent men, including former Judge John M. Patterson, Daniel P. Corcoran, an attorney, and John Sherwood Jones, of Bryn Mawr, all members of the National Committee of the organization.

The association, according to E. F. Corcoran, directing vice president, will fight the white-robed members of the Klan through legislation.

The first step in the campaign will be an effort to have State Legislatures pass an act making it unlawful for persons to appear on the highways wearing masks and hoods. Members of the State Legislature are now being petitioned to support this measure, which will be presented in every State.

Would Affect All Secret Orders

Pressure also will be brought to bear on the members of the Legislature, Mr. Corcoran said, to compel enactment of laws compelling secret organizations to make public their membership rosters, which, he points out, would be the hardest blow to the Invisible Empire.

Congress also will be asked to establish a Federal statute to cover mob violence and provide Federal prosecution of offenders.

"One of our aims is the propagation of faith in and respect for the institutions of government with the weapons of education, agitation and organization," said Mr. Corcoran.

"The association was organized," said Frank C. Sindoni, secretary, "as a direct result of and in response to a striking warning made in a recent report by a committee of the American Bar Association."

According to officers of the anti-Ku Klux association, the organization will seek co-operation from all fraternal and civic organizations and special efforts will be made to obtain indorsements from the Masonic Order, Elks, Moose, Eagles, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Pythias, Patriotic Order Sons of America, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, American Legion and other organizations. Officials of the vigilantes claim that several of these organizations already have promised their support to the movement.

Judge Patterson last night admitted he was a member of the National Campaign Committee of the organization, and praised its motives.

"I was asked to give my support to the movement and I gladly assented," he said. "The organization was formed to fight mob violence and hooded, invisible empires."

Aims to Dissolve Klan

Judge Patterson stated that he knew nothing of plans to organize branches of the organization in Philadelphia, but admitted that this step probably would be taken.

Officers of the organization last night said that more than 200 councils had been formed in various cities and a number of others were in process of formation. Each council elects its own officers and appoints committees to promote legislation that will be designed to disintegrate the Ku Klux Klan.

More than fifty college presidents, it was stated, have joined the organization and promised active support.

Plans of the association, as outlined in its papers of incorporation, state that "the Association is prepared to fight against all influence and agencies which seek to breed class or religious discrimination and will work actively for the renewal of respect of the law and the Constitution according to its certificate of incorporation."

The slogan adopted by the organization is "Americanism and Preservation of the Union."

Ku Klux Klan—1923. II. Oregon.

KLAN ISSUE MAY DECIDE OREGON RACE TO SENATE

Chicago Daily News 10-17-23

Strange Warfare Rending Western State.

Chicago Ill.

This is the second of two articles dealing with the unique political situation in Oregon, where a mysterious attempt is being made to recall Gov. Walter M. Pierce, Democrat, after nine months in office.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 16.—[Special.]—Not only the fate of Gov. Walter M. Pierce in a recall election but the next United States senatorship from Oregon may be determined by the militant, organized Protestant minority vote. The issue in the latter battle may be Klan and anti-Klan, with former Congressman C. N. McArthur leading the fight against the candidate finally selected by Fred L. Gifford, the Klan leader.

All the potential candidates with the exception of McArthur, a Protestant defeated by the klan for reëlection to congress, are angling for the invisible empire's support or the support of the even more powerful group, the Federation of Patriotic Societies, the backbone of which is the Orange lodges.

Former Friends Now Foes.

It was the support of the Klan and the F. O. P. S. that made Pierce governor and it is the enmity of part of this force, at least, which may succeed in recalling him. Both organizations were angry because they did not get expected patronage, but the Orange lodges are now said to be fighting the Klan, which has bored into and sought to dominate their membership.

Leading politicians admit that the indorsement of one or both of these orders is of greater importance than the indorsement of either of the old line parties, and that if they work together they are the controlling factor.

Senator Charles L. McNary's term expires next March and he is a candidate to succeed himself, trying to keep the Klan off his back. Other potential candidates are Mayor George Baker of Portland and K. K. Kubli, speaker of the house of representatives.

Klan a Powerful Factor.

The Klan controls the school board in Portland, and has a strong influence in the police and fire departments. Both Klan and F. O. P. S. have a hand in the city political pie and fight over contracts and appointments.

The voting strength of the Klan in Portland is about 16,000. Registration is 95,989. The F. O. P. S. is even stronger and has issued a yellow ticket to voters in all elections since 1916. It claims from 70 to 95 per cent success. The Klan came in 1921. At first it supported the F. O. P. S. ticket, but in the fall of 1922 it got out a separate ticket under the name of the Good Government league.

Claims are made that the klan is disintegrating, that Gifford, the outstanding leader, a former union electrical worker and an excellent organizer, has stirred the enmity of many odges. Reports from inside the organization, however, are that the membership has strengthened since the Walton war in Oklahoma.

Few Whippings in Oregon.

There have been only two or three whippings reported in this state, but several towns have been torn apart by the klan. In Medford, where the whipping occurred, both sides were carrying guns a few months ago.

The "Western American" is the official paper for the order. It is published weekly. Its Oct. 12 edition carries a steamer headline, "Rome is falling—defied—doomed." In blackface type on the front page are these items: 'No klansman, or klanswoman, worthy of the name, or true to the sacred vows, will spend a cent with a known enemy of our great, righteous cause. Concentrate the buying power of the klan. The economic weapon is the strongest."

The leading editorial is an attack on the American Federation of Labor. It is headed "Kaseys and Abies at the bat."

Purported Klan Program.

This statement is made in an article extolling and explaining the klan position:

"The knights of the Ku Klux Klan demand only that all citizens be wholly American; that they disavow in thought and action any allegiance to any foreign power, political or ecclesiastical, for any ecclesiastical power always becomes a political power in religious guise and seeks to rule or ruin. Klansmen are patriots, ready to fight for the rights of the minority, under the constitution, as decided by the Supreme court of the United States.

"Will the Knights of Columbus meet us half way on this proposition? Can they say so? Will they abolish forever the foolish fanaticism of the Roman priests and join with us as good Americans in the nationwide enforcement of the constitution, in spirit and letter, uniting with us in the upbuilding of the public school and the other basic institutions of liberty?"

Boycott on Newspapers Urged.

Another item follows:

"Traders who have been enriched by loyal klan patronage, and who now impudently advertise their wares in an enemy newspaper, are going to get what's coming to them from now on. Give each and all such ungrateful traitors a double dose of common discipline.

"Those who advertise in the Portland Telegram are not on your list of friends."

In a box this statement is made:

"Masks to stay on if you would know.

"The knights of the Ku Klux Klan are not going to unmask nor reveal the identity of their membership. They are going to comply with all the laws of the state and nation. Such is their sworn duty as klansmen, and over and above that, such is their absolute duty as American citizens."

Toy Statue of Klansman.

"Kigy," a statue, an exact representation of a klansman in full regalia, eighteen inches high, is offered for sale.

This is printed:

"In Sartor Resartus we read the wise saying that bees will not work except in darkness. Thoughts will not work except in silence; neither will virtue work except in secrecy. All life and beauty are elaborated in night and mystery."

Since 1904, the Oregon voters have been called to vote on 174 initiated measures under their peculiar system of government. They have only exercised the recall twice, in the case of public service commissioners who had raised the telephone rates.

A table compiled by the Oregon Voter, a magazine edited by C. C. Chapman, former Chicago newspaper man, shows that when the system was first put into effect, in 1904, from 40 to 60 per cent of the registered vote came to the polls.

which says that religious qualifications shall not be considered in state offices.

Soon after this an appointment to the game commission set up a "recall" backfire and the appointment was revoked.

Chicago Daily News 10-15-23

No Positions for Knights.

Other appointments ignored the klan, and last June the Western American, official organ of the order, set up the cry for recall, saying:

"Log rollers and creative workers, who sacrificed their money, time and efforts with zealous efficiency in electing certain men to office, naturally expected recognition as a mark of appreciation and loyalty in the distribution of patronage.

"With reckless, impudent abandon, with utter disregard of oft repeated pledges and promises, the winners of the election, now afflicted with the big head, proceeded to mobilize the has-beens and hope-hards, the ragtag, bobtail element of the minority party that did less than nothing toward winning the election, and to certain of these partisan favorites, who were busted nonentities during the campaign, the best positions were awarded."

Cyclops "Washes His Hands."

This klan cry was soon stopped, however, by Fred L. Gifford, the astute and conservative leader of the order, and the announcement was made that the klan was not engaged in the recall.

Other elements, perhaps even more important, enter the situation. The governor had not done anything particularly good or bad, but he made enemies who moved to make use of the klan.

His advocacy of the public school bill, gross earnings tax, severance tax on lumber and fish, his gloomy forebodings regarding the future of the farmers, the state bonds, and particularly his irrigation policy, created an opposition which from several quarters could muster the recall funds and forces.

He became odious to certain business interests and to the optimistic state boosters hunting for eastern money. He was called the "crepe hanger." He called mortgages the "hand of death," and was charged with lacking faith in the glorious empire of the Columbia.

What the Law Provides.

The state guarantees interest on irrigation bonds and certifies them as legal investment for trust funds. The law says the price of the land and improvements shall be double the amount of the bonds. The hunger of the farmers in the dry belt for water on their lands and the greed of land speculators had led to "wildcatting" and mushroom irrigation districts, which were bonded at twice instead of half their value.

Gov. Pierce came down hard on this. He insisted that the bonds be sound, that water be squeezed out, that contracts be economical. The cry was raised that he had "throttled irrigation."

The recall, at least, has served to call attention to the evils in some of the irrigation schemes, and it is on this issue that the governor will seek indorsement from the people.

Big Business Joins Move.

Construction companies, men who sell cement to Oregon contractors, irrigation lawyers, now swung in behind the recall. It is said that one concern gave its political "fixer" a leave of absence to engineer the recall.

The governor has not wavered, however, in this policy. Only yesterday the application of the Jordan Valley Irrigation district for certification by the state of $410,000 in bonds was deferred by the commission, of which the governor is chairman, until a survey could be made; and the governor said that at least $100,000 would be cut from the estimated needs of the district. The state has already spent $2,000,000 in paying interest on irrigation bonds.

Suddenly the recall machine was set in motion. Offices were opened in Portland, and more than a hundred solicitors were sent out to get signatures at 10 cents each. A. E. Campbell appeared as chairman, but admitted he was only acting for the "unknowns." Walter Smith was made secretary.

Hesitate to Sign Petition.

The securing of signatures went slowly in Portland. It was felt that insufficient cause had been shown—that the recall should only be used in cases subject to impeachment rharges.

Impetus was given the movement two weeks ago by the gathering wrath against the prison methods of Warden Johnson Smith. He ran the prison on sentimental or humanitarian lines, as one chooses to regard it. He was easy with the "boys." During his term there were forty-two escapes, compared with two the previous year.

He permitted Lee Dale, a notorious murderer, to visit his home at Dallas every Saturday night. He allowed half a dozen convicts to go to the state fair, where several of them were observed dancing with town girls in the pavilion, girls who did not know the strangers were convicts.

The pressure piled on the governor to remove Smith, and when he saw the impetus this gave to the recall, which he otherwise ignored, he capitulated and a few days ago fired Smith, putting in his former deputy.

The prison policy aroused quarters which had been apathetic regarding the recall. The governor has not exercised the pardoning power much, but now advocates that the pardon and parole law be repealed.

The klan paper has not talked about recall recently, but in the latest issue, Oct. 12, the leading article is devoted to a demand for the removal of George L. Cleaver, state prohibition commissioner. An alleged exposé of his office is given and the charge made that he will not uphold the law. The story given in this klan paper is in detail the story that was told this correspondent by Walter Smith, active secretary of the recall committee, who was discharged by Cleaver for insubordination. In this case the klan charges are the recall agents' charges.

Electorate Loses Interest.

Interest has steadily dwindled until in the last few years only 15 to 20 per cent have been exercising the privilege of direct legislation. It is this waning of interest that has permitted the machine minorities to run things. The latest attempt, which will be voted on Nov. 6, is an income tax on the lines of the federal tax, running from 1 per cent for $1,000 to 6 per cent over $12,000. Gov. Pierce is one of the backers of this plan, which is expected to raise $1,000,000 a year and reduce the general tax levy.

The People's Power league is planning to get a vote on a question of abolishing the present form of legislature and substituting an occupational legislature. Members of the new house would be without political designation, would be elected by occupational groups for four years, and would elect the governor, with power to recall him.

All state officers would be subject to questioning before the house on law enforcement. They failed to get enough votes to go on the ballot once, but another effort will be made.

How They Figure in Far West.

The argument on the petition follows:

"Political government has utterly failed to promote the general welfare. Surely it is worth while to experiment once with a state government based on the voters' business of getting a living by labor of hand and brain.

"Under the proposed amendment, the governor and four-fifths of the members of the legislature will be men and women who work with their hands as well as their heads. We expect that kind of a legislature and governor to make and administer the laws for the purpose of transferring products of farm and factory to consumer without unnecessary profits, bonds, interest, waste, and dividends, and to provide that there shall aways be a job for all who want to work, to make the wage rate, as nearly as can be ascertained, equal to the market value of that which their labor produces."

Under the plan, women would have a large representation, for housekeeping is fixed as a business.

KLAN RULE IN OREGON BLAMED ON DEMOCRATS

Party Accused of Accepting Ku Klux Support.

TURMOIL IN POLITICS

Religious Bigotry Analyzed by Seibold — Prosperity Reaches Into the Northwest—Little Attention Is Given to Candidates.

BY LOUIS SEIBOLD.

(Copyright, 1923, by The New York Herald.)

Commercial Appeal - Memphis 7-24-23

PORTLAND, Ore., April 23.—The best informed business men and most partisan of professional politicians are divided in opinion as to the actual effect and probable duration of the Ku Klux Klan movement in Oregon.

For the moment it is more of a social phenomena than a political puzzle. It bears the brand of the Democratic party though the membership embraces those of the opposite party. The professional politicians are afraid of it just as they are of any phase of popular emotions that may cost them votes. No one attacks it openly, neither newspapers, nor political leaders, though it is privately condemned by the dominant influences that reflect the solid convictions of both.

How long the movement will last is a matter of opinion; also what turn it will take in the next test which will determine its value and effect on the fortunes of one or both parties, or as an instrument in the creation of a new enterprise seeking the power to control or direct government.

Up to date the activities and achievements of the movement which passed over or under a dozen states to find anchorage among the usually clear thinking and rugged adventurers of the northwest have been political. It has exercised little, if any influence in business. Certainly it has not stayed the steady sweep of agricultural and industrial progress west from the Atlantic to the Pacific, nor discouraged the complete optimism of the bulk of the 800,000 people who still follow and thrive along the Oregon trail.

Business Booming.

With the exception of a weak spot here and there in agriculture due to depression in the wheat market that exists in all grain producing states business is better in the state than at any time since the peak of war time inflation. And even the Oregon wheat farmer is far better off than some of his brothers in other grain growing states. He has suffered less from overproduction than they. He gets a shade better prices due to favoring conditions.

Radicalism plotting close to the surface finds the market for its lawless and discontented wares dull and unresponsive. The Non-Partisan League experiment which was to induce a new era of agricultural and industrial socialism has collapsed. The insidious and revolutionary I. W. W. breaks out sporadically but is easily suppressed.

Still radicalism thrives under many cloaks with the help of calamity wailing politicians. The Oregonian permits himself to be convinced by demagogic politicans who [illegible] his vote on any terms that all's [illegible] right with the world even if he cannot actually see what's wrong. Unprofitable experiments with the Greenback, Populist, Grange, Federated Farm Bureau, Non-Partisan League, I. W. W. and neighborhood ventures of socialistic and communistic flavor have not entirely disillusioned him. He seems to be always ready to take another chance, even if it comes to apostacy in the matter of habitual partisan preference.

Ku Klux Klan Issue.

The victory for Mr. Wilson's party in the state election last autumn was not due to any particular admiration for the Democratic party. The causes that contributed to it were: (1) The K. K. K. (2) Dissatisfaction with the confused and indefinite programme of Congress. (3) The tariff and (4) Of course, taxes, but state rather than federal.

There is no discounting the importance of K. K. K. in electing a Democratic governor and sending a member of that party to the House of Representatives for the first time in 50 years. All the vocal agencies reflecting popular unrest seized on the K. K. K. as the most suitable vehicle with which to exploit grievances of many kinds.

Pierce, the east Oregon farmer and politician elected to the governorship subscribed to some of the features of the insidious Atlanta creation and converted them to partisan uses. The fact is that expediency rather than either conviction or sympathy was responsible for the Democratic candidate's acceptance of the Klan ritual.

Political leaders in both parties have not yet completely solved the mystery attending the amazing growth of Klan sentiment in Oregon. Its projection into popular thought in Oregon was due to causes entirely remote from politics. At the outset it was not connected with the propagation of a doctrine of Masonic origin which was not political. Leading members of the Masonic fraternity have since expressed surprise over the astounding confiscation of a non-Partisan and non-sectarian programme enunciated by the supreme council of the ancient and accepted Scottish Rite for the southern district of the United States in June, 1920. The policy then proclaimed is contained in the following resolution:

Resolved, that we recognize and proclaim our belief in the free and compulsory education of the children of our nation in public primary schools supported by public taxation, upon which all children shall attend and be instructed in the English language only without regard to race or creed as the only sure foundation for the perpetuation and preservation of our free institutions, guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, and we pledge the efforts of the membership of the order to promote by all lawful means the organization, extension and development to the highest degree of such schools, and to oppose the efforts of any and all who seek to limit, curtail, hinder or destroy the public school system of our land.

The projection of this issue which was frankly though subtly designed to eliminate the Catholic parochial schools from the life of the country made an instant appeal to popular sentiment in Oregon, due to ancient prejudices mainly inspired by bigotry. The Democratic party in Oregon appraised it a valuable asset. The farmer seeking a new and untried agency to expolit his grievances permitted himself to be aroused to a high pitch of resentment against citizens of the Catholic faith, later on against those of Jewish origin.

Some of the charges made against both were not only grossly untrue, but almost grotesque and ridiculous. But the virus penetrated and warped the sober judgment of the people. Results, an easy victory for the Democratic candidates, the passage of a bill by the state Legislature providing that after 1926 every child between 8 and 16 years must attend the public schools of the state, and not be tutored in educational institutions conducted under private auspices.

The radical sentiment of the state generated by klan activities followed this by compelling the Legislature to pass a bill modeled after the California and Washington statutes prohibiting aliens ineligible for citizenshp (whch, of course, means Japanese and Chnese) from owning land in the state. There are less than 6,000 Japanese in Oregon and apparently few specific grounds for complaint against them.

The general condition of the state is sound or was until the advent of the radical element which combined with the Democrats. The state is committed to a good road programme calling for around $50,000,000 to be covered by a two-cent tax on gasoline and rather high rate of license on motor cars. A state tax of five mills cares for the expense of government to date.

Governor Price who has put all his political eggs in the agricultural basket, as it were, is planning an aggressive fight for higher taxation which he thinks will help the farmer. His course has aroused ire of most of the leaders of his own party, or at least the Democratic party.

Oswald West, the last Democratic governor who while of the liberal conservative type, is not convinced a radical rule policy will win for his party recently expressed this opinion in a letter to Governor Pierce:

"One of these days, however, you are going to walk out of the executive office, going to walk out of it just as I did. When that times comes you are going to walk out of it alone just as I did, unless, perchance you own a dog."

WHITE FOLK IN BACK TO AFRICA MOVE

Will Make America So Hard for the Race That it Will Leap at the Chance to Go to Jungle

5-3-23 The Chicago Defender

Portland, Ore., May 4.—Not only to make the Race go, but to make it go and like it, is the aim of the Knights of the White Light, an adjunct of the Ku Klux Klan, according to propaganda circulars which are being distributed among the white klansmen of the Northwest.

Importance attaches to the circulars because of the strength of the klan in these parts. The mayor of this city has announced though the local papers that he is a klansman.

The fly-leaves being mailed to white citizens of this section acquaint them with the Knights of the White Light aim to see that all Race men and women are deported to Africa. They have vowed to force every one from America.

Have Cunning Plans.

They believe they can put the scheme over if the plans they have laid are adhered to. These speculations included a program of convincing the Race that Africa would be a very nice place to which to emigrate. Then, too, America is to be made hard for the Race. The members of the Knights of the White Light are warned that they must not hire any member of the Race, must not give him food, clothing, nor shelter, even for money, must terrorize him, and generally treat him in so barbarous a manner that he will make up his own mind that its about time for him to be pulling out. When he has made up his mind, the Knights say they have got ships waiting to be at his service, which will transport him to the jungle free if he hasn't got his fare.

The circular reads:

"Speakers or agents are to tell them of the beautiful home across the Atlantic from whence they came. Nor is the press to be idle, all manner of magazines, papers, pamphlets, calculated to excite a desire in them for a home acoss the pond, will be scattered among them."

Make Our Own Laws!!!

And again: "We must send agents among the Negroes, to encourage the emigration, by telling them of the delightful climate, and the rich soil, where cotton and all kinds of fruit grow wild. Where there are no white men to rape their women and lynch their men, where they can have officers and make their own laws, and where freedom will be as unlimited as the sunshine which is above their heads. The agents can persuade them to make preparations to go. Some Negroes will be found quite willing, for they can be made to feel dissatisfied with conditions as they are.

Transportation must be furnished them or, if possible, have them to furnish their own ships. The pride of the Negro will cause him to pay his own fare. By following this simple plan we can get rid of the Negro—this abominable race. This country has been the dumping ground of the world long enough. It is our move. Let us move forward to the king line, then when they jump them over, we will jump back again.

"In the fewest words possible the purpose of our organization is to transport all 'Negroes' in the United States to Africa. As there is no law to compel the coon to leave unless he wants to go, the first step is to make him want to emigrate as suggested above. Every person who joins this order swears among other things to assist the coons to the conclusion that it is to their interest to place the Atlantic ocean between themselves and the members of the

K. K. K.

That amiable unfraternity, the Ku Klux Klan, enjoyed itself to the top of its bent in Oregon last Fall. The Democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. PIERCE, had the sacred approval of the Klan. Parochial schools must be abolished! It was a pleasant campaign, if a little curious. Still, Oregon must be presumed to be intelligent. Will it consent to the dictatorship of this crew of fanatics? Mr. GEORGE EARLE CHAMBERLAIN, for six years Governor, for twelve years Senator, was in that nursery of nostrums the other day. Would he run as Democratic candidate for Senator to succeed Mr. MCNARY next year? He has resigned from the United States Shipping Board and has said that he means to practice law in Washington. He is a good lawyer, and his practice probably would be more remunerative in one year than his official service for more than forty years.

According to a Washington dispatch to The Boston Herald, he is not pleased with the "American" and "fraternal" situation of things in the Heart of Reform. Some disagreeable people, even in Oregon, don't dote upon racial and religious prejudice. MCNARY is against it. If he is renominated in the Republican primaries, Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, a great friend of his, will be glad. Should he be beaten by a Ku Klux thinker, Mr. CHAMBERLAIN will probably go into the Democratic primaries. The issue ought to be made.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN was chosen Governor when Oregon was impregnably Republican. He was elected to the Senate by a Republican Legislature, a State referendum having proved that the mass of the voters, without reference to politics, approved and supported him. Whether he or Mr. MCNARY makes the fight, it is a fight to be made. Merely as a matter of romantic etymology, we may mention the fact that one of the probable candidates in the Republican Senatorial primaries against Mr. MCNARY will be the Speaker of the State House of Representatives, Mr. K. K. KUBLI. His friends say that the ominous initials are purely accidental and don't represent the insides of his mind.

KLAN AND ANTI-KLAN FIGHT ON IN OREGON

Commercial Appeal

U. S. Senatorship Will Be the Plum for Victor.

Memphis, Tenn.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

(By Chicago Tribune-The Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 15.—Not only the fate of Governor Walter M. Pierce in a recall election, but the next United States senatorship from Oregon may be determined by the militant vote. The issue in the latter battle may be klan and anti-klan, with former Congressman C. N. McArthur leading the fight against the candidate finally selected by Fred W. Gifford, the klan leader. All the potential candidates with the exception of McArthur, a Protestant defeated for re-election to Congress by the klan, are angling for invisible empire support or the support of an even more powerful group, the Federation of Patriotic Societies, the backbone of which is the Orange Lodge.

It was the support of the klan and the F. O. P.'s that made Pierce governor and it is the enmity of part of this force, at least, which may succeed in re-calling him. The Orange Lodges are now said to be fighting the klan, which has bored into their membership and sought to dominate. Leading politicians admit that the endorsement of one or both of these orders is of greater importance than the endorsement of either of the old line parties, and that if they work together they are the controlling factor.

10-17-23

Senator Charles L. McNary's term expires next March and he is a candidate to succeed himself, trying to keep the klan off his back. Other potential candidates are Mayor George Baker of Portland and K. K. Kubli, speaker of the House of Representatives. The klan controls the school board in Portland and has a strong influence in the police and fire departments. Both klan and F. O. P.'s have a hand in the city political patronage and fight over contracts and appointments.

Voting Strength of Klan.

The voting strength of the klan in Portland is about 16,000, registration is 95,989. The F. O. P.'s is even stronger, and has issued a yellow ticket to voters in all elections since 1916. It claims from 70 to 95 per cent success. The klan came in 1921. At first it supported the F. O. P.'s ticket, but in the fall of 1922, got out a separate ticket under the name of the Good Government League.

Claims are made that the klan is disintegrating that Gifford, the foremost leader, a former electrical worker and an excellent organizer, has stirred the enmity of many lodges. Reports from inside the organization, however, are that the membership has strengthened since the Walton war in Oklahoma.

There have been only two or three whippings reported in this state, but several towns have been torn apart by the klan. In Medford, where the whipping occurred, both sides were carrying guns a few months ago.

Federal prosecution failed of convictions.

Since 1904 the Oregon voters have been called to vote on 174 initiated measures under their peculiar system of government. They have only exercised the recall twice, in the case of public service commissioners who had raised the telephone rates. A table compiled by the Oregon "Voter," a magazine edited by C. C. Chapman, former Chicago newspaperman, shows that when the system was first put into effect in 1904, from 40 to 60 per cent of the registered vote came to the polls. Interest has steadily dwindled until in the last few years only 15 to 20 per cent have been exercising the privilege of direct legislation. It is this waning of interest that has permitted the machine minorities to run things. The latest attempt, which will be voted on Nov. 6, is an income tax on the lines of the federal tax running from one per cent for $1,000 to six per cent over $12,000.

Gov. Pierce is one of the backers of this plan, which is expected to raise $1,000,000 a yar and reduce the general tax levy correspondingly.

Still in the experimental mood the People's Power League is planning to get a vote on a question of abolishing the present form of Legislature and substituting an occupational Legislature. Members of the new house would be without political designation, would be elected by occupational groups for four years and would elect the governor with power to recall him. All state officers would be subject to questioning before the house on law enforcement. They failed to get enough votes to go on the ballot once, but another effort will be made.

Under the plan, women would have large representation for housekeeping is fixed as a business.

MYSTERY VEILS OREGON'S WAR ON GOVERNOR

Chicago Daily Tribune

All Deny Recall Plot; Klan Is an Issue.

10-15-23

This is the first of two articles dealing with the unique political situation in Oregon, where a mysterious attempt is being made to recall Gov. Walter M. Pierce, Democrat, after nine months in office.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Government by threat of recall—government by a secret minority working in darkness; this is the condition in which the state of Oregon finds itself after twenty years of experimental legislation and groping toward democracy.

Turn in your graves, O pioneers!

Fundamentally, Oregon is all right, a fine, vital, Anglo-Saxon community. Just now it presents a few political phenomena and eccentricities which command the attention of the rest of the nation. The old line parties seem to be nothing but shells, except in national affairs.

System Seems to Falter.

The famous "Oregon system" of direct rule by the people, embodied in the initiative, referendum, and recall, seems to be working out the wrong way, headed for the discard, developing into the playing of the interests, disappointed office seekers of freakishly inclined bigoted groups who manipulate their voting forces with machine like efficiency.

Recall, in disfavor at present due to the methods employed by the "unknowns" who are seeking to direct the policy, or force the removal of Gov. Pierce, it is not unlikely that Oregon may have the distinction of being the only state, outside of North Dakota, to recall its governor. And people are asking—why?

Is the Ku Klux Klan behind it? Is big business behind it? What has Pierce done that he should be subjected to such drastic punishment after only a few months in office? Who put up the $15,000 which the "dummy" recall committee has at its disposal for this campaign?

May Be Recalled Yet Win.

The governor himself is trying to find out these things and promises the fight of his life against recall if the petition said to carry 3,000 names out of a necessary 43,500, is filed. He probably would be a candidate on the recall election to succeed himself, and it is such a weird law that he might be recalled and replaced in office at the same time.

If the recall is successful the Ku Klux Klan, which is one of the politically important factors in the situation, probably would claim the credit, although the klan officially denies that it is back of the movement. Your correspondent is able to state that at least a faction of the klan in involved in the recall movement. The evidence will be stated later.

Gov. Pierce came to Oregon about thirty-five years ago, a school teacher out of Illinois. He taught school in Umatilla county, served in county offices and practiced law in Pendleton. He acquired large holdings of farm and stock lands and at one time was rated at $250,000. He owned public utility plants and a health resort.

Made, Lost, Regained Fortune.

He lost one fortune and made another. He served in the state senate for two terms, was candidate for United States senator, president of the State Taxpayers' league, active in the eastern Oregon draft board, was an unsuccessful candidate for the nomination for governor in 1918, and successful in 1922.

At the time Mr. Pierce decided to get into the last governorship race there was a bitter Republican primary Ben W. Olcott, then governor, was a candidate to succeed himself against Charles Hall. Olcott, as governor, made spectacular war against the Ku Klux Klan which had caused trouble in Medford and other towns.

A fiery proclamation, somewhat after the style of Walton of Oklahoma, directed klan forces against him. Hall was the klan candidate. Olcott won the nomination. The klan vote was ready to swing to the Democratic column. Mr. Pierce, who at that time was a member of a revenue investigating committee, swung aboard the chariot and was elected by a majority of 35,000.

Was After That Klan Vote.

To be sure of garnering the klan vote he wrote a letter during the campaign indorsing a bill which had been placed on the ballot by initiative petition, in which all children in the state, between the ages of 8 and 16, would be forced to attend the public schools after Sept. 1, 1926. This hit all parochial and private schools. The bill became a law. Its enforcement will be subjected to test in the courts.

Gov. Pierce had hardly taken office when his troubles began with the klan. It is said that he became a member of the klan at this time, but this has never been confirmed. It is also said that he told opponents of the school bill that he had to write the letter favoring it to get elected, but that he really did not stand for it.

Fluent with His Promises.

The governor is a great campaigner and a good promiser. With dramatic effect he would stand before his rural audiences and tear a sheet of paper in two, declaring that that was what he would do with their taxes.

The poor farmers rallied to him and they are still with him today on this issue, although there has been no reduction of taxes and a state income tax is up for referendum on Nov. 6, with the governor's approval back of it.

Although willing to take klan or any other votes, the governor proved a stubborn customer when it came to distributing patronage. He swung to the old line Democrats. An incident is told of a klan messenger appearing in the corridors of the state house and demanding appointments on the industrial accident commission.

Defies Those He Catered to.

One who was present at this conversation reports the governor as saying:

"I am not going to be governed by any klan. Tell Gifford [the klan cyclops] that I want to serve my term but I am not going to be governed by anybody even if I have to suffer the recall."

The governor's friends insist that he made no promises of patronage to the klan but did say that he would not make appointments which would be particularly objectionable to the klan. If this is true the governor violated the spirit of the state constitution,

Masked Mob Beat Negro Mercilessly, Cut Off Ear,

Memphis

ANOTHER TULSA EPISODE

BY [illegible]

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 23.—A revolting story of how members of a masked mob, at Tulsa after mercilessly beating a victim, cut off one of his ears and tried to force him to eat it, was made public tonight by Gov. J. C Walton in the form of testimony given the Tulsa military court by J. H. Smitherman, a negro.

"This is only one of the hundreds of such crimes committed which the civil authorities of this state refused to prosecute," declared the executive. "I ask the people of the civilized world, in the presence of this testimony, if I was not justified in proclaiming martial law in the city of Tulsa."

Accused of Helpin, Democrats.

Smitherman, a negro, related how on the night of March 10, 1922, he was summoned to his door by 12 men, eight of whom were masked, forced into an automobile at the point of revolvers, taken into the country stripped of his clothing, handcuffed and tied to a tree, whereupon his captors accused him of registering negroes as Democrats and advising them to vote against the city administration.

Next, one of the men spit in his face, Smitherman testified, after accusing him of "ungentlemanly conduct" toward a white woman. He was then beaten severely by two of his abductors, he declared, adding: "One would whip until he exhausted himself and then the other would whip me."

"Finally," Smitherman's testimony said, "the man who spit in my face stuck a gun to my head and said: 'I am going to kill you,' but one of the unmasked ones dissented, so they talked it over privately for a few minutes. Then the same man who wanted to kill me came [illegible] ed a knife out and cut off my [illegible] then he tried to make me eat [illegible] I refused, he took the butt end of the whip and hit me in the face until he was tired, all the time trying to make me eat my ear. Finally they turned me loose and told me to leave Tulsa and to leave Oklahoma, warning me if I did not, one of the 12 would kill me."

Smitherman testified that he told his captors he had advised all the negroes he could to register as Democrats and vote that ticket because he himself was a Democrat.

"There was nothing else to do," he said he told the men.

He said he denied the accusation concerning his conduct toward a white woman.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 22.—Gov. John Calloway (Jack) Walton, is in the way [illegible] becoming a national figure as [illegible] his spectacular fight on [illegible] homa.

Ten y[illegible] was a Kansas City e[illegible] supply salesman. He did business with the state departments here, and in 1913 moved here and opened an office as consulting engineer. He became a city commissioner, and in 1919 was elected mayor. He was known as a union labor man, and has always been associated with the radical wing of the Democratic party.

9-23-23

During his reign as mayor he saw the rise of the klan to political power.

The town was wide open for a while, but Walton fired his chief of police and personally led raiding squads into saloons and dives until he had cleaned the town.

Thus he balanced his record.

He used to march with his police into the Christian Church to attend services. He always had an eye for the spectacular and in politics was quick to seize upon that which appealed to the imagination of the crowd.

Nominee of the League.

In 1922 while he was still mayor he was made the nominee of the reconstruction league of the state for governor. This organization, led by the Oklahoma Leader, a radical publication, had sensed in Walton a winning political figure after his success against the conservative Democrats. They were formed on the line of the Non-Partisan League of North Dakota, capitalizing the discontent of the farmer, and the union labor sentiment. Their tactics were to bore into the old party. The Shawnee convention of this organization in 1921 indorsed Walton on a radical platform.

He went into the campaign and although he lost in the capital and had most of the big state papers against him, he won in the state by the biggest majority that any governor ever received.

He jumped into the limelight with his famous inauguration barbecue where all the farmers were invited to come in their overalls. He gave the state three days of the wildest kind of picnic. He was the idol of the plain people, their governor, and friend. He was going to turn the Agricultural and Mechanical College back to them, take out the classics from college courses and get back to dirt and grease. He was going to clean out the bank thieves from the state, reform the budget and get down to economics to relieve the farmer from tax burden.

Today, despite failure to do some of these things, he can still draw great crowds on a new issue. Though he has broken away from the reconstruction league and led them to go into the camp of the enemy, he is rebuilding a powerful state machine.

Not a True Radical.

The dreams of the little group of idealists whose work contributed so largely to Walton's election, were soon found hopeless. Today they call Walton a traitor. They found that Walton was not a true radical. The true, unselfish radicals will never go back to his banner, although they hate the Ku Klux Klan as badly or worse than he does. He has put them and many other groups of Oklahoma citizens in an ineffective and perplexing situation. If they oppose him they are accused of being "klan." He has muddied the waters and forced the issue so cleverly that there is only one thing for the majority to do—go with him.

The immediate cause of the proclamation of martial law at Tulsa, was the whipping of Nate Hantaman, a bootlegger. He was whipped with the aid and consent of the police of that city, court records are said to show. He was not whipped because he was selling whisky, but because he had gossipped that he had paid protection money to the police. Thus Oklahoma's "insurrection" may be laid indirectly at the door of the mockery of prohibition enforcement.

There was no talk of impeachment or an extraordinary session of the Oklahoma Legislature until the martial law proclamation and his "fight to the death" campaign against the Ku Klux Klan. The charges which will be made against him rest entirely upon his alleged usurpation of dictatorial power and his "reign of military absolutism." He admits all these charges, so there is really nothing for the Legislature to "investigate."

Quotes Washington In Warfare on Klan

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 24.—Gov. Walton is delving into history to support his position in opposing to such great lengths the Ku Klux Klan. He gave out tonight an excerpt from the farewell address of George Washington, which he considers applies directly to this situation. He has not applied to the federal government for aid, he said, as the state was amply able to take care of the situation. He said he would be glad if the federal government would take charge of the war.

Memphis

The Washington quotation follows: "All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities are destructive of this fundamental principle and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force, to put it in place of the delegated will of the nation, the will of a party, often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community; and according to the alternate triumphs of different parties and make public administration the mirror of the concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans digested by common counsels and modified by mutual interests.

"However, combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

WALTON EXTENDS MARTIAL LAW TO ANOTHER COUNTY

Montgomery Advertiser

Solons Pin Hope for Protection Against Military on Legal Procedure Which is Now in Course of Preparation

MEETING IS CALLED TO ORDER AND DISPERSED

Expect Injunction to be Sought Against Governor and Guardsmen of the State

9-27-23

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 26.—Rigid martial law will be invoked in another county in Oklahoma tomorrow, Governor J. C. Walton announced tonight.

The name of the county was not made public but the executive said a delegation headed by the mayor of one of its cities had called upon him with a request for "military protection."

Governor Walton declined to elaborate further on the announcement. Three counties—Oklahoma, Tulsa and Creek—now are under a decree of absolute military rule, although troops never have occupied Creek county.

Charging that the Ku Klux Klan dominates one-third of the counties in Oklahoma and has a big influence in many others, Governor Walton declared:

"Martial law over the state will continue until this legislative bunch gets off my back and we can get into those counties to straighten out the Klan officers and Klan courts so that every citizen, regardless of race, creed or color may enjoy the rights to which they are entitled under the constitution."

"The legislature," the governor reiterated, "shall not meet."

Pressed for an expression of his attitude in view of the attempt of the solons to assemble at the state capitol today, Governor Walton said:

"The legislature is dead. It only can be revived in regular biennial session or by a special call from the governor. Any attempt to convene itself is a direct violation of the constitution. It is done."

Hide Behind Skirts.

Informed by newspapermen that several score women followed the legislators to the state house, and cheered them as they entered, the executive said:

"I expected nothing better of the legislators. Any organization that will hide behind a mask also will hide behind a skirt."

He has declared that all the ho[illegible] members who signed the call for extraordinary session are membe[illegible] the Ku Klux Klan and that th[illegible] attempting, by impeachment p[illegible] ings to halt his war on the o[illegible] tion.

A statement by Representative W. . McBee, a leader in the assembly move, declared that the proceedings at the state house constituted a meeting of the house, notwithstanding its interruption by troops acting under orders of Gov. Walton.

With the statement, Representative McBee made public what he declared to be the official journal of the house of representatives. It detailed the brief action which terminated in the clearance of the capitol corridors by the military.

Prevented from meeting or even caucusing the house members tonight pinned their hopes for protection against the military authorities upon the efforts of a legal committee which is preparing court proceedings to mark the next stage in the conflict.

Will Await Ruling

That there would be no immediate attempt to assemble again in defiance of martial law regulations was the promise made late today by house leaders to Adjutant General Baird H. Markham. Observers predicted that the solons would await a court ruling before essaying another assembly.

"Representative Boyer: 'Am I dispersed as a member of the legislature.'

"Colonel Key: 'I refuse to answer any individual questions, the orders have been very explicit' (Turning)' 'Major McCarty, please see that the room is cleared'."

But this unembellished record drew no picture of the tense scenes attending the clash between legislators and the grim faced soldiers.

Crowded in the rotunda on the fourth floor of the capitol the house members, a small army of newspaper correspondents and possibly a hundred spectators from administrative offices in the building milled around waiting for the test.

With rifles on their shoulders, two privates stood post before the massive doors of both the house and senate chambers and held the crowd back at a safe distance. Officers wearing service revolvers stationed themselves at vantage points.

A buzz of conversation arose from the crowd and there was little hint of the stern moment approaching. It was plain, however, that the air of gayety and banter on the part of some of the house members was simulated. Then the hands of the clock swung to noon.

Suddenly above the noise arose a voice—that of Charles S. Bryce of McAlester, speaker pro tempore. It came from the rear of the crowd that pressed up to the armed barrier to the hall of the house.

"As it is noon the house is in session—" Bryce began.

"You are commanded to disperse." This sharp command interrupted Bryce and the crowd turned and saw Col. W. S. McKey, military commander of Oklahoma county, step to the speaker's side.

There was a shuffling of feet as the assembly moved forward to face the officer who stood across the open court in the center of the rotunda.

Then his officers sprang into action to hold the crowd

A crowd of approximately 3,000 persons denied entrance to the building, sent up a loud cheer from a field across a street as the first of the legislators appeared on the capitol steps following the failure to convene.

Women waved flags, and hundreds of automobile horns raised a raucous greeting.

Guards patrolling the approaches to the building made no efforts to stay the demonstration until the throng pressed forward to meet the legislators. Then they ordered it to disband

Movie Lenses Grind.

Movie men ground frantically at their cameras as the strange scene passed before their lenses. They, too, had been barred from the building.

With the departure of the legislators, the crowd melted rapidly and followed in their wake.

The house members went immediately to a downtown hotel where an unofficial headquarters is maintained in the suite of Representative McBee.

Within a short time a member of Colonel Key's staff arrived and instructed Representative McBee that no caucauses would be permitted. McBee assured the guard officer that there will be no attempt to hold either a caucus or assembly.

A score of governor Walton's secret service operatives were scattered through the hotel and three of them took up posts before the door to McBee's rooms. A guard captain also was stationed in the corridor. For a brief period both the secret service men and the captain stopped visitors to McBee's suite, allowing only one person to enter as another departed.

Circulates Cartoons.

In the middle of the afternoon a flurry was created when one of the governor's policemen arrested Campbell Russell, former chairman of the State Corporation Commission, and one of Walton's most bitter political enemies. It was charged that Russell had been circulating copies of a cartoon attacking Walton. He was booked at the police station on charges of disorderly conduct, and inciting to riot and was released immediately on bond of $20. Russell returned to the hotel.

When legislators appealed to Adjutant General Markham to have the state policemen removed from the hotel, declaring that they were being shadowed and intimidated by "Governor Walton's gunmen," they received prompt action.

Colonel Key appeared in the lobby of the hotel and issued an emphatic ultimatum to John Glenn, in charge of the operatives.

"Get them out—and get them out within ten minutes," he ordered.

Glenn withdrew his force immediately.

The governor's secret service force is made up of police who served under him as mayor of Oklahoma City and former peace officers of the state noted for gunmanship. They are paid out of a fund voted by the last legislature for the "extraordinary protection of the State." Buck Garrett, former sheriff at Ardmore and one of the most picturesque figures in the state, is a leader of the force. Governor Walton's home has been constantly guarded by these secret service men since the beginning of the governor's fight on the Ku Klux Klan.

Ten members of the senate met late in the day in a hotel and after a long conference issued a statement that the upper house would make no attempt to assemble itself until the legality of the representatives' action today had been passed upon by the courts.

"While only ten of the 44 members of the senate were present at the meeting", Senator Joseph C. Looney, of Wewoka said, "we have canvassed the sentiment of the entire body and it is our decision that the proper course is to follow the law."

"The members of the senate are extremely desirious at this time that no provocative action be taken to endanger lives and with that end in view, we will refrain from any attempt to assemble, notwithstanding our rights in the matter."

Senator Wash Hudson, of Tulsa, was another known to have met with the upper house members, but other participants in the conference were not named.

OKLAHOMA KINGLESS, NOT KLANLESS

"WE WANT NEITHER KLAN NOR KING," shouted a headline across the front page of an Oklahoma City newspaper, when Governor Jack Walton was so spectacularly fighting the Ku Klux Klan with armed soldiers and edicts of martial law. Now the "King" has gone, for Governor Walton has been impeached and removed from office by the State legislature. So, comments the New York Evening World, "Oklahoma is rid of the 'King.' Will it rid itself of the Klan?" This is the question put to the lawmakers and people of Oklahoma by papers in New York, Albany, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Duluth, New Orleans, and other cities. In Oklahoma the Tulsa Tribune calls upon the legislature to "complete the job." The legislature, it says, "has a duty to fulfil in passing effective laws against the mask and secret political activities of the Klan or other organizations."

Governor Walton called the Oklahoma legislature in extra session to investigate the Klan. The legislature, as had been announced, and with popular backing shown at a special election, proceeded at once to impeach the Governor. According to the St. Paul Dispatch, public approval of the Oklahoma legislature's "determination to deal with the case of Walton first and on its merits" went with "the understanding that the invisible Government of the Klan would follow in its turn."

While the Pittsburgh Post is confident that Oklahomans, having been freed of Walton, "will not slacken in their battle against the extremists of the Klan," other papers are not so sure about it. Their doubts, in some cases, are based on the defeat of two publicity bills by the Oklahoma Senate. The St. Paul Dispatch is convinced that "it is the evident purpose of the Oklahoma Senate to lash the Klan with a feather and then formally license it to continue its lawlessness." Other doubts are raised by what actually went on during Governor Walton's trial before the Oklahoma Senate. It will be remembered that twenty-two impeachment charges were presented against Governor Walton. He was found guilty on eleven—one, involving abuse of the pardoning power, by a unanimous vote. He was acquitted of five, and six were dismissed by the prosecution. Now, according to an account of the trial in the Tulsa Tribune, the Senate, by granting permission to the prosecution to drop these six charges which had to do with the Governor's declarations of martial law, apparently "demolished one of Governor Walton's chief bulwarks of defense. The executive, it is understood, had planned to call hundreds of alleged victims in the State through whose testimony he expected to justify his military régime and thus introduce the Ku Klux Klan issue." The next day Governor Walton withdrew from the trial, declaring his belief that a fair trial was impossible. Two days later, November 19, he was convicted and ousted. Now the Detroit Free Press and Milwaukee Journal agree in finding something suspicious in the fact that, in the words of the Wisconsin paper, "throughout the trial even the shadow of the thing that brought the Oklahoma situation to a head—the Ku Klux Klan—was banished from the room." Papers like the New Orleans Times-Picayune, Salt Lake Telegram, Buffalo Express, and the weekly Nation of New York, are convinced that Governor Walton did not have a fair trial. The verdict was a foregone conclusion, asserts the Buffalo News, adding:

"Governor Walton is out and the Ku Klux Klan is in complete control of the governmental machinery of the State. The outcome of this clash of authority in Oklahoma is merely an incident in the general movement of the masked missionaries to gain complete control of the political machinery of the nation."

On the other hand, there are a host of daily newspapers which can find no evidence that the impeachment of Governor Walton is in any sense a Klan victory. Editors recall that the Governor was convicted unanimously of exceeding his pardoning powers, and that the other charges on which he was convicted with but few dissenting votes involved, as the Troy Record sums them up, "corruption in office, neglect of duty, moral turpitude and general incompetency." Governor Walton, declares the Adrian Telegram, "was a joke, a disgrace and a peril to the State, for reasons unconnected with the Klan." It seems to the Detroit News that "the unanimity of the vote in the Walton case will dispose of any vestige of suspicion that Ku Kluxism entered into his trial," and the Oklahoma legislature is congratulated upon a good day's work by such papers as the New Orleans Item, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Dayton News, and Newark News.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923 II

Arkansas.

Klansmen themselves, have come to members of the Joint Committee of the Arkansas Legislature investigating the outbreaks against the railroad strikers.

So authentic did this information appear that Jake Wilson, President of the Senate and a member of the committee, went to the leader of the Klan in this city and asked for a showdown. He demanded to know whether the official leaders of the Klan would oppose the committee's investigation and whether Klansmen on the committee would seek a "whitewash" for the Klan.

"If you're going to fight us I'll quit right now and denounce your organization, showing what it is doing," he is quoted as telling the Klan leader. To this the Klansman responded that if the Klan of Harrison and the other towns along the rickety railroad line was in any way responsible for the attacks on strikers there, he, as head of the organization, would like to see them punished, as they had acted without authority.

This information was obtained from an unquestionable authority. When Senator Wilson was asked to confirm or deny the facts he refused to discuss the matter.

It is further learned that other information appearing to implicate the Klan as an organization in the Harrison trouble has reached additional members of the Legislative Committee. These committee members told a correspondent of The World yesterday that when they go to Harrison to complete their investigation they intend to get to the bottom of the trouble and expose those responsible, whether or not they represented the Klan or any other organization.

Committee Prepared.

One of the principal reasons for the persistent belief on the part of investigating officials that the Klan may have been the parent body for the Committee of Twelve was the immediate commencement of the Committee of Twelve to function as if they had been fully prepared before and upon the arrival of the trainloads of armed men in Harrison.

Although supposed to have been a spontaneous collection of a small group of citizens from each of four counties along the railroad, the committee sprang into being the moment the mobs of angry farmers arrived in Harrison. At no time did the mobs seem to lack a leader and a leader who in advance knew the duties he was to fulfil.

In this connection it is noticeable that the unanimity of aproval by the citizens of Arkansas of the activities of the Committee of Twelve is striking. Arkansas is known to be strongly organized by the Klan. Of its population of 1,750,000, four out of five of whom are farmers, it is estimated the State includes from 50,000 to 100,000 Klansmen.

The Klan has entered actively into politics here. Gov. McRae received the open support of the Klan when he ran for office. And it is only fair to state that the Citizens Committee of Harrison has few better friends than Gov. McRae.

In the face of the resolution passed by the Legislature empowering him to send troops into the Ozark region to prevent further trouble, Gov. McRae has refused to take this action, vetoing the measure when it came before him. His reason for vetoing it was that the Sheriff of Boone County—of which Harrison is the seat—Bob Shaddox, has notified him that the situation is well in hand of the local authorities. However, seventy-five to 100 armed men, unauthorized by any of the civil authorities of Harrison, are guarding the roads leading into that town and have orders from their leader, George McInney, employed by the railroad, to shoot if any strikers seek to invade the town. Only the timidity of the strikers can prevent further trouble, which would amount to civil war, while the State militia sits idly by and watches.

GRAND DRAGON TAMED BY KAMELIA WOMEN

Evans Faction Suddenly Drops Fight on New Branch.

(By the Associated Press.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 19.—The organization of the local Kourt of the Kamelia, a secret order of women said to be organized on the lines of the Ku Klux Klan, and founded by W. J. Simmons of Atlanta, Ga., founder of the modern klan, will be completed next Thursday night at an open meeting in a local park, according to Mrs. Grace W. Hall of Atlanta, organizer. Mrs. Hall said that Simmons, who is El Magus of the Kamelia, and Dr. Caleb Ridley and H. T. Kight, all of Atlanta, will be present. Dr. Ridley is national chaplain.

Mrs. Hall said that the local membership now is 350 and that it will be 500 by Thursday.

She also said that the opposition to the Kamelia recently shown by J. A. Comer, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Arkansas, has been overcome and that officers of the Ladies of the Invisible Empire have been making overtures toward merging the membership of the two women's organizations.

EVANS APPROVED BY KLONCILIUM

New Women's Organization Formed by Order Excludes Organization Founded by Simmons.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, June 2.—Complete approval of the administrations of Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans was given here today by the imperial kloncilium of the Ku Klux Klan.

The kloncilium, it also was announced, decided to call a meeting at Atlanta, June 19, to investigate all charges which have been made "in the press" against imperial officers of the klan. 6-3-23

Organization of "the women of the Ku Klux Klan" to include Protestant women's organizations over the country, with the exception of the Kamelia, was decided on, it was announced. This new order, it was said, will be administered altogether by women and its financing will not be conducted by the Ku Klux Klan, that body merely lending its approval and support.

Little Rock Headquarters.

Headquarters of the new women's organization, it was stated, will be at Little Rock, and it will be incorporated under the laws of Arkansas. A meeting to organize the women will be held within the next few days.

Among the women's organizations which will affiliate with the women of the K. K. K., it was announced, are the League of Protestant Women, the American Women, the Puritan Daughters of America, the Ladies of the Golden Mask and the Ladies of the Invisible Empire.

The Kamelia, which was stricken from the list of societies to be taken into the organization, is an organization recently founded by William J. Simmons, emperor of the klan, and has been the subject of considerable controversy within the order.

Charges Against Officers.

The charges against imperial officers which are to be investigated, it was explained, are those made in newspapers by certain klansmen, and it was added that the kloncilium would go to the "very bottom" of them. No mention was made of the receivership proceedings instituted against the order recently in Atlanta.

A national program to be conducted under the direction of the imperial wizard was outlined, it was announced, for the enforcement of all laws on the statute books and all constitutional amendments.

The kloncilium has been in executive session here for two days, and the grand dragons, or heads of state organizations of the klan, also held a meeting. The dragons, it was announced, also had indorsed the administration of Mr. Evans.

WHITES REASSURE NEGROES AT SCOTT

Tell Them Ku Klux Klan Has No Intention of Murdering Entire Race.

To prevent the spread of rumors tending to cause ill feelings between the races, a joint meeting of whites and negroes was held Sunday afternoon at Mount Tabor, a negro church four miles southwest of Scott. The meeting was called by George Washington, an aged negro of that vicinity.

"Uncle George" announced that many members of his race are restless because of rumors that were being circulated. These reports, he said, he did not believe, but he wanted his "white friends" to assure the negroes present that there was no concerted effort being made on the part of the Ku Klux Klan to kill all negroes who fail to leave the state by June 15.

Another report that was current was to the effect that the pistol law was being advocated for the purpose of decoying those in possession of firearms to the courthouse so that they might be fined $50 for carrying a concealed weapon.

It was said that a local gun club had been practicing near Little Rock to perfect their aim for the carnage.

Hodge McQueen, negro, spoke briefly. He said that he did not feel that a meeting of that kind really was necessary for all right-thinking people of any race would know that the rumors were false.

The white speakers not only assured the negroes that the reports were untrue, but reminded them that the South is their logical home and this their natural climate. They warned the negroes of the grave danger of race trouble in the North when the labor situation becomes acute.

P. W. Steele and Col. Hugh T. Brown were the principal white speakers. Other white men who took part on the program were Conoway Scott, Dr. Henry Thibault, G. W. Templeton, Tom Fletcher and A. W. Campbell. There were about 200 present.

KU KLUX IS USED TO SCARE NEGROES

Authenticity of Threats Made in Klan's Name Refuted by Cyclops Comer.

AIDING BLACKS, HE SAYS

Railroad Officials Report That Exodus of Ethiopians Shows No Sign of Cessation.

Reports said to have been circulated in various communities in the state to the effect that unless all negro farm laborers quit their jobs and got out of the community by June 15, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan would "take matters in their own hands" and run them out, were refuted yesterday by James A. Comer, grand dragon of the Klan in Arkansas.

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in Arkansas are doing absolutely nothing to oppress the negroes," Mr. Comer said yesterday. "On the other hand, the Klan is assisting them when it is found they are being oppressed by others."

Mr. Comer said that the Little Rock Klan was appealed to for assistance several weeks ago, it being reported that several negroes working on farms near Beebe, White county, had been warned to quit their jobs. Klan officials investigated the reports and "took some action," Mr. Comer said, and the negroes who were threatened were put back to work.

The reports regarding the "Klan uprising" evidently were circulated by anti-Klan organizations or to entice negro labor to the North, Mr. Comer said.

Railroad officials said yesterday that many inquiries are received daily from negroes at the railroad stations regarding fares to points in the North. They also said that many negroes are leaving here on practically every train to the North.

Several special trains have passed through Little Rock during the past few days transporting Mexicans to the North to work in various industrial plants. Guards are posted at the doors of every car to prevent agents of other concerns from attempting to employ the Mexicans.

KLAN LEADERS MEET.

J. A. Comer Presides at Conference in Fort Smith.

FORT SMITH, Ark., June 17.—Approximately 60 head officers of the Ku Klux Klan in Western Arkansas met today under the chairmanship of J. A. Comer, of Little Rock, dragon of the Klan in Arkansas. After the meeting, it was announced the meeting had been a "get together" affair only, with discussion of ways and means for the good of the order.

SIMMONS SCORED BY GRAND DRAGON

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Little Rock, Ark., June 7—Declaring that William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in organizing the Order of the Knights Kamelia, is arrogating to himself a right that is not invested in him, James A. Comer, of Little Rock, grand dragon of the Klan in Arkansas, issued a statement today in which he asks: "Would the colonel be interested in the formation of an order for women, known as Kamelia, if it were stripped of its monetary value accruing to him?"

Following is the statement in part:

"Colonel Simmons is bound by the same oath that all members are bound by to foster the interests of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, but since his election as emperor he has used his best efforts against the best interests of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Article 21, section 3, of the constitution of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan reads as follows: 'There shall be four kloranic orders of this order, namely, the order of citizenship; Knights of Kamelia,' and two other orders, and if the assignment is to be held sacred, it would seem that the new order that the colonel now speaks of would belong to the order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, under the assignment, but it would appear from the statements in Wednesday's newspapers regarding an interview with the colonel of the day before in Atlanta, Ga., that the colonel now proposes to take the second order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and use it as the first degree in a new order to be hereafter promulgated and launched, or if this is not true, it will appear that his endeavors are to undertake to confer degrees of the Knights of Kamelia on charter members of the Ku Klux Klan and operate the second order independent of the first order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and just how this can be done remains to be seen.

"The theory of the order is that the first order, or the order of citizenship, is probationary or a stepping stone, or a prerequisite to a right to receive the second order, Knights of Kamelia, and it also appears by the same article that those the colonel prefers for the order of the Knights of Kamelia are those men who have taken the order of citizenship in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and on account of refraction of the constitution, by laws and oath, have been banished and their membership severed with the klan.

"Taking the newspaper article above referred to as a whole, it would seem that the colonel arrogates to himself the supreme authority and right to pass title to all things that he claimed ownership in for a consideration that he thought proper, and then holding fast to the benefits moving to him as a result of the transaction and then take back such parts of it as he might wish, with benefits accruing to himself.

"In other words, let us take the mask off once for all: would the colonel be interested in the formation of an order for women, known as Kamelia, if it were stripped of its monetary value accruing to him?

"If the colonel will only give full publicity to the contract that he has with C. W. Beeson, H. Tom Kite and the W. A. P. Study club, a privately owned corporation, owned by C. W. Beeson and wife, and H. Tom Kite and wife, all of Claremore, Okla.—the name by way of amendment has been changed to Kamelia, the women's organization—the public will then understand why Colonel Simmons is so vitally interested in the progress of the so-called woman's organization known as Kamelia."

FOUR PRIESTS HURT BY MYSTERY SHOTS

All Are Wounded as They Sit in the Parish House.

POCAHONTAS, Ark., June 28.—Four priests and one layman of this official were wounded when unidentified persons fired into the home of the Reverend Father Herringer of the Englebert Catholic Church, five miles north of here. The house was riddled with shot.

Authorities have not determined just what lies behind the shooting. While the section boasts a number of foreign born citizens, it numbers members of the Ku Klux Klan by the thousands.

The injured men are: Father Strausser of Jonesboro, shot in neck and shoulder; Father Heflinger, Paragould, shot in neck; Father Herringer, Englebrg, slight flesh wound; Father Froitzheim, Pocahontas, shot in leg; Joe Bruner, shot in back.

Three youths, Burton Knotts, Henry Daniels and his younger brother, were placed under arrest. The attack followed a church social where a disturbance arose.

KLANSMEN IN JUBILEE.

Craighead County Chapter Is Addressed by Capt. Skipworth.

JONESBORO, Ark., July 5.—The Craighead County Ku Klux Klan staged a celebration last night in honor of Independence Day. The jubilee was held in the woods just south of the Cotton Belt Railroad.

It is estimated that fully 3,500 Klansmen from Craighead and neighboring Klans were present with a thousand automobiles in the big enclosure.

On a hill, commanding a good view of the surrounding country side, a large electric cross, high in the air, burned brightly throughout the evening and was witnessed by thousands of Klansmens' families parked in cars in an adpacent field and onlookers parked in cars on the highway. Milling about in the big field amidst the glare of lights and the burning of red fire, thousands of men could be seen gathering around the fiery cross. In the early part of the evening, the oath was given by a Klan official. The response from more than 300 candidates assuming the oath could be heard for a long distance, as the oath was intoned in unison.

It is announced that 4,000 pounds of barbecued meat was served with 5,000 buns, six bushels of onions, four gallons of mustard, two kegs of pickles and giant pots of steaming coffee, while ice water, cold drinks and ice cream was to be had in great quantities.

Capt. Skipworth, or "Old Skip," as many are pleased to call him, was present, having passed through here yesterday, en route to another speaking point, and was prevailed on to stop over, which he did and was visitor at the Rotary-Lions baseball game yesterday afternoon, played for charity, and was a conspicuous character and at the Klan meeting last night he addressed the body, declining at first to speak, for the reason that another man had been selected to address the meeting, but cries from the vast assembly said: "Go on and tell us all about it." He spoke for a while and related many facts that had never been printed, but stated that at a later time he would come to Jonesboro and make a public speech, detailing in full the real facts of the Mer Rouge affair.

KLAN ELECTS MAYOR

David L. Ford Chosen at Fort Smith, Ark., Despite Opposition.

FORT SMITH, ARK., June 26.—David L. Ford, whose defeat was asked by opponents of the Ku Klux Klan, was today elected mayor of Fort Smith by a majority of 1,300 over Geo. Rye. Unsigned circulars, distributed early today, called on voters to declare opposition to the Klan by voting against Ford.

The election was held to fill the vacancy made by the recent recall of Mayor Fagan Bourland.

K. K. K. MARCH IN CAMDEN.

Camden, Ark., Aug. 2.—"A Twig Then, An Oak Now."

"Local Negroes, Where Are Your Jobs."

"Farm Hands Are Needed, Get On The Job Or Get Out."

"Negroes Stick To Your Jobs Or Watch Out."

"White Blood and Black Must Not and Shall Not Mix."

These are some of the signs carried by 600 Ku Klux Klan members in their parade through the city last week.

The Klan paraded through all the streets in the colored section and warned the Negroes to stop leaving for the North.

KLANSMEN ENJOY FEAST.

MALVERN, Ark., Aug. 6.—Reports reaching this city state a large number were initiated into the Ku Klux Klan organization at Brown Spring, 12 miles southwest of Malvern, Tuesday night. It is also learned that aside from the Malvern delegation, a number of klansmen from Arkadelphia and other nearby points were present. It is further reported that after the completion of the initiation ceremony, a big spread was served.

HOODED KLUXERS ESCAPE INDICTMENT BY GRAND JURY IN MER ROUGE MURDERS AND GOVERMENT WILL ASK CHANGE OF VENUE

Richmond Dispatch 3-16-23

Bastrop, La., March 15.—No indictments were returned today by the Morehouse Parish Grand Jury for the kidnapping, torture and slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards at Mer Rouge on August 24 last and various other outrages committed by hooded bands in the parish which the jury has been investigating for the last ten days.

The jury before which Attorney General Coco appeared with the evidence taken at the hearing into the Mer Rouge outrages held here in January made its report to District Judge Odom, who presided at that hearing.

In its report the Grand Jury referred to the masked band case as "the deplorable crime of August 24," and stated that while it had gone thoroughly into the affair, it could find no evidence that would warrant the indictment of any individuals.

Attorney General Coco, who left before the Grand Jury reported, stated that if no indictments were returned he would file bills of information against certain persons named at the open hearing as having participated in mob activities.

A violent storm raged the greater part of the afternoon and when the judge entered the court room at 4:50 P. M., there were few spectators present. The report was what many had expected and little comment was offered by citizens.

After the report had been made known, Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse ku klux klan made this comment:

"It is needless to say that I am highly elated. The State has done its duty and I hope it is satisfied and will let the matter rest."

Numerous other crimes charged to hooded bands were not mentioned in Grand Jury report. More than 125 witnesses were heard by the jury during the ten days' session.

Judge Odom made no comment on the report. He dismissed the jury after saying they had been in session a long time and he knew it was more or less of hardship, but it was a duty some one had to perform.

This was the third Grand Jury since the first of the hooded band kidnappings in Morehouse Parish, none of them finding indictments for the crimes.

GOVERNOR PARKER STARTED INQUIRY

On August 24, 1922, five citizens of Mer Rouge, T. F. Richards, Watt Daniel, his father J. L. Daniel; W. O. Andrews and Tot Davenport were abducted on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge Road while returning by automobile from a picnic celebration at Bastrop. The abductors estimated at from fifteen to twenty men, one in a white robe and the remainder wearing black hoods placed the five in a truck and drove away. Late that night J. L. Daniel and Andrews were released after being flogged, while Davenport was released without punishment. Richards and Watt Daniel disappeared.

Relatives of the missing men insisted they had been murdered and enlisted the aid of Governor Parker in the search for them. In September Department of Justice agents appeared in Morehouse Parish to investigate and their deductions were that Richards and Daniel had been murdered and their bodies cast into Lake La Fourche, twenty five miles from here.

In November Governor Parker visited Washington where he had an interview with President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty, and requested additional Federal aid in the case. On December 21, Governor Parker ordered a company of infantry to Morehouse to drag lakes for the bodies.

In the early morning hours two days later, the troops engaged in a skirmish with a boatload of men on Lake Cooper. While this was in progress, dynamite was exploded in Lake La Fourche twenty miles away, and the next morning the bodies of two men, bound with telephone wires and badly mutilated, were found floating on the surface of the lake. The bodies were identified as those of Richards and Daniel.

Governor Parker immediately ordered an additional company of infantry and a machine gun company into Morehouse and set January 5, as the date for an open hearing at the court house at Bastrop to investigate the slaying of the two men and the activities of masked bands in the parish, which the Governor attributed to the ku klux klan.

The open hearing revealed abductions, deportations, floggings, the sending of threatening notes and details of the circumstances leading to the disappearance of the men who were murdered. These crimes were charged to bands of black hooded men accused of being members of the Morehouse ku klux klan. The names of many klansmen were associated with the crimes. The black hood was identified as part of the "raiding" regalia of the parish klansmen.

A previous Grand Jury, composed largely of klansmen, had failed to take any action on the disappearance of the slain men and it was openly charged that the Grand Jury which reported today numbered among its members klansmen or their sympathizers.

New Orleans, March 15.—Assistant Attorney General Walmsley said tonight he believed the State would present at once affidavits against persons suspected of being implicated in the Mer Rouge outrages.

"I am very much surprised at the news," Mr. Walmsley said. "The State had counted on indictments at least for the lesser offenses. The public can feel assured that Attorney General Coco will take prompt action in the matter. There are several courses open to the State."

He believed there was ground on which the State could obtain a new Grand Jury.

In the case of persons against whom affidavits would probably be made, he said, the State would request a change of venue. Decision would rset with Judge Odom.

Mr. Walsmley intimated that affidavits charging more than forty-five persons with such crimes as 'lying in wait with a dangerous weapon, assault and battery, deporting persons from the State" and other lesser offenses would be filed immediately.

MOREHOUSE KLANSMEN FEAR COCO'S NEXT MOVE

New York Times 3-17-23

'Surrender? Hell, We Have Just Started to Fight,' Says Attorney General.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., March 16.—Fear of the bills of information Attorney General Coco has promised to file against the hooded murderers and kidnappers of Morehouse Parish was evident among members of the Ku Klux Klan today. Failure of the Grand Jury to indict the slayers of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards provided only momentary relief. Proposals to transfer the cases to Union Parish, where there are few Klansmen, is causing additional worry.

Feeling has existed between Morehouse Parish residents and those of Union for many years. Politics is the basis for it. Opposing views on the Ku Klux Klan has emphasized the hostility.

"Those fellows in Union Parish would hang us on any kind of a charge," a prominent Klansman said here today. "We will fight any move to try us there to the very limit if bills of information are filed by the Attorney General."

Serious trouble between Klansmen of Morehouse and the citizens opposed to the organization is feared by the authorities, unless the State keeps driving against the perpetrators of the many hooded band outrages. If the State fights the cases to a finish it is believed that the Klan will not have time to become so flushed over its victory with the Grand Jury as to follow it up with reprisals against State witnesses and continue its so-called "cleaning up" program.

Residents opposed to the Klan in Morehouse are in a state of mind that presages exciting developments in case of further Klan operations. Men opposed to the Klan say they will make no hostile move, but if the Klansmen undertake further raids bloodshed surely will follow.

The jury's verdict of "not sufficient evidence" reflects the influence of the Klan on the court machinery. The attitude of Captain J. K. Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Klan, is even a better measure of it. On the day the jury was empaneled he stood in the courthouse and examined the list of jurors. After studying the list he said:

"This is the last you will hear of this case. There will be no indictments."

Such a view received a cyclonic refutation today from Attorney General Coco.

"Surrender? Hell, we have just started to fight," he said. "You may assure the people of Louisiana who have backed the State in the fight at Bastrop that the case has just begun. We preferred, first, to give the citizens of Morehouse Parish an opportunity to vindicate the good name of that section, and as they have failed, we now will use every means at the disposal of the Department of Justice to bring guilty parties to the bar of justice."

Exhausting the opportunity to obtain indictments through a Grand Jury is a mere preliminary skirmish, according to the Attorney General. He will continue prosecution this year. Next year and for the next ten years, if it takes that long, to obtain a conviction, he declared.

MOREHOUSE CRIME DAMPENS ACTIVITY OF REDS, SAYS BURNS

Exposures Had Wholesale Effect in Checking Criminals, Is Claim

4-9-23

NEW ORLEANS, LA., April 8.—Disclosures concerning the Morehouse parish hooded band crimes has put a damper on the activities of radicals of all kinds all over the country, according to William J. Burns, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the United States department of Justice, who arrived here today from Atlanta on a general trip of inspection of the various offices of his department throughout the country.

"The exposure of the Morehouse crimes has had a most wholesale effect in checking the criminal tendencies of all radical organizations," Mr. Burns said. "Many have awakened to the fact that the people are determined to have an orderly government and that the United States is no place for radicals, regardless of the name under which they are known."

Mr. Burns will leave here Tuesday for Los Angeles, where he will question Herbert Wilson, who recently was quoted as saying that he knew who planted the bomb that caused the Wall street explosion in 1920. Mr. Burns characterized Wilson's reported confession as "pure bunk" but stated he would have a talk with him.

Mr. Burns in speaking of the Ku Klux Klan said that congress probably will shortly be asked to pass a law against the klan similar to those now on the statute books against communists, I. W. W. and other radical organizations.

"As much as I would like to discuss what investigation my department has made of the Ku Klux Klan", Mr. Burns said, "I cannot as congress probably will be called upon to legislate against the hooded order. Then my department will make a relentless campaign against the klan."

KU KLUX KLAN SUED FOR $100,000 LOSS

The Montgomery Advertiser 8-25-23

Woman Sets Same Figure as Husband on Damage From Tar and Feathers

SHREVEPORT, LA., Aug. 24—A patch to the Shreveport Journal Lufkin, Texas, today says that Jessie Wiley of Diboll has instituted suit at Lufkin for $100,000 against the Ku Klux Klan.

The Angelina klan No. 16, D. F. Harrell, Sam H. Kerr, Hobby Kelly and B. A. Teston, are made the defendants. The petition states that on July 20, 1921, a masked mob of klan members came to her home, took her husband Ben Wiley, beat him unmercifully, covered him with tar and feathers, and otherwise disgraced him. She further states that the klan has persistently circulated charges against her that alienated her friends and damaged her reputation and standing in the community where she lives. The petition also alleged that the purpose of the klan is to injure persons in their good name, credit, character and to bring into public scandal, infamy and disgrace with all good and worthy people.

Ben Wiley, the husband, instituted suit several weeks ago against the same organization for $100,000.

A MODERN TYRE.

Apparently the Ku Klux Klan has not met with the same success in New York City that it did, let us say, at Mer Rouge. This is the source, no doubt, of the uncomplimentary remarks emitted by Colonel Simmons, founder and emperor of the order, in an address yesterday at Tulsa, Okla., before the ladies of his favorite subsidiary order, the Kamelia. "The foremost political and social economist of the world," he declared, "recently made a survey of New York City, and after listening to its babel of tongues, and after feeling its hot breath of anarchy, after touching its seething restlessness, calmly turned away and said that Petrograd, in its dust and desolation, was a picture of New York City of the future." N Y C GLOBE APRIL 21, 1923

Colonel Simmons is in favor of distributing our large mass of aliens more evenly over the country, probably because the klan can get at them more safely where they are scarcer. The klan has an organization in New York City, but it is handicapped by being greatly outnumbered by those who either can't meet its requirements or who have not accepted its interesting views of Americanism. The disciplining of the foreign-born, the Catholic, the Jew, the Negro, and the recalcitrant native American is most easily carried out when the klan outnumbers them by ten or twenty to one, and where the ratio is anywhere near even the klan necessarily confines itself to moral suasion. And the power of the klan's moral suasions, after Mer Rouge and a hundred other atrocities that barely stopped short of murder, and after the distressing exposures of jealousy and greed which have recently been made at Atlanta, is not great.

Colonel Simmons also takes up the problem of the Japanese on the Pacific coast. He thinks the latter covet California as a place of refuge against the time when the Chinese will "undertake to have an accounting with Japan." This appeal may attract the Californians, but it falls flat in New York. In fact, it is hardly likely that New York City will ever listen eagerly to Colonel Simmons's message of peace and good-will, partly, perhaps, because some of our foreign population have brought with them from abroad a feeling for fair play and an instinct for common sense and decency.

NEW ORLEANS.—The Vigilantes of America, an organization to be composed of "citizens who can read, write and speak the English language, and are free of any creed of foreign allegiance," has filed articles of incorporation with the Louisiana secretary of state. The new organization is similar to the Ku Klux Klan.

KLANSMEN CHEER BITTER FOE

The Daily News.

Louisiana Governor Unexpectedly Meets and Talks with Klaxers.

8-17-23

[By The Associated Press.]

New Orleans, La., Aug. 17. — Gov. Parker, who last winter announced he had "dedicated himself to tearing the mask off the Ku-Klux klan" and who was responsible for the Morehouse parish investigations, came in personal contact with three passenger-coach loads of klansmen in full regalia at Gloster, Miss., last night, and after conversation with them was lustily cheered by the klansmen, according to a story printed to-day in the New Orleans item.

The governor was in a coach, almost alone, en route to Baton Rouge, when robed and hooded klansmen in large numbers boarded the train. Word spread among the masked men that the governor was on the train, and as many as could crowded into the coach where the governor was seated.

"Stand up and let the boys get a look at you," suggested a masked figure.

"I'll be very glad to do that," said Mr. Parker, and rose.

"Well, what do you think of us now?" asked one of the klansmen after a moment of mutual inspection.

"Just exactly what I've always thought of you," retorted the governor, "and if you'll take off your masks I'll be glad to tell you more in detail."

There was a moment of astonished silence, then one after another the klansmen unmasked, revealing among their number quite a few of the governor's personal acquaintances, with whom the governor chatted until the masked assembly left the train at Centerville.

Governor Parker, Klan's Chief Enemy, Cheered by Knights

The Atlanta Constitution 8-18-23

New Orleans, August 17.—Governor John M. Parker, who last winter announced he had "dedicated himself to tearing the mask off the Ku Klux Kan," and who was responsible for the Morehouse parish investigations, came in personal contact with three passenger-carloads of klansmen in full regalia a Gloster, Miss., last night, and after conversation with them, was given a lusty cheer by the klansmen. acording to a story printd today in The New Orleans Item.

The governor was in a coach, almost alone, en route to Baton Rouge, when robed and hooded klansmen in large numbers boarded the train at Gloster en route to a naturalization ceremony at Centreville, the story said. Atlanta, Ga.

Word spread among the masked men that the governor was on the train and as many as could crowded into the coach where the governor was seated.

The train conductor tried to prevent the figures from entering the coach, but he was brushed aside. One of the klansmen approached the governor and inquired:

"Aren't you John Parker?"

"That's my name," replied the governor.

"Well, stand up and let the boys get a look at you," suggested the masked figure.

"I'll be very glad to do that," retorted Mr. Parker, and rose, confronting the press of white figures that continued to shove into the coach.

"Well, what do you think of us now?' 'asked one of the klansmen after a moment of mutual inspection.

"Just exactly what I've always thought of you," retorted the governor, "and if you'll take off your masks, I'll be glad to tell you more in detail."

There was a moment of astonished silence, broken by the terrified voice of a child, crying out:

"Oh, mamma, what are they going to do with the man?"

Finally the klansman who had first addressed the governor, reached up and lifted the tall white peak mask from his head. He was grinning broadly.

"Now, do you know me?' he asked.

"Of course I do," replied the governor, caling him by name. And they shook hands heartily.

From then on it was more like a family reunion than a truce between two enemies. One after another the klansmen unmasked, revealing among their number quite a few of the governor's personal acquaintances, with whom the governor chatted until the masked assembly left the train at Centreville.

"As the train drew in near the station, the leader of the klansmen spoke:

"Let's give the governor a cheer."

"What's the mater with John Parker?"

And in response the members of the Ku Klux Klan, which Governor Parker has denounced and opposed at every opportunity, cheered him heartily.

FUQUA RENEWS POINT-BY-POINT REPLY ON KLAN

Times-Picayune

Bouanchaud Twists Meaning of Statements, He Charges.

10-21-23

Abbeville, La., Oct. 20.—In his speech here today Henry L. Fuqua, candidate for governor, continued his "point-by-point" reply to Hewitt Bouanchaud's claim about the "marked differences" between himself and Mr. Fuqua on the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Fuqua spoke as follows:

"Mr. Bouanchaud declared that there is another difference between us on the Ku Klux Klan. He says:

" 'Mr. Fuqua answered that he would be the sole judge of the qualifications of his appointees. He thereby reserves the right to appoint a klansman to office.'

"I do not admit Mr. Bouanchaud's right to give my answer the particular twist that suits him.

"I stated my position on this matter in my opening speech at Baton Rouge, and I stated it in the following language:

" 'In making selections for those offices, appointive by the governor, my one and only guide will be the public interest. I will be the judge of the qualifications of the applicant, and when convinced that the applicant is worthy and well qualified, when convinced of his character, standing and ability, when convinced of his undivided and paramount loyalty to this, his government, and when convinced that he or she will render the best service unto the state, then and then only will I consider the application.'

"Mr. Bouanchaud is at liberty to give this language such meaning as will best suit him. To others it is plain enough. It means exactly what it says, and says exactly what it means. I also declared in my speech at Baton Rouge that I was opposed to any super government, either a super government by an organization, or a super government by the governor. Mr. Bouanchaud states his opposition to a super government by an organization and then declares for a super government by a governor. I take my stand on the constitution and the laws of the land. I will neither add to nor detract from them. The governor takes an oath to obey the law and the constitution, and I will take this oath without any mental reservations whatsoever.

"History teaches us the mischief and injustice of the "test oaths" which were required in the old world. I do not propose by any act of mine to help in replanting this noxious political weed in American soil. History teaches us that the "test oaths," required before Catholics and Dissenters could hold public office, were repealed by the English parliament nearly one hundred years ago; and now hoping to gain some temporary advantage in his candidacy for high office my opponent proposes, without warrant of law, to institute a kind of "test oath" for office holding in Louisiana. New Orleans,

"I hereby now declare to the people of this state that any kind of a 'test oath' is un-American, un-Democratic and foreign to every instinct of democracy.

"I come from a line of protestant ancestors, some of whom suffered for conscience's sake. Mr. Bouanchaud comes from a line of Catholic ancestors some of whom doubtless suffered for conscience's sake. Here in America his ancestors and mine found that civil and religious freedom that they sought, and may the Almighty God wither my arm before I lift my hand to resurrect the ancient barriers between men of different classes, different faiths and different opinions. Not for all the power and honor of the office of governor of Louisiana, even if it were for life, can Henry Fuqua be induced to raise the cry of proscription.

"Proscription is the forerunner of pogroms. I call on the Jews to stand four square with me and sternly destroy this poisonous serpent at its birth.
